Mercer Announces Editors, Officers

Thomas, King, Hersman Will Head Publications

New editors and business managers for Longwood's three publications were announced last week by Jean Mercer, 1953 election head.

Mollie Hersman will be editor in chief, and Betty Francis Scarborough, will be new business manager of the Colonnade; head of the Rotunda will be Ann Thomas, and Mary Ann Evans will act as the newspaper's business manager. New editor of the annual is Mary Ann King, assisted by Pat Altwegg, re-appointed business manager of the Virginian.

Stepping into the place held this year by Betty Collier, Mollie Hersman will become the Colonade editor. Mollie, a junior from Richmond, was the magazines humor editor this year. An English Major she is a member of Beorc En Thorn, Pi Delta Epsilon, the Richmond Club, and Sigma Sigma social sorority.

Mary Ann King, a junior from Smithfield, steps in to fill the shoes of Ann Keith Hundley, '53 editor of the Virginian. Last fall, at the Virginia Inter-Collegiate Press Association convention, Mary Ann was elected secretary-treasurer of that group. Mary Ann holds membership in Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, the college choir, Canterbury Club, Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority. She was recently elected May Court representative. Chemistry and general science are her majors.

Janet Wiggins, this year's Rotunda editor will be replaced by Ann Thomas, a junior from Newport News. Ann acted as desk editor of the paper this year. She is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, the Association of Childhood Education, the College Choir and the Baptist Student Union. During this year, Ann, an elementary major, served as second vice-president of the BSU state convention.

Pat Altwegg, of Hilton Village, was reappointed business manager of the Virginian. Pat a junior elementary major, is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, A. C. E., French Club and Kappa Delta social sorority. She serves as treasurer of Pan - Hellenic Council and is president of the Granddaughter's Club. Last fall, Pat was elected to Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Replacing Celeste Bishop as Rotounda business manager is junior elementary major, Mary Ann Evans. A native of Richmond, Mary Ann is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, A. C. E., Richmond Club and Cotillion Club. Sigma Sigma Sigma is her social sorority.

Sophomore Betty Frances Scarborough will step into the place of Colonade's business manager, Jean Mercer. "Shu" is from Capron and is majoring in business education. She is a member of the Comercial Club and Delta Sigma Epsilon, social sorority.

Curtain Will Rise On Tragi-Comedy By Walter Ferris

The Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs will ring up the curtain on Walter Ferris' drama, "Death Takes a Holiday", in Jarman Hall, March 19 and 20 at eight p. m.

Nancy Nelson, a sophomore, portrays the role of a lovely Italian maid who fails in-love with Death. Death, played by Ed Stanfield, a Hampden-Sydney senior, comes as the handsome Russian Prince Sirki, for a three day holiday at the Villa Happiness, where a group of wordly and sophisticated travelers are already assembled.

Duke Lambert, played by Josh Billings of Hampden-Sydney, is entertaining this group of internationalists for a week end. At the height of their conviviality Death enters and demands his acceptance as a guest. His desire is to know what makes people afraid to die. In his search for the answer to the riddle, Prince Sirki returns Grazia's love. The play reaches its climax when Death must reveal his true identity.

The audience will see Sarah Leatherman as Cora, Betsy Hankins as Alda, Sally Wilson as Stephanie, and Ellen Porter as the Princess. Bill Mounts will portray the Baron and Nancy Tanley will play Rhoda. The cast will be completed by Elwood Rice as Corrado,Charles Dunn as Whitread, Ray Kelley as Eric, and James Parker as Fedele.

Tom Moore will head the staff for the play as stage manager. Heading the various staffs will be publicity, Barbara White; costumes, Libby McClung and Anne Shuff; music, Marjorie Harris; and lights, Beverley Taylor.

This three-act tragi-comedy according to Dr. C. L. S. Early, director, is a gripping and masterful story and promises to be an interesting evening in the theatre.

Duke, Wright Select Committee Chairmen

Freshman Production co-chairmen, Margaret Duke and Mary Ann Wright, recently chose the heads of the various committees for the presentation to be held on March 27.

Anne Shuff is directing publicity, Lou Wilder will manage the ticket sale, and Beverly Taylor will arrange the lighting effects.

Props and makeup are headed by Margaret Duke and Muriel Boswell, respectively.

Jean Coghill and Jane Blake are co-working as chairmen of costuming with Mary Ann Wright as choreographer.

Further details as to the production's theme and leads will be announced in the March 25 issue of the Rotunda.

Colonnade To Publish Prize Winning Prose In March Magazine

Students may look forward to the next issue of The Colonnade at the first of next week, Betty Collier, editor of the college magazine has announced.

This March issue will feature the prize-winning short stories in The Colonnade Prose Contest. Winning stories which will appear are "Stained" by Jean Jinnett, "The Old Man of the Streets", by Jackie Marshall, and "The Lost Souls of Devil's Inn" by Margaret Ann Pelton.

Included also in the magazine will be an essay on Jean Cocteau, well-known French poet, dramatist, and movie producer. Cocteau produced "The Eternal Return" a movie which the French Club brought to Longwood in 1951. He is also the producer of the movie, "Orpheus", which the French Club will sponsor tonight.

Longwood College Observes Sixty-Ninth Founders' Day; Mrs. Decker, Main Speaker

Observance of the sixty-ninth anuanl Founders Day of Longwood College will be celebrated on Saturday, March 21. This celebration marks the founding of the college in 1884 as the State Female Normal School.

"A Great Profession" will be the topic expanded by Mrs. Henry Decker, guest speaker and alumna from Richmond, for the Founder's Day program to be presented at eleven o'clock in Jarman Hall. Her speech is to be the high point of the day.

Mrs. Decker, a member of the Richmond School Board since 1938, has published a book entitled "World Airways For the King."

Active in many organizations including membership on the board of Trustees of the University of Richmond, she is a member of the Y. W. C. A., Woman's Club, Richmond Academy of Medicine, and Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity. Mrs. Decker attended Longwood before receiving her B. A. degree from Westhampton in 1917.

Donning black caps and gowns, college seniors and faculty will form an academic procession to Jarman Hall for the Founder's Day program. This procession marks the second one on Founder's Day in the history of Longwood.

Afternoon activities include a luncheon in the main recreation hall, business meeting of the national association also meeting in the recreation hall, and an open house at Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster's home, residence of the President of Longwood

An informal dinner will be given in the dining hall following the afternoon reception. A program, headed by Barbara Caskey, senior from Richmond, will be presented at this time.

Highlighting Founders' Day activities will be the choir concert under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the music department, in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m. A varied program of vocal music will be presented by the combined choirs of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney. They will sing "Requiem" by Faure in this concert.

Those faculty members on the planning committee are Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, head of the history department; Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of foreign languages; Miss Emily Clarke, assistant professor of music; and Mrs. Mildred Davis, associate professor of English. Also included are Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women; Dr. George Jeffers, head of the Biology Department; and Mr. Thomas A. McCorkle, professor of chemistry and physics.

Alumnae arriving on Friday, March 20, will have the opportunity to see "Death Takes a Holiday", the annual spring play presented by the Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs. Curtains will open on this three act tragi-comedy at 8 p. m.

Dr. Lancaster and Lucy Page Hall, student government president, will be present during the day to welcome and greet former members of the student body.

The registration fee, which covers all charges, has been placed at $1.50.

AKG Taps 5 In Assembly

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, tapped five girls for membership at the assembly Tuesday, March 10.

Those recognized for their leadership and service to Longwood College were Betsy Hankins, Mary Hurt Peery, Jean Mercer, Joanne Steck, and Betty Lalin.

Betsy Hankins, a senior from Richmond, is now serving as president of the Richmond Club and business manager of the Cotillion Club. She has been active in class circus stunts and productions for her four college years. She has also been prominent in dramatics and is vice president of the French Circle. She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority and Orchesis.

A senior from Grundy, Mary Hurt Peery has served as a member of the student government council for the past two years. Transferring from Marion College where she also held positions on student government, Mary Hurt is now vice-president of the organization at Longwood. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority and Orchesis and has been active in working on class skits.

From Rehobath Church is another active senior, Jean Mercer. This year she has served as business manager of the Colonnade and treasurer of Pi Delta Epsilon. A member of the Northern Neck and Commercial Clubs, Jean was elected to serve as head of the nominating committee for the recent elections.

French Students To Sponsor Film

"Orpheus," one of the latest French film releases, will be shown in Jarman Hall tonight at 8 p. m. The film is being brought to Longwood under the sponsorship of the French club.

"Orpheus" is directed by Jean Cocteau, who also directed the "Eternal Return" which was brought to Farmville by the French Club two years ago. The film has been praised by Newsweek, The New York Herald-Tribune, Time, and London Daily Mail. It was awarded the grand prize at the International Film Festival at Venice.

This film is a modern version of an ancient Greek myth. According to mythology, Orpheus sang songs which charmed even the beasts, but his songs made him forget his wife who was soon taken by death. In an effort to regain his wife, he took his songs to Hades to charm the underworld and induce her to return. Assurance of his wife's return was based on the condition that Orpheus would not look upon her. Disregarding this condition, Orpheus did gaze at her with amazing results.

In the film however, the story is modern, resembling the detective picture of today. On the one hand, it touches on mythology, while on the other, the supernatural.

English subtitles have been added for those who do not understand French. The new screen in Jarman Hall will be available for the presentation of this movie.

Students Elect Beavers, Wilson, Assaid, Wente

Mary Denny Wilson, Lura Beavers, Barbara Assaid, and Elsie Wente were elected by the student body yesterday to fill the posts of president of the Student Government, Y.W.C.A., House Council and Athletic Association respectively. The four new organization heads will serve for the year 1953-54.

Nominations for the major offices were held Monday afternoon when students voted for two out of three on the slate presented by the committee on nominations.. Final elections were held Wednesday. The newly elected officers will assume their duties in April.

Student Government

Mary Denny Wilson, junior from Danville, has been elected president of the Student Government Association for the coming year. She has served as president of her class for the past three years. Active in many college organizations, Mary Denny is assistant business manager of the Virginian and secretary of Alpha Kappa Gamma. She is also assistant treasurer of her social sorority, Kappa Delta, and a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, Cotillion, A. C. E. and college choir.

Y. W. C. A.

Newly-elected president of the Y. W. C. A., Lu Beavers, is a junior from Indiana. This year she has served as treasurer of that organization. Last year she served as freshman councilor for the 'Y' and was a members of Freshman Commission the year before. Lu is also a member of the college choir, Cotillion Club, South-West Virginia Club, Wesley Foundation and Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority.

House Council

Barbara Assaid, elected to the presidency of the House Council, is a junior from Roanoke. Bobbie has acted as treasurer of House Council for the past year. In her freshman year she was vice-president of the class, a member of Freshman Commission, and acted as production chairman this year. She was recently chosen to be a representative on May Court for her second year. She is also a member of Student Standards, the Y' cabinet, South-West Virginia Club, Cotillion and Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority.

Athletic Association

Filling the position of president of the Athletic Association is Elsie Wente, junior from Hilton Village. Qualifying Elsie to head the College athletic organization is her experience as treasurer of the association this year and her membership in the council her sophomore year. Active in College sports, she has played on the basketball and hockey squads and has been outstanding in tennis. H20 and Monogram clubs also claim her time.

Lecturer, Writer To Speak March 17 To Student Body

Dr. Burgess Johnson, well-known lecturer and writer, will speak on "Reminiscences of Mark Twain, O. Henry, and America's Literary Shape", in assembly on March 17. The lecture is sponsored by Beorc En Thorn, English honor society.

At 4 p. m. he will lead a discussion circle with members of American Association University Professors on the topic "Colleges and Curricula."

A talk will be given on "The American Newspaper, Its Faults and its Virtues" at 7:00 p. m. in the Honors Room. This talk will be before a joint meeting of Beorc En Thorn and Pi Delta Epsilon.

Dr. Johnson is a graduate of Amherst College and served for several years as a reporter on a New York newspaper. While working as a reporter, Dr. Johnson became personally acquainted with such great literary figures as Stephen Crane, O. Henry, Mark Twain and many others. Dr. Johnson also worked as a literary critic editor of several magazines, and did literary work for Harper Brothers, publishers. Later he taught at Vassar, Syracuse and Union College.

The noted lecturer is one of the founders of Bennington College, Vermont, a school which is known for its progressive curriculum. In 1939 he founded the College English Association, a national organization of college English teachers. Dr. Johnson has often served as a consultant on college problems and curicula. He is also the author of numerous works which include essays, stories, and verse.

Dr. Johnson is now 75 years of age, but still remains an energetic and inspiring lecturer in great demand on college campuses. Currently he is touring the colleges in the East.

Choirs Plan Concert For Visiting Alumnae On March 21 At 8 p.m.

The combined choirs of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney will be presented in a concert on Founders Day at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall according to Dr. J. W. Molnar, director of both choirs.

Plans are also being made for the choirs to journey to Richmond Sunday, March 22 to sing for a service at the Ginter Park Presbyterian Church. WRVA will record this concert for a later broadcast.

Among the selections that will be included in the concert given at Longwood are "Waters Ripple and Flow" by Taylor, "Chorus of the Polovetsian Maidens" by (Prince Igor) Borodin, "The Galway Piper" arranged by Fletcher,

Pi Delta Epsilon Bids Five For Membership

Five juniors have recently been asked to become members of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalism fraternity, according to Barbara Caskey, president of the group. Those receiving bids were Pifi Carter, Molly Hersman, Mary Ann King, Ann Thomas, and Mary Denny Wilson. Barbara added that initiation for the five new brothers will be held the last of March.

Membership in this fraternity is based on outstanding journalistic work for at least one year on a school publication. To become members, girls must also be juniors.

Pi Delta Epsilon plans to set up a booth on Founders' Day to sell the remainder of their Splinters to the alumnae.

Let's Look Back

Wearing stiff white shirtwaists and properly prim long skirts, the first three graduates of the State Female Normal School went forth in 1885 to instruct the youngest of Virginia's populace in the 3 R's.

In 1884, the public school movement in this state was in its infancy, and demanded trained teachers for its growth. The state legislature on March 7 of that year authorized the establishment of a school at Farmville to begin to fill this need. These three young women of 1885 were among the first students at the Normal School.

During the years since then, hundreds of young women have been graduated from first, the Normal School, then from the State Teachers College and from Longwood College as it was named in 1949. They have taken their places as teachers and citizens of Virginia.

Now we approach our annual Founders' Day celebration in honor of these early years. Founders' Day is traditional and universal among colleges as a day of reunion, reminiscences and tribute to past college days. Alumnae return to comment upon similarities and changes in the college since they were here in '04 . . . or '28 . . . or '42. Present day students, though apt to feel on the "outside looking in," have an opportunity to meet alumnae groups of which they shall soon be a part. We look back over changing eras; we've gone from high piled pompadours and buttoned up shoes of the 1880's to the soft cashmeres, small hats and neat flats of the '53 student.

But underneath external fashions, the students of these years, were — and are — much the same. They came to college with a purpose; they wanted to teach. They were needed to instruct, to guide, and to love children that Virginia entrusted to them. Over the years, just as styles varied, the purposes, scopes and methods of education have undergone processes of changes and development in order to keep up with a rapidly progressing, struggling, and exciting world. It has been the endeavor of our college to keep abreast of the philosophies and practices of modern education, and thus to better prepare our student teachers.

At Founders' Day, a glance back over sixty-nine years reveals all of these things, and we pay a tribute to them. Founders' Day is a tribute to those three young ladies who started it then to those who have come since them, who have helped develop our college, its place in education—and other progessive activities of the State of Virginia. Finally, it is a tribute and a dedication to the future, to the upholding of a reputation of service and high standards, and to the achievement of the highest goals of service in education.

We'll Miss You

A great big thank you from the retiring senior staff members of the Rotunda — a thank you to a hard working staff and a thank you to a co-operative student body.

No newspaper can be published single-handed by an editor and her manager. There must be those who are willing to spend long hours writing, typing, proofreading stories and writing headlines. This year the Rotunda's willing workers have been few but loyal, and their labors have been appreciated. The retiring staff, however, hopes that more girls will display an interest in the paper next year — the more hands, the lighter the load.

Just as the paper needs a loyal, hard-working staff so it needs loyal, appreciative readers. Longwood's student body has shown from time to time that it does support the Rotunda. This backing has given the staff encouragement to carry on and they appreciate it. Again, however, there is room for improvement and the senior staff members hope that the new staff will receive even more co-operation and support from the student body.

It is hard for this year's retiring editor, business manager, and managing editor to fully realize that the responsibility of publishing the college bi-weekly is no longer theirs. They face their new freedom with mixed emotions.

The thought of four years of typing fingers to the bone, begging for workers, frantic searching for news, stretching the budget, working 'til the "wee small hours" — causes a sigh of relief to escape their lips. A smile of contentment spreads across their faces as they think of placing these woes and worries on newer, fresher, stronger shoulders.

Yet combined with this feeling of gladness at the prospect of a long worked-for rest, is one of sincere sadness. Happy memories of gab fests over a midnight cup of coffee, "punchy" laughter relieving the tensions, knowledge of the news first, the satisfaction of rolling presses, life-long friendships cemented with printers ink — flood back to make them realize that they will miss laboring over the "yellow rag."

Thus they bid a fond and sad farewell to their newspaper days and wish the best of luck to the new publishers of the college news.

Don't Cut Corners

Recently an announcement was made in assembly concerning the reestablishment of the Campus Commitee. Most Longwood students were at that time totally unfamiliar with the purpose of such a committee and so its intentions to begin to function were a matter of little concern to them. This being true, it would seeem appropriate to explain briefly the benefits of having a Campus Committee at Longwood.

Before the disastrous college fire here in 1949, representatives from the student body and from the faculty and administration worked as a committee for the sole purpose of improving Longwood's campus in both facilities and appearance. Now a similar group meets regularly and with the same purpose. Attention has already been called to the many improvements that have been made on the campus, and announcement has been made of the committee's intention to make further ones. However the committee does not wish to work merely as a group of interior or exterior decorators; they want their decisions to result from suggestions made by Longwood's students.

It is, in the long run, the students who will benefit from all the improvements that are being made, and so it becomes the duty of the students to co-operate with the committee. Is it too much to ask that girls going from one class to another use the sidewalks rather than cutting corners and walking over newly-seeded grass lawns?

It. has been announced that any suggestions will be welcomed by the committee, and that these suggestions may be made either to Student Standards or directly to a committee member. It is to be hoped that students will realize the ultimate benefits they will receive from attending a college with a reputation such as Longwood is fast acquiring, and that they will do everything possible to make the college committee for campus improvement a big success.

Miss Take

by Barbara Caskey

I've been waiting for three weeks to say a few not-so-well chosen words about a particular tradition at Longwood College.

Dear Editor: (The colon is really not necessary because the Editor is my suitemate)

I'm here to say that this school would be in a sorry mess if and when fire's angry fingers licked at its foundations. Me, I've been here for 4 years and there haven't been but 1043 fire drills during that time. Each day I realize more and more than I'm very vague as to the location of the steps that must lead me to safety.

Again, wouldn't it show a lot more presence of mind if the students were required to carry out a bookcase or a dresser scarf rather than the traditional towel, book and scarf. Then too, fire doesn't usually rear its ugly head only at convenient hours. Suppose the Fire Chief were asleep or in class when she was needed.

These are just my sentiments about safety. Me, I prefer death by fire, although I realize that in this case, suicide is the coward's way out.

Very truly yours.

My last column and it is hard to see the paper through the tears. Until we meet again, remember to stay happy or at least entertained by:

1. Setting your alarm clock regularly.
2. Eating a lot of salt.
3. Counting the holes in your sheets. (Its holy.)
4. Keeping books out of the library (you might not enjoy this so much but the students who come after you will get a lot of joy out of the library science scholarships.)
5. Taking advantage of every free trip to Egypt that Dr. Wynne sponsors. He's really a wonderful chaperon!
6. Using Kleenex.
7. Supporting the Spanish Club in any of the worthy activities that they undertake.
8. Falling down the Rotunda steps at least twice a day—and always, always remember, It's Collegiate.
9. Finally and seriously—there is a sled in Junior Basement for winter, a kite in any dime store for March, a shovel and a plot of ground for a summer Victory Garden, a creek with fish in it at the end of High Street and a kid, who really doesn't mind lending his bicycle at anytime of the year. Try the Bus Station for Sunday morning breakfast—and to keep keep your busy, happy days in order, buy a "Splinter". Do stay the squares you are until I return to give the Commencement address in 1958.

Its all been a Mistake but until we meet again—remember (as a certain history class will remember) . . . there are now two new kinds of tests—Objectionable and Disgusting.

Early Bird Captures Charm Of L. C. Breakfast Swarm

by Martha Donaldson

Woe be unto the poor unfortunates who feel good around this place in the morning—they are sadly in the minority. We do not want to seem partial to them (although we like them the best), so we'll tell you just how it is to be a member of the "other half."

Last Monday morning at seven-fifteen we hid behind our closet door and when we saw a weary, grey multitude dragging toward us, we knew it was them. We watched them as they passed those colorless, apparently dead mortals. Their faces were like masses of grey putty, all wrinkled and sour. They wore no lipstick and their eyes were closed.

We waited until they had passed; then we came out from our hiding place and crept very softly behind them so that they did not know we were there.

Everything went smoothly until we reached the stairs. There it happened. One boldly striped pajama leg slipped out from under a skirt. We were terrified for we were uncertain as to how this grey monster would take it. There were angry words and nasty rips as the pajama leg was torn off and flung over the rail. Is that justice?

We hid in a dark corner, now, fearing that "they" might do the same to us if they saw through our disguises of tousled hair and no lipstick and knew that we were "top of the morningers."

When it was safe, we slouched into the dining hall, unnoticed, and found a table. The scene that followed was a nightmare in reality. No human word was spoken — nothing human followed. They had their own code. One grunt meant, "Yes, I'll have cereal and coffee." Two grunts meant "Pass everything this way and be quick about it." One poor girl, being a little more asleep than usual, was shot and kicked under the table by the hostess for snoring at the table. Silence is a strict rule with those girls.

Finally, without comment "they" arose and dragged out of the dining hall. As we watched them disappear into the distance, we wondered how in only a few short hours these monsters would once again resemble r e a l, talking, breathing humans. They would speak to us in the halls and they would never suspect that we had spied on them that morning.

We'll never hear that weary shuffle in the cold, grey morning without remembering that one experience with them. Our hearts will turn over and we'll let them pass far beyond us before we go to the dining hall.

Social Notes

by Carolyn Stanley

Many places to go and many things to do, but it seems that Longwood girls were most represented at the Mosque this weekend in Richmond—to see the production of "South Pacific." That wasn't the only place though; our social contacts spread far and wide around the country.

Many congratulations to Trianne Lampkin on her engagement to Ralph Freeze from Annapolis Naval Academy.

"PiKa" Ball

Among those that enjoyed the PiKa's Ball at Richmond last week were Ruth Van Houten, Boop Islin, Ilia Desportes, Sylvia Reames and Billie Miller Also attending were Karen Spencer, Dana Burgess and Stephanie Baudet.

U. of Marsland

We are sure Janet Wiggins enjoyed her weekend in College Park where she attended the "Coronation Ball" which was the Sophomore Prom.

N. Carolina U.

"Butch" Langhorne and Mary Campbell attended the Midwinter Dances at Chapel Hill last weekend. We understand they both had quite a good time!

V.P.I. Military Ball

Several Longwood girls diked up in their best attire to go waltzing with their cadet friends at the V. P. I. Military Ball this past weekend. Those that journeyed to Blacksburg (that is 40 miles from Roanoke, Virginia, in case you hadn't heard) were Anne Carter Wendenburg, Billie Van de Reit, Barbara Clark, Shirley Roberts, Pat Taylor, Louise Nelson, and Jackie White.

Wm. and Mary

Midwinters at Wm and Mary were held the past weekend. Mary Ellen Booth not only enjoyed the smooth music of Claude Thornhill —but rather liked dancing with her Swanson too!

Visitors:

Those of us who couldn't get "out" had important visitors—Douglas Waugh from U. of Virginia visited Joyce Gilchrest; Burr Goddin came up to see B. J. Staples and last weekend Donnie Devine beamed all over when Lin came up from V.M.I.

Modern Dance Club Will Participate In Greensboro Annual Arts Forum

Seven members of Orchesis, the modern dance club, will represent Longwood at the annual Arts Forum of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, March 19, 20, and 21.

Highlight of the week-end will be the review and evaluation of student choregraphy by Louis Horst, an outstanding figure in the field of dance. As well as being a composer, he is founder and editor of the magazine Dancer Observer.

"We, the Puppets," a group number from the dance drama, "The Mocking Bird," will be presented as Longwood's contribution in the student choregraphy program Friday afternoon. Taking part in this program will be dance students and teachers from states of the Southern region.

Longwood's composition will be classed as a lyrical approach to dance choregraphy using the speaking voice, music, and poetry as motivation for action.

Margaret Taylor as domineering Aunt Cissie controls the other charcters as if they were her puppets. The ominous call of the mocking bird (symbol of death) is felt from the very beginning when Ann Murphy as Drucilla appears as the love-lorn adolescent torn between hatred, fear and distrust.

Also appearing in the Greensboro dance will be Shirley Roby as David, Ann Crowder as Father, Cornelius Kirby, Gail Dixon as Miz Anne and Ilia des Portes as Vinnie.

Karen Spencer as accompanist will play Gruffin's "The White Peacock" as background music.

Frosh Team Defeats Windsor High School With Score Of 35-29

Concluding the Longwood basketball season on a victorious note, the freshman team defeated the Windsor High School varsity by a score of 35-29, last Friday night in the college gym. The game played at seven p. m., was the last in the 1952-53 schedule for the Longwood cagers.

Members of the freshman team are Dale Brothers, Jane Lohr, Shirley Roberts, Doris Harcum, Ann Snyder, Lou Wilder, Patsy Hamner, Nancy Hartman, Mary Davis, and Shirley McKenny

After the game, the Freshman Commission aided in entertaining the varsity team in the Athletic Association Lounge.

Choirs Concert

"Brothers Sing On" by Grieg, "John Peel" by English, and "Three Sailor Chanteys" arranged by Bartholomew. Other numbers which will be presented in both programs are "Ave Verum" by Depres, "All in the April Evening" by Robertson, "Jesus Walked This Lonesome Valley" by Dawson, "To Thee We Sing" by Tkach, "Send Forth Thy Spirit" by Schuettky, and "Beautiful Savior" arranged by Riegger. Selections from the "Requiem" by Faure will consist of "Introit and Kyrie", "Offertory", "Sanctus", "Pie Jesu", "Libera Me", and "In Paradisum."

The combined choirs will sing the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah".

Vocal solists will include Winston Johnson, Doris Horne, Joe White, and James Harris. Betsy Welbon will play a violin solo.

Varsity Team Posts Record

Five wins against two losses is the final record boasted by the Longwood varsity basketball team for the 1953 season.

Wins posted were against Roanoke College, Washhampton, Norfolk Division of William and Mary, and Madison. Bridgewater and Westhampton sent the local team to defeat.

February 6, in the first game of the season, Roanoke College was defeated by a score of 56-48. On unlucky Friday, February 13, Bridgewater scored a 35 to 28 win over the local team. Two games played in Richmond on February 21 showed scores of 39 to 27 in favor of Westhampton, and 30 to 28 in favor of Longwood.

The freshmen and sophs defeated the William and Mary Division on February 24, 55-12. Going down to defeat in two games, Madison Colege was beaten by 61-43, and 39-32 scores, on February 28. The final season game was last Friday night when the freshmen beat Windsor High School, 35-29.

Orchesis Changes Dance-Drama Date

"The Mocking Bird", a dance-drama to be presented by Orchesis, has been postponed until April 17.

Illness among the cast members and rehearsals for the trip to Greensboro have necessitated the postponement according to Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, advisor to the modern dance group. The annual recital was previously set for February and then moved up to March.

Those participating in the dance-drama are Peggy Hood, Nancy Tanley, Anne Murphy, Ann Crowder, Helen Waiteman and Gail Dixon.

Also taking roles are Mary Hurt Peery, Ilia DesFortes, Marian Parrish, Barbara Blackmon and Mary Elva Robinson. Other members of Orchesis will take part in two or three group numbers being planned.

"The Mocking Bird" is the dance club's second attempt at dance drama. The group successfully presented "The Plum Tree" three years ago.

Three to Attend Inaugural

Longwood will have three representatives at the inauguration of Dr. William F. Quillion, new president of Randolph Macon Women's College in Lynchburg. The celebrations are scheduled to take place the week end of March 13-16.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, college president, and two Randolph-Macon alumnae, Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of modern languages, and Mrs. Mildred D. Davis, assistant professor of English, have received invitations.

Dr. Quillon's inauguration will differ from the usual academic ceremony in that it will be a week end conference centered around the theme, "The Function of a Liberal Education in the Contemporary World."

Those attending the conference will have an opportunity to hear a number of outstanding speakers. Among those scheduled to speak are Mark Van Doren, author and poet; Pearl Buck, author and outstanding Randolph-Macon graduate; Mr. Charles P. Taft, brother of Senator Taft, and Dean Marten teHoon, dean of the college of liberal arts at the University of Alabama.

Frosh Sponsor Meal

St. Patrick's Day will be observed with a birthday dinner on the night of March 17.

The freshman class which is in charge of the dinner, plans to carry out an Irish theme.

Mrs. Landrum Gives Plans For 1953 May Day Pageant, Festival to Depict Folklore

Tentative plans for "Ballad Tree", the 1953 May Day pageant, have been revealed by Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, director of the annual Spring festivities.

With a theme centered around the evolution of American folklore from a tri-country source, the pageant will open with the English division—folk pageantry through dance.

First on the program will be a folk play which has its origin in the days of the mummers. Following the play will be a brief interlude of dialogue by the wandering minstrel, Betsy Hankins.

The Horn Dance of Abbotts' Bromley (the only dance sanctioned by the church) is next on the program. Following this sword dance will be a procession of figures significant in English folklore such as the hobby horse, the keeper of the sword, the boy with bow and arrow, and Jack-on-the-green.

A country kerchief dance interrupted by Robin Hood searching for Maid Marion will conclude the English section.

The wandering minstrel's singing of Loch Lomond will introduce the Scottish section—balladry and dance. During the song a Scotch minstrel will appear and perform a solo sword dance of the Gillie Calluim type.

Next on the program will be the Highland Fling danced by two as a test of skill. Following the Highland Fling will be Old Treuse. This is a solo pantomime dance poking fun at Bonnie Prince Charlie.

The Scottish section will end with the minstrel's singing of "Catherine Jaffery" while a group of girls perform a Scottish country dance.

The Irish division—folklore—will open with the appearance of the Leprechaun while Betsy sings "Who's Gonna Shoe My Pretty Little Foot"? After the Leprechaun impishly frolics upon the green, a group of dancers will perform the Irish Lilt.

Following the Lilt a chorus will bring in a May bush laden with treasures. The Irish members of the court will then come out and search for the treasures. When the treasures have been found, the other members of the court will appear to watch the final English, Scotch and Irish dances dances around a tripie-tiered May Pole.

Junior, Senior Girls Do Student Teaching In Second Semester

Dr. Wynn has posted the number of student teachers for the spring semester. There are forty-eight girls practice-teaching.

Of this number twenty-two are teaching at the elementary school. They are Betty Benton, Mary Carter, Barbara Cotton, Beverly Marsh, Matilda Creasy, Peggy Hood, Betty Islin, Ann Bell, Frances Evans, and Virginia Irby. Also Billie Tomlinson, Gwendolyn Bain, Lois Crutchfield, Wanda Doll, Helen Castros, Jean Drewry Winston Johnson, and Margaret Sutphin.

Teaching at the high school are Margaret Barrow, Mary Bennett, Celeste Bishop, Judy Cox, Nancy Crymes, Phyllis Entsminger, Bonny Gibson, Ann Gray, Carolyn Graham, and Nancy Jamison.

College Librarian Evaluates School

Dr. Beverley Ruffin, head librarian of the College library, went to Martinsville Tuesday to participate in a high school evaluating program.

The committee has been at Fieldale High School until today for a tour of inspection. Dr. Ruffin will be in charge of rating the school's library.

Frosh Present College With Old Time Comedy In 'Laces and Graces'

Duke And Wright Head Production

"Laces and Graces", a comedy portraying the Virginia State Institute for Normal Females in the "way back when" days, will be presented tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Jarman auditorium.

The production will be presented by the freshman class and is under the direction of Mary Ann Wright and Margaret Duke.

"The theme of our show is based on the coming of a sophisticated girl to the school and her opinions of and reaction to her fellow-classmates and the school's rules", commented Margaret.

James Parker, appearing as an old Negro caretaker, will narrate the prologues to the first and second acts with Marian Ruffin as his attentive listener.

Act one will take place in a typical 1889 dorm room and will feature Liz De Haven as a snobbish newcomer to VSINF; Fannie Scott, as a jolly N'gro maid; and Anne Shuff, as a frustrated lover.

The opening act two recalls the memories of the first time Hampden-Sydney boys attended a party in the college parlor. Entertainment at their party is provided by Soloists Nancy McLawhorn, Betsy Nelson and Betsy Welbon and a tiro composed of Jackie Curlee, Martha Joyner and Joyce Clingenpeel. The introduction of a new dance step brings to a close the stiff party and provides a peppy finale for the producation.

Acts one and two combine the two periods during the late 1800's and early twentieth century. High collared blouses and floor length skirts costume the players appearing in the first act. Flapper styles set the mood for act two.

When asked how the theme originated and developed, Mary Ann explained — "someone mentioned a takeoff on Longwood a number of years ago so we started to work on the idea. First we talked with the women in the Alumnae Office. They referred us to the Longwood Room in the Library. We collected the information we needed to put the production together. Then came the rehearsals. Now with only dress rehearsal left we hope that the production will be a success!"

Tickets are priced at 35 cents.

Fourth Librarians Conference Meets At LC March 28

Author To Speak At First Session

The fourth annual school library conference, sponsored jointly by the department of Library Science of Longwood College, and The Libraries and Teaching Materials Section, District D, Virginia Education Association, will convene here on March 28.

"The Challenge of New Opportunities" is the topic of the conference's guest speaker for the occasion, Mrs. Mary Peacock Douglas author of several books for school library work. Best known of these is the Teacher Librarian's Handbook.

Registration will begin at 9:30 Saturday morning. Dr. Beverley Ruffin will preside over the morning session which begins at 10:30. Dr. Dabney Lancaster will welcome the librarians formally at that time.

After a luncheon in the Tea Room and a coffee hour, the librarians will see the English film, "Anthony and Cleopatra."

From 2:30 to 3:30 will be open house in the Farmville Elementary School and High School Libraries.

The joint committee of school library conference is Dr. Beverley Ruffin, head librarian, Longwood College, Miss Kate O'Brien, librarian, Farmville High School and Miss Lois R. Ballugh, former librarian, Worsham High School.

YWCA Sponsors Religious Service

A pre-Easter morning prayer service sponsored by the YWCA, will be held on Tuesday morning March 31. The service will take place in front of the library, weather permitting. Otherwise, it will be held in the Episcopal Church. The rising bell will ring at 6:30, and the service will begin promptly at 6:40.

The program will be similar to that of the sevice held during Religious Emphasis Week.

Critic Reviews College Performance Of Drama, 'Death Takes a Holiday'

by Mrs. Meade L. Shackleford

Borrowing a space ship Dr. C. L. S. Earley transported Broadway 800 miles to Jarman Auditorium Thursday and Friday nights, when the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs presented "Death Takes A Holiday" by Alberto Casella.

Dr. Earley's superb direction molded the lighting, costumes, the single vivid set, the music which set the moods throughout the play, and the excellent acting of all of the characters into an almost perfect performance.

Edwin Stanfield played death to perfection in the guise of a mortal, Prince Sirki, who visited an Italian villa for three days for laughs, but became embroiled in the mortals' web of love. Nancy Nelson, as Grazia, the ethereal object of his love gave an excellent performance of a young girl who in search of happiness fearlessly accepted Prince Sirki's love, even though she found out he was death in disguise.

Bill Mounts as Baron Cesarea played the part of the stiff-legged old man with the plasqueak voice so well that a member of the audience asked if he talked that way all of the time.

Nancy Tanley as Rhoda Fenton and Betsy Hankins as Alda gave admirable performances as young girls first fascinated by Prince Sirki and later repelled when they found out his true identity.

Other characters, all excellent were: Charles Dunn as Major Whiteread of the Foreign Legion; Woody Rice as Corrado, Ray Kelly as Eric Fenton; Ellen Porter as Princess of San Luca; Sally Wilson as Duchess Stephanie; Josh Billings as Duke Lambert, and Sarah Leatherman as Cora, the maid.

High Schools Hold District Musical Meet At Longwood

Schools To Send Bands, Choruses

High school musicians, approximately 900 of them—will arrive at Longwood on Saturday, March 28, to participate in the central Virginia Districts I and III Music Festival.

Twenty-one schools will be represented by 25 choruses, 9 bands, 37 instrumental solos, 9 instrumental ensembles, 7 pianists, and 9 vocalists. This festival is not a contest with schools competing against each other; however, they will be rated and given constructive criticism by a group of judges.

Dr. J. W. Molnar, head of the music department and general chairman of the festival has announced that the public is invited to attend the festival program free of charge. Choruses will be presented on Saturday morning and the bands will perform in the afternoon in the main auditorium. Instrumental soloist can be heard in the bandroom; the piano solos and the vocal solos will be held in other class rooms in Jarman Hall.

Judges for the festival will be Mr. Willis Beckett, choral director at Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; Mr. Fred Lubrani, band director at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; Mr. Christian Kutschinski, head of the music department at North Carolina State College in Raleigh; Mr. Clifford Marshall, band director at Madison College; Mr. Joel Ebersole, vocal instructor at Longwood College; and Miss Emily Clark, piano instructor at Longwood College.

Several other music festivals of this same type will be held on March 28 in other parts of the state.

Hersman Announces New Colonnade Staff To Serve Next Year

A new staff for the Colonnade, Longwood's literary magazine has been appointed by the 1953 editor-in-chief, Mollie Hersman.

Eloise Macon will continue in the position of managing editor which she has held during the past year. Poetry editor will be Barbara Assaid, whose poetry has appeared in previous issues of the Colonnade.

Appointed essay editor for the next year is Barbara Southern. Barbara has been a frequent contributor to the magazine. A freshman, Mollie Harvey, will serve as short story editor and Marlene Lucas has been named art editor.

Circulation manager will be Laura Trent, and Gail Moon, who served as head typist last year will hold the same position. Betty Francis Scarborough has been named business manager for the coming year.

L. C. President Gives Report To Ed. Board

A report of Longwood's activities last semester and plans for the coming year will be presented by Dr. Dabney Lancaster, president of the college, at a meeting of the Virginia State Board of Education being held today in Richmond.

This is the annual meeting held to receive reports of all state colleges concerning their programs and prospective plans.

Students Select Koch, Branch, Copley, Hodges As Vice Heads Of Four Major Organizations

Other Officers Also Chosen

Elleanor Koch, Jane Branch, Nell Copley, and Jean Hodges were elected vice presidents of Longwood's four major organizations, the Student Government Association, House Council Young Women's Christian Association and the Athletic Association, respectively in yesterday's voting for minor officers.

Elleanor Koch, a junior physical education major from Richmond, has served as student government treasurer during this year, and was her sophomore class representative. Active in sports, she has been a member of the A. A. Council, H2O, Monogram Club. Elleanor is a member of the Cotillion Club.

House Council

Newly elected as vice-president of the House Council is junior Jane Branch from Norfolk. Jane, a music major, was secretary of the council this year. She is a member of the College Choir, Cotillion Club, and Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

Nell Copley, of Blackstone, is a junior business education major. Active in "Y" activities since she was a member of the Commission in her freshman year, Nell has served on the Cabinet this year. She is a Cotillion Club member, and Pan-Hellenic representative of her social sorority, Pi Kappa Sigma.

Vice-president of the Athletic Association for the coming year is Jean Hodges, of Waynesville, North Carolina. Jean has been active in class sports, and has served on the A. A. council.

Government

In yesterday's rating, Dot Vaden was elected secretary, and Ann Carter Wendenburg was named treasurer of Student Government. A sophomore from Danville, Dot has served two years on government as class representative and also works on the annual staff. Ann Carter, a sophomore from Richmond, is a member of "Y" cabinet and Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority.

Jackie White, sophomore from Norfolk, and Nell Crocker, a freshman from Smithfield, were selected as secretary and treasurer, respectively of House Council. Jackie is a member of Theta Sigma Upsilon social sorority and Nell is a Cotillion Club member.

Sophomores Joan De Alba of Warwick Jean Carol Parker of Emporia were elected secretary and treasurer respectively of Y.W.C.A. Joan is on Student Standards and a member of Pi Kappa Sigma. Joan Carol served as freshman counselor this year. She is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha.

A. A. Officers

Helen Waitman, of Charles City, and Mary Ann Ward, of Galax will fill the posts of A. A. secretary and treasurer, respectively. Both girls have been on the A. A. council.

Three dining room hostesses were elected yesterday. Chosen head hostess was Ellen Porter, a junior from Portsmouth, who is treasurer of Longwood Players and president of Wesley Foundation. Patty Deering, from Roanoke, and a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority and Cotillion Club, and Billie Tomlinson from Norfolk, and a member of the Choir and Theta Sigma Upsilon were also elected.

Longwood College Alumnae Appoint Miss Horton, Head

The Longwod College Alumnae Association has elected Miss Frances Horton, educator and welfare leader of Roanoke, as its new president to succeed Miss Helen Costain, of Lynchburg, who served for four years.

The results of the elections by mail ballot were announced at the annual business meeting of the association held at the college at 2 P. M. Saturday, March 21. The meeting was a part of the Founders' Day program which began with a coffee hour at 9:15 Saturday morning, and ended with a concert by the Longwood Choir and Hampden-Sydney Glee Club in the Jarman Auditorium at 8 P. M.

Before the concert, the Class of 1913 was presented the cup which is awarded annually for the class having best attendance percentage. Miss Winnie Hiner received the cup for the class which had 31 members present.

Mrs. W. E. Chappell, class of 1894, was the oldest graduate to attend the meeting and Mrs. Susie Campbell Hundley represented the earliest graduating class—the class of 1888.

At the business meeting the association also elected Mrs. Myrtle Dunton Curtis, of Richmond, a director, and three new members of the nominating committee. They are: Miss Lucy Adams, of Farmville, Mrs. Virginia Blanton Hanbury, of Farmville, and Mrs Betty Hardy Murdoch, of Richmond.

A graduate in the class of 1934, Miss Horton is a teacher of mathematics and guidance counselor at the Stonewall Jackson Junior High School. She is the vice-president of Eta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary educational society, and a former member of the executive board of the Longwood College Alumnae Association. Miss Horton is also a counselor for the sub-district of the Methodist Youth Fellowship and a member of the YWCA camp committee.

Mrs. Curtis, who will succeed Mrs. Pat Cowherd Adkins, of Richmond on the board of directors, is the chairman of the alumnae house committee of the Longwood Alumnae Association, and a past president of the Richmond Chapter of the association. A graduate in the class of 1916, she is active in the Red Cross, YWCA, Woman's Club and is also a vocalist.

The class of 1903 was represented by Miss Anne Paxton of Bon Air; Miss Mary Peck, Fincastle; Miss Mildred D. Cook, Center Cross; Mrs. Nellie Peck Smith, Hampton; Mrs. Daisy B. Donaldson, Alexandria; Mrs. Ruth C. Gaver, Danville and Dr. Grace B. Holmes of Tacoma Park, Maryland. This was the second oldest class attending the convention.

Girls to Visit In New York

On a chartered bus bound for New York City and the "Great White Way", thirty-four Longwood and Hampden-Sydney students and faculty members will leave Farmville April 2.

They will be staying at the Hotel Taft in Times Square where the piano stylings of Charlie Drew are featured in the Taft Grill.

The students plan various tours of New York City, including Chinatown, the Bowery, Staten Island, the U. N. Building, Statue of Liberty on Bedloe Island, the Empire State building and various museums.

There are many Broadway plays to be seen such as "Guys and Dolls," "The King and I," Rosalind Russell, starring in the new musical "Wonderful Town." "The Children's Hour," Tennessee William's new allegory, and "Camino Real" and "Picnic."

All of the students will see "Oklahoma", a three dimensional film. Music lovers will attend Parsifal at the Metropolitan Opera House. Those interested in music will also attend a performance of the New York Philharmonic with Dimitri Mitropolis conducting, at Carnegie Hall. The program will include compositions of Bach, Berlioz and Varghan Williams.

Free tickets for the WQXR String Quartet broadcast and for Piano Playhouse at the American Broadcasting Company will be distributed.

At noon on Easter Sunday, the students may participate in the annual Easter Parade on Fifth Avenue. The group will leave New York City at noon on Monday, April 6.

Mr. Clarence Warrington will chaperone the group.

Thomas Announces Newspaper Staff

Ann Thomas, editor of the Rotunda, has announced the newspaper staff for the coming year.

Managing editor will be Shirley Ward; assistant managing editor, Phoebe Warner; news editor, Dot Douglas; and assistant news editor, Gail Leonard.

Also appointed to a new staff position are Martha Donaldson, feature editor; Gloria Anderton, desk editor; Louise Wilder, sports editor; and copy editor, Ann Weatherholtz. Mary Ann Evans is business manager; Betsy Welbon, advertising manager; Barbara Powell, circulation manager; Joyce Gillchrest, columnist; and Carolyn Stanley, social notes.

The reporters for the coming year are Norma Jean Croft, Pat Cantrell, Carolyn Henderson, Margaret Miller, Carolyn Giles, and Charlotte Fitts. Also Ann Shuff, Marion Ruffin, Gail Patrick, Marie Swecker, and Ann Glenn will write news for the Rotunda. Bev Taylor, Dot Armstring, Margaret Dryden, and Naomi Reed are also reporters.

Staff positions are open for columnist, exchange editor, art editor, and reporters for those who are interested. Anyone who is interested may go to the next regular staff meeting.

The New Look

Taking on a face up-lifting and assuming an air of dignity, the "pert" little Rotunda box has been repaired and is eagerly awaiting articles, news items, features, and social notes from you, the Rotunda's readers.

The box is located near the prayer's blackboard in main hall.

Adventurers All

We're off on an expedition into the realm of journalism. And it's the first one for our new staff without the restraining knowledge of senior staff members to make sure we don't write headlines in the past tense. Now we know how Colombus and Admiral Byrd must have felt when they started off on some exciting safari into strange territory—they knew about ships and seas but what lay ahead was somewhat unknown.

Of course, we have learned a little about newspapers—what a galley proof is and that a certain amount of print fits into a certain space and you can't get even another period into that alloted space. The mechanical aspects of newspaper work are not so new.

But we surely will miss our senior staffers. To them the factors in choosing what is news and what is not, is "old stuff"; we are just learning the tricks of the trade. Before last year's Rotunda staff leaves us completely, however, we want to say congratulations for a good job. Those hours you poured over smudged proof produced a paper of which you should be proud. Much of the time it was plain hard work but you did it with enthusiasm. We are proud of you.

Columbus was the captain of his ship; every organization has its V. I. P.'s; and the Rotunda is no exception—but they are not the editors or reporters.

The purpose of a newspaper is to be of service to its public—to inform, to report to, interest, to entertain (you do read the humor column, don't you?) its readers. Therefore, you—students, faculty, administration, and alumnae—are our very important people. We appreciate the interest and cooperation you've given our efforts and say thank you. Our goal is to give our readers a clear view of news and affairs in all activities, academic and social, at Longwood. Our aim is to represent our college; our objective is to do it well. We're glad that you, our V. I. P.'s are backing us.

A newspaper carries many responsibilities as we are discovering. There are certain standards already part of newspaper work which are our duty to uphold. Newspapers require work, work, and then more work but we are glad we're in it—it's fun to see what we write come out in print. Headlines have their headaches, but there are intangible qualities in newspaper work that are worth all the long hours of scribbling. With a little knowledge of printers terms, with our very important readers and a purpose to serve, with a desire to write—we are off on a journalistic journey.

Are You Guilty?

The click of knitting needles, a murmer of voices, the rustle of turning pages, supressed laughter—could this be Mother's sewing circle? No, surprising as it may be this hodgepodge of noise can be heard any Tuesday during Longwood College's regular assembly period.

Why? Don't Longwood students know that inattention during a program is impolite — that it is only common decency to show respect to a speaker or entertainer? Are the students at this college so immature that they have attention spans of six year olds? Are girls who are preparing to be teachers so mentally dead that they have no interest in furthering their education?

Surely the answer to all these questions is "no". Most of us just don't stop to think what a poor impression our assembly behavior makes on visitors. Furthermore, we fail to remember that the weekly meeting of the student body is not meant for a social gathering. Rather it is planned as a time for educational and entertaining programs which could be worth while to all.

It would, however, be impossible to have, week after week, programs that appealed to every member of the student body. In a group so large individual interests are naturally different. A speaker that is interesting to some may be dull to others — musical numbers that give enjoyment to music lovers may be unappreciated by those who know little about it. Each girl should remember this and be considerate and well mannered enough to remain quiet during all the programs.

Most of us have had the experience of being annoyed during a program that was particularly interesting to us by the chatter of someone sitting nearby. Some have been in the irksome position of the speaker or performer who hears the low hum of voices denoting inattention. Therefore, next time we are tempted to chat with our neighbors or knit or study or sleep during an assembly program, let's remember the other person and our manners and become an attentive audience.

It's Up To You

The last act, last scene, and final dialogue have been given in this year's program of selecting editors and business managers for college publications and electing major and minor officers to serve in our student body, organizations—student government, "Y", Athletic Association and House Council.

The last act of this program concerned your consideration of those people who would best fill the office for which they were nominated in minor elections. The last scene concerned your actual voting for one of these people. The final dialogue was spoken when the outcome was made known. It's up to you.

Yes, the selection of all officers has been completed, but does this selection of good officers imply that the organization will have a successful year?

Is it correct to assume—just because these officers were selected on the basis of leadership, high ideals, and ability to show a working interest in group activities—that this is enough to assure the organiaztion a fruitful year?

Partially, the answer to these questions is yes, but the rest of the answer lies within the student body and its support of these officers. An organization can only be as good as its members' support of it—and we are all members of those four campus groups.

These officers are our representatives. When we voted for them we also assumed a responsibility for ourselves—to show interest in, to work in, to back up the organizations in all activities. This whole hearted support is needed by every group, however small or large each contribution may actually be.

The officers will do their part, will you? Time will tell when the curtain rings up again on major elections, 1954.

Social Notes

by Margaret Dryden

We've been going to lots of parties and having lots of fun in the past two weekends. Let's take a peek and see where everbody's been—

But first here is a special scoop!. Ann Keith Hundley received a diamond from Harper Brame this weekend. Best wishes, Ann Keith.

KA party at Hampden-Sydney weekend before last found Charlotte Fitts, Mary Campbell, Jean Moseley, Martha Donaldson, Dot Orr, Norma Jean Croft, Dot Douglas, Marian Ruffin, Pat Donnelly, Louise Turner, and Audrey Owen joining in the fun.

On the same weekend, Joy Simmons, Julie Moncure, Joanne Farless, LaReve Mallory, Dale Brothers, Mary Hundley, Mary Elva Robinson, and Nellie Lucy attended the Pan-Helienic dances at Randolph-Macon.

MCV wasn't left out of the parties either. The Pni Delta Chi fraternity had six of our girls present for its party. Bethe Cheatham, Mary Ann Ward, Nancy Inge, Dot Baldwin, Mary Dabney Langhorne, and Ann Glenn were all there.

This weekend found us scattered all over the state, too. At the Lambda Chi Ball in Richmond were Ann Marie Gray, Betty Pat Rogers, Mary Alice Ellington, and Barbara Blackman.

Sonia Kyle, Carolyn Vanture, Patty Deering, and Phyllis Nurney attended the Theta Chi Jubilee which was also held in Richmond. At the SCE party held at the University of Richmond was Ruth Van Houten.

Other parties this weekend—Billie Miller attended a PIKA party at W & L. At the University of Virginia were Patty Kappes, Betsy Nelson and Jane Lohr.

We almost missed this one—also held weekend before last. Sue Upson, Euphan Carter, and Roberta Hamlet were on hand for the Mardi Gras Ball at RPI.

A LA ANNE

by Anne M. Thaxton

"Ah, there's good news tonight! Spring is sprung! And to celebrate it there are many Longwood girls who now belong to the clan known as the "Crisco Kids." If you were nearby you could almost hear them sizzling up on the roof. Remember girls: once over lightly, sunny-side up and not too well done so that you're rare. Speaking of rare—who spoke? I'm always interrupting myself—the following are a few not-so-popular but provoking methods which experts suggest if you are trying to recapture that beau. The results will be—we hope—a quick return from him. Don't be surprised though if his letter contains questions such as: 1. Have you seen a psychiatrist lately, dear? 2. Could I send you some strong rope or poison, honey bun? 3. Wot 'appened?

The suggestions are as follows:

1. Write in circles. He'll be impressed to know you're a big wheel.

2. Write backward. If he has taken Miss Trent's course in handwriting, he'll know what to do.

3. Use at least four different colored inks. Variety adds spice—and we won't subtract one from your list of correspondents.

4. Write in a foreign language. He needs the exercise that accompanies hunting for the language professor who will translate it blushingly—for a small fee. It will make your beau United Nations conscious or unconscious.

If he is an athlete at heart he will become enraptured over this letter:

Dear Crusher,

By taking your advice to heart, my roommate and I are recreating ten hours a week. We play everything that is playable: rook, rummy, canasta, bridge, setback, old maids, Japanese checkers, monopoly, the radio, record-player, horses, basketball, soccer, speedball, volley ball, tennis, ping-pong, football and shuffleboard. If you hear of any other such mild, hyperphysical sports, let us know for we must develop a well-rounded program.

Must close now and practice for a track meet.

Exercisibly yours,
X. Austed.

Alumnae See Changes--Still--Longwood Remains Ageless

by Martha Donaldson

"Where is the White House?" inquired one sweet little old lady. "I don't know." replied another, "but have you seen the new modern dining hall?" These are just a few of the remarks that amused us during the past week end as throngs of alumnae again visited their Alma Mater.

Somehow the Campus was different — a nostalgic atmosphere seemed to prevail. High button shoes and bustles all at once became as logical as the saddle shoes and cashmeres of our age. Somehow these women of all ages became a unit, a family of Longwood girls.

All of the "old girls" had comments about Longwood. "It has been redecorated!" "So many new buildings-" "Why they have tennis courts on the old athletic field!" and "Look at the pretty new floor in the Rotunda," were just a few we were able to hear. Longwood has changed physically, but we also heard comments such as "Still feel like a student here," "The girls are just as rowdy as we used to be," "Just exactly like we used to be." All of the alumnae noticed the face lifting, they also notice that Longwood hasn't changed fundamentally. That is probably why each year on Founder's Day the Longwood girls come from far and near because they still feel at home.

Some of the Alumnae were absolutely ecstactic about the changes, especially some of the older ones. They had Longwood pictured as they saw it many years ago from the sweeping skirts and lamplight of the 19th century into the sleek, flaming 20's and on up to our time.

This is the part that amuses us—there were some very funny questions, funny to us because when we look back at pictures of Longwood even twenty years ago we are amazed. Imagine yourself walking in the first time in fifty years. You would have questions, too. They were funny but they added to the local color.

Some day forty or so years from now, who knows, we may return to an ultramodern spectacle where the girls entertain themselves with a rocket trip to the moon on Saturday afternoons and take pills which fill their heads with knowledge. It could happen. Laughing girls would stand around us with frank curiosity while we ask, "Where is the Rotunda?" "What happened to the Colonnade and Cunningham?" and "Where is Charlie Hop?"

And so it goes, our face gets lifted but we don't really change. When we come back as alumnae we will realize this even more. We may not find the school the same, but there will still be sunburned girls shouting for a fourth for bridge and hotdogs will still be sold on the halls. Don't ever expect us to change—we're ageless.

Movie, Play Present Query

by Joyce Gilchrest

Ironical or coincidental? Which word would best describe the occurrence of the two recent dramatic presentations in Jarman Hall.

"Orpheus", the film presented by the French students two weeks ago, was a modern version of an ancient Greek myth adapted by Jean Cocteau. Death was presented in the form of a woman, who could make herself present in our mortal world or in life after death. A product of the imagination of Cocteau, was an interesting experience for those who saw it.

The play "Death Takes a Holiday" by Alberto Cassolla was portrayed with deep emotion and feeling. The sound effects used and the well-designed set supplied the final touch to complement the excellence of the performers. The role of Death in this play may have given a new outlook to many. The inevitable encounter which we shall all make someday with this character can be viewed as a state of rest and peace, not a dreaded existence.

The lovers of musical drama will be eagerly anticipating the coming movie production of "The King and I". Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier will star in this production, playing this type of part for the first time in their careers. In preparation for the roles, the couple is being coached intensively in voice.

Spanish and soical science students ahould find the newly featured book in the library Made in Mexico, of interest. This book by Patricia Fent Ross is a study of the Mexican people through observation of their arts and crafts. Also noted are the contributions of the Mexican people in the fields of literature, science, music, dance, and the drama; as well as a chapter on Mexican kitchens and cookery with descriptions of customs and traditions throughout.

Orchesis Presents Recital At Greensboro Arts Forum Among Ten Other Colleges

Club Presents Part Of 'Mockingbird'

"We Are Puppets", selection from the forthcoming Orchesis dance-drama presentation, "The Mockingbird", was given by a group of Longwood dance students at the annual Arts Forum held in Greensboro, North Carolina last week end. Students from ten southern colleges participated.

Mr. Louis Horst, outstanding dance critic and founder and editor of the Dance Observer, was present at the Forum to review and evaluate student choreography. Longwood's contribution, one of two that had speaking parts was classified as being more dramatic in import than in movement, although it had rumor. Pictures were taken of the Longwood group while they were dancing and later for the Greensboro newspapers.

A general criticism given by Mr. Hurst of all the college compositions was of not having enough movement. Dances adhered too closely to conventional movement, lacked dynamism, and movement was too flowing and lyrical.

Longwood girls attending and participating in the dance were Anne Murphy, Margaret Taylor, Ila DesPortes, Gail Dixon, Ann Crowder, Shirley Roby, and Karen Spencer, who was accompanist. Traveling with the group was Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, Longwood professor or dance and Orchesis adviser.

"Judging from the amount of applause, which was second to that of R. P. I.'s "November Seascape", our dance was outstanding. Also, was not criticised so much as the other dance with speaking parts, from Winthrop College," was Mrs. Landrum comments on the Orchesis performance at the Arts Forum.

Anne Murphy, president of Orchesis, added "It was exciting to see students from other colleges, many better than we, some who had professional training, as was indicated by the students from R. P. I. Yet there were those who hadn't reached our level."

Other colleges taking part in the dance program were University of North Carolina, Greensboro College, Richmond Professional Institute, Women's College of the University of North Carolina, Winthrop College, Coker College, Madison College, Hollins College, and Mary Washington College.

Prof. Gives Speech

Dr. George W. Jeffers, head of the Longwood biology department spoke at the First-National Convention of the National Science Teachers Association held in Pittsburgh March 19, 20, and 21.

During this three day period, the convention procedings and activities took place at the Hotel William Penn in the heart of Pittsburgh, Penn.

Eighteen Pass R. C. Life Saving Test

Advanced swimming and life-saving instructor Ann Crowder has announced the names of the students who passed their life saving test and are now eligible for the instructors course.

The girls are Joan DeAlba, Joan Curles, Edith Frame, Fay Greenland, Pat Hamner, Hilda Hartis, Peggy Ilyus, Phyllis Isaacs, Joyce Jenkins, Beth Kent, Dot Morris, Nancy Nelson, Ann Parkinson, Shirley Roberts, Ann Snyder, Betty Tyler, Joan Ward, and Elsie Wente.

Mr. Howard Camp, Red Cross instructor, will teach the class three hours every night, starting Monday, March 23 and lasting through Friday, March 28.

Requirements for entrance are a thorough knowledge of all nine strokes and a senior lifesaving badge.

The purpose of Mr. Camp's course is to show students how to teach swimming strokes and lifesaving. Each girl is held responsible for teaching one stroke and one phase of lifesaving. Mr. Camp then criticizes the teaching and makes suggestions.

Most of the time, however, is spent in developing the girl's strokes so that they can learn to demonstrate them.

When the course is completed they are qualified to teach swimming anywhere in Virginia.

Don't you think we should cut out studying between meals? Speaking of meals the dining hall is going to put mint flavored tooth picks on the table for girls who want to cut out fattening deserts.

Which reminds me I want to sell my pocket edition of the Britannica—it's so bunglesome.

Overheard in Anatomy lab last week, "Tibia or not tibia—that is the question!" Speaking of science—shouldn't they cut down the number of biology field trips to the Sahara? After all, it disturbs the "Muslins" who live nearby—nearby? Near buy aspirin by the name alone.

Read in paper—"Must sell 1 moustache cup, 1 boy scout manual, and 1 Charles Atlas handbook—owner just found out he is a girl. Write Christine—Box 911.

Wouldn't it be nice if they installed loud speakers from the class room to our rooms? Of course, think what a boom some Anti - hearing Aid Co. would have! Why I'll bet those jimdandy little gadgets, just opposite of hearing aids, would sell like 3c trips to Bermuda.

From the Bleachers

by Helen Waltman and Louise Wilder

It's too late now! Only those who have eight volley ball or basketball practices can participate in class games.

Class games have started. Green and White is leading 18 to ½ in the race for the color cup. We've heard rumors that the red and whites haven't given up the fight. For all we know the red and white may overtake the green and white.

It certainly would help to have spectators out to support both teams. Without "Charlie Hop" and the few other loyal fans the bleachers would be bare.

The freshmen beat their sister class in basketball. We heard that the Juniors teased the freshmen telling them they were just going to let them beat them since the game didn't count toward the color cup.

Some of the upperclassmen tried out for official basketball ratings last week. (Read story on this page.) While they called the freshman-junior game, they were being judges and to make the test harder, the judges gave instructions to the players to make excessive fouls. It was extra hard for the girls calling the game because practically all twelve players were fouling at the same time! Congratulations to all the girls who tried out!

Volleyball tournaments are being held in the freshmen gym classes now. The winning team from Miss Rebecca Brockenborough's class will play the winner from Miss Olive Iler's class. The challenge of winning for a particular purpose makes the games more fun.

Installation of the new officers and council members of the Athletic Association will be held on March 30 in the A. A. room.

It has been announced that the swimming meets with William and Mary and Madison have been cancelled.

Class games scores: The sophomores topped the seniors in two volleyball games 32-9 and 15-12. The juniors beat the freshmen in two volleyball games 22-7 and 25-3. The seniors won one volleyball game with the freshmen 19-4 but the freshmen came back fighting and the next game ended in a 11-11 tie.

The score of the freshman-junior basketball game was 35-13 for the freshmen. The sophomores topped the juniors and seniors in basketball with a score of 31-20 in both games.

Come to the remaining class contests. This afternoon there are the big games: the freshmen play the sophomores in the volleyball and the seniors and juniors play basketball.

Six Phys. Ed. Majors Take Practical Tests

Six physical education majors took the practical test for basketball official ratings in the Longwood gym on March 16.

Roberta Wiatt, Anne Parkinson, Anne Crowder, Betty Tyler, Nell Green, and Helen Castros participated in the tests.

The girls were judged by Miss Frances Ramsey of Roanoke College and Miss Jean Beamer and Miss Jean Bentley from Roanoke.

A certain number of points were given to the girls for the fouls which they called. The score on the practical test and the score on the written test, which was taken previously, will determine whether the girls get intra-mural, local, or national ratings.

Results have not been received as of this date, but results will be announced later.

Church News

Baptist

The B. S. U. will present an Easter Play "The Everlasting Dream" March 29 at 6.00 P. M. in the Baptist Church. Included in the cast are Ann Brooking, Barbara Moore, Lawana Rutland, Ann Moore, Rebecca Blair, Pat Cantrell, Mary Meade Robertson, and Juanita Dayberry. James Parker and Ann Thaxton are the narrators. The organist will be Mary Ellen Hawthorne. Earlier in the evening, Break-The-Record Night will be observed at Training Union—with a goal of 75. Everyone is urged to attend.

Wesley Foundation

Melinda Ayres and Loretta Brooking were representatives at Virginia Methodist Conference at Roslyn near Richmond March 21 and 22. The theme of the conference was "We Need Christ Now."

Six Students Attend Meet

Representing the Longwood physical education department, six students will attend the state convention of the Virginia Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation which will be held at Old Point Comfort on March 27-28.

Dr. Harry Scott of Columbia University will be guest speaker of the student section.

Sue Webb, a senior physical education major, is chairman of the student section. Junior Elsie Wente, also a physical education major, is recorder of the student section. Miss Olive Iler will act as adult advisor.

Other Longwood girls attending are Ann Crowder, Helen Castros, Nell Green, and Betty Tyler, all senior physical education majors. The convention will be held at the Hotel Chamberlain.

Adviser Releases Sorority Averages

Scholastic averages, for the fall 1952 semester, of eight Longwood social sororities have been released by Miss Kathleen Cover, advisor to the Pan-Hellenic Council.

Recipient of the silver scholarship bowl given each semester to the sorority with the highest average is Kappa Delta. Their cumulative rating is 1.98.

Delta Sigma Epsilon is second on the list with an average of 1.94. The third sorority in rating is Sigma Sigma Sigma with an average of 1.72.

Alpha Sigma Tau maintained a 1.71 average; Zeta Tau Alpha's average was 1.67.

Academic average rating for Alpha Sigma Alpha is 1.61. Pi Kappa Sigma has made a rating of 1.58 and Theta Upsilon rated 1.46.

Averages of the sororities are posted each year and are tabulated by the college registrar.

Virginia Museum Of Fine Arts Shows Water Color Exhibition In LC Library

The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts now has an exhibition of twenty water color paintings in the Longwood library. These paintings have been done by memebrs of the National Association of Women Artists.

Three of the paintings have flowers for their center of interests. These are "August Arrangement" by Florence Sautier, "Palm Trees", by Irene Sand and "Lilies" by Goldie S. Lipson.

"Roof Tops" by Dorothy Harrison, "Factory Town" by Pearl Shock and "Through the Bus Window" by Grace Lreedwell are the artist's conception of a phase of urban life.

Scenes from the sea are found in "Rockprot Cove" by Nancy Ranson; "Old Pier" by Edna R. Andrews; "Sailing Weather" by Gladys Young, and "Into the Fog" by E. Zabriskie Banta.

"Landscapes" by Alfreda Stavs, and "Mission Accomplished" by Clara Stainess, and "Talmudist" by Rose Kuper are modernistic paintings.

Landscape paintings include "Old Chestnut Trees" by Agnes Abbot, "Trees from My Windows" by Carolyn Saxe and "Winter Pallette" by Naomi Lorne and "After Korea" by Elsa Bley.

"Evening at Home" by Lena Greta Malson and "Harem" by Kate Antony, are all study figures.

Study Group Meets

Representing seven Virginia colleges, a committee which has spent three years working on a study of college curricula and instruction will meet on April 1 in Richmond. Serving on the committee from Longwood is Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college.

Administrative delegates from Madison, Radford, Virginia State College, Lynchburg College, University of Virginia, and William and Mary will attend also.

Programs for student teaching will be the chief topic of discussion at next Wednesday's meeting.

Science Department Begins New Project

Two collections of fossils, rocks and minerals will be the foundation of a science museum to be established by the Longwood science department.

David Arthur Brodi and H. B. Dien are the contributors of the two collections which have been gathered from all parts of the United States, Italy, Canada, Spain and Mexico.

Dr. Charles F. Lane, professor of geography has announced that the department has already begun work on this project. New glass show cases, to be kept in a museum room in Stevens Hall, have been purchased. Classification of the specimens has also begun.

Dr. Lane stated that he considered Longwood "very fortunate" to have possession of these valuable collections.

L. C. Library League Elects New Officers To Serve Next Year

Mary Cowles, a sophomore from Minor, was elected president of the Longwood Library League for the 1953-54 session at its monthly meeting held Tuesday night in the Library.

Assisting her as vice-president will be Pollyana Martin from Lynchburg. Ann Lush, from Richmond, was seelcted secretary for the group, while Barbara Moore of Richmond will serve as treasurer of the organization.

Pollyanna Martin gave an informal talk on "Liberal Education" as it was recently discussed by Pearl Buck and Martin Van Doren at the inauguration of the new president at Randolph-Macon Women's College in Lynchburg.

On hand for these academic activities at Randolph - Macon, Pollyanna stressed the importance of a liberal arts education over that of specialized training in one field, as related by these noted people.

The purpose of the club is to further the interests of libraries and library work. It is composed Science and student assistants.

A tour of the Longwood library and Jarman Hall, highlighted a visit of the Farmville High School library club to the college campus last week.

The Longwood Library League invited members of the High School Club as part of a project to sponsor visits of the high schools in the district to our library.

Pollyanna Martin, student assistant, and Miss Kate O'Brien, Farmville High School Librarian, conducted the tour.

bored with going there every weekend, why not just stay here one week end? It's much more exciting—cool dips in the college pool, romantic walks to Longwood estate, exciting, intimate candle light dinners in the Snack and best of all, an exotic dance in the Rec after the Theatre (I lost my opera glasses last week. Have you seen them?) Of course, if you can break away from all the mad attentive men, you might read or study one night in the week.—it's so collegiate!

Remember! There is only one more Sing until the winner of the Y.W.C.A. contest is announced. Results will be given in the next issue of the Rotunda.

English Group Bids Nineteen

Nineteen upper-classmen recently received bids to Beorc Eh Thorn English honor society according to Elizabeth Stone. They are Pat Altwegg, Jean Baber, Lura Beavers, Barbara Blackman, Polly Brothers, Nancy Nelson, Virginia Ann Phelps and Ellen Porter. Other girls who received bids include Helen Short, Barbara Southern, Patricia Taylor, Elizabeth Ann Thomas, Shirley Ward, Barbara White, and Peggy Worthington.

At a recent meeting, the members of Beorc Eh Thorn voted to pass the constitution of the society.

On March 17 a luncheon was given in the tea room for Dr. and Mrs. Burgess Johnson, the English professors, and the officers of Beorc Eh Thorn.

Honorary Society Selects Members

Twelve girls have accepted bids to Pi Gamma Mu according to Bunny Gibson, President. Those accepting are Pat Altwegg, Gwendolyn Bain, Barbara Cotton, Helen Crowgey, Elizabeth Gilliken, Mrs. Gladys Harvey, Lou Jamison and Mary Hurt Perry.

Also Mrs. Margaret Putney, Marguerite Smith, Elizabeth Stone, and Sue Wcub have been given bids.

These girls will be initiated April 8.

In order to be eligible for Pi Gamma Mu, the student must be a junior or senior and have a B average on 20 hours of social science, and she must show outstanding interest and scholarship.

Sun Fun May Give Back Ache But It's All For Beauty's Sake

by Dot Armstrong

"If winter comes, can spring be far behind?" Well, at times in the cold, windy depths of March we may begin to doubt it, but what the poet says must be true. Impatiently, we look forward to the first warm, pleasant days of spring and the hours on the roof when we will smear ourselves with oil and stretch out on a towel, our thoughts wandering lazily from everything in general to nothing in particular, while we slowly bake to a beautiful, even tan. Of course this perfect state is reserved for a fortunate few. The majority of us lie there and writhe in agony while the hot sun sears our delicate tissues and eyeballs; then as soon as one side is well baked or more likely, burnt, flop over wearily and suffer through ten minutes on the other side.

After awhile, feeling limp and weak, you drag your aching body inside and peer cautiously into the mirror. Still lily-white?? Oh, well, just wait a few hours. Soon you will become aware of a slight itching, burning sensation and looking into the mirror once more, you scream with horror as you perceive the results of your sojourn beneath the sun. Your lily-white skin has suddenly turned painfully scarlet, with white and blue flecks here and there. Very patriotic, but not quite the effect you had hoped for.

Orchestra Will Present Chamber Music Recital To End Artists Series

Concert To Feature Famed Violin Soloist

Closing the Longwood Artists Series, the Mozart Orchestra under the direction of Robert Scholz will present a night of chamber music at 8 p. m. Tuesday, April 14, in Jarman Hall.

The ensemble composed of a picked group of New York musicians will feature American violinist, Helen Kwalwasser, as a special soloist. Miss Kwalwasser is is known almost country-wide and almost countryy-wide and in in European countries for her solo recitals and general orchestral appearances.

Confining its tours to the Eastern states, the orchestra, composed of twelve strings, two oboes, and two horns, performs in concert for colleges, chamber music societies and general audiences, playing both classics and mixed programs.

Students and townspeople will hear a tentative program—"Symphony No. 35 by Haydn," "Violin Concerto" by Mozart, "Sinfonietta for Strings" by Roussel, or Hindemith's "String Pieces".

"Symphony No. 29 in A," K. 201 or "Diverimenento in D," K. 251, both by Mozart, will probably also be included the night's program.

Scholz Conducts

Conductor Robert Scholz, Austrian-born and now an American citizen, has been known for a decade in New York for his concerts for small and large orchestras, Mozart and Haydn opera performances, and major choral presentations. Prior to World War II, he was a faculty member of the Mozarteum in Salsburg, Germany. He came to the United States in 1937 as a duo-pianist with his brother. Recently he was awarded the medal of the Bruckner Society of America.

"A serious musician equipped with an impressive technique and inflammable temperament", is the description of Miss Kwalwasser given by the New York Herald Tribune.

Of the orchestra, Mr. Willard M. Clark, music critic for the Springfield Union, wrote—"This group plays with an exactitude, beauty of tone and warmth which makes all they play come alive".

Preceding programs in this series have included a talk by Mr. Jack Kilpatrick, editor of the Richmond News Leader, on the presidential election of 1952; Jean Erdmann and her group of Modern dance artists; the Don Cossacks Chorus and Dancers; and Virgil Fox, who presented a program of organ music.

College Professor To Continue Work In Scientific Field

Miss Elizabeth Burger, Assistant Professor of Science at Longwood, has been granted a year's leave of absence by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college, to do graduate work in the field of natural science at Columbia University. She will begin her course of study in June and will continue her study through the summer session.

Recently, Miss Burger was chosen as a delegate to travel with the United States Hockey Team, thus delaying her work for the first semester, 1955-54 session. This work will be completed before the beginning of the second semester.

She will travel with the team from September through November and will visit England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, and the Guernsey Islands. Also included in her trip will be an international Hockey Conference in Folkstone, England, attended by thirty members from other countries.

Upon her return Miss Burger's studies at Columbia will be resumed. She will do science field work during December and January in Virginia and in several other states.

Miss Burger will return to Longwood for the fall session of 54-55.

Annual Tryouts

Mary Ann King, editor of the Virginian, has announced that beginning on April 6, students interested in working on the annual staff may sign up for tryouts. A special list will be posted on the main bulletin board on which girls may sign up. All students, and especially freshmen, are urged to tryout.

'53-54 Entrance list Reaches 144, States Executive Secretary

The office of the Executive Secretary of the college has received to date 144 admission applications for the 1953-54 session. Last year at this time only 118 students had applied for entrance to Longwood. Five girls from Richmond, 7 girls from Roanoke, 10 from Norfolk, 7 from Hampton, 6 from Alexandria, and 8 from Mecklenburg County have applied; also three from out of the state—2 from North Carolina and 1 from New Jersey. Forty-three students have enrolled for the summer session.

The Admissions Committee is especially pleased with the high scholastic standing of the incoming students. A large number of the students are in the upper fourth of their class.

Two Juniors Will Present Music Recital Sun., April 12

Girls Give Voice, Piano Selections

Lura Beavers, pianist, and Dolly Horne, vocalist, will present a joint music recital on Sunday, April 12, at 4:00 p. m. in Jarman Auditorium.

Under the instruction of Mr. Joel Ebersole, Dolly has prepared as her selections— Sapphic Ode" by Brahms, "Tanto Sasperero" by Bencini, "Vittoria" by Carrissimi, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" by Saint-Saens, "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" by Haydn, "Elegie" by Massanet, "The Island" by Rachmaninoff, and "Pretty Polly Oliver" an English Traditional.

Lu, a student of Miss Emily Clark, will play for the first part of her program—"Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach-Bauer, and the "Prelude", "Minuet", and "Gigue" from "Partita in B flat major" by Bach. The second part of her performance will include—"The Girl With The Flaxen Hair" by Debussy, a polka from "The Age of Gold" by Shostakovich, and "Variations on a theme by Tschaikovsky" by Siloti.

Both girls are members of the Junior Class, major in music, and plan to teach in that field following their graduation.

"Lu" Beavers, a junior from Indian, has served as treasurer of the YWCA and is now newly elected pesident of the organization. Lu is a music major and is a member of the College choir. Cotillion Club and Alpha Sigma Tau also claim her membership; she is a member of Wesley Foundation.

Dolly Horne, a junior from Smithfield, is a music major and has been in the choir three years. She is music chairman of the "Y" and a member of Madricals, Kappa Delta Pi, and Cotillion Club and the Baptist Student Union.

Other student recitals are planned for voice and piano major during April and May. These recitals are given each spring by the music department.

'Roses In the Moonlight' Theme For 1953 Cotillion Club Dance; Marterie Band To Play Music

Longwood Library Makes Collection Of Youth Books

by Naomi Reed

For a number of years, the library has had a separate collection of children's books, enjoyed by the youngsters of Farmville and used extensively as supplementary material by the student teachers in the elementary grades.

A need for a corresponding collection for the eighth grade through senior high school was felt. For this reason, a collection of young peoples books has been started in the library. It is thought that a large number of high school students in town and the secondary student teachers would benefit from using such a collection.

Books in this collection were chosen from book lists for young people, compiled by joint committees of The American Library Association, The National Education Association and the National Council of Teachers of English.

The committees which recommended these books are made up of teachers and librarians who have had years of experience in knowing what teen-agers like to read, and the books have been selected for interest and entertainment as well as educational value.

Some of the subjects covered are the world today, science, people and places, poetry and drama, essays and criticisms, novels, short stories, fine and applied arts, music, religion, hobbies, sports, practical arts and vocations.

With the young people's collection and high school text books, also the children's collection and elementary text books, the area of reading for the pre-college student is well covered.

Sing Contest Closes; Sophs Receive Prize

Presenting a take-off on the College Founder's Day, "The Return of the Class of '55 in 1965," the Sophomore Class was the winner of the 1953 Sing Contest sponsored by the Young Women's Christian Association of the College.

A five dollar prize, presented by Nancy Nelson, chairman of the Sing Committee at the regular Tuesday assembly yesterday, will go into the Sopohomre class treasury.

Last Friday night the curtain opened on a scene of general confusion depicting the return of alumnae of the class of '55 for Founder's Day. The 1965 status of the returning graduates was typified by costume and action.

Starting off the contest on March 7, the Junior Class presented a satirical skit about a usual Longwood assembly with off key singing of the Alma Mater, a speaker whose topic was "Philosophy of Education" and argyles sleeping, dining hall waitresses complete with trays, and latecomers as prevalent as on any Tuesday in Jarman Hall.

"You-As Seen In the Snack Bar" was the theme of the Senior Class skit. Complete with "Charlie Hop", juke box, perpetual bridge game and "the maid", the skit showed the usual mad comings and goings of the between class crowd.

On March 20, the Freshman Class showed a typical sleepy Saturday morning in history class, with the majority of the class still in pin curls and pajamas, and, of course, a few wide awake students in the first row.

The Sing contest is sponsored annually by the "Y" cabinet. Each class gives a fifteen minute skit, with one rehearsal allowed, on Friday night after supper. The contest runs for four consecutive weeks, with one class presenting their skit every Friday night.

Two representatives from each class and several members of the administration made up the panel of judges.

Taylor Will Lead Seniors In Figure

"Roses in the Moonlight" has been selected for the theme of the Cotillion Club dance to be held from 8 p. m. to 12 p. m. Saturday, April 11, in the college gymnasium. After the dance, the club will sponsor a party in the main recreation hall from 12 p. m. to 1 a. m. for girls and their dates.

Chosen by the dance club, Margaret Taylor, a senior from Suffolk, will lead the figure to be formed by senior members and their escorts.

Natalie Lancaster, newly elected chairman for the night's activity, has announced that the gym will be decorated in pale green and white with American beauty red carrying out the theme.

Name Band Plays

Ralph Marterie and his band, marking the first time a name band has played at Longwood since Claude Thornhill in 1950, will provide the musical note for this dance.

Before originating the band on the West Coast, Ralph Marterie played under band-leaders like Paul Whiteman, Percy Faith, Frank Black, Ray Shields, and other top radio and music business names. He has the distinction of being known as "musicians musician" for his instrumentations.

Through Mercury recordings and tours to the East Coast to such schools as the University of Virginia, and VPI, he has established his reputation and band successes here on the East Coast.

Janice Pinkard, president of Cottillion, commented, "We feel that in bringing Ralph Marterie to Longwood, we are bringing the best new band."

After-Dance Party

Beverly Taylor, freshman, will serve as chairman for the party after the dance. Coffee and doughnuts will be served to the "Late nighters".

The 84 freshmen and transfer students who have accepted bids and have become official "goats", will help decorate the gymasium. Goat Day will be held on April 10.

Janice also said "I hope as many are going as can and I hope it will be a good dance—at least we'll try to make it so!"

Dance Group Selects May Dance Co-Heads For 1953 Festivities

Two seniors have been selected to head the 1953 May Day Dance to be held after the traditional May festivities on May 3.

Janet Wiggins, from Arlington, and Mary Hurt Peery of Grundy were chosen at a recent meeting of Orchesis to serve as co-chairmen of the entire dance.

The modern dance club is sponsoring the annual May Dance.

Margaret Taylor, a senior from Suffolk, has been made chairman of the dance music committee and will make all arrangements for the orchestra.

Scene of the dance will be the College gymnasium; 8 p. m. to 12 p. m. is the time set.

Rotunda To Give Faculty Ball Game

by Dot Armstrong

Longwood College faculty members and students will don funny costumes and cavort about the gymnasium in a mock basketball game on April 10.

Phoebe Warner, chairman of the committee in charge of planning this event, explained that it is to be sponsored by the school newspaper., The Rotunda. The typical faculty members and students who will compose the teams have not yet been chosen.

In this game the men faculty members will play the men students and, the women faculty will play the girls. There will also be faculty and student cheerleaders.

Although Phoebe would not commit herself to the extent of predicting the outcome of the game, she promised the audience a very rare and entertaining evening.

Charge of admission to the game has been set at twenty cents for both students and faculty members.

TENTATIVE PLANS FOR THE COMING YEAR ARE IN THE MAKING by the newly elected presidents of the four major offices. They are, left to right, Lura Alice Beavers, head of the Y.W.C.A.; Barbara Assaid, House-Council president; Mary Denny Wilson, who will preside at Student Government meetings; and Else Wente, head of the Athletic Association

He Is Risen

"Christ our Lord is risen today, Alleluia!"

Sunday will soon be here and many of us will be singing this phrase of the familiar hymn in our churches at this wonderful time of the year—the Easter season—a season full of love and hope and with the renewal of faith in mankind. Easter, full of the spirit of peace—this peace even reaching into war torn countries of the eastern hemisphere where soldiers, for even a minute, will take time out to pray and give thanks for the light of Christ.

At home, the little child will be kneeling, with head bowed, in Sunday School saying "thank-you" in his own little way. The teenager will stop long enough to close his prayer with "bless everyone". The thinking college student will realize in his prayer the need of a power mightier than himself.

A mother will be giving thanks for the joys and sorrows which have led her to a full life in the growing knowledge of Christ; the father will praise God for the strength gained in Christ's dying for us.

Yes, soon we will come to the period of thanksgiving—on Good Friday Christ was crucified on the cross. The dark recollestions of that Friday and Saturday will come; but the period of mourning will end on Sunday.

We shall soon see the beauty and sunshine of an Easter season. Recall your awe during a thunderstorm; your gasp of delight when you round a corner and suddenly are faced with a sky of brilliant color from flaming fire to palest pink. Then, share Mary's joy when she beheld the angel by her Son's empty tomb.

"Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here; for He is risen."

"Christ our Lord is risen today. Alleluia."

A Word To The Wise

"In Spring a young student's fancy is somewnat inhibited by thoughts of term papers and parallel reading yet to be done." Thus has spoken one "seer" who was wise in the ways of college students and professors.

Spring days are crammed with activities demanding a student's attention; and it seems that all professors demand the completion of term papers during the week of the most time-consuming events.

These last two months of the year are usually the fullest. The days are longer according to sun movement, but shorter in relation to the number of things every student must do. The "pressure is on" and we'll have scores of tests to take, volumes of parallel to read, and, for a final touch, exams. And, of course, all campus organizations will celebrate the end of the year with picnics, parties, dances, or teas.

Right here we would say "A word to the wise is sufficient." Tidbits of wisdom such as this have become trite and shopworn to college students, but there is an element of truth in them.

These next weeks may become unbearably full unless we are careful to regulate our activities and schedules to accommodate our health, social life, and studies. There is no need here to examine these aspects of college life—everyone of us is capable of knowing whether we have had too much sunburn, too little sleep, too many parties, and too little studying—or equally as bad, too few parties, and too much studying.

We would simply urge here that every Longwood girl make the most of these remaining weeks and avoid being caught in the melee of a last minute rush. Let's look back on April and May 1953 as two very full, but satisfying months of activity.

What Do You Think?

The campus of Longwood College is literally evacuated every Friday. All students who have cuts and money enough—and some perhaps who have not—leave Farmville by any known means of transportation excluding horse and buggy.

The effects of this general exodus are highly questionable. Usually students return on Sunday night still behind in history assignments and even more exhausted than they were Friday after five days of study. This extreme leave-on-the-weeek-end—epidemic seems indicative of something lacking and of a definite lowering of school spirit.

It is obviously impossible to study for a whole week—including Friday, Saturday, and Sunday—for week after week. Everyone must sooner or later have a break in which to relax and "re-create" mind and body.

Unfortunately, as students may verify, Farmville and the college offer fey opportunities for such relaxing and entertaining activities on the week ends. Even those lucky ones with dates and visitors have a limited variety of things to do. We can even become weary of just sittin', lookin', and talkin' to a date, unless, of course, he's Gregory Peck's cousin.

The other five days of each week are full but week ends are sadly lacking.

However, something can be done about it—if the rest of Longwood College should become as interested in the situation as one student who has taken time to express her ideas. Her letter to the editor is printed elsewhere on this page.

The editors of the Rotunda feel that this letter is important for two reasons. First, it is based on facts that can be substantiated by sudents from freshman class to senior class. In the second place it offers definite and constructive suggestions and criticisms. That is what we need—facts and suggestions. Certainly, not all of these ideas could be used but they offer a foundation for further investigation from which other plans and suggestions may develop.

If there is to be any change it must begin with the students. We could not expect help from the administration unless we are ready and enthusiastic in responding to the challenge ourselves.

This situation isn't new. We've batted it around in dormitory gab sessions for years. If we want some improvements, we'll now have to act. What are your ideas?

The Rotunda is ready to print the letters from all of you who desire to add constructive opinions pertinent to this situation, and to act as a sounding board for student body ideas. Do you want to do something to help a "boring" situation? Well, do it.

Letters to Editor

Are your week-ends lost? Lost from fun, that is. Too many of us are going home, and the few who stay have too little fun. Take Sally for example. She is a typical Longwood girl. She stayed here for several consecutive week-ends. Her comment after such: "Ugh!"

Too many of us feel this way after a typical week-end spent at Longwood. I believe that lack of entertainment is the reason behind this feeling and the cause of so many absences each week-end.

There is no great demand for entertainment during the week, but week-ends are another matter. In order that your best work be done during the week, relaxation, recreation and entertainment should govern the week-end. If maximum study is done during the week-end, it discourages an interest in study during the week.

Now for a brief summary of entertainment offered. Saturday night there is a choice of two things: a walk downtown to the movie or card playing in the "rec." And you usually end up doing both. Sunday morning and Sunday night church services are open. In the afternoon, another movie is attended. So the typical week-end amounts to just about two movies, card playing and church services. The next week-end the s ame process is repeated. This monotony results in the loss of any relaxation activities may offer. Does this ring a bell with you?

What can we do to add entertainment to our list? How can we go about it? Firs of all, you might begin by finding out what the students want. Investigate the possibilities and then get the vigor of the student body behind you.

It is wonderful that the skating rink has been added to our entertainment, but being located about 2 miles from the college raises the problem of transportation. Because of these transportation difficulties, it is hard for us to take advantage of this opportunity. The first task for improvement might be providing transportation to and from the rink. This is a very possible and probable aspect.

Another potentiality for improvement is our weekly "rec" dance. These weekly "rec" dances are sponsored by campus organizations, which charge admission.

Social Notes

by Carolyn Stanley

With Easter just around the corner many of us stayed here this week end to rest up for the coming holidays; however, there's never a dull moment and the 29th and 30th proved to be quite exciting for some!

Engaged:

Many congratulations to Jan Van Horn, who is all smiles these days since her engagement to Jerry Page.

Another surprise was more than welcome when John Hodges presented Ann Dudley with a diamond ring last weekend. More congratulations to you both!

U. Va.

Among those girls who traveled up Charlottesville way for the DEK parties at U. Va. were Wanda Kariet, June Manlove, Betsy Nelson, Jane Lohr, and Betsy Ann Berry. Everyone seemed to have a grand time! Diana Burgess visited Wally at the Sigma Nu House, too!

Visitors:

Jim Miller from U. Va. stopped in for 15 minutes Sunday night just to see Lucy Thwing and Lin Clark, V. M. I. stayed almost that long to visit Donnie Devine. Staying longer, Johnny Westbrook was a welcome sight to everybody.

In your Easter bonnet
Look as pretty as can be,
To strike some young man's fancy
And have yourself a spree!
Then if you come back
With a pin or diamond ring,
I'll put it in the paper
And it won't cost you a thing!

April Snows, Easter Woes Add To Vivacious Vacation

by Martha Donaldson

Grab your hats, gals (Easter bonnets, that is) and prepare to travel! It 's almost unbelievable that Easter is here already when Christmas only seems last week, but, it is Easter and that means vacation. Well, maybe not a vacation in the true sense of the word, for it will be rather hectic. Let's look in our magic egg and see what you'll be doing during those glorious days.

First, there will be the exciting shopping for just the right Easter costume. Here's a tip to Longwood girls — don't be afraid of those creatures who crowd you. Rip off the dresses you are trying on, and snatch the hats while you are viewing yourself in the mirror—they are people. They aren't really bad—just dangerous. (Feel better already, now don't you?)

Easter morning you dress yourself in the finery that you finally were able to obtain. You're all dressed in white from head to toe and when you go out doors you are glad that you are, for now you match the snow flurry. Oh, what a beautiful Easter morn, you think, now the children will have a place to hide their Easter eggs —in the snow drifts! It is just pure jolly, you think, as you grit your teeth.

During the night that little ole character with the baskets of squashy, broken, half hard-boiled eggs has left his cheer with all the children. They run to and fro looking so adorable with eggs plastered in their hair, chocolate smeared on their faces and jelly beans stuck in their ears. You wonder while looking at them, could this have once been you? You are so sophisticated with beaucoups de savior faire (lots of know how, you English speaking peons) but this is soon ended, when you gracefully alight on an Easter egg.

You don't last very long, however. You're getting older than you thought, so you just sit with some of the younger children and gorge yourself with all the goodies you can beg, borrow, or mostly steal, while the little imps have their backs turned. You eat too much.

The next morning you know you ate too much. You lie there (turning greener by the minute) using the last day of your so-called vacation to recuperate so you can go back to school and get some sleep. Oh well, your vacation is shot, but hasn't it been typical?

College Receives Improvement Funds

by Dot Douglas

It has been announced that the state has appropriated $5,000 for various school improvements. From this sum the dining hall will get new toasters for each table, so that the students may have hot toast for breakfast.

Also permission has been granted for music to be played during meals, and ashtrays will be provided for after-meal smoking. Another change in the dining hall is that breakfast will be served cafeteria style from 7:30 to 9:00.

Added to this, permission has been granted for Longwood girls to go to movies at the drive-in and to stay out till 11:00 on weeknights and 12:30 on Saturday. This is being done to make the girls feel more like they are at home.

The school has one thing to say about these rules, though. That is, "Lir pa loof"—(jumbled April fool!)

I'm afraid these Jim-dandy reforms are just foolers—but since we are on the subject of foolers, I have a few suggested ways to end this day of days.

(1) If you can get hold of your professor's grade book, jumble up the grades giving all the A people D's and vice-versa. What a laugh he, or she, will get putting it in order.

(2) Report your roomie to government for some offense. After government has assembled and pondered the case for hours, rush in and give them the good word.

(3) Call your mother collect and tell her you have just eloped.

(4) With a few dozen of your little fat-faced friends, invade the infirmary after painting measles spots all over you.

(5) Send out wedding invitations to all your friends. After all the presents are safely in, tell them that it was just a Lir pa loof joke.

(6) Set off the fire drill siren just before 12:00. That way the whole student body can help you end this wonderful day up right.

Gotta go now. My roomie just told me that there's a man in the Rotunda who wants me to take a screen test.

President of H2O Announces Intra-color Swimming Meet Set For Wednesday, April 15

Meet To Feature Diving Contests

Especially designed for all aquatically inclined members of Red and White or Green and White classes is the intra-color swimming meet which will be held at 5 p. m. on Wednesday, April 15, sponsored by the H2 O Club, and the Athletic Association.

Ann Crowder, president of H2O Club, has announced that the meet is not between the classes or for color cup points, but is planned as a contest between the colors and to give many girls an opportunity to participate in a swimming meet.

There will be events open to beginning, intermediate, and advanced swimmers. A diving contest will be part of the program.

Events for those in beginning class are leap frog, breath holding contest, and a human crawl race. For those rated as intermediates there will be a pajama relay, disrobing while in the pool race, and an underwater race.

Advanced swimmer and varsity team members will participate in a 40 yard freestyle relay, a 25 yard back stroke race, 25 yard breast stroke race, and 50 yard free style race. Those who take part in the diving events will do a jackknife, a swan dive and one selected dive that they may choose.

Judges for the contest will be representatives of the green and whites and of the red and white.

This is the first such meet that has been held at Longwood. Ann expressed the hope that many girls would make use of the opportunity and participate in the meet. Lists on which to sign up will be posted on the main bulletin board next week.

Eleven Girls Pass Red Cross Course

Eleven girls have passed the Red Cross Safety Instructor's course which lasted from Monday, March 23 until Friday March 28.

Girls passing the courses were Lib cswell, Anne Crowder, Edith Frame, Patsy Hamner, Hilda Hartis, Margaret Ilyus, Phyllis Issacs, Joyce Jenkins, Anne Parkinson, Anne Snydor, and Else Wente. The girls who passed the test are now eligible to teach swimming anywhere in the state of Virginia.

Mr. Howard Camp, Red Cross instructor, taught the class three hours each night of the week.

To enter the course, the girls were required to have a thorough knowledge of all nine strokes and a senior life-saving badge.

The purpose of Mr. Camp's course was to show students how to teach swimming strokes and life saving. Each girl was held responsible for teaching one stroke and one phase of lifesaving. Mr. Camp criticized the teaching and made suggestions for improvement.

Most of the time was spent in developing the girl's strokes so they would be more capable to teach others. However, the girls also took written and practical tests.

Longwood Professor Attends Convention

Dr. J. P. Wynne, head of the Education and Philosophy departments, is now attending the National Philosophy of Education Society's convention being held on the Notre Dame campus in South Bend, Indiana. The conclave opened Saturday, March 28, and will close on Thursday, April 2.

Dr. Wynne is attending the group which is making a study of accrediting institutions, especially those which involve teacher education. He will appear on the program twice.

The National Philosophy of Education Society is divided into seven regions. Dr. Wynne is president of Region III.

News In a Nutshell

by Anne Sbuff

The recent death of the Dowager Queen Mary has closed the final pages of a most impressive and memorable volume in the eyes of the world. The Queen Mother was a link between present and past in Great Britain, for within her lifetime two world wars were fought, numerous social and political revolutions were witnessed, and a series of personal tragedies occurred that affected the whole world. Each chapter relates the dignity and pride upheld by the Queen. Its many pages foretell her supreme happiness along with her intense suffering.

Queen Mary was the symbol, not only of all the dignity and grace becoming royalty, but of everything concrete and conservative to which a nation clings. The British nation lived and breathed with their Queen Mother. When she mourned, the whole nation mourned.

She had her definite ideas about regality. Never once did she give into the whims and fancies of the fashion experts for the sake of being stylish. She will long be remembered for her floor length powder blue redingotes and high, off-the-face hats that she wore until her death. She was rarely seen without a ruffled parasol that served the purpose of a cane. She enjoyed a glass of sherry before lunch, and an occasional cigarette in the privacy of her boudoir. Not to the day of her death did she use a telephone, for she felt anyone wishing to communicate with her could write or send a messenger. She disliked typewriters and wrote all her letters painstakingly with a pen. The Queen had a vehement dislike for ivy, contending that it was messy and concealed poor architecture.

In spite of her idiosyncrasies and peculiarities, she was loved and respected by all. Her death has caused a sincere mourning within the hearts of her people and Americans as well. A great lady has passed, but her image will live on forever.

Students See Show

Six Longwood girls will attend the dance performance by the "El Greco" dance company at the Mosque in Richmond on April 18.

The "El Greco", a world famous dance company, will feature in its Richmond program typical dances from each of the regions of Spain.

Miss Emily Barksdale, Longwood Spanish professor, will accompany the girls to Richmond. These girls are Moneda Key, Emita Smith, Faye Greenland, Joanne Utley, Argentina Matute, and Esther Acosta.

From the Bleachers

by Helen Waltman and Louise Wilder

Green and Whites are leading 35-0 in the race for the color cup. The green and whites received 10 points during hockey season, 5 points for tennis singles, 10 points for basketball and 10 points for volleyball.

Here's the way the system of points works. Each team receives a certain number of points for winning or tying a game. At the end of the season the points given to each team are totaled. Which ever team has the highest number of points for that particular sport, (basketball, hockey or volleyball) receives 10 points toward the color cup.

Archery, swimming, softball and tennis doubles are yet to come. We hear that all red and whites have vowed that although they may not win the color cup they aren't going to have a final score of zero. Keep up the spirit red and whites!

Reports have been made that the tennis courts are lined and the nets are up. Let's all help take care of them. Try to avoid using the courts when the ground is muddy and wet. Use tennis shoes instead of street shoes. That's what tennis shoes are for, and they are much more comfortable to play in than street shoes.

In case you didn't hear the scores of the last class basketball games, the Seniors won out over the Juniors 28 to 20, and the Sophomores beat the Freshmen 22 to 15. The latter game was quite exciting. The score was 4-4 at the end of the first quarter. In the next quarter the sophomores took the lead and held the freshmen to 11-7 at half time, and 15 to 9 at the end of the third quarter.

Don't forget to get your practices for the class sports coming up next.

In our wanderings we've gathered a few views and bits of news from the Hampden-Sydney sports world: Here they come.

Hampden-Sydney opened its track season this week against the William and Mary Indians of Williamsburg.

Doug Divers of Pulaski is the new Tiger Track Captain. It is reported that the Tigers' new track and equipment has given new inspiration to the boys to try out for the track team this year.

Two home meets with Norfolk Division on April 10, and Randolph-Macon on April 17 are set for that new Death Valley track.

The Hampden-Sydney paper stated that "the condition of Charles (Babe) Lawson is considerably better since his accident on November 1."

The tennis team, which has scheduled 14 matches this season, hopes to set a good record of wins this season since they have all members of last year's team plus four new additions.

Six Attend State Meeting

Four physical education majors, accompanied by Miss Olive Iler, head of the physical education department, and Miss Rebecca Brockenbrough, Longwood professor of physical education, attended the state convention of the Virginia Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation on March 27-28 at the Chamberlain Hotel at Old Point Comfort.

Dr. Harry A. Scott, of Columbia University, was speaker at the convention's opening session Friday night. He spoke Saturday morning at the student section meeting.

Raymond A. Pinchbeck, dean of the University of Richmond and the luncheon speaker of the convention, spoke on "A Sound Mind In A Sound Body."

Student delegates from Longwood, Helen Castros, Sue Webb, Nell Green, and Else Wente attended the student meetings "Health and Safety Education for High School Girls" and "Physical Education for High School Girls."

Miss Iler and Miss Brockenbrough attended meetings concerning physical education for college girls.

Friday night a demonstration consisting of a tumbling act, a skating exhibition, and a folk dance demonstration was given to the delegates. The skating and tumbling was done by students from Newport News High School. The folk dancing was demonstrated by the Peninsula Folk Dance Club.

Following the demonstration a square dance was held for those attending the convention.

Sue Webb was chairman of the student section meeting, while Else Wente acted as recorder at this division. Miss Iler was adviser to the section.

A. A. Cabin Party

Members of both the old and new Athletic Association executive board and council will hold their annual cabin party out at Longwood Estate cabin on Friday night, April 10.

Else Wente, incoming president of the A. A. is in charge of all arrangements.

Judges Announce Rating Of Bands, Choruses In Meet

Out of seven bands which participated in the District I and III Music Festival held here on Saturday, the Manchester High School and Hopewell High School Bands received superior ratings.

The boy's chorus of Hermitage High School, the girl's chorus of Hopewell High School, the mixed chorus of Petersburg High School, and the Bolling Junior High Chorus of Petersburg also received superior ratings.

The judges rated five solos and ensembles as superior. They were the Petersburg percussion ensemble and flute duet, piano soloist Jan Blankenship of Petersburg, vocal soloist Phyllis Hershon, of Petersburg, and flutist Betsy Bruner of Petersburg.

Twenty-one schools were represented by more than 900 students at the Festival. The bands, choruses, and solos were judged according to the ratings of superior, excellent, good, fair, and poor.

Six Girls To Receive Ratings As Official Basketball Referees

Five physical education majors will receive official basketball ratings as a result of passing a written and practical test. They may now referee any official girls' basketball games.

The girls were seniors Helen Castros, Anne Crowder, Nell Green, Betty Tyler, and junior Roberta Watt.

The practical test was given to the girls in the Longwood gym on March 16.

Orchesis Announces New Date Of Recital

Thursday, April 16, is the new date for Orchesis' presentation of their original dance drama, "The Mockingbird." The recital will be presented at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall.

Anne Murphy, President of the modern dance group, has announced that, although the program date has had several previous changes, this date has been given final approval.

College Girls Will Perform For Veterans

On April 22, a group of Longwood girls will entertain the wounded soldiers of the McGuire Hospital in Richmond.

Mrs. McClintic, a representative of the hospital, has contacted the college asking that some 15 girls from Longwood be sent to McGuire to put on a variety show of various talent acts.

Nancy Tanley, Nancy Nelson, and Carolyn Stanley have been chosen by Mrs. Hudson, the Sophomore house mother, to get together the acts to be be presented. Talent from the whole school will be chosen but the girls participating must have at least a C average.

College girls are being chosen to entertain these Korean veterans because a good, wholesome show is needed.

College To Install Sprinkler System

An automatic fire sprinkler system will be installed at Longwood in the near future, according to information received from Mr. Samuel Graham, business manager of the college.

The equipment will be placed in the attics, basements, and rooms in east and west wings of Ruffner Hall and also in the main building.

The system is a product of the Automatic Sprinkler Corporation of America and will cost $23,900. Measurements are being taken and the installation should be completed by July 1.

Mason Moore is the newly elected president of Zeta Tau Alpha. Joyce Quick is the vice-president. The Zetas also chose Phoebe Warner as secretary and Donnie Devine as treasurer for next year.

Letter To The Editor

If admission is charged to our one form of Saturday entertainment why not give up something in return? Much could be added to "liven things up." The sponsor could work up an enjoyable talent show or sponsor a square dance. One square dance was sponsored this year which turned out to be a great success. Bravo! Why not more of the same?

Some week-ends find not only Longwood girls without adequate entertainment but also Camp Pickett soldiers. They stand on the street just trying to find someone to talk with. Any one of these soldiers might be a "perfect gentleman," but no nice girl would go around picking up strangers off street corners. About once a month, why not invite a select group of these boys to our rec dances? It would give them and us, too, something to do.

Bridge parties were introduced for the first time this year. They seemed to be very well liked. A larger crowd would have participated if more people knew how to play. Why not have a series of bridge games? The first ones would be to teach the game to those who do not know how to play. The next parties in the series would be for improvement of the skill and for entertainment. The final ones would be a contest, the winner receiving a prize.

Then one of those clear Saturday afternoons, when you have to stay in, it is nice to get out-of-doors and walk. But bicycling would be even more fun. The advantages of bicycling are good from any point of view. Bicycles would not be too expensive for the school. The activity would get the girls out of doors, give them fresh air, and give them an opportunity to see the countryside.

But these are just a few suggestions. I am sure other excellent ideas for recreation could be obtained and carried out. If we improved our entertainment we would improve our school. Then our Sadly would not only welcome week-ends but she would even welcome Monday morning classes.

Budget Chairmen Survey Longwood

Mr. J. H. Bradford, director of the State budget committee, and Mr. Fred Saunders, of the engineering division of the committee, visited Longwood College last Monday.

The purpose of their trip was to survey the capital outlay needs of the college for approximately the next five years. At the general assembly of the State Legislature next year, the report of this survey, showing needs of Longwod and other state colleges, will be made.

This report must be given before appropriations can be granted by the State for building plans. Plans under tentative consideration at this time include an air conditioning unit for Jarman Auditorium, an addition to the stack rooms in the Library, and also, another wing which may be added to Cunningham Hall about 1956.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college, has announced, also, that rubber treads for the Rotunda stairways have already been ordered and will be put down as soon as they arrive.

Students To File Room Suite, Hall, Requests For Session Of '53-'54

Room assignment blanks for the 1953 '54 session will be available April 7.

When students sign up for rooms, they may select groups for their respective halls. Rotation of halls will be taken into consideration except in cases where one's physical condition may not permit this.

Juniors who wish to obtain room assignment blanks may secure them from Mrs. Easthan's office in Cunningham Hall. Freshman and sophomores may obtain theirs from Miss Gleave's office. The blanks must be filled out and returned to Miss Gleave's office on the following dates: Freshman, April 13; Sophomores, April 14, and Juniors, April 15. It is requested that students indicate the roommate desired and suitemates also, if they are living in Cunningham.

Art Dept. Presents Two Assembly Films

Ancient masks and legend of the Canadian Indians and the making of a modern mural were the subjects of two short films shown in yesterday's assembly.

The films were made available through the art department of the college.

"The Loon's Necklace" was the title of the first one. It protrayed with intricately carved and brilliantly colored ancient Indian masks, used in cooperation with the National Canadian Museum, the story of how the Loon received his neckband of white feathers.

The second film short described the making of modern mural. It followed the professional artist through the steps of sketching, modeling in three dimensional materials, and the final painting of a large wall mural.

Biologists Hold Meet

Dr. George Jeffers, head of the Longwood Biology Department, and Dr. Robert Brumfield, professor of Biology, will attend the joint meeting of the South Eastern Section of the Biological Society of America to be held at Chapel Hill, North Carolina. The meeting will be held April 15.

Dr. Brumfield will speak on the "Curvatures in Timotny Roots Induced by Ultra-violet Radiations." Dr. Brumfield did his research for this paper at Oak Ridge, Tenn., where he has spent the last several summers doing research work.

DoodleAwhile College Style, Bet You Smile

by Phoebe Warner, and Shirley Ward

Pines are fine, and signs of crime
Mind may climb to thoughts of mine—
Mind, climb, pine sign
What a chime-rhyme everytime!

Be at your best
And read the rest.
Know what to do?
Just follow through—

We love that gal
A bushel and a peck
Her name's not Sal—
it's "what have you" STECK!

Not a shrimp, not a lobster,
Not a gangster, or a mobster.
But full of fun, a spritely berring,
All right, people, its PATTY DERRING.

He's so cute with his gruff voice,
We'd prefer him to any boys.
His class is the choice for our abode,
But you must know the MOSS code.

We're always gay
This time of day,
Cause we can say
We've seen HOSEA!

He's an actor of the best,
Why he surpasses all the rest.
What's his name, you know surely,
Why of course, it's DR. EARLEY.

She's lots of fun
Our red haired one.
We like her a lot
Cause she's our DOT.

A musician is he
A maestro to be,
But gee he's fun
CLARENCE WARRINGTON.

She has a smile
And is fun to boot.
Who's our friend
Why of course it's HOOT.

Wanted a pal
For a cotillion gal
Anyone wanna take
That cute NELL CAKE?

Roommates are they,
A pair I'd say
Close your eyes,
It's CHALLICE and B. A.

This is the end of our little rhyme
We admit that it took too much time
But if we've captured a reader today
We're glad for what we had to say!

Elementary Grades Present Talent Show

The fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh grades of the Farmville Elementary School presented a talent show this afternon in Jarman Hall at one p. m.

An instrumental quartet was given by Mrs. McDowell's fourth grade, while Mrs. Coleman's fourth grade presented "Hansel and Gretel".

Margretta Spenser, a fourth grade student of the Elementary School, played a piano solo.

Action song and instrumental numbers were given by Mrs. Newman's fifth grade. Sally Ann Clark of that class did a solo tap dance.

Mrs. Buck's sixth grade presented a skit "Our Future". A clarinet solo was given by Jerry Heifer, a fifth grader.

Miss Agnes Watkins fifth grade performed for the audience a seies of action songs. These songs were also done by Mrs. Katherine Watkins sixth grade.

Jongleurs Give 'Job'

Nine members of the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs will give a dramatic presentation during chapel on April 14.

By using voices and gestures, the men will read the book of Job from the Old Testament in the Bible. Only the most outstanding parts of the book will be covered.

High School Girls Throughout State Inspect Longwood

One hundred girls from high schools throughout Virginia visited Longwood last weekend.

Schools represented were Kempsville, Madison Heights, Brookville, Warren County, St. Agnes School, Danville, and Tappahannock. Also girls from Manchester, Culpeper, Madison, Crewe, Granby, Chase City, Highland Springs, Beaverdam, Fluvanna County, and Stewartsville were on hand. Other schools represented for the weekend activities included Lovingston, Portsmouth, Henry Clay-Ashland, Hermitage, Orange, Radford High Schools, New London Academy and Randolph-Henry.

On Friday night, Sophomore Sing and the Freshman Production, "Laces and Graces" highlighted the entertainment for the visiting girls.

Saturday's entertainment included a meeting with Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college in the Virginian Room, a visit to several classes from 9:45 to 10:30, a tour of the college campus and also a tour of Longwood Estate at 2:00 in the afternoon. The visit to Longwood Estate was divided into two tours because of the large number of students.

A Juke Box Dance was held in the Main Rec on Saturday night to conclude the day's activities. This dance was sponsored by the Halifax, Mecklenburg, Lunenburg Club.

Comm. Club Chooses West To Head Group For 1953-54 Session

Sylvia West was recently elected president of the Commercial Club for the 1953-54 session. Other officers include Laura Trent, vice-president; Frances Northern, secretary; Mary Lou Barlow, treasurer; Carolyn Overby, sophomore representative and Nancy Birdsall, reporter.

Two comittee heads were also elected. They are Nell Crocker, bulletin board, and Ann Moore, program.

The sponsor of next year's Commercial Club will be a member of the faculty of the Business Department. The person has not yet been chosen.

On April 16, the Commercial Glub will sponsor a picnic for its members at Longwood estate.

The Bachelor

A bachelor likes his women fair,
His eggs well done, his sirloin rare,
His hand-knit socks to reach mid-calf,
His bed turned down just short of half,
His window raised three thumbs at night,
His suits arranged one dark—one light,
His shoe trees pointing west of south,
His soup delivered to his mouth,
His apple served without the core,
And that's just why he is a bach-e-lor.

One of our beloved professors lectured last week well past the hour then ask "are there any questions?" "Yes sir", came the reply, 'what time is it?"

We're all cannibals, we ate "Smitty the Smithfield pig—the first pig of Virginia" and that ain't ham — thinking how long pigs have been in Virginia. Anyone care for a second helping of dust?—

Those participating in the play were Ann Brooking, Barbara Moore, Rebecca Blair, Pat Cantrell, Mary Meade Robertson, and Juanita Dayberry.

Moore Announces Men's Production

by Betty Barr

Bright Announcement:

On May 8, the men's student body and Tau Theta Pi will present the annual men s production in Jarman Auditorium.

Tom Moore, production head, has announced that a five dollar prize will be given to the person who is best able to give a name to the show. Only one clue has been disclosed concerning this "gala" presentation. This is the one little fact—the production is about "Life on our World and How it Must Look on Other Planets."

So let's think hard, girls, and win the $5 prize — one catch though—you'll have to be there on the night of production to receive your prize, otherwise it will go to someone else!!

Dr. Morgan, Speaker For Teachers Groups Including FTA, ACE

Edito rof the National Education Association Journal and founder of the Future Teachers of America, Dr. J. E. Morgan, was the guest speaker at the combined meetings of the Association of Childhood Education and the Future Teachers of America on March 30 in the small auditorium.

Mrs. Alice Carter, sponsor of ACE, introduced the speaker who talked on the history of education. Dr. Morgan urged all future teachers to remain well informed on current issues throughout their careers.

Girls Will Attend Texas Convention For SGA, April 24

A train trip of 1506 miles, all the way to Texas, is soon to be taken by two Longwood College students.

Mary Denny Wilson, newly-elected president of Student Government, and Elleanor Koch, recently chosen vice-president, are leaving Wednesday, April 22, for Denton, Texas where they will attend the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government Conference.

"Stimulating Individual Student Interest" is the theme of this conference which will be held at the Texas State Teachers College for Women.

Registration of delegates will begin on Friday, April 24. Friday and Saturday activities will include panel discussions, group meetings, and business sessions. On Sunday, April 26, a breakfast followed by chapel will conclude the conference.

A barbecue at Lake Dallas, a banquet and "ole fashioned square dance" are on the agenda for entertainment.

The trip will be made by train through Cincinnati, Ohio, St. Louis, Mo., then south to Texas.

Mary Denny and Elleanor will return on Monday, April 27. Both are looking forward to a very informative and enlightening convention.

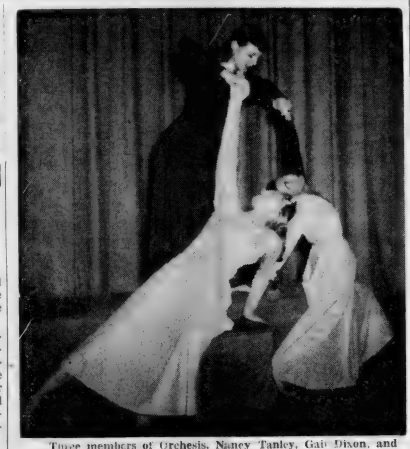
Hodges' Term Ends; Langhorne Assumes New Fire Chief Post

Mary Dabney Langhorne, sophomore from Richmond, has been chosen to serve as fire chief for the coming year according to Jean Hodges, retiring chief.

As chief Mary Dabney will be in charge of arranging fire drills with Mr. Raymond French, professor of chemistry, who is in charge of fire regulations; conducting monthly drills; and appointing hall wardens. She will assume her duties this month.

Jean will automatically become assistant chief and aid Mary Dabney with these responsibilities.

Mary Dabney was chosen for her new post by a committee composed of Jean Hodges, this year's chief; Betty Abbit, assistant chief; and Mr. French, advisor.



Perry, Wiggins Name Heads Of May Dance

Committee chairmen for the annual May Day dance have been announced by Mary Hurt Peery and Janet Wiggins, co-heads of the dance to be given May 2.

Open Letter

To the faculty, administration, and students of Longwood, the Rotunda wishes to give a big hearty thank you. For the second time this year you have given us your support in putting over a show. This recent show was the faculty-student basketball game last Friday night. We want you to know that we appreciate your help,—the energy expended — and encouragement in making the game the success that it was.

The Rotunda cleared a profit of $56 on this project. This amount means that we can continue our efforts to keep our expenses out of the red that so far have been successful. We are faced with a very high publication cost and the money appropriated by the state to us and received through subscriptions and advertising is almost inadequate. We sponsor these projects in order to clear our budget. Our aim is to make a safe margin and come out without a deficit. So far this year, we have maintained that balanced budget and we feel our success is largely due to the support you have given in these projects.

Once more we sincerely say thank you for your encouragement — and congratulations for being great basketball players.

Spanish Students To Sponsor Movie

"The General and the Senorita," a film made in Mexico will be shown in Jarman Hall at 8:00 p. m. on April 27, 1953. The film is being brought to Longwood under the sponsorship of the Spanish club. This prize-winning comedy-drama has, since it was released, received a total of fifteen awards.

The stars of this film are Pedro Armandez and Marie Felix. Pedro Armandez is known to American audiences for his portrayals in such films as "Fort Apache," "Four God Fathers," and "The Fugitive." Marie Felix is known as Mexico's most beautiful actress.

"The General and the Senorita" is a story of love, rejection and acceptance. It is a story of a soldier's emotions as told with dignity and beauty. A revolutionary general enters a community to tax the rich in order to continue the work which has his wholehearted interest. But a beautiful girl he chances to meet and love at first sight takes her place as his all consuming interest. She being the daughter of a leading citizen, is socially above him. The General perserves in his protestations of love and the girl treats him with contempt, but when he gives up, she changes.

English subtitles have been added for those who do not understand Spanish. The tickets are to be thirty-five cents.

Student Committee Elect Kitts As Head

Lou Kitts, a junior, was recently elected president of the Student Standards Committee, to serve during the 1953-54 session. Shirley Ward, sophomore, will serve as secretary, with Peggy Worthington, sophomore, in charge of arranging the year's lated by Anne Shuff, freshman.

The committee discussed and voted to install on the campus a chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, a national honorary dramatic fraternity. This decision has been referred to a faculty committee for approval.

Student Standards acts as a guiding and regulating committee for campus activities and serves also as a student body representative group through which improvements and corrections concerning the college may be requested.

Orchesis Members To Present Dance, 'The Mocking Bird'

LC Musicians Will Present Voice Recital

Two Sunday afternoon music recitals, presented by Longwood students and faculty, will be given during April and May.

On Sunday, April 19, Mr. Joel Ebers le, members of the Longwood College faculty, will give the first recital at 3 p. m., in Jarman Hall.

The second student recital of this year will be given Sunday, May 10, with six voice students taking part on the program.

Phyllis Isaacs, sophomore, will sing "Songs My Mother Taught Me" by Dvorak, and "Lullaby" by Brahms. Elizabeth Stone, senior, will sing "Veigia, Tutta Amor" by Durante, and Handel's "Where Ere You Walk." "Florian's Song" by Godard and "The Lotus Flower" by Schumann will be sung by Helen Sue McNeil.

Continuing the recital, Elizabeth Goodson Ashe will sing Mendelssohn's "Ah, Rest In the Lord" and Tchaikowsky's "None But the Lonely Heart."

Singing "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" by Haydn, and "I Love Thee" by Beethoven will be Nan Ellen Bland. Herbert Goodman will sing "It Is Enough" by Mendelssohn and "The Two Grenadiers" by Schumann. Closing the recital, "Slumber Song" by Gretchaninoff, "The Rosette" by Clokey, and the old English "Oh No, John" will be sung by Dorothy Morris.

Accompanists for the program will be Lura Alice Beavers, Elizabeth Goodson Ashe, and Helen Sue McNeil.

Last Sunday afternoon Doris Horne and Lura Beavers presented the first in this years series of recitals, with Dolly singing and "Lu" playing several piano selections.

Longwood President To Serve On Comm. For Evaluating Univ.

Heading an evaluation committee of three, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College, will be on the campus of the University of Georgia, at Athens during the week of April 19 to April 22.

This committee representing the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education will observe and evaluate phases of the education department of the University.

Serving on the committee with Dr. Lancaster are Dr. Guy Phillips, dean of the University of North Carolina and Dr. Houston Cole, president of the Alabama State Teachers College.

Last December Longwood College was visited by a similar committee. This visitation program is part of a three year plan, which will conclude in 1953, to evaluate the 275 member colleges of the AACTE. Other colleges evaluated in Virginia during this period are Madison College, Radford, Lynchburg College, and Virginia State College.

Notice

The Rotunda wishes to correct a mistake which apeared in the last issue. Roberta Wiatt is president of the H20 Club. Ann Crowder was erroneously reported to hold this office.

Curtain To Rise Tomorrow Night

As the curtain opens on Thursday night, April 16, in Jarman Hall, "The Mocking Bird" becomes another reality in original dance dramas on the Longwood Campus. This year's work, the second attempt at serious dance drama promises an evening of theatre dance.

Centered around a static family portrait, which shows a rudderless collection of beings, it develops into a vignette full of tension, sensibility and emotion from the first hunting call of the mocking bird to the tragic end.

As the first scene gets under way, one senses, feels, and hears Drusilla, the hateful one, taunting the "bird in the night," which disturbs her young brother David, who, as she, is an emotional starveling. Both yearning for the love of a mother, long dead, a father lost in an illusionary world of his own, find solace in diverse ways. David, in his yearnings turns toward Loosh, the handy man and Viny, the cook, who help him to feel loved, wanted and understood in his aimless loneliness. Drusilla, heedless of consequences, vents her hatred on both the father and Miz Anne, the governess. Aunt Cissie, vestige of old South womanhood lost in a world of unreality, rules the household by remote control. All become as mere puppets at the gentle flick of her handkerchief.

Story Of David

Miz Anne, governess to the two motherless children is the object of David's yearnings for maternal love, and of Drusilla's hatred as the potential supplanter of her dead mother.

Loosh and Viny, the handy man and cook are, in many ways, father and mother to the little boy. Viny is as near a mother as he will ever know. She understands his aimless wanderings in his loneliness. Loosh fulfills the void left in the boy's life by his father's preoccupied detachment.

From the time the first scene unfolds, one senses an impending tragedy though never actually seeing it. The setting, a contemporary one, is bare of decor and props, an intentional plan to focus attention on body movement, which reacts to the voice of the narrator and to the music to develop the plot, and its theme and many subthemes. Each character creates his own movement pattern, which establishes him as an entity. These movement patterns are lues not only in character but build unsurmountable tensions between characters.

Tension Mounts

The plot, or theme of tragedy is offset by the voice of the narrator and the haunting melodic strain of Griffes's music, "The White Peacock," at the beginning of each act. The first act sets the tage for action as each character is developed. Mounting tensions limax the second act, with the anti-climax coming in the third act.

Anne Murphy, senior from Danville and president of the Dance Club has one of the main leads, that of the hateful Drusilla. Nancy Tanley, sophomore from Newport News, who has danced in the Common Glory is the other Drusilla, the lost emotional starveling as her brother, Peggy Hood, junior from Newport News is ap-

Thank-You

Whoever started the now familiar saying "give credit where credit is due" was a wise person indeed.

Credit is now due to both the administration and students of Longwood College. What is all of this recognition for? It all centers around the Artist Series programs which have been presented at Longwood this year.

Beginning in October, there was a lecture by Mr. Jack Kilpatrick editor of the Richmond News Leader. The Jean Erdman dance troupe was featured on November 6; then, in December, the Don Cossack Chorus was presented. The well-known organist Virgil Fox gave a concert on February 3; and just last night the Mozart Orchestra was presented to close the current Artists series.

It is not an easy task to secure good, well-rounded entertainment for a college at the present time. When the administration was planning the Lyceum programs for this year, they were confronted with many problems. They had to consider the type of entertainment that we as the student body would like and the cost of bringing this entertainment to us.

But despite these problems, they have presented five excellent programs which included some of the country's finest artists.

Recall for a moment the excitement you felt when you beheld the excellent timing and rhythm of the Don Cossacks and heard the beautiful organ performance of Virgil Fox. Do you remember the gracefulness of the Jean Erdman dancers?

The administration truly deserves a great vote of thanks for the time and effort in planning the programs for the student body, because it is evident that foremost in their minds was the thought of bringing to us the things that we would most enjoy.

When we give recognition and credit, the student body of this College cannot be overlooked. Without the students the Lyceum programs could not have been successful. Although the attendance at the first program of he Series was not what it should have been, it is evident that the majority of the student body has realized b now that the programs were planned for their benefit and that it is their responsibility and, even more so, their privilege to show their appreciation and support.

So to both administration and students a great big "thanks" is given. Without the administration we would not have had any programs and without the support of the student body, they would not have been successful.

Peace?

Is there a hope for peace?

With the actual signing of an agreement by the Allies and Reds for the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners of war and with this fact constituting the most hopeful news we have heard in a long time from the Korean front, many students have been overheard expressing various points of view on this new situation.

Some students have said that a full Korean peace is definitely in the making, now that the initial step has been taken. On the other hand,-many are still dubious as to the outcome.

Taking the human interest point of view, some say that it is only natural for the Reds to want their prisoners back as much as we want ours. But the question is, for what purpose?

One student voiced the opinion that there would actually be no peace if both sides retreated for one mile (after a signing of an armistice) and gazed over the hill looking for sudden attack from the other force.

Similarly, moreover, editors and columnists of both newspapers and news magazines have written articles concerning arguments for and against "chances of peace".

"The United States and West Germany have cautioned the free world against any relaxation of vigilance in the face of Soviet 'peace proposals'," reports one columnist.

Even with the pro and con attitudes of students here and people all over the world, there are basic facts which must be considered. What are these facts?

First, unless there is a new breakdown, the program could be:

1.) Agreement on the exchange of sick and wounded.

2.) Renewal of full armistice negotiations.

3.) Agreement on voluntry repatriation of all prisoners after an armistice, those unwilling to return being placed in temporary custody of a neutral nation.

4.) Armistice.

Second, the agreement which was signed last Sunday means the return of the first freed Americans to the United States this month.

Third, 600 Allied prisoners and 120 Americans wil be returned to the United Nations in exchange for 5,800 Communists. These reports are valid reasons for optimism.

However, the Communists still will hold 12,000 Allied prisoners. The United Nations, likewise, will hold 132,000 prisoners. Of this number, however, 50,000 Reds do not wish to return to the Communist group.

What effect will this have on the Reds? Will this exchange of prisoners be merely an even exchange with no meaning?

Time can only tell. Until then, the eyes of the world will be focused on the Panmunjom negotiations—and the future world peace.

Seek and Appreciate

We have at our fingertips a source of pleasure and satisfaction in our daily lives. Surely the ability of many members of our student body to produce excellent work in every art form has been evident in many ways.

There are many examples—the art exhibits displaying both paintings and crafts done by college students; the choir concerts given by a group of musicians that have rehearsed many long hours to produce a good program; the student recitals. Many weeks of preparation is the task of the participants in any of these, for undoubtedly, they set high standards and must work hard to attain them.

Yet few of us have shown the interest and understanding to attend, for example, the student recitals, although last Sundays program gave its listeners an hour of the serenist pleasure and satisfaction.

Tomorrow night there will be given a modern dance recital that is the result of months of strenuous practice. Some of us protest that we know nothing of contemporary dance forms. How will you learn unless you see for yourself, and then attempt to feel and understand of this art?

In our college life we need to seek out the opportunities to have experince with dance, music, art, theater because these will bring greater meaning to our lives, enrich our personalities, strengthen our friendships. Let us take advantage of the opportunities presented to us on our campus and show our appreciation of those who present them.

Orchesis Presents---

Mrs. Landrum Gives Advice For Appreciation of Dance

By Mrs. Emily K. Landrum

Dance, like any art cannot be fully explained to be understood. It must be experienced. Appreciation best grows upon one when he actually experiences it. But, everyone doesn't take modern dance, and many are seeing a college modern dance program for the first time tomorrow night. This creates the problem for understanding.

One cannot fully appreciate any art upon first contact with it, but everyone reacts to every art whether visual, performing, theatre, or otherwise in the same or identical manner. All appreciation—whether in music, painting, drama, dance, sculpture, architecture—is basically and essentially a sensory experience. One not only sees, but also feels, one hears and is moved by what is there.

Sense Tragedy

From the time that first scene of "The Mocking Bird" unfolds one senses the impending tragedy, though one never actually witnesses it. The impact is sensed through movement on the stage as each character first identifies himself through a movement pattern or phrase much like musical phrase. These movement patterns or motifs are used repeatedly, recurring as sub-themes to the main theme or plot, often becoming complete dance compositions. As you see the Orchesis dance drama, look for movement, body posturings, focus and positions on stage. Watch and feel what happens to you when a character looks up, out, down, or merely shifts his gaze. Feel confined in space as characters move, or feel the tension when one stands motionless. Feel how movement stands by itself many times, without the prop of voice, music or a chair. That is the crux and core of modern or contemporary dance of today. Watch how movement changes.

Movement Important

Become aware of the form and structure of the movement as it evolves into a dance. This form is necessary as the form of music which it borrows. A rondo form underlies the main theme or plot, which suffices to be called an initial statement or movement pattern, then something different develops; later the original theme recurs identically or somewhat embellished and then again something else develops.

Look for the beginning movement of every dance. That is its statement, which may be compared to the first statement in a paragraph. It gives you a clue as to what will follow. It must never be thrown away. Watch its development, its manipulation for other movement material out of which another part of the dance may develop, and then, its probable return identically as in the initial statement, a return completely reversed, usually for dramatic reasons, or its mere suggestion of a return for a greater effect. This is dance form, a structure which not only disciplines the dancer, but makes the whole take on a design in space, confined, unfettered, zig-zagged or stationary. Here dance is akin to the visual arts, primarily painting and sculpture.

As another prop for sensory experiencing, listen to the haunting bird call taken from Griffes' "White Peacock," as it repeatedly recurs throughout. Let the voice of the narrator set the mood, theme, or tempo for action.

Suggested Procedures

Follow any one or several of these suggested procedures to gain a better understanding of what is happening. Hate with Drusilla, or feel deep compassion for her as her lost self compares with her hateful one. Imagine the tenderness of your mother or that evident in any madonna painting as Miz Anne moves through her lullaby for David. Lament with her, and perhaps for her, in the lament for Drusilla. Attempt to follow the movement and staging clues as the hateful or lost Drusilla moves on or across stage. Let your imagination help you. See into it, don't just look at it.

There is something tender, touching, and real in each of the three acts. There is excitement, intended so. There is tension mounting with each scene. There is whatever you will look for. Try to follow it through movement patterns and themes unfolding before you. Listen to certain haunting strains of music. Feel the complete synchronization of movement, the voice of the narrator and the music. This is theatre dance, one of the oldest of the living arts. This is not Broadway. This is the living, pulsating example of experimental art as seen on many college campuses.

Social Notes

by Carolyn Stanley

"Roses in the Moonlight" set the mood for the Cotillion Club dance Saturday night when the Cotillion members and their dates danced to the delightful music of Ralph Marterie. This was the biggest dance of the year for us—and the boys seemed to enjoy it, too. Hats off to all those, besides Mr. Marterie and his boys who helped in making the dance such a huge success.

It seems that some people did heed my pre-Easter advice in poetry form — maybe I should compose more often—no! no!

Married:

Betty Goodson to Sonny Ashe. We all wish you much happiness.

Barbara Whitehead to Robert E. Clarke from Rallings, Va.

Engaged:

Among the lovely Longwood Ladies showing off their newly acquired diamond rings are Gail Dixon, who is engaged to Lt. j g Al Dickson from Washington, D. C., and Ann Cress engaged to Buddy Jennings from Lynchburg and Va Tech. Liz Crockett, formerly a member of the class of '54, is newly engaged to Chi Lazak of VPI; Jo Burley to Don Adams from Lynchburg.

Pinned:

Mary Hundley to Henry Odom, a Phi Kappa Sigma of Randolph Macon.

Joyce Quick received a pin from Mack Carper, a Chi Phi from U. Va.

N. C. State

Mary Campbell attended the Pika Ball at N. C. State over the Easter holidays. Attending the inter-fraternity dances and the Sigma Chi parties at MIT this weekend was June Elder.

Globers Creep, Burlaps Bag Win Ball Game and Play Tag

by Margaret Miller

Excitement was high in the Longwood gym last Friday as the faculty played the students in a game sponsored by the Rotunda.

The first game was between the "Burlap Bag", made up of the women of the faculty, and the "Saddle Bags," made up of the girl students. "Hook Shot" Hamner led the women in scoring. However, her scoring spree was halted when she was injured in the second half which required first aid treatment from "Baby Ruth" Gleaves and "Water Boy" Moore. The "Burlaps" didn't let the loss of their star player slow them down and "Pickles" Nichols, "Luscious" Lemon and "Treacherous" Trent continued their race horse style of basketball. Playing for the "Saddle Bags" were "Red" Hundley, "Rebound" Roberts, 'President" Wilson, "Heckling" Hobbs, "Fouling" Faye Greenland, "Buffalo" Shuff, and "Jumping" Jinnett.

During the last period of play, the "Burlaps" went on to win the game as a result of the cheers of "Prudence" DeAlba, "Mercedes" Cox and "Catastrophy" Caskey.

Cheerleaders for the losing team were "Tippy ' Tabb, "Hubba Hubba" Hudson, and "Dynamo" Eastham.

In the second game, "The "Globe Creepers" played the "Fox Trotter", "Dashing" Dick, "Gorgeous" George, "Hotshot" Charlie, "Robby" Robinson, "Pearley" Gates, and "Cookie" Goodman played a fast and furious game for he "Globe Creepers."

Giving them plenty of competition were "Bryophyte" Brumfield, "Winding" Lane, "Bouncing" Burke, "Cracker" Graham, and "Eighth Note" Ebersole.

Serving as cheerleaders for both teams were "Mickey" Moss and "Jeepers" Jeffers. Even though the cheerleaders joined the game in the fourth quarter, the students came out of the game victorious.

The big event of the night was the presentation of "Players of the Night" Award. "Hook-Shot" Hamner was assisted to the center of the court where she received her award followed by a burst of applause. "Cracker" Graham was honored by the same award for the men, bringing to a close the successful faculty versus student basketball game. Many of the participants are quoted as saying, "I really (pant) enjoyed this. I think I'll (choke) start training for next (gasp) basketball season!"

Fr. Club Elects Pres.

At a recent meeting of the French Club, Joanne Utley, a junior was elected to serve as next year's president. Other newly elected officers include Pat McLemore as vice president, Florence Blake as secretary, Barbara Blackman as treasurer, and Pollyanna Martin as project chairman.

The program of the meeting included the singing of French songs led by Denise Montaigne.

Of Interest

by Joyce Gillenrest

Though Easter Day has passed, some remains of the holiday season are still with us. Last Sunday the brightness of new Easter chapeaux was seen around Farmville plus a few bouquets of Easter flowers.

Still in the realm of Easter but of a different nature is a possession of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond. They are very fortunate to have the largest collection in America of Carl Faberge, a jeweler for Czars Alexander III and Nicholas II of Russia. This group consisting of 533 objects was bequeathed to the people of Virginia in 1947.

Easter 1953 saw the whole collection on display, though one unique item from the collection has been shown every Easter since 1949. These are the great jewelers' eggs made for the Czars to give to members of their family at Easter time. Each individual egg contained a "surprise" on the inside in the form of a miniature statue or painting of some royal personage or residence.

This observance of Easter bears a resemblance to that of America, but not many children of our country would be happy to find anything but candy in their Easter eggs.

Pictures of these bright, beautifully executed ornaments can be seen in the Time Magazine the week of March 29.

The small number of persons attending the Mozart Orchestra concert last night had the privilege of hearing a program of truly inspiring music. Under the direction of Robert Scholz, the virtuoso players of the orchestra presented four classical numbers including Concerto in C minor by Bach, Concerto No. 5 in a major by Mozart; Symphonette for String Orchestra by Roussel, and Symphony No. 29 in A Minor by Mozart.

The distinguished violin soloist, Helen Kwalwasser, has been heard in concerts throughout the Eastern and Southern United States. In the past three seasons she has concertized abroad with notable success. Miss Kwalwasser made her debut at Town Hall at the age of 19, in March 1947.

Rotunda Staff Adds Art Editors, Typists

Seven staff positions on the Rotunda have recently been filled, according to Ann Thomas, editor.

The art editors are Ann Jones and Loretta Brooking, freshmen. Anne Weatherholtz, copy editor will now be assisted by typists Muriel Boswell, Ann Brooking, Janice Haines, Dot Saunders, and Nancy Saunders.

There is still a need for additional typists on the staff. Anyone wishing to fill this position may come down on either Monday or Tuesday night.

From the Bleachers

by Helen Waltman

"Spring has sprung, the grass has riz" and Spring sports are in full swing. Miss Iler and Miss Brockenborough's gym classes have played the last game in their volleyball tournament. Miss Brockenborough's class was the winner of the finals.

Everybody came out to the massacre—oh, excuse me, I mean the basketball game between the faculty and students. It was a riot, just ask anyone that witnessed the great event. "Hookshot Hamner" and "Graham Cracker Graham" won the prizes for their outstanding playing.

The Athletic Association cabin party was a rip-roaring success. Sue was too busy fishing for crayfish to play softball with the rest of the crowd. How many did you finally catch, Sue? All had a grand time. Amidst the eating, softball, bridge, and tumbling, the newly-elected officers and council were installed. From the looks of the group and the plans already in progress, one might say the A. A. is in for another grand year of work. Miss Iler and Betty Tyler (Termie) were presented gifts of appreciation for their service and guidance this past year.

Are you restless? Do you get bored with nothing to do? If your answers to these questions are "yes", then it is time for a change—a change for the better! Shuffle-board, table tennis, paddle tennis, aerial darts, softball—just name it—the equipment is available to you for the asking.

Attention green 'n whites and red'n whites. It's later than you think! You had beter get busy and get in a few tennis practices if you plan to enter the tennis doubles tournament or maybe you would rather just play for the pleasure and relaxation of the sport. After dinner at night is an ideal time to play, or if you prefer, bright (?) and early in the morning. Maybe if you try really hard, you will be able to locate an empty court!

Miss Iler would like for anyone interested in archery to come out Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday at 4:00 p. m. Someone will be on hand to give you the necessary equipment.

Do you know what I heard someone say a few days ago? "I have come to this school for two years and haven't been swimming in the pool as yet." Are you guilty too? Well, for the information of those who do not know and those who have forgotten there is rec swimming twice a week—Wednesday nights at 10:00 p. m. and Friday afternoons at 4:00. Come on down, the water is just right—sometimes.

College Tennis Team Plans Spring Meets

Sports attention is directed to the out of doors with the coming of spring. Spring sports include tennis, archery, golf, softball and swimming.

The Longwood tennis team will participate in a tennis meet at William and Mary College, Saturday, April 18. Five matches will be played. Tryouts for the Longwood team are being held every afternoon this week.

The Longwood team will meet the Madison team in its second tennis match on its home courts, April 25.

Anne Parkinson, tennis manager, has requested that users of the tennis courts use regulation tennis shoes and gym suits at all times.

The class swimming meet was held today at 5. Results will be announced tonight.

The afternoon physical education classes are having the opportunity to participate in tennis, golf, and archery.

Softball practice will begin in the near future for preparation of the red and green games.

Athletic Association Selects New Council To Serve Next Year

Installation of Athletic Association officers and council members was held Friday, April 10, at the AA's annual cabin party held at Longwood Estate.

Else Wente was installed by Betty Tyler, out-going president, as new president of A. A.

Vice-president Jean Hodges, secretary, Helen Waitmann, and treasurer, Mary Ann Ward, were installed by Else.

New council members are Patsy Sanford, varsity hockey manager; Jane Lohr and Nell Crocker, class hockey managers; Roberta Wiatt, varisty basketball manager; Nancy Hartman and Dale Brothers, class basketball managers; Eleanor Koch, varisty swimming manager; Lib Boswell, archery manager; Anne Parkinson, tennis manager and Carolyn Gray and Becky Hines, volleyball managers.

Other new members include Edith Frame, Hilda Hartis and Mary Davis, leaders of recreational activities; Anne Carter Wendenburg, Joan Ward and Louise Wilder, publicity committee; Johanna Biddlecomb, social.

Cotillion Clubbers Cut Colossal Caper As Marterie Makes Magic Melodies

by Martha Donaldson

A warm spring night, moonlight and roses, and Ralph Marterie's music floating as softly as a breeze —was this heaven? Well, almost— it was Cotillion Dance—or was it a beautiful dream?

All the hard hours of work and planning seemed to fade away and one man or rather a group of men brought the climax to the most perfect dance which Longwood had known for some years.

This man was Ralph Marterie. A year ago, we might not have known who he was, but lately we have become aware of him for his "Pretend" and "Caravan." Still others met him at Virginia "Easters" last year and at Virginia Tech.

Talking with Mr. Marterie, I found him to be a very charming person. His eyes danced when he talk sand it seems he is really enjoying what he is doing.

"I hope you don't forget us after tonight. I hope you will ask us to play for you again," commented Mr. Marterie. Also, he stated that he liked Longwood very much.

Surely Ralph Marterie will not be forgotten around Longwood for years to come and we do want him back and again and again.

Mr. Marterie leaves throngs of starry-eyed people in his wake wherever he goes and now, certainly the girls of Longwood and their dates have joined the fast growing group of Marterie fans.

There is always a certain magic about a new band such as Mr. Marterie's. Of course, there is a novelty of being new, but when you are new and you are as good as the Marterie band, you are as good as solid gold.

He is called the "musician's musician" and that is readily understood after hearing Mr. Marterie's instrumentations. Everyone fell in love with its Dixieland style, but best of all they liked his dreamy music that seemed "to come from no where."

If Mr. Marterie were here right now, we would say thanks for making Cotillion Dance meet our fondest dreams and expectations. Our hats are off to you, Mr. Ralph Marterie.

Honor Society Sends Delegates, Rotundas To Journalism Meet

Three consecutive issues of the Rotunda have been sent to the Pi Delta Epsilon Convention of Journalism at the University of Cincinnati for critical judging and rating.

The local Pi Delta Epsilon chapter is sending one or two delegates to the conference which will be held on April 24 through 26 to receive final judgment of the newspaper.

Mr. Frank Shay of Time and Life Magazines has written a short story to relate at one of the two banquets to be given. Also, Mr. L. D. Warren, editorial cartoonist of the Cincinnati Inquirer newspaper will be on hand for convention activities. Both of these men are skilled in crayon illustrated talks.

Longwood College Alumnae Members Install Television Set For Students

Members of the Longwood College Alumnae Association have made possible the installation of a television set in the small auditorium.

The Associations s newest project is the remodeling of Longwood house. Mrs. Maria Bristow Starke, of Richmond, has given a new secretary for the house and other members are remodeling the furniture.

Previously the Association raised $100,000 for the construction of Student Building. Before the building was erected Longwood had no facilities for a swimming pool, a lounge, a gymnasium, or sorority rooms.

The Association also gave the $25,000 Jarman organ in the auditorium. The portraits of Dr. Joseph L. Jarman and Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster were also placed in the Rotunda by the alumnae. Other portraits donated include those of former faculty members which have been placed in the library.

Miss Kate Peery of Culpeper gave the Tureen ironstone platter which is in the alumnae office. Other donations to the school by the alumnae are two pictures, one of William and Mary, painted in 1839, and and the other of Princeton University, in 1836. Also the original painting of "The Burial of Christ" was given to the college.

Various loans and scholarships are made available to Longwood students by the Association. Among them are loan funds in memory of Dr. Robert Cunningham, Dr. C. E. Frazier, and Miss Jenny Masters Tabb.

The Farmville Chapters has established a scholarship in memory of Miss Mary White Cox, a former dean of women.

The Snack Bar is owned and operated by the Alumnae Association.

The alumnae office also sends out college publications.

LC To Review New Fashions

Models from Miss Katharine Tupper's sophomore, junior and senior Home Economics classes will present a fasnion show in assembly on April 21.

Ann Dudley, mistress of ceremonies, will introduce the girls, who will model the clothes they have made during the year.

The show will feature sports wear, and formal attire made in wool, cotton, and silk fabrics.

Camp Pickett's Army Band will present a concert of march time music on Tuesday, April 28 announced Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster. "This band has been touring this area and is considered to be very entertaining," he added.

The Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs, sponsored by Dr. C. L. S. Earley presented a reading of Job in assembly yesterday.

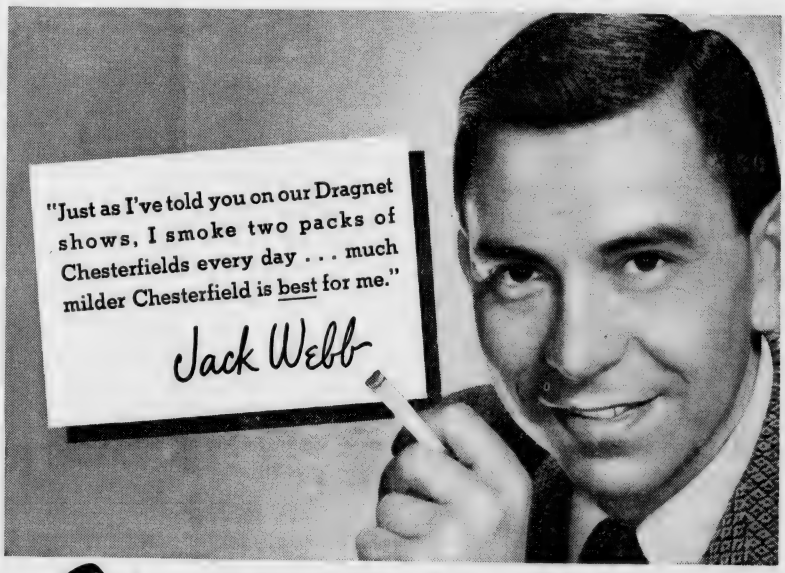
by Carolyn Stanley

Many people have a hard time recuperating from holidays, but have you noticed a particular group with specially tinted circles under their eyes dragging around the campus? These are the New Yorkers trying to survive the greatest trip of all!

Arriving in New York a week ago last Thursday night we soon fell into the swing of big city life and started our first tour—the Taft Hotel. The hotel is located right next to the Roxy Theater, only a block from Times Square so that was the starting point for our sight-seeing in New York. The next morning, after breakfast at the largest automat in New York, there were tours of Rockefeller Center, Radio Music Hall, where the Rockettes were playing, NBC, Empire State and the UN Building.



The plays on Broadway were most entertaining and we all compared notes on what we had seen and sang all the songs from "Guys and Dolls" and "The King and I" for days. Other plays that were seen were "The Crucible," "Picnic," and "The Children's Hour," also Tennessee Williams' new play "Camino Real" and Rosalind Russell in "The Wonderful Town."

Park Avenue, Fifth Avenue and Broadway were quite exciting around the Easter season — we visited Macy's, Fox Ferrier's, Best and Co., and there was a darling little ring at Tiffany's for only $8,000, but I'd left my change purse in my hotel room.

Saturday night many of us attended the Philharmonic Orchestra concert at Carnegie Hall with Dimitri Metropolus conducting assisted by Ellen Stecker; and Sunday morning a few of us attended the service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine — with the music of such a powerful organ blending with 6,000 voices in the "Hallelujah Chorus", one really felt the spirit of Easter.

Several people attended the show at the Paramount where Patti Page was starring. This show was marked by Patti's forgetting the most important words to "The Doggie in the Window." —"Woof, Woof!"

When Monday afternoon came we all hated to leave, but were too exhausted to argue much, and too broke to care. Many thanks go to Mr. Warrington for making our wonderful trip possible—we all had a great time. And to those who ever plan to make the trip may I leave a few words of advice —grab the first comfortable seat on the bus because the back seat and center aisle will never do.

1953 May Festival Set For Saturday

'May Magic' to Feature Mellotones, May Court

Lattices entwined with roses, frothy pink balloons, and a full moon behind the bandstand will set the mood of the 1953 May Dance to be held in the College gymnasium from 9 to 12 p. m., Saturday, May 3.

Alluding to the soft breezes, flowers, and romantic atmosphere of the month of May, the theme of the dance will be "May Magic," Mary Hurt Peery and Janet Wiggins, co-dance chairmen, announced. The decoration scheme has been appropriately selected in varying shades of pink, lavender, and purple.

The soft, dreamy music associated with a spring dance will be provided by the Mellotones, an eleven piece orchestra, from Suffolk

Margaret Taylor, chairman of the dance music committee, has heard them play on several occasions, and commented that they should povide "just the right thing for 'May Magic'."

The orchestra has played for many dances and organizations around the Tidewater area but this will be their first college appearance.

Court Figure

Featured event of this, the last formal dance of the college session, will be the figure performed by the May Queen and her court of college beauties. The figure will carry out the dance tneme, but the exact nature of it will not be revealed until Saturday night. Time for the figure is approximately 9:45 p. m.

Members of the faculty have been invited to the dance and to serve as chaperones.

The dance committee has announced there will be no receiving line at the dance.

Tickets are on sale after lunch and dinner on second floor rotunda. Prices are set at $2.40, drag; $1.20, stag; and 25 cents, spectator.

The May Day dance is sponsored annually by Orchesis, the college modern dance group. Adviser to group is Mrs. Emily K. Landum.

Committee chairman for the dance are Jean Carol Parker, publicity; Gail Dixon, tickets; Ann Crowder, invitation; Nancy Tanley, figure and Buzzy Hartis, clean up.

Educational Society Chooses Mann Head For 1953-54 Session

Lucy Mann, a junior from Farmville, was elected president of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society of education, for 1953-54 at a recent meeting. Other officers chosen include Mary Ann King, vice president; Dolly Horne, secretary; Sylvia West was elected treasurer and Fay Greenland was named historian for the next session.

Seven juniors and seniors have been issued membership bids. Those receiving invitations are Frances Armstead, Mrs. Gladys Harvey, Marguerite Smith, Ann Murphy, Lura Beavers, Bunny Gibson and Ann Mallory.

On May 7 the annual K D Pi tea honoring the freshman and sophomore students who made the Lean's list last semester and have been oustanding scholastically this year, will be given at 4 p. m. in the Student Lounge.

Lucy Mann, next K D Pi president, is a business education major and has served as day student representatives on Student Government this year. She is a member of the Commercial and Cotillion Clubs and Delta Sigma Epsilon social sorority.

Longwood Artists To Auction Works In Sale On May 13

Reminiscent of the side walk auctions held in New York City, an auction of oil paintings will be held on the Longwood campus in front of West Wing from 3:30 p. m. to 4:30 p. m. on Wednesday, May 13.

This auction is a followup of the annual spring art exhibit to be displayed in the library and in the art department from May 8 to 15.

Mr. Norman O. Myers of the business department will take charge as auctioneer, assisted in his duties by Dr. Geogre W. Jeffers, head of the biology department.

In case of inclement weather the auction will be held in the recreation hall.

"The idea of an auction originated from an interest non-art students have shown in buying various paintings," said Mrs. Janice Lemen, associate art professor. She also said that the auction will enable pictures to be sold at a reasonable price to the "highest bidder."

Oil paintings to be included in the sale are works by Margaret Sutphin, art major, Lou Jamison, Florence Blake, Molly Hersman, and Anne Carter Wendenberg.

Also, Nell Green, Jean Hobbs, Patty Poffenberger, Mrs. Billie Hubbard, and Mary Evelyn Bennett will sell paintings. Ranging from the realistic to fantastic in theme, the works include absractions, landscapes, and portraits.

In the exhibit, which culminates the year's work in art, the work of both first and second semester art students, will be on display. This exhibit will include pottery, leather work, block prints, water colors, a display from the elementary methods class, textiles, glass etching, wood carving, and metal work.

Senior Class To Hold Banquet Next Week

The annual senior banquet will be held Wednesday, May 6, in the college dining hall according to Polly Brothers, president of the senior class.

As is customary, seniors will dress formally for the banquet. The banquet is also for all underclassmen, and they are requested to dress in Sunday attire. This dinner is a traditional farewell party for the outgoing seniors.

NOTICE

Tom Moore, chairman of men's production, has announced the cancellation of the presentation due to unforseen difficulty in obtaining Jarman Hall. The show will not be given this year.

Article In New VEA Journal Depicts Outstanding Senior As Ideal Education Student

by Phoebe Warner and Shirley Ward

"Lucy Page is a leader in every sense of the word", said Mrs. Meade Shackleford, Longwood publicity director, in a recent article featured in the April edition of the Virginia Journal of Education.

For representation in the magazine, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood, selected Lucy Page Hall as an ideal student in the field of teaching.

Mr. Robert J. Williams, editor of the Virginia Journal of Education, asked Dr. Lancaster to select a student to appear in his magazine. He told Dr. Lancaster that he conceived the idea for this type of article from a similar one appearing in a West Virginia education magazine.

Mrs. Shackelford reveals in her article, "I've Decided to Teach", the consistency of Lucy Page's leadership as shown throughout her high school and college careers.

"She will continue to be a leader wherever she goes", expanded the article.

The account stated that Lucy Page decided several years before she came to Longwood that she wanted to teach. She also said that the future of our country depends on the education of its youth, and the teacher who trains the child in citizenship, and helps him understand others. That, she also said, is why teaching is the most rewarding of all professions.

"I was very honored to be featured in the article", commented Lucy Page as she reviewed the magazine report which also depicts life at Longwood College through various photographs of activities here.

During the fall semester Lucy Page was a student teacher in teh fourth grade where she found the work most enjoyable and satisfying.

She jokingly added that she did almost change her mind when an incident concerning a fish and a worm occurred during her practice teaching.

However, this small incident did not hold much weight in her desire to enter into the teaching profession since her real inspiration came from a high school instructor.

Lucy Page will be married this summer and is planning to move to New York State.

As the interview closed, an agreement was made to adjourn to the "snack" for a coke!

Spring Theme Set For May Magazine

In keeping with the Spring season, articles, stories, and poetry of a lighter nature will be featured in the May issue of the Colonnade.

Articles on contemporary art, government and psychology will be featured in this issue of the Colonnade which will come out around the middle of May, announced Molly Hersman, editor.

Two stories with "happy" themes and several poems are included in the magazine.

The Byrd Machine, which deals with the government of Virginia, Freud's interpretation of dreams, and contemporary art will be the subjects of some of the articles.

Two stories, "The Golden Touch of Midas", by Georgia Jackson, and "Eleven Times Seven", by Barbara Caskey will be included, as well as two poems, "The Barren Trail", by Jo Debnam, and "A Season's Birth", by Barbara Assaid.

Drive Totals $307.10

Contributions totaling $307.10 were made by Longwood College to the 1953 Red Cross drive, Dr. Ethel Sutherland, professor of mathmetics, has announced.

As head of the Red Cross drive at the college, Dr. Sutherland reported that $229 was solicited among the faculty and administration of the college.

The remaining $78.10 was contributed by the student body through the colleg welfare fund sponsored by the "Y" last February. The money collected in this fund was divided among the Red Cross, World Student Service Fund, International Christian University, and the March of Dimes fund.

Seniors Elect New Officers

Election of class officers to serve the 1954 senior class next year was completed last week, Nell Copley, president, has announced.

Wanda Doll and Roberta Wiatt have been elected class representatives to Student Standards. New president of the Baptist Student Union, Wanda is an elementary major and a member of the Cotillion Club and A. C. E. Roberta, this year, has been president of the H2O Club. She is a member of the Monogram Club and active on the A. A. Council.

Class historian, who will write the class history to be presented at senior class day next June, is Ann Thomas, who is also editor of the Rotunda. Mary Jean Carlyle, will produce and direct the seniors Circus skit. Mary Jean is a member of Theta Sigma Upsilon, social sorority.

At the last class meeting Miss Olive Iler, professor of physical education, was elected as sponsor of the class, replacing Miss Elizabeth Burger associate professor of science, who will be on leave of absence next year. Because of her work with the class during the past three years, the juniors unanimously elected Miss Burger honorary class sponsor.

Annuals Will Arrive

The 1953 Virginians are expected to arrive within the next two weeks, Ann Keith Hundley, editor of the annual, has announced. She has urged, because of the rush when the books arrive, that students who have not paid their bill of $7.50 do so immediately. Those who have paid in full will be able to get theirs first.

'Ballad Tree' to Unfold British Isles' Folklore

Tumbling down from the past, Robin Hood and his cohorts in folklore, an Irish leprechaun, and Scottish dancers will meet in the dell at Longwood estate for Longwood's annual May Day pageant at 3 p. m., Saturday May 3.

Queen of May, Sue Webb, of Danville, who in the pageant is the English Maid Marian, will reign with her two maids of honor, Ann Murphy of Danville, and Margaret Taylor of Suffolk, ts the three-episode festival, "Ballad Tree," unfolds.

Combining all of the common heritage of British folklore, this year's festival interweaves the pageantry of Olde England, the balladry, ministeresisy, songs and the symbol and story of Ireland. Betsy Hankins, of Richmond, leads the pageant as the Wandering Minstrel, and narrator.

Distinguishing this pageant will be the three part May Court, representing each of the three countries. In the English section will be Beth Kent, Nell Green, Sylvia Reames, Jean Lafoon, Jean Drewery, and Patty Deering. The Scottish maid of honor, Margaret bara Blackmon as a Scottish section composed of Nancy Tanley, Frances Motley, Shirley Willhide, Martha Donaldson, Margie Sutphin, and Ann Foster. Barbara Dieckman as a Scottish minstrel will lead the honor guard figure for this part of the court and perform the intricate solo sword dance, the Gillie Callum.

Irish Episode

Ann Murphy, the Irish maid of honor, and Peggy Layman, Betty Ann Abbitt, Marie Swecker, Mary Ann King, Ann Cress, and Barbara Assaid will be in the Irish section. Shirley Roby is the elf of the "Ballad of Lady Isobel and the Elf Knight" around which the Irish episode centers. This leprechaun, a shoemaker in Irish folklore will interject Irish humor into not only the Irish episode but the whole pageant as he chooses where to put the shoe and the glove and to whom to give it—the May Queen or one of the two maids of honor.

Helen Waitman as Robin Hood, Janet Wiggins as Jack-on-the Green, and Carolyn Vanture as the Boy-with-the-Arrow make merry with other mythical figures in the opening English episode. All the pageantry of Olde England will unfold as the ancient round, "Summer Is Icummen In" is heard as the traditional May Eve song.

The Wandering Minstrel becomes involved with strolling players and mummers in a sword folk play, first of several life and death motifs in the dances. A medieval fool, portrayed by Joanne Steck, equipped with a stout ladle, call "fill the ladle, one pence, two pence, please," asks for a collection from the audience. Hilda Hartis as the loping Hobby Horse and Moneda Key as the Keeper of the Cake take part in this interlude.

Horn Dance

The Horn Dance of Abbotts Bromley, a ceremonial religious dance and the only dance sanctioned by the Church of England, done by six members of Orchesis, who will advance and retreat in another life and death motif, bedecked with glaring white and black stag's antlers. The Morisca, known now as the Morris Dance will be done by 24 dancers from the freshman gym classes.

With Betsy Welbon as fiddler, At Hundson House gets under way as an example of dance today, as it has been passed down by Cecile Sharpe, Douglas Kennedy, and Maude Karpeles, authorities on dance. In this dance, done by 44 freshmen, the polite and social

Combined Choirs Orchestra To Give Arlington Concert

The choir of Longwood College and the glee club of Hampden-Sydney College will combine voices on Sunday, May 3, to present a joint concert with the Arlington Chamber Music Society Orchestra in the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School Auditorium, in Arlington. The Longwood Alumnae Chapter and the Federation of Women's Clubs of Arlington are jointly sponsoring the program.

Leaving Sunday morning by bus, the choirs arrive in Arlington in time for a rehearsal with the orchestra at 2p. m. The concert will be presented at 4 p. m. The auditorium has been practically sold out as of this Monday, and standing room only will be available by Sunday, according to present indications.

Mr. Norman Lamb a member of the National Symphony Orchestra, is the conductor of the orchestra. He will conduct the first half of the program, which is all orchestal, and includes the Concerto Grosso in D Minor, by Vivalda-Siloti, and the Symphony No. 101 ("TheClock") by Haydn. Following the intermission, the choirs and orchestra will join under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar, to present the Faure "Requiem."

The "Requiem" is made up of seven movements. They are Introit and Kyrie, Offertory, Sanctus, Pie Jesu, Agnus Dei, Libera Me, and In Paradisium. An English version rather than the Latin will be used in this performance. Soloists for the occasion are, in the Offertory, Winston Johnson, Scott Kelly, and James Harris; in the Pie Jesu, Doris Horne, and in the Libera Me, Joe White.

King Announces Staff For 1953-54 Virginian

Staff appointments for the 1954 Virginian have been completed, according to Mary King, editor of next years' annual.

Lou Kitts will aid Mary Anne as assistant editor next year. Donnie Devine will hold the position of photography editor with Dot Vaden to assist.

Art editor will be Anne Carter Wendenburg, who will be assisted by Beth Kent. Nancy Nelson will serve as literary editor, and publicity editor will be Jean Carol Parker.

Other staff members of next years' annual will be Peggy Worthington, Helen Warriner, Helen Marie Wood, Mary Jo Hutchinson, Fannie Scott and Margaret Franklin.

More Than Tradition

May Day is more than tradition.

In three more days Longwood will present its annual May Day program for students, faculty, friends and parents, in the dell at Longwood Estate.

Yes, May Day, which involves months of hard work, will be presented in less than an hour and then all will be over for another year. Tired, happy students will evacuate the place of performance, and all these months of planning, anxiety, and excitement will cease, leaving only memories.

May Day is a tradition, but more, it is a manifestation of willingness in cooperation, precision in planning, harmony in practices, and coordination in work—work involving actual participants in the pageant, groups who have made sets, costumes and properties, and ground committees.

Even more than the actual hard work involved, May Day brings together into one activity many people showing school spirit at its best—from the most to the least important persons connected with the fesiivities.

May Day, representing the biggest event of the school year, brings out the interests of many people, not merely those connected with the college, but also, all who never cease to be interested in this one activity, which occurs annually.

"Ballad Tree" this year's presentation, will again show originality, in that Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, adviser to May Day activities, conceived the idea and wrote it down.

May Day, yes, more than a tradition, will again be presented climaxing months of hard preparation.

Mrs. Landrum, Sue Webb, who is general chairman and queen, Court, participants, those behind the scenes, and all persons who are helping to make May Day possible are to be commended for their enterprise. May this endeavor be crowned with success!

A Change Warranted

A roll call is traditionally answered "present," or "here," or perhaps by a showing of hands. In our regular Tuesday assemblies where there are 600 students present, a roll check requiring these responses would be impossible.

However, since Longwood assemblies are compulsory there must be some method of recording attendance. Instead of these usual methods, each student has an assigned assembly seat and several appointed students record absentees as indicated by vacancies in each row, at the beginning of the assembly pereiod.

During this year severeal distinguished speakers on assembly programs have made remarks, evidently to overcome their own embarrassment, about our being literally forced to hear them speak—a situation not complimentary to any speaker. Many students have eexpressed their own embarrassment at the way roll call is taken, feeling that it is definitely below the standards of young college women. It seems more like a fifth grade type of thing. Furthermore, the dignity that should surround the senior procession is completely lost as assembly opens on the mundane note of a roll call.

Of course, the ideal situation and the only one with which mature students should be satisfied is the complete elimination of roll call, even though assemblies are compulsory. By now we should be adult and aware enough to be genuinely interested in meeting together in an assembly once each week for a program that is planned and executed for our interest and benefit. Our own integrity of character should compel us to abide by an assembly rule without the threat of an unexcused absence. However, perhaps we cannot yet assume this responsibility—either because of college rules or because of our own attitudes. Yet in light of reasons stated here and the views of many in the student body, we feel that a change is definitely warranted.

There are three suggestions which we have tried to think through and which may offer a solution or lead to other plans to improve this situation.

1. To revert to the plan used when assembly was held in the Methodist Church—each student had a special number to be checked off a list each week by appointed students stationed at the auditorium doors. This would necessitate the absolute promptness of students' attendance.

2. The second solution would be the use of the plan started last year—the student at the end of each row would be responsible for filling out an attendance card for her row. In this plan, there is the risk of losing or failing to turn in the card.

3. Probably the simplest change to make would be to use the present procedure but take roll at the conclusion of the program instead of at the beginning.

This whole matter can be considered simply as a detail of assemblies; yet we feel it needs improvement. We have endavored to present both reasons and solutions for this change, and we bring this matter to the attention of those in charge of assembly rules. In the past two years they have been willing to give every aid in developing better assemblies. This is another opportunity for improvement. We would suggest that a change be made.

A Summer That Counts

Picnics with ants, meeting the gang for a swim, and riding for miles in the summer breeze are just a few of the things that cause us to greet the summer with great enthusiasm.

These however, are not the extent of the value of the summeer days; for while njoying the outdoors and the pleasure of seeing your old friends, many opportunities are open to you. It seems that many of us anticipate a happening for so long that when it finally arrives we let is pass without getting from it the things it holds in store for us.

The summer months are full of days for us to do with as we choose; the question is, what will be our choice? Some of us who like the outdoors will get great satisfaction out of being counsellor at a camp; others will like working in a department store, while the business majors will be interested in secretarial work. Among those of us who will serve ourselves and others by putting into practice what we have learned, are the nursing stuents—by working in local hospitals.

However this is not all that is awaiting our interests. Those who stay at home may participate in Bible School as well as baby sit for the neighbors. Also for those who wish to make up a subject or get a little ahead, there is summer school. Don't frown at hearing this phrase for summer school takes up little time and can be a lot of fun if we wish to make it so.

The summer awaits us and whether we prefer to take an office job or to stay at home, remember that "whatever is worth doing is worth doing well". Make this summer count!

Baptist Student Union

A scavenger hunt will highlight the annual B. S. U. picnic which will be held at the farm of Dr. Edgar E. Johnson, education professor and advisor to the B. S. U., on May 15. The hot dog supper will be 50 cents per person, including Hampden - Sydney students.

Twenty students, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Laing, and Miss Lucile Peak attended the B.S.U. Retreat in Staunton the week-end of April 17 to 19. Wilma Salmon was installed as state secretary, and Mr. Laing as faculty advisor. Ann Thomas, second vice - president this year, presided over an evening session and Anne Thaxton presided over the installation service. The group attended a tea given by Mary Baldwin College on Saturday afternoon.

Wesley Foundation

Old and new council members of the Wesley Foundation attended a retreat at Sydnor's Lake this past week-end to plan for events and activities for the coming year.

At the Foundation meeting last Sunday night, Dr. R. M. White, executive secretary of the board of education, was guest speaker on Sunday night.

The Methodist Evangelistic Mission was closed last Friday night. Many students attended these five meetings. The Wesley choir sang at the Thursday evening service.

Highlighting last week's Baptist and Methodist events, the Wesley Foundation played the B. S. U. in a softball game. The outcome was Methodist 14, Baptist 9.

Westminster Fellowship

On Sunday, April 26, a delegation of ten girls from Randolph-Macon Women's College was in charge of the devotions and program at Westminster Fellowship.

A testimonial service climaxed the visit of the Union Theological Seminary evangelistic team on Saturday April 18.

Canterbury Club

On Sunday, April 26, which was youth day, Holy Communion was held at 8 a. m. for the youth of the church, followed by breakfast in the Parrish House. The 11 a. m. service was conducted by Claude McCauley, a graduate of Hampden-Sydney, who is now in seminary work. The Sunday evening discussion group was led by Mr. McCauley.

After a candlelight service in the church, there was a discussion led by Elwood Rice, of Hampden-Sydney, of the book of Job, which was dramatically read by several Hampden-Sydney students at the 11 a. m. Sunday morning service on April 19.

Let's foot it! (Let's face it is so trite.) Longwood ladies are physical wrecks (That's not trite?) But fortunately there's hope for all you wrecks. Just follow these jimdandy beauty hints.

1. Get a clean start (The question is what is one's start?) Take a long bath. Don't scrub, save time and energy—and soak. When your soap becomes a soggy glob, you know you've had enough—and you'll come out looking like a lively shriveled prune.

2. Use dark purple eye shadow to cover your bags. It's so-so—(besides I'm getting $10 to plug this from the Junebelline Co. (Hotter than Maybelline, you know.)

3. Use Cactus Calous Cream—your feet will gleam (But what a scream!)

4. Paint stripes and spots on your nails. It's so unique and doesn't show chipping. If you bite your nails (dedicated to S and B) glue mosquitoes to your nails—they'll bite back at you and soon you'll give up this obnoxious habit and start on your toe nails. And the bending will be so good for your figure!

Now that you are beautiful what more can I say except—keep up with the Indians. Why only yesterday Chief Shortcake died. When some of his braves offered to help bury him, Mrs. Shortcake said "Thank's for your offer, boys, but Squaw-bury Shortcake."

Big Bug Bites Bring Blues But May Day Is Still News

by Anne Thaxton and Margaret Miller

Do you suffer from aching muscles, blisters, tired backs, bug bites, spells of sneezing, poison ivy, latessupperitis, delayed - term - paperenza and plain old fatigue? If so, cheer up, ladies, for May Day will be over come Saturday.

It will be over as far as participation is concerned, but it is guaranteed to linger on in your cherished memory album for many years hence.

It does make a deep impression—mostly on the ground, where any number of things go on while waiting—oh, that seemingly endless waiting, time seems to get down and crawl! During the many lulls, these are behind-the-scene activities such as card games between the Irish and "Scotch" dancers; letters composed with a few smears of mud, and some poison ivy leaves enclosed just to add local color; camp fires being built to keep mosquitos away, and by the way, to thaw out the dancer's feet; a few would-be bugologists running around with fine samples of moss and a butterfly net "just in case"; and a few typewriters clicking away finishing up a term paper.

Of course, many are running around wailing "what am I going to do, my costume isn't cut out yet?" Pity on thee, little ones! If you value your life you'll run like mad to the nearest sewing-pal and plead for help, or take the easy way out and jump over the third floor rotunda railing. Don't worry either, if your name is called out to participate in all the dances on the program. It has happened, even to those who aren't in May Day.

Be sure to "run like mad" when the "limousine" 'arrives to pick everyone up, or you'll get the second-best place—a hand rail, and from then on hang on for dear life, for haven't you braved it all for this? It would be a shame to lose the star performer!

On THE day, be sure to be on time, for there's nothing more disturbing than a funeral—this we would hate to have happen—but—! If the day is fair and bright be prepared for the old saying, "Did you know that this is the first clear May Day in 200 years?" If however, the day is forbidding, be prepared for, "Did you know that this is the first awful May Day weather in 300 years?"

As you go through each routine and think back on the hours of

News In A Nutshell

by Anne Shuff

As the first steps were taken toward a truce last week in battle torn Korea, the people of America waited patiently to hear the names of the returned prisoners. Those listening to the radio reports could not help but feel strange sensations—sensations of joy, happiness, and hope.

At Freedom Village the tension was even stronger. Many of the men had obviously undergone severe torture and terrible suffering. They appeared to be dazed and could not be sure they were free at last. Most of them were able to smile, a few uttered a faint greeting, while others wept silently with joy.

Horrifying tales of torture were related by the newly freed men, but all agreed that the treatment improved after the truce talks began. Some told of dreadful forced marches made in zero weather. Men who dropped from exhaustion or hunger were ignored, and left to die. The number of men that perished has been estimated to be between 1,000 and 2,000.

Although it is encouraging that our men are being returned, the question in the minds of all is whether it will eventually result in a solution to the whole prisoner issue and lead to a truce in Korea.

The West has closely watched the Communists exchange of captives and their other moves in Korea for clues concerning a truce. Hopes rose in the General Assembly recently. Poland agreed to withdraw its so called "peace" resolution. The West had opposed this resolution because it provided for an immediate peace in Korea, but made no mention of the issue of prisoners. For the first time since 1948, the Assembly agreed unanimously to support a resolution for a quick armistice in Korea. It was surprising that the Communists' block gave their support to the resolution.

As to the future, what can be expected? Will peace reign in Korea soon, if at all? This is still uncertain, but the truce talks have begun again for the first time in over six months, which is encouraging.

Eight girls attended Play Day at Mary Baldwin College last Satuday, April 25.

Those visting the college from Longwood were Dorothy Morris, Dorothy Baldwin, Joan Ward, and Pat Hamner. Also participating in the activities were Ann Syder and Hilda Hartis.

The girls arrived at the college at 11:00 a. m. and Dotty, Joan, Buzzy, and Pat joined in the water activities, learning and practicing various stunts. The aquatic events were followed by archery exhibitions on the athletic field.

Food and fun was added to the day's list of activities when the group stopped to enjoy a hot dog picnic.

The Longwood group came back with the knowledge of how to play a new game known as "whisket" —a cross between lacrosse and softball. Dotty Morris stated, "We would very much like to see this game played here at school".

The Play Day events ended with a volley ball game.

Have you been wondering how the A. A. Council uses the money it makes from taking pictures at dances? Rest assured. They put it to good use. At the present they are getting new draperies and slip covers for the A. A. Room.

Spring brings many sports activities to the Longwood campus. All you sportsmen pay heed to these announcements:

Class softball practice will be held at 7 p. m. Monday through Thursday out on the A. A. field.

All girls who have signed up to play in the annual ping-pong tournament should play off these matches as soon as possible.

Golf clubs are available on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon for those wishing to use them provided you sign up with Edith Frame by noon.

All tennis doubles should be played off immediately.

You spring picnickers—please check with Miss Iler for use of the cabin and fire places at Longwood estate before planning to use them.

Graduation Nears Reality For Seniors Who Disclose Future Teaching Plans; Graduate Work Draws Several Girls

Springtime always means planning time for Longwood seniors as they begin to make applications, decide on positions, and sign contracts. They think in terms of salaries, communities, and teaching loads.

Many of the seniors of '53 have already decided what they will do and where they will go in the days after graduation. Of the six business majors five are planning to teach. Nancy Crymes will return to the nursing profession, but Mary Ann Lumsden will teach in Windsor High chool, and Jean Mercer will teach business subjects at the new Saluda High School. Ann Murphy will be located in Arlington County and Marguerite Smith is planning to teach in Franklin; Margaret Taylor will be married this summer and will then teach at the Suffolk High School.

Ann Marie Gray who is an English major will teach at Broad Creek Village in South Norfolk County. Eugenio Konahaes also plans to teach in Norfolk. Jo Ann Steck will teach in Franklin. Two students will continue their college work at graduate schools. Elba Castner of Puerto Rico, a February graduate, is now attending Columbia Graduate School to continue her studies in English, and Elizabeth Ann Stone is planning to attend graduate school at the University of N. C.

The two history majors, Betty Abbit and Mrs. Gladys Marsh Harvey, plan to teach both history and social science. Betty will be in Hampton and Mrs. Harvey who has been on a leave of absence from Pittsylvania County Schools, will resume her teaching there.

Ann Jones whose major is in math will also be teaching in Hampton.

Of the music majors, who already settled their teaching plans, Mary Evelyn Bennett will teach in Rocky Mount High School. Sarah Harvey, a February graduate, is now teaching in Henrico County. Mary Winston Johnston will be teaching in Norfolk City Schools and Jean Drewry will be located in Southampton County. Billie Powell is now teaching in Fort Lee, New Jersey.

Among those who have already begun their teaching careers are Nancy Purdum and Jean Talley, elementary majors who graduated in February, and who are now teaching in Danville. Other elementary majors, Frances Andrews, Sara Ann Conley, Margaret Alice Stables, and Lelia Ann Wingfield, who were also February graduates, are now teaching in Norfolk, Hampton, Burkeville, and Roanoke, respectively.

Added to the list of those who have already accepted teaching positions are Gwendolyn Bain and Mary Jane Tyus, June graduates, who have acepted teaching positions in Franklin.

Seniors who will teach in their hometowns of Norfolk are Sophie Urso and Betty Lou Van De Reit.

Jean Jinnett and Donna Kunkler have accepted elementary teaching positions positions at Oceana, Virginia.

Jean Krienbaum and Janet Wiggins will teach in Arlington.

Nancy Woolridge Calohan has accepted a teaching position in Blacksburg where her husband is at VPI. Matilda Creasy will teach the second grade in Warwick. Nancy Driskill, will be in Roanoke and Virginia Irby has signed a Pittsylvania County contract.

Other June graduates who will teach in the elementary grades are Joyce Richardson, at Achilles in Gloucester County, and Judith Spindler, who has accepted a position in Princess Ann County.

Virginia Moon has been appointed to take charge of bringing the class scrapbook up to date and keeping it through next year.

Biology Majors Visit Fisheries Laboratory At Gloucester Point

Nine biology majors, all members of the biology seminar, traveled to Gloucester Point this week end where they visited at the Virginia Fisheries Laboratory.

Investigating the waters of the York River and the fossil beds was of main interest to the students. Many specimens were collected and preserved for the laboratory here.

Dr. George Jeffers, head of biology department, and Dr. Robert Brumfield, associate professor of biology, accompanied student members making the trip. Mary Hurt Peery, Mary Meade Robertson, Janice Pinkard, Jackie Lackey, Marian Parrish, Virginia Berry, Ann Mallory, and Glen Vought went on the trip.

Home Economics Club Selects New Officers

Betty West, sophomore, was recently elected president of the Home Economics Club to serve next year.

Other officers are Joan Williams, vice president; Nancy Sydnor, secretary; and Jackie Palmer, treasurer. Lorretta Brooking was elected to serve as sophomore epresentative for next year. Ellen Dize and Mary Bennett Barksdale were chosen to serve as junior and senior representatives respectively.

'Y' Cabinet Begins Duties

Already feeling the responsibilty of their new posts, the 1953-54 YWCA cabinet members have begun to assume their duties. At a recent meeting the group chose Lu Beavers, "Y" president, and Fay Greenland to serve as representatives at the annual Blue Ridge Conference to be held in North Carolina, June 9 to 16.

At the meeting, Lou and Fay will share experiences, and gain ideas fo rnext year, with representatives from YWCA, YMCA, and Student Christian Association groups all over the south.

May 7 has been chosen as the tentative date of the spring setup conference which the "Y" holds each year. The newly installed council will meet with old council members to make plans for tradition the conference will be held at Longwood estate.

New president of the "Y", Lu the coming year. Following past Beavers, has stated that it will soon be time to sign up for freshman little sisters. In the near future a list will be posted on the bulletin board. This is a Longwood tradition when all students are urged to sign up to help make some new girl feel at home next fall.

Honorary Society Elects Sutherland

Newly elected president of Pi Gamma Mu, honorary social science fraternity, is Virginia Sutherland, a junior from Sutherland. The other officers will be elected before the end of the year.

Recently initiated members are: Gwendolyn Bain, Mrs. Gladys M. Harvey, Lou Jamison, Mary Hurt Peery, Marguerite Smith, and Sue Webb.

Virginia, the new president, is an elementary major, a member of the Choir, the Longwood Players, and the Association of Childhood Education.

May Day

graces are mingled with the folk and country dance.

In the Scottish episode, Betsey Welbon and Margaret Shepphard, fiddler and clarinetist, with Betty Goodson A She at the piano simulate the bagpipes of Scotland. Three typical dances of Scotland, the Gillie Callum, a Highland Fling, by Barbara Clark and Nancy McLawhorne, and the satirical pantomime done by Old Trews, Jean Carol Parker of Prince Charlie's reign when everything Highland had to be abolished, are in this episode.

The ballad, Katherine Jaffray, tells what happens to the Scottish maid of honor, who portrays Katherine. A foursome reel done by 44 dancers is in this part. Echoes of Auld Lang Syne, are heard as the last dancers move off stage.

As the Irish episode opens, the leprechaun makes his entrance to the well-known ballad, "Who will Shoe Your Pretty Little Foot" which serves as the clue to the question who is to be queen for the day, Lady Isobel, who is the Irish maid of honor, Katherine Jaffray, or Maid Marian? His antics and pranks of where to put the shoe and the glove make for hilarity among the court in this scene is the Irish Lilt with its motif of maidens dancing forever.

The bringing in of the May Bush, as the Irish counterpart of a May Day processional, complete with ceremonial candles affords the leprechaun another opportunity to play hide and seek with the audience in his final choice of a place for the shoe and the glove. As he darts from bush to bush, 45 dancers make merry in a typical Irish reel.

At the conclusion of this episode, May Court is ushered in at the blasts of the elf's horn, for the conclusion to "Ballad Tree."

Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, associate professor of Education has directed the May Day festival.

Leadership Fraternity Taps Beavers, Wente, King For Membership

Girls Receive Honor In Regular Assembly

Three juniors were tapped to membership in Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary leadership fraternity, yesterday during the regular assembly.

Lura Beavers, Mary Ann King and Else Wente were the girls recognized by the group for their outstanding leadership and service to Longwood.

Newly-elected president of the Young Women's Christian Association, "Lu" Beavers, is a music major from Indiana. This year she has served as treasurer of the 'Y.' "Lu" is also a member of the college choir, Cotillion Club, South West Virginia Club, Wesley Foundation and Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority. Last year she served as freshman counselor for the 'Y' and was a member of Freshman Commission the year before. Besides her work with 'Y' and other college organizations "Lu" has acted as piano-accompanist when ever needed.

King Tapped

Mary Ann King, a chemistry and general science major from Smithfield, was recently announced editor of the 1954 Virginian. Besides her work on the annual staff for the past three years, Mary Ann has been active in Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, the college choir, Canterburg Club, Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority. Last fall at the Virginia Inter-Collegiate Press Association convention, Mary Ann was elected secretary-treasurer of the group. She was chosen as a representative of her class on May Court.

A physical education major from Hilton Village, Else Wente has recently assumed the duties of president of the Athletic Association. Else was treasurer of the A. A. last year and a council member the year before. Active in college sports, she has played on the basketball and hockey squads and has been an outstanding participant in tennis matches.

Else is also kept busy with her membership in Kappa Delta Pi, Orchesis, H2O, and Monogram clubs.

Preceding the tapping ceremony Alpha Kappa Gamma presented a brief history of the equestrian stature of Joan of Arc which stands in the Colonnade of the College.

Lucy Page Hall, president of the group, stated that the new members would be initiated as soon as they passed their test required for entrance.

Five Organ Students Will Present Recital In Assembly May 12

The advanced organ students of Mr. Clarence Warrington, associate professor of music, will present a recital in the regular Longwood assembly period on May 12.

Participating in the presentation are Mary Ellen Hawthorne, Mary Ward, Sally Wilson, Jean Mercer and Mary Perrow.

The twofold purpose of this program is to give the pupils an opportunity to play before an audience and to acquaint students with organ literature of the 17th and 18th centuries and a small part of the 19th century.

Each student will play several selections on the Jarman Memorial organ.

This is the second annual organ recital to be given.

College Publishes Bulletin for '53-'54 As Curriculum Aid

Registration Set For Next Week

The new 1953-54 college bulletin has been published and will be available before class registration takes place on Thursday, May 14.

Mrs. Watkins added that the administration is well pleased with the rise in application for next year and looking forward to the coming session.

Observation of the bulletin shows only one addition and no changes in next year's curriculum.

Added to the Education course is Education 432, which concerns the problems that confront elementary teachers.

Mrs. Mary Watkins, executive secretary, has drawn attention to the fact that orientation classes have been shortened while vacations have been lengthened. Freshmen will begin their orientation program on September 21 and will finish the next day. Registering of new students will be held on September 23, and classes will begin on Thursday, September 24.

Five days have been allotted for Thanksgiving, 13 days for Christmas, and five days for Easter. Examinations will end on June 4, 1954, with Baccalaureate and graduation exercises on Sunday, June 6.

Next Thursday, registration for fall classes will take place in the biology classrooms of Stevens Hall. Students are asked to report to the department at 1 p. m.; registration will continue until 5:30 p. m. Any students not completing their schedule at this time will report back early next fall and complete their schedule from 2 p. m., to 3:30 p. m., on Monday afternoon, September 21.

Before registration takes place next week, all freshmen must see the heads of their departments and receive a tentative approval slip for their majors. Sophomores must obtain the blanks of approval which they received last fall and get final approval on their major subjects. These blanks, signed by the department head, must be turned in with the completed schedule.

All students should see their respective department heads relative to filling out schedules. This should be done before next Thursday in order that they be ready to fill out the schedules at the time alloted. The usual procedure of registration will be followed. Students will get the long strip of schedule cards; these must be turned in at the final approval desk intact. After filling out the top card, approval must be obtained from the department head; next, students should see the instructors in each class in which they plan to enroll, sign their roll and have the cards initialed. After filling out the rest of the cards final approval will be given.

Students are urged to go over the catalogue and plan their schedule now before they go to register.

Works Go On Sale At Artist Auction Wednesday, May 13

by Phoebe Warner

Hurry, hurry, hurry—step right up, ladies and gents, gals and pals—

This will be a familiar refrain ringing through the campus of Longwood from the lawn in front of the West Wing when the student Oil Painting auction will take place next Wednesday at 3:30 p. m.

The well-known artists selling their works are Florence Blake, mystic; Margaret Sutphin, impressionist; and Ann Carter Wendenberg. Also offering their works for the appreciation of mankind are Patti Poffenberger, realistic landscapist; Neil Green, romanticist; and Mrs. Billie Hubbard, portrait painter.

To add to the color and spirit of this auction will be Dr. George W. Jeffers of the biology department and Mr. Norman O. Myers of the business department as typical auctioneers.

All "connossieurs" and art lovers —also everyone else—are urged to be there early, wallet in hand to bid on their favorite paintings.

If you wish to view these paintings carefully before purchasing them, they will be available to you in the Browsing Room of the Library after May 8.

In case of inclement weather, the auction will take place as scheduled in the college recreation hall.

Remember, this is the chance of a lifetime—to buy art works done by fellow students and classmates right here at Longwood College.

Mrs. Janice Lemon, associate art professor, stated that the money received from selling the paintings would go directly to the girls.

Mr. Thomas Boushall To Give Graduation Address May 31, In Exercises For 1953 Seniors

LC Musicians To Present Recitals Saturday, Monday

Concluding the spring series of music recitals by Longwood students, twelve girls will be presented in a piano recital at 8 p. m. Saturday evening, May 9, in Jarman Hall. On Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m., six voice students will present the last recital of this year.

The Saturday night concert will feature the piano students of Miss Emily Clark and Mr. Clarence Warrington.

The program consists of three duets—"The Gingham Dog," by Simmons, played by Jackie Curlee and Ann Shuff; "The Calico Cat", played by Joyce Clingenpeel and Virginia Cowles; and "Jota" by Granadas will be played by Sally Wilson and Gwendolyn Michael.

Solos on the program include Liszt's "Consolation in E Major" performed by Betty Goodson Ashe; and "Papillon" by Grieg, performed by Gwendolyn Michael. Sally Wilson will play Puriell's "Minuet from Suite in G Major" and Tully's "Gigue." "Prelude from Pactita in B Flat Major" by Bach, and Chopin's "Nocturne in F Minor, Op. 15, No. 1" will be performed by Nancy Jones.

Continuing, Ann Shuff will play 'From a Wandering Iceburg", by MacDowell. Jackie Curlee will perform "Prelude" by Simmons and "Vamos, Maruca" by Villa Lobos. "Playera" by Granados will be played by Liz DeHaven. Schubert's "Impromptu in A Flat Major" and Pinto's "Run, Run" from 'Scenos Infantis" will be performed by Mary Evelyn Bennett. Jane Branch will play "Scherzo in E Minor" by Mendelssohn.

Others on the program include Chopin's "Prelude", C Minor, C Major, B Major, and "Waltz in E Minor", Ravel's "Pavanne", and Bartok's "Bagatelles" numbers 2 and 4, to be played by Sue McNeil.

Opening the voice recital on Sunday will be Phyllis Isaacs, sophomore, singing "Songs My Mother Taught Me" by Dvorak, and "Lullaby" by Brahms. Elizabeth Stone, senior, will sing 'Veigie, Tutta Amor" by Durante, and Handel's "Where E're You Walk." "Florian's Song" by Godard and "The Lotus Flower" by Schuman will be sung by Helen Sue McNeil.

Continuing the recital, Elizabeth Goodson Ashe will sing Mendelssohn's "Ah, Rest In the Lord" and Tschaikowsky's "None But the Lonely Heart."

Singing "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" by Haydn, and "I Love Thee" by Beethoven will be Nan Ellen Bland. Herbert Goodman will sing "It Is Enough" by Mendelssohn and "The Two Grenadiers" by Schuman. Closing the recital, "Slumber Song" by Gretchaninoff, "The Rosette" by Clokey, and the old English "On No, John" will be sung by Dorothy Morris.

Accompanists for the program will be Lura Alice Beavers, Elizabeth Goodson Ashe, and Helen Sue McNeil.

The student recitals are free and all members of the college student body and faculty are welcomed.

LC Men Elect New Officers

The Men's Student Government Association has recently elected officers to serve during the 1953-54 session.

Herbert Goodman, sophomore, was chosen president of the organization. He is a member of Tau Theta Pi social fraternity and is active in college productions and skits. Herb is a biology major.

Other new officers are Glenn Vought, vice-president; Eric Robinson, secretary; and Tom Moore, treasurer.

As a spring project, the Association plans to challenge the men faculty members in a softball game.

Kappa Delta Pi Holds Annual Tea Thursday

Freshmen and sophomores currently on the Dean's List will be entertained by Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary educational society at a tea to be held in the Student Lounge at 4 p. m. on Thursday, May 7.

An annual affair, the tea gives the students, who will probably be eligible to join Kappa Delta Pi when they are juniors, the opportunity to become acquainted with the organization.

The faculty and administration are also invited, and piano music will provide entertainment for the group.

June '53 Virginian Honors Dr. Moss

by Marie Swecker

"Through his interest, friendliness, and wonderful sense of humor . . . ." Dr. C. G. G. Moss has truly found a place in the hearts of Longwood students during the nine years he has spent here.

This amiable gentleman was seelcted by the staff for the dedication of the 1953 Virginian because of the part he has taken in many activities sponsored by the various organizations of the college and because of his great influence as a person. The students deeply appreciate his interest in them and his taking time to talk and joke with them. "Dean" Moss as he is fondly called by some of he girls said, "It really makes a faculty member feel good when he is thought enough to be chosen for dedication of the annual."

Dr. Moss, professor of history, was the faculty advisor of the Student Government Association and served in this capacity for six years. At present he is advisor to Pi Gamma Mu, national honor society in social science. He also served as faculty member on the Student Standards Committee.

The annual had as its rather unusual theme this year the steps of Longwood, signifying progress. The front page shows a freshman taking her first step of advancement, while the last page is of a senior coming down the last steps of Longwood on to greater achievement.

Dr. Hollingsworth To Give Sermon

The two chief speakers for graduation exercises of Longwood, 1953 senior class to be held on May 31, have been announced by President Dabney S. Lancaster.

Thomas C. Boushall, President of the Bank of Virginia, Richmond, will give the main address at the commencement exercises in Jarman Hall.

The Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Dr. A .H. Hollingsworth, minister of the Second Presbyterian Church, Roanoke.

Graduation activities for 96 candidates for degrees will be conlensed into two days this year with the Baccalaureate Service at 11 a. m. and the commencement exercises at 3:30 p. m., Sunday, May 31.

The Reverend Mr. James Kennedy, of the Farmville Presbyterian Church will give the invocation at the Baccalaureate service in Jarman Auditorium at 11 a. m., Sunday, May 31. The Longwood Choir will render religious music.

The faculty and senios will form an academic procession, and march to the Jarman Auditorium for the commencement exercises at 3:30 p. m., when the Reverend Mr. Otis Kidd, of the Farmville Methodist Church will give the invocation. After Mr. Boushall's speech, Dr. Lancaster will award degrees to the seniors, and announce the honor graduates.

Mr. Boushall, is founder of the Bank of Virginia and has been president since it was incorporated. He is formerly education chairman and now serves as a director of the United States Chamber of Commerce. In the field of education he is also on the board of overseers of Sweet Briar College, and serves as vice-chairman of the Richmond City school board. Mr. Boushall, a graduate of University of North Carolina, is also a member of the board of St. Catherines School in Richmond and a member of the National Committee of United Nations Educational, Social, and Cultural Organization.

He is chairman of the education committee of Southern Association of Science and Industry. Mr. Boushall has also been president of the Richmond Community Council and past president of Richmond Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Hollingsworth is a former pastor of the Farmville Presbyterian Church, serving here from 1936 to 1942. Since leaving here then he has served in his present Roanoke pastorate.

Dr. Hollingsworth received his B. A. degree from Davidson College and earned his Doctor of Divinity degree from the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond. An honorary doctorate degree was bestowed upon him several years ago by Hampden-Sydney College.

King Appoints Vaden

Mary Ann King, editor of the 1954 annual, has announced that Dot Vaden, sophomore, will be assistant business manager of next year's Virginian.

Pat Altwegg, whom Dot will assist, has already been announced as business manager of the annual. Pat was reappointed after serving last year in the same position.

Looking Back

The end of another school year is only a few short weeks away. For some of you it is only the end f your first year here at Longwood, but for you who are to graduate it is the final stopping place on a four year journey, a journey that may have at times seemed long, but one that you will cherish in your hearts no matter where you go.

Let us look back from the begining of the school session up until now. What are some of the things that happened here at school that you yourself want to remember in years to some? Of course, all the memories may not be pleasant ones, but let us assume that the majority of them are worthwhile to cherish.

During the month of September there was much excitement in the dorms of Longwood College. It was thought that the Republican nominee for President, Dwight D. Eisenhwer, would journey through Farmville on September 26. Students hoped for a whistle stop, but were disappointed when the General did not travel through Farmville.

In October Sarah Harvie revealed the theme of the 1952 AKG circus as "Carnivail Festivail". Do you remember the exciting circus parade and the competition between the red and white, green and white floats? Also in October our own Cleo Holliday had a featured role in the Barter Theatre production, "The Curious Savage".

How many of you freshmen recall that bright Saturday morning in October when you arose at 6:30 and repeated the "sign off" to the Shops. You're right—it was "Rat Day."

Highlights of November were the presentation of Tennessee William's, "The Glass Menagerie" by the Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs, and the selection of ten seniors to represent Longwood in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

The famous Don Cossack Chorus and Dancers were presented to us as a part of the Artist Series in December, and in January, the "Y" sponsored Religious Emphasis week. The Rev. Mr. Al. Edwards of The First Presbyterian Church, Harrisonburg, led the discussions and lectures. How many of you can truthfully say that you did not gain a deeper and richer interpretation of life from his inspiring talks,

In February, Sue Webb was selected to reign as Queen of the May Day festivities. Also during that month the sophomores presented their annual production "North Atlantic," a fantasy of the sea and take off on "South Pacific".

During the month of March the alumni came back for Founder's Day, reliving memories of the days when they, too were attending Longwood. "Death Takes A Holiday" was presented by the Longwood Players and the Hampden Sydney Jongleurs and was a great success, and the frosh presented their gay, light-hearted production, "Laces And Graces."

All of this brings us to the balmy month of April. During the past month, Ralph Marterie and his well-known band played for the Cotillion Clubbers, and Orchesis presented the impressive dance-drama "The Mocking Bird."

On Saturday May 2 the May Day Festival "The Ballad Tree" took place in the dell at Longwood Estate.

Are these not memories to tuck away close to your heart and think about even after you walk through the Rotunda doors for the last time as a student, or even if you are only leaving for summer vacation, In reality, the session is almost ended, but not in the hearts and minds of Longwood girls.

You Decide

Comments among the students ranging from "It was terrific" to 'The behavior was atrocious" were heard over and over last week after the concert given in assembly by the Camp Pickett Band.

Hot jazz and patriotic band music is written with the intention of arousing its listeners' emotions. Our "living it up with great exuberance" during last week's assembly was not because of the band members, although they were warmly welcomed just as we welcome any of our guests, but because of the style of music they were playing. The audiences' response was more than expected. This was the first program of its type to be presented here this year—it was certainly relaxed and not meant to be dignified. These programs are meant to give the student a wider appreciation of fine things and without doubt jazz can be as much a part of musical background as is opera. All types of music should be appreciated by a well-rounded individual.

None of us who feels that a background of wide interests is necessary would raise much protest over the program itself. As for the behavior, that is something different. Surely we did appreciate this assembly program. Yet afterwards many students were heard to question their own behavior and reaction. Yes, it was rather wild and loud—perhaps more like a be-bop joint than a college assembly. Was the response of the students on a college level; were our actions a good advertisement of the intellectual level of our students?

This is a matter which we need to decide for ourselves. Anything that creates a questioning attitude needs thought. If we are to be the mature adults which is our goal, perhaps we need more reflection concerning our public behavior. What about it—is there a question about our over-all behavior? You decide.

Meanwhile, Longwood students would like to take this opportunity to express their appreciation to the administration and he assembly committee for a most enjoyable assembly.

Hats off to Camp Pickett's Band!

Be A Big Sister

What's your attitude about being a "big sister" next year, Does it mean just taking someone to the formal reception? In that case perhaps we should think about it.

Soon the YWCA of Longwood will ask students to sign up for "little sisters" in the incoming freshman class. We must do this with an eye on the real purpose and meaning of the big-little sister plan.

It means that when the little sister arrives on the campus next fall, lost in a maze of total strangers and new rules you will be there to help her find her way around. In fact she can have a wonderful feeling of already knowing someone when she arrives. All you have to do to make this possible is to write a letter and enclose a snapshot as soon as you're notified of your little sister's name and address during the summer.

But this isn't all it means; it means that your visits won't be limited to a scant two or three all year. You'll visit her ofter during the fall to help solve the little questions that loom big in a freshman's early college life.

When you, as an upperclassman sign up to be big-sister, you should feel that you are pledging yourself for something important. That important thing is to make a freshman feel at home and to help her start her college days of well and happily. Sign up to be a big sister and make up your mind to be a real one.

Just Hurry With A Worry, Let It Flurry In A Hurry

by Anne Thaxton

Here we are with only two and a half weeks of study time left. Hard to believe, isn't it? But I guess we're all eager, too. Time, since September, has limped on. Then it got down on its knees and crawled. We had begun to wonder how we would look with white hair. Then all of a sudden here we are looking forward to that final exam week with the eagerness of an entree for Alcatraz, which goes to show that people are even more peculiar than they are, which is saying plenty.

If you feel a bit uneasy and can't help worrying—who doesn't—here are a few recommended ways to do your worrying scientifically:

1. Set a definite day, afternoon, or night for worrying.

2. Know definitely your worry problem. Write it down. Face it fully, roundly, squarely; anyway, face it.

3. Never worry over rumors or what "they" say. First, get the facts—then you'll know the one to murder.

4. Worry about only one problem at a time—any more and you'll get that white hair yet.

5. Never worry in bed, in the dining hall, in class, while standing, walking or sitting.

6. Select an air-conditioned room—if none can be found, you won't have to worry.

7. Set a time limit. If you must go beyond it, give yourself credit for time and a half.

8. Never worry with a frowning face. Smile, sing, whistle, or just open your mouth.

9. Never worry when you are well, tired, sick, angry, or depressed.

10. Never worry while working, playing, visiting, shopping, sleeping, walking, or gossiping.

Hope these are enough and sufficient to tide everyone over and beyond those excruciating exams, but if you don't want to feel like the unwanted lettuce in a drugstore sandwich, then don't bother to worry at all. Happy exam time!!

Article Reveals Real Truth

by Marie Swecker and Phoebe Warner

How would you like to come back to ye olde Longwood next year and find boys lined knee-deep in the Rotunda? Those of you who say, "Great!" (in the minority, of course) perhaps aren't aware of some of the advantages of women's colleges and some vital facts about Longwood.

That in a woman's college, girls feel equal to men while in a co-ed school they are placed on a lower rank. "For despite its claims of sex equality, co-education as it now operates in America is socially and psychologically designed to produce women who are merely docile."

—That one of the most extraordinary qualities of women's colleges is the way the students run their own affairs. Since no men are involved in their affairs they lose the habit of waiting for masculine aid but think for themselves.

—That women's colleges are designed to build self-confidence. It is difficult to realize that three-fourths of the girls at Longwood, were they in a co-ed school, would not be recognized as possessing the character and quality of leadership that is theirs. Also a girl in a co-educational school does not enter into class discussions fearing to disagree with some of the boys. "In extracurricular activities a man is chairman and a woman is vice-chairman, maybe. When there is a job to be done the girls tend to hold back their ideas until they see what the men want to do."

—That more graduates of women's colleges marry than co-eds. The facts compiled in a 1947 survey show that 73 per cent of co-educational graduates married, while 76 per cent of non-Catholic women's college graduates married. It is interesting to note that the matrimonial advantages of girls in women's colleges lies in the difference in a girl's thinking about herself and her potentialties.

The facts and statistics in this report are compiled from an article by Lynn White, Jr., president of Mills College in California, which appeared in Harper's magazine October, 1952. The article was titled 'Do Women's Colleges Turn Out Spinsters?"

We refer you to this article. It shows, by figures, the advantages of Women's Colleges.

After you read it, what would you decide?

OF INTEREST

by Joyce Gillcrest

We have world travelers among us! Some fortunate and financially stable few are off to the distant shores of Europe this summer to see the sights and scenes we've always read about.

Dr. C. L. S. Early—who is off to the Coronation, and Miss Helen Draper are two of the faculty members who will be taking tours. Among the students off for fabulous France and other destinations are Mary Ann Evans, Mason Moore, and Lucy Thwing.

Though we all envy those who have been or who are going abroad, it may not be as impossible for each of us to accomplish this as we may think. A few of those who are traveling to Europe from Longwood this summer are doing so by means of a student travel plan. The Council of Student Travel in New York, is offering some very practical plans to enable those desiring educational advancement to make such a trip this summer.

The voyages are planned so that the passengers can become better acquainted and have opportunities to learn from each other. The educational program on the east-bound voyage includes language classes, discussions on European history, politics, art, and culture. On the return trip, students discuss and evaluate their summer experiences. The Council on Student Travel furnishes a collection of records, both classical and popular, sports and game equipment, and a selection of movies for ship board entertainment. In addition to such traditional pastimes as chess, checkers, bridge, ping pong and shuffleboard, there are talent shows, social and folk dancing and many special programs. The voyage is a vacation within itself—just like what you've always dreamed of.

The ships used are mainly Norwegian and Swedish and they have been arranged so that travel can be as economical and comfortable as possible. The primary requirement necessary to be included on one of these trips is that the individual be going for educational purposes only. Expenses are kept at a minimum so that students and teachers can further their education under this plan. Anyone interested in spending her summer like this should get in touch with the Council on Student Travel, and, remember, it's not so far off! Why not try for it?

The Coronation of Queen Elizabeth this June will attract tourists to Europe from all parts of the world. Since one or two of our Longwood members will be eyewitnesses of this event, we may get a first-hand account in the fall. In the meantime—to the fortunate few—bon voyage!

ELEGY

by Phoebe Warner

I have no inspiration,
No one to take dictation,
A plot I have none,
A joke two thirds pun,
I cannot make a rhyme,
I have not got the time,
So here's a little essay,
For you to read today,
Which is a sorry waste,
To fill up empty space.
Now surely you may think,
This poem it do stink;
But you must admit,
It could be a hit.
But I'm not a poet,
Geese kid, you know it.
However, I have a joke:
There were two kangaroos,
Momma and poppa.
Poppa: "Moma, where Anabelle?"
Momma looks down and shrieks: Oh, I've been pickpocketed.
Not let us see
Who our villian will be
For every great masterpiece
Must sad emotions release,
Ho! Ho! He! He!
It's Gene Artery.
He's caught with haste
And fed a taste,
Of dining hall paste.
Then he passes out
From suffering gout.
Epitaph to a poet—
She could not do her history,
For there her mind did stick;
She tried to write some poetry,
But her skull was too darn thick.
Still here lies a scholar,
Through her jokes she won a dollar.

Webb Receives Scholarship For Graduate Assistantship At University of Tennessee

The honor of a graduate assistantship in physical education and recreation at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville has been bestowed upon Sue Webb, senior from Danville.

Sue received this honor by first being recommended by Miss Olive Iler, head of the physical education department, who wrote a letter of approval to the University of Tennessee. Sue in turn received papers to fill out and was finally chosen to receive the honor out of a large group of recommended students from various Southern Colleges.

The University of Tennessee provides one year graduate assistantships which lead to the Master of Science degree in return for part time work done by the assistant in public schools or agencies in the field of physical education and recreation. Sue has chosen a public school in Knoxville for her assistantship work.

To receive this opportunity, the candidate must have obtained a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university prior to the opening of the school year for which the appointment is made.

Other basis to be considered in selection for this scholarship are adequate undergraduate preparation in physical education or recreation, average scholastic standing, and proper recommendations.

"I think this is a great opportunity", commented Sue on her reaction to receiving this honor.

CAR Elects Harper Nat'l. Vice President At Wash. Convention

Jane Harper, a sophomore from Richmond, was honored recently by being selected as the Junior National Vice-President of the Children of the American Revolution.

Serving as State president last year, Jane was again selected this year to the State Presidency to act in an honorary capacity.

The purpose of the CAR is to preserve the things our forefathers have previously fought for and to teach American history as a means to build citizenship.

CAR functions under the guidance and leadership of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Upon reaching the age of 21, CAR members are eligible for membership in the DAR.

Each year the national convention of CAR is held at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C., where State reports are given and plans formulated. Also annually, in January, a state convention is held in some Virginia cities.

Jane commented that her grandmother was the organizer of a CAR society in Washington, D. C. She also said that she is eligible for membership in CAR through her father's ancestry.

"I feel that it is a great honor and I will carry out the duties to the best of my ability", Jane said.

Social Science Group To Give Tea May 13

Pi Gamma Mu, national social science honorary society, will sponsor a tea at 5 p. m. next Wednesday, May 13, in the Student Lounge, according to Ann Gray, chairman.

Freshman and sophomore history and social science majors, faculty and administration have been invited to attend the afternoon affairs.

A receiving line composed of old and new officers of Pi Gamma Mu with several faculty members of the social science department to greet the guests.

Spanish Club Elects Key New President

Spanish Club officers for next year have recently been elected. New president will be junior Spanish major Moneda Key. Fay Greenland, will act as vice-president, and secretary is Rebecca Baird. Elected treasurer was Margie Smallwood, and chosen reporter was Helen Warriner.

Moneda, of Roanoke, is a member of the Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma sorority. She has been active in the Spanish Club activities for the past several years.

Social Notes

by Carolyn Stanley

"May Magic" was the luscious theme for Longwood's May Day dance last weekend and the gym was transformed into a garden of paradise for those who celebrated with the queen and her court. Everyone seemed to enjoy the music of the Mellotones and the weekend was full of visitors from home that came to join in the fun. Congratulations to all those who helped make our May Day such a huge success.

Engaged:

Charlotte Fitts has received a diamond ring from Tom Stewart who attends Hampden - Sydney College. Here's wishing you both much happiness!

Pinned:

Many congrats to Pollyanna Martin who is now sporting a Chi Phi pin of Charlie Stowe's!

Apple Blossom:

Several Longwood girls were on hand in Winchester this week for the Apple Blossom Festivities. While there they saw Kathryn Eisenhower, Queen Shenadoah XXVI; Artnur Godfrey, (the Virginia Gentleman), Bob Waylen RCA Recording Artist—and everybody's friend Hopalong Cassidy!! Other celebrities included Betty Abbitt, the Longwood princess whom we can be very proud of and then there was B-Beth Cheatham, Peggy Worthington, Dot Vaden, Bobbie Southern, Betty Jo Jennings, Shirley Lewis, Nancy Brown, Joyce Pomeroy, Sarah Leatherman, Betty Davis, Lucy Page Hall and yours truly!

William and Mary:

Mary Ellen Booth attended the spring dances and May Day festivities at William and Mary this past weekend.

Can't wait till the next issue—what with all those people who'll be traveling up to Blacksburg for Tech Ring Dances—There's bound to be lot's of news! See you then.

Sr. Class To Give Farewell Program

The class of June 1953 will present the traditional senior assembly program at 1 p. m., Tuesday, May 19.

Polly Brothers, president of the class has announced the program for the assembly, which will be highlighted by the songs and speeches of the seniors and the ceremony in which juniors officially become seniors.

The senior procession into assembly to the strains of the "Alma Mater" will be preceded by the junior's marching into the color song, "Red and White."

Opening the program, a guest minister will give a challenge to the seniors. The class president will then give the farewell of the seniors. Else Wente, junior class president, president of the Athletic Association will present the color cup to this year's winning color class.

Announcement of the junior class's honorary big sister will be made by the junior class president.

The song program of the seniors will include traditional senior, class, and farewell songs, plus the favorites from various class productions over the past few years.

At the conclusion of the program, the seniors will march out and form an arch with their caps. The junior class, clad in white will march out for the first time to the "Alma Mater", thus officially becoming seniors.

Club To Sell Spanish Book

Bound in bright red and yellow, an original cookbook has been put on sale by the Longwood Spanish Club.

The small book is a compilation of American recipes contributed by members of the Spanish Club and translated into Spanish by the students. Both English and Spanish versions are presented in the book.

Elizabeth Gillikin and Peggy Worthington have acted as chairman of this project which was begun last year. Miss Emily Barksdale, professor of Spanish was adviser and editor got the cookbook. Patay Abernathy did the art work.

The 25 recipes range from rice pudding to fried chicken. There are several Spanish recipes among them. One was contributed by Olga Rodriguez, from Puerto Rico who was a student here last year. A concoction of chicken and rice, it is called Arroz Con Pollo.

Price of the cookbook, which is available from any member of the Spanish Club is $1.

"Skee" added that the Spanish club wished to express its appreciation to Mr. Landrum, and Mr. Myers in the business department and Miss Virginia Wall for their help in mimeographing the book.

Modern Dance Group Bids New Members, Gives Spencer Honor

Nine students have received bids to Orchesis, the modern dance group on campus, according to Anne Murphy, president.

Those receiving bids are Joan DeAlba, Carolyn Grey, Trianne Lampkin, Eleanor Long, and Mary Hundley. Barbara Southern, Lucy Thwing, Sue Upson, and Mary Ann Wright have also received bids to the group.

Karen Spencer has been issued a bid to become an honorary member of the group for her outstanding work as accompanist to the organization.

Initiation for those girls who have appeared in at least two performances of Orchesis will be held next Monday. These two appearances are a prerequisite for initiation.

Infirmary Brings Thrills, Chills, Pills, Combined In Unit To Cure Your Ills

by Martha Donaldson

(This is dedicated to all those poor souls who are now "in"—Hope you feel better soon. Ed. note.)

"Hey, how long have you been in?"

Two hours—just a test."

"Oh."

"How's chances of getting out of here?"

"Pretty slim I reckon."

This is just the typical chit-chat that goes on everyday in that innersanctum of all sanctums—the infirmary.

That is the only place on earth that looks like the Palladium on Saturday night on Monday morning. The crowds are terrific. There are the "lost weekenders," the week end casualities, the people with classitis and, last, but not least, the sick ones. They are a pretty sad looking crew in their pajamas, with hair rolled up and no color in their faces but the bags under their bloodshot eyes.

Early in the morning people do strange things like going to the infirmary—they don't quite realize what they are doing. It is like joining the WACS, it sounds like a good way out, but once you are in, you're in for good. Well, you'll find out soon enough.

That morning sleeping is so heavenly, but you know, around noon you get pretty hungry. And the most colorful lunches are served! Just look at those trays—a pink pill, a green pill, a black and yellow capsule and something with legs. (You won't want to know what.)

After lunch, you'll decide you want to get out of there so let's see how you can do it. The windows are barred so that is out, and that German Police dog at the door looks vicious, so you'd better try natural means.

When the doctor (you-know-who) comes around, act well. But, that doesn't usually work because the better you feel, the longer you stay. (A new scientific method.)

If you know before hand that you are going to the infirmary, you had better work up a little smuggling deal. Secure a reliable soul, who doesn't have shifty eyes or a suspicious manner and has a good line for the nurse. You'll find this link with the outer world your most prized possession.

During the afternoon you'll have a jolly time. If you are sick you just lie there and suffer because the infirmary has found through intensive surveys that medicine is impractical. If you are feeling fine, you trip along to the lovely little smoker. Oh, the infirmary really advocates this procedure!

Dinner is served and it could be shot in through a bean shooter because it is "you-know-whats" again including the one with legs. (That little rascal always gets in the act.)

Let's survey your day. You haven't had any solid food, you missed some good sun bathing and a lot of fun, but wasn't the infirmary just too, to exciting? Oh well, if you must still go after what I've said may your stay there be as gay as your way there and don't forget—"I told ya so!"

Records In Registration Reveal Rise In Enrollment For Next College Year With Ten Per Cent Increase Shown

An increase of ten per cent over last year's similar record in registration for the coming college session has been disclosed by Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary for the College. Mrs. Watkins announced the new records and revealed averages for both 1952 and 1953.

In commenting on registration, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president, has said that the expected minimum enrollment is 650 for the 1953-54 session.

The total number dormitory resident applications already accepted for the 1953-54 session is 527 where as compared with the 473 accepted applications at this time last year. At present, there have been 587 applicants for enrollment, including day students; this is an 11 per cent increase over the 520 applicants at this time last year.

To date, 145 high school senior applicants have been accepted for dormitory residence, showing a 14 per cent increase over the 103 at this time last year.

These applications represent 53 Virginia counties, plus three other states, New Jersey, North Carolina, and New York.

Richmond is the leading area with 29 new applicants and the Elizabeth City area is second with 17. Following are Norfolk City and County with 14 freshmen registered. Mecklenburg county with 12 and Roanoke County with 9 are next highest.

Mrs. Watkins commented that the administration is extremely pleased with the high school records of these girls. Their overall records show excellent scholarship and participation in school activities and high aptitude test scores.

Mrs. Watkins added that the administration is well pleased with the rise in application for next year and looking forward to the coming session.

Library Exhibits Show Jewelry, Coronation

Three new exhibits—two of jewelry and the other on the coming coronation in England—are now on display in the college library.

The first two of these exhibits are from Mrs. Lemen s and Miss Bedford's crafts classes, and feature various types of hand-made jewelry.

The jewelry made by students in Mrs. Lemen's class was fashioned from ordinary sterling silver wire and pearls and copper wire and sea washed stone. The pieces on display include earrings, chokers, bracelets, and pins.

In Miss Bedford's class the jewelry was made from polished southwestern stones set. These stones set in silver were fashioned into earrings, pins, and rings of various shape and design.

The third exhibit in the library is called "Coronation Cavalcade" and features pictures, books, magazines and documents with reference to the Coronation on June 2. Some of the pictures on display are of the former rulers of England. The books tell something of the lives of Queen Elizabeth and the royal family and the magazines feature coming events in Great Britain.

Sororities Announce Pan-Hellenic Council Mallory Will Preside

New representatives to the Pan-Hellenic council have been elected by the social sororities on the Longwood campus. These representatives will serve in various offices on the council by rotation, according to the date of entrance of each sorority into the Pan-Hellenic Associations.

Ann Mallory, a member of Delta Sigma Epsilon sorority will serve as president. Patty Derring will represent Sigma Sigma Sigma on the council and will serve as vice president. The representative from Kappa Delta, Pat Altwegg will serve as secretary. Alpha Sigma Alpha will be represented by Libby McClung, who will act as treasurer.

Dot Douglas is the representative from Zeta Tau Alpha. She will step into the position of program chairman. June Branch will represent Pi Kappa Sigma on the council and will serve as publicity chairman. Alpha Sigma Tau will be represented by Pat Donnelly who will be keeper of the records. Theta Sigma Upsilon's representative Paula Dovel will be rush chairman for next year.

It is the duty of these representatives with the presidents of the various sororities to present to the council recommendations for changes which their sororities wish to see made in the policies of the council.

For the second consecutive year, Miss Kathleen Cover, College guidance director was elected to act as adviser to the council.

Lillian Shelton, president of the outgoing Council has announced that the sororities, under supervision of the council, will give $350 toward a new kitchen on second floor Student. Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President of the College has announced that the school will make up the deficit and complete the kitchen.

Four Attend Biology Meet

The Virginia Academy of Science will hold its annual meeting in Lexington, May 7-9. Dr. George W. Jeffers, head of the Longwood biology department, Dr. Robert Brumfield, also of the department, and Ann Mallory and Virginia Berry, junior biology majors will attend the biology section of the meeting. Dr. Brumfield will give two papers at the meeting. They will be "The Curvatures of Timothy Roots Invoked by Ultra-Violet Radiations" and "A Simple Demonstration of the Effect of Heteroauxin on Plant Growth."

Mr. M. Boyd Coyner, of the education psychology departments, will attend the education section of the meeting. Mr. Coyner will present a paper to the group, titled "The Academic Aptitude Testing of the Freshmen at Longwood College."

Students Attend 'Y' Meet at U. Va.

Five representatives of the Longwood Young Women's Christion Association travelled to the University of Virginia last night to attend a Religious Emphasis program.

Making the trip to Charlottesvill were Jean Carol Parker, Margaret Duke, Ann Thaxton, Muriel Boswell, and Patsy Abernathy. The girls were accompanied by Miss Jesse Patterson, 'Y' adviser.

The program, held in connection with the University Religious Emphasis Week, began with a supper in Madison Hall. Dr. Nelson, of Yale University was speaker for the occasion. The address of the evening was followed by a short social hour after which the students returned to Longwood.

This is the second trip that local 'Y' mebmers have made to the University having attended a similar meeting last spring.

Tomlinson, Greenland, Doll, Moore To Lead FTA Group

Billie Tomlinson, a junior elementary major, was elected president of the Future Teachers of America at a meeting held on April 29.

Initiation of 45 new members and election of other officers also took place at this meeting.

Chosen to serve as vice president was Fay Greenland, and the new secretary is Wanda Doll. Treasurer for next year will be Ann Moore and Mary Ann Evans will serve as librarian.

Basis of membership in this education organization is on recommendation of the department heads and a C average scholastic standing.

The 45 education majors, all juniors, who received membership invitations were Jean Pierce, Jean Smith, Isabelle Karnes, Mary Barksdale, Barbara Blackman, Virginia Sutherland, Fay Greenland, Joanne Utley, Frances Marker, Peggy Hood and Betty Islin.

Also, Jean Southern, Dolly Horne, Virginia Berry, Jane Branch, Margie Morris, Rebecca Baird, Mary Jean Carlyle, Elsie Wente, Mary Frances Miller, Wanda Doll and Mary Denny Wilson were initiated.

Betsy Jean Robertson, Billie Tomlinson, Nellie Lucy, Eleanor Koch, Patsy Sanford, Jean Hodges, Betty Southall, Elizabeth Kitts, and Mary Ann King are new members of F. T. A. Concluding the list are Ann Mallory, Marion Parish, Jean Baber, Lucille Mann, Ann Moore, Shirley Roby, Sylvia West, Patty Deering, Lois Crutchfield, Bobbie Assaid, Gail Dixon, Mary Ann Evans, Ruby Snyder and Ann Edmonds.

Six Faculty Members To Leave LC Campus For Study, New Posts

Four Will Return To College At End Of Study Period

Several Longwood professors will go on leaves of absence to do graduate work or take positions in other colleges next year. So far, six professors have announced that they will not return to the Longwood campus next fall. Further changes in this list will be announced at commencement exercises, by the administration.

Mr. Joel Ebersole plans to complete the work necessary to receive his Doctor of Music at Indiana University. Mr. Ebersole is to study voice and performance. The music school at Indiana University has expanded to become one of the largest state supported music schools in the country. Mr. Ebersole plans to return to Longwood in the fall of '54.

Miss Janice A. Lemen, has received a similar leave of absence to study art at either New York University or Columbia University. She will receive her professional certificate upon completion of her work. This certificate is granted for six years of work in art. Miss Lemen will study painting, the history of art, and art education.

Miss Lemen has taught here for 9 years. She has exhibited professionally since 1947.

Mr. Clarence R. Warrington plans to return to Ithica College, Ithica, New York to complete work necessary for his Master of Music. He plans to major in organ and minor in piano while at Ithica. He will complete his work in June, 1954 and hopes to return to Longnwood in the fall.

Also Miss Elizabeth Burger has been granted a years leave of absence. She will do graduate work in the field of natural science at Columbia University.

Professors not returning to Longwood are Dr. Jack Burke and Dr. Wesley Laing. Both plan to teach at the Richmond College of the University of Rich-mond. Dr. Burke will continue to teach biology and to do research work. Dr. Laing will teach freshman and advanced courses in history. Both Dr. Burke and Dr. Laing said that they enjoyed their stay at Longwood.

Dr. Simonini To Do Study In Italy In '54

Professor Receives Fulbright Fellowship

A Fulbright Fellowship which will take him as a research scholar and lecturer to the University of Florence, Italy, next year, has been awarded Dr. R. C. Simonini, head of the Longwood English department.

Dr. Simonini is one of four scholars from all over the United States chosen to receive the Fulbright award for study in Italy. The announcement of the grant has just been made through the United States Department of State.

The Fulbright Fellowship is part of the government's educational exchange program which seeks to further good will and understanding among nations. American scholars are selected by the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils, a non-governmental organization, for their professional and personal qualifications as representatives of American scholarship abroad. Applicants are screened by the Conference board and then must be approved by the Department of State.

Dr. and Mrs. Simonini, Dionne and Charles, will leave on this, their first trip abroad, about the middle of next October to make their headquarters in Florence. Dr. Simonini's research study which concerns the teaching of the English language and literature in Italian Universities will take him over much of Italy and the Simoninis expect to visit many

Miss Carter To Retire From Faculty After Teaching 33 Years In Farmville

by Ann Thomas

Through her 37 years at Farmville, four as a student and 33 as a teacher, Miss Alice Elizabeth Carter, associate professor of education at Longwood can truly say that "times have changed" as she relates the stories of her student and teaching experiences.

Miss Carter, whose retirement from teaching becomes effective in June came to Farmville first to attend the State Female Normal School for her last two years of high school and two years of professional training.

After receiving her diploma Miss Carter started teaching in a two room school in Augusta County, near her hometown of Warrenton.

After teaching in Lexington for five years, Miss Carter became a teacher and supervisor in the Farmville Elementary School. During this time she received her B. S. and M. A. degrees from Columbia University and went on for more graduate work at Ohio State.

Miss Carter, in reminiscing about her students days, said, "When I was here, the girls weren't allowed to go anywhere to get something to eat except to the home of an old colored woman whom we called Aunt Harriet and who made ice cream every Friday afternoon.

One other event of her college career was particularly important to both Miss Carter and to the present student body, for it was her senior class which formally established the student government association.

Remembering the years spent in teaching she commented, "I believe that of all the grades I've taught — and I've taught from third grade through the fourth year of college—I prefer the fifth grade. Children that age are eager to learn and I particularly enjoy working with them."

Now that the years of teaching and living in Farmville are nearly over, Miss Carter looked back over the years and commented that the girls in the College had changed very little. "Of course

President To Confer Degrees On Seniors of '53 At Exercises In Jarman Auditorium May 31

From an outgoing senior to an incoming junior—Ann Jones, class of '53 leaves Barbara Blackmon, class of '54, a chance to try on an academic cap as time draws near for gradution and the end of junior days.

Srs. Say Farewell To Student Body

Tears mingled with laughter at the long-awaited senior assembly held in Jarman Hall at 1:00 p. m. on Tuesday, May 19.

Senior Betsy Hankins of Richmond was chosen by the juniors as their honorary classmate. Betsy acknowledged the honor, then sent the audience into reminiscent chuckles by showing a film taken of the classe's circus stunt as freshmen, a take-off on old-fashioned melodramas.

Addressing the group in a more serious vein, Mr. Wesley Laing, history professor, congratulated the seniors on their past record, and cautioned them as to what was expected of them in the future.

Aspeech wa smade by Polly Brothers, senior from Suffolk, who presided over the assembly.

Drawing the assembly to a sentimental close, the seniors facing the audience, sang a group of songs, some reminiscent of events of past college years, and others dedicated to the remaining classes.

As the juniors marched from the auditorium, they filed through lines of seniors, who formed the traditional arch with their academic caps, indicating the junior's new status as the senior class of 1954.

Assaid Gives Studts. House Council Rules Drawn Up For Exams

Barbara Assaid, president of the house council has announced the house regulations concerning the exam period and brought them to the attention of the student body.

1. Silence begins Sunday, May 24 at 6 p. m. One call down given during the exam week will result in one week campus which goes into effect immediately upon receipt.

2. Unlimited lights go into effect on Sunday night.

3. This week freshmen and sophomores may keep their lights on until midnight for study purposes only.

Tanner Wins Study Grant

A Fulbright scholarship has been awarded to Helen Tanner of Richmond, a senior, to enable her to study the French language, literature, and civilization at the University of Lyon in Lyon, France for one year.

The scholarship will also allow Helen to spend the month of October in Paris, before going to the University of Lyon.

Helen, a French major, received one of 240 grants for study in France under the Fulbright Act which established the United States Educational Exchange Program. Only two of these are granted in Virginia each year. Last year, Maria Jackson, a French major at Longwood, won an identical scholarship.

The program is designed to promote a better understanding between the people of the United States in other countries and to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries.

Helen is the essay editor of the Colonnade; president of Kappa Delta, social sorority; a member of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education; Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary collegiate leadership fraternity; and the Richmond, French, and Spanish Clubs.

"Winning the scholarship is the most exciting thing tnat ever happened to me," said Helen. "I can hardly wait 'til Fall."

Students Must Apply For Additional Hours

Students who may wish to take more than 17 class hours next semester must apply now in order to have classes added to their schedule.

Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary, has requested that al students interested in the fill out blanks now which are available in her office. These blanks must be returned before May 29, 1953.

The adding of classes to a student's schedule will be done after this semester's scholastic averages are computed.

LC President Gives Change In Cut Rules

New System Applies To Juniors, Seniors

A change allowing juniors and seniors meeting certain requirements to have unlimited class absences, has been made in Longwood's class cut regulations.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college, made the announcement in the regular assembly last Tuesday.

The new ruling, which goes into effect next fall, states that students having no unexcused absences and maintaining a C average during the two previous years will be allowed to take absences from class at their own discretion, when they are needed.

In commenting on the change Dr. Lancaster has stated that he hopes this move to be the first toward giving students full responsibility for taking class absences. It is the desire of the administration that the student body will assume the responsibilities as well as privileges of the rule. Dr. Lancaster stated that students who now have unlimited cuts through Dean's List take fewer absences than others in the student body and he feels that this will hold true with others given the privilege.

The new rule will grant those sophomores and juniors now in the student body who have the requirements above to have unlimited cuts next year for present sophomores who may have clear records this year but an unexcused in their freshman year will be given the privilege for two years, as juniors and seniors; if a freshman has an unexcused this year but maintains a clear record while a sophomore and junior they will be given unlimited cuts when seniors. In other words, for the present student body, the rule is on the basis of having a clear record for two years preceding the coming season when a student will be a junior or senior.

The administration has added that should a student abuse this new privilege, the case would be handled individually by the administration. The faculty has been asked to enforce the rule that no retests be given or class work missed be made up during a later class period, since these practices are unfair to other students. It is felt that these two rules are not enforced, it will soon cause the break down of the new regulation.

Freshman and sophomore Dean's List students will still receive unlimited cuts according to scholastic average.

Annual Reception, Lantern Parade Set For May 30

The schedule for the 1953 commencement week-end has been announced by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College.

At the graduation exercises Dr. Lancaster will confer thirty-seven bachelor of science degrees in elementary education, six in music education, ten in home economics education, seven in business education, and seven bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees in liberal arts. Mr. Thomas Boushall is the chief speaker for the occasion and will give the main address.

Senior Class Day exercises will open the graduation agenda in Jarman Auditorium at 4 p. m. on Saturday, May 30. Immediately following the exercises, the seniors will perform the traditional daisy chain ceremony in front of the rotunda, forming the numerals 1953.

A reception for the seniors, their relatives and friends will be given by President and Mrs. Lancaster at 8:30 p. m. At 10:30 the little sisters, holding lanterns, will assemble in front of the Student Building and serenade the seniors as they parade across the campus to the rotunda for the Lantern Parade.

Baccalaureate service will be held at 11 a. m., on Sunday, May 31, with an invocation given by the Reverend Mr. James Kennedy of the Farmville Presbyterian Church. Dr. A. H. Hollingsworth, minister of the second Presbyterian Church of Roanoke will deliver the sermon.

Commencement exercises will begin at 3:30 p. m., Sunday in order that a greater number of parents and friends may attend. An academic procession will be formed by the faculty and seniors, who will then march to Jarman Auditorium, where they will hear an invocation by the Reverend Mr. Otis Kidd of the Farmville Methodist Curch. Following the main address by Mr. Thomas Boushall, president of the Bank of Virginia in Richmond, Dr. Lancaster will award degrees to the ninety-six seniors, and announce the names of honor graduates.

Names of ninety-six candidates for graduation at the sixty-ninth commencement exercises of Longwood College have been announced by Miss Virgillia Bugg, college registrar. The seniors will receive their diplomas on Saturday, May 30, at exercises to be held in Jarman Auditorium.

Degrees will be conferred and names of honor graduates will be announced by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college.

Those receiving bachelor of science degrees in elementary education will be Frances Andrews, Gwendolyn Bain, Barbara Booker, Julia Brown, Nancy Calohan, Sarah Conley, Barbara Cotton, Matilda Creasy, Helen Crowgey, Nancy Driskall, Frances Evans and Joyce Gatling.

Dedication

Dedicated to the Senior Class of 1953!

Soon, the familiar and dignified "Pomp and Circumstance," will take on a new and clearer meaning as you the seniors are guided down the asle by its strains to receive that well deserved diploma.

Then, the excitement of graduation, this eagerly awaited day, will cease, leaving only memories.

No longer will the halls of Longwood College ring with the laughter that only you can give them and an atmosphere of silence will prevail.

Each of you will be saying good-bye to many of your college friends whom you have been close to for so long. You will depart in all directions upon a new found career and a new life.

The realization will strike many of you that the last chapter, so to speak, of a book has been completed and that the book will soon be placed away on the shelf to collect dust.

Yes, soon the halls will be silent but silent only in a material way, for our minds will never be silent of memories of you. For us, that last chapter will never be completed and the book will never be placed upon the shelf, for we will always welcome back this class of 1953.

The expression that this, however, is not an ending but a beginning, is an old familiar phrase but it stands ever new in our thoughts for you.

We, the student body, do not wish to say goodbye, but simply "be seeing you—soon!"

Of Honor

"A high sense of honor, in all of her relationships and activities, should be one of a person's most cherished possessions."

With the approaching examinations it might be well for each of us to stop and think about this thing we call 'honor.' One authority says that honor means high public esteem. While we are still in college, we consider being held in high esteem among our classmates; when we leave college, we may consider high esteem among our business and social associates.

Each one of us will have a very definite opportunity next week to prove her honor. We may not prove it to the girl in the classroom with us or to the girl next door, but we can gain personal satisfaction by knowing that we have a cherished possession that will carry us through life with respect for ourselves and with the respect of others.

Long experience has proved that the highest degree the college can give is not enscrolled on paper but is writtn upon the souls of its graduates.

As we approach the examination period, it might be well for us to read the pledge we took when we first entered Longwood College: I . . . . . , having a clear understanding of the basis and spirit of the Honor Code created and accepted by the Student Body of Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia, pledge myself to govern my college life according to its standards and to accept my responisibility for helping others to do so, and with sensitive regard for my college to live by the Honor Code at all times and to see that others do likewise.

Lucy Page Hall

It's A Challenge

"Golly, just think—unlimited cuts when I'm a junior and senior." These have been the words on the lips of many a Longwoodite during the past week. For those in the student body who have or will maintain a two year record clear of unexcused class absences, that is exactly what lies ahead. And we want to say to the administration a grateful thank you.

Thank you for giving us this challenge to be sufficiently adult to take on a new privilege and the responsibilities which accompany it. In some other college a situation of 1,074 unexcused class cuts—and surely we must be ashamed of that record—might be met with a tightening of regulations that would actually amount to a punishment. Through the new system of regulating cuts at our own descretion we have the opportunity to use mature judgment and make our classes ever more worthwhile. This should be the first step toward fulfilling the hope of the administration and the student body—that we may eventually be given the full responsibility for class absences.

It has been shown that the Dean's list students who already have unlimited cuts actually take a minimum of absences. We believe that this will hold true for all students granted the new privilege because it is a challenge to be given more freedom and with it maintain our high standards. If one student abuses the privilage it is grossly unfair to her classmates and shows her own lack of good judgment. Most students at Longwood agree that this a real improvement in absence regulations.

It is an opportunity for us that perhaps is granted to few other college students. We can only show our appreciation of it by the manner in which we meet it. We like the new regulation—then lets apply it in the true Longwood spirit of cooperation and constructive action.

Thank You

If you, the administration, could hear the wonderful praises and comments of students for the manner in which registration was carried out last week, you would, indeed be proud of this worth while improvement!

The science building offered more space to move around. This was the first and main improvement! Students were enabled by this space to talk over and discuss problems individually with each faculty member.

The time element was the next correction over mid-term's registration plan. No one had to stand in line for any great length of time to receive final approval of schedules. With upper-classmen registering first followed by freshmen, the plan facilitated unlimited ease in signing up for next year's classes. Organization and careful planning was definitely shown.

We the student body, in every way, want to thank you for a very much improved registration plan!

Letters to Editor

Editors Note — This letter, a copy of one appearing in this weeks Tiger, was sent to the editor of the Rotunda and in the accompanying note it was requested that we also publish it.

Dear Sir:

I love Longwood! Of course, my admiration and devotion for my "sister" school has grown immeasurably since my freshman year, enhanced by the improving relations and liberal rules where Hampden - Sydney students are concerned. We of this school have always been made welcome in "good old Longwood."

In fact, this past Friday night a group of us were reminded again of the ever growing "good" relations between the two schools.

Completely devoid of any save friendly and sincere ambitions to entertain, six or seven of us trooped to Longwood to serenade the ladies in a manner used for thousands of years—with song and instrument. I was naturally pleased at the obvious popularity of our adventure, witnessed by the rapidly growing crowd (including the night watchman and three uniformed cops standing immediately behind us.)

But, true to form, as soon as a request or two came forth and we began playing in earnest, the crowd disappeared and we were firmly invited to leave. Undaunted and spurred on by shouted words of encouragement from the windows, we tried to continue from the street and were chased away twice more without a word of explanation, once even by a shout (without so much as a thank you) from a "lady."

Isn't it obvious why I "love" Longwood.

News In a Nutshell

by Anne Shuff

Perhaps the most exciting event in the current news is the release of the Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis. For two years he had been held a prisoner in the grey Pankrac Prison in Czechoslvakia. He had been accused and convicted of espionage and was serving the first of the imposed 10 year sentence. The Czechs considered Oatis to be dangerous because he insisted on accurate news reports.

Oatis reported no harsh or severe treatment, contrary to many beliefs. However, he admitted that psychology was used. He was cut off completely from the news of the outside world and was surprised to hear of the death of Stalin. He reported that Stalin's picture was still on his cell wall.

When arrested Mr. Oatis had been in Prague only eight months. His bride of three months, Laurabelle, wrote frequently to him during the two years, but in turn received only six letters. These were never very personal, but were chiefly news and were very cheerful.

Mrs. Oatis made several attempts to free her husband. This included seven trips to New York City and Washington where she pleaded with the State Department, but was unable to gain much headway. The U. S. was able to keep in contact with Oatis through a visit by the U. S. Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs in 1952.

Finally, on November 18, 1952, Mrs. Oatis appealed to Klement Gottwald, the Czech president, through the Czech Embassy. She explained that she and Mr. Oatis were married because they wished to live the rest of their lives together.

On May 17, Oatis was set free by the Czechs and he returned to the Western Zone of Germany escorted by the U. S. Embassy officials. According to the Czech radio, his release was obtained through his wife's letter.

As a result of Mr. Oatis' arrest and imprisonment, the U. S. took steps to retaliate. An embargo was placed on all exports from this country to Czechoslovakia and with the exception of those on official business, Americans were denied the right to travel in Czechoslovakia.

Farewell To Thee---

Our Lovable Leading Ladies Leave To Us Their Leftovers

By Martha Donaldson

The Senior Class of 1953 of Longwood College being of sound mind (this is questionable) does hereby bequeath all its wordly goods to the following luckiest ones:

Steck and her boys do hereby will their charming songs and manner to the third floor "boys" who will appear IN PERSON up at the Jarman Hall "Audetorum" at the big blowouts next year. Margie Sutphin leaves the fun of locking the dinning room doors in the faces of the hungry mobs to Ellen Porter. (That is what makes us keep our girlish figures). Jose and Caskey leave all their bills, notes and mortgages to that great financier and capitalistic tycoon, Hilda (J. P. Morgan) Brown.

Murphy and Hankins decided to leave their talents to all the people who need them but that does not include Murphy's car. Speaking of cars, the seniors leave Charlie Hop's car to whom ever can find it vacant.

Crowder and Termite leave their jolly "Yo" to Snyder in hopes that she will have better results getting change for the "Snack" than they did. Castros leaves her arch supports to Bobbie who can use them on the nightly prowls to give call downs.

The seniors will their ability to win races to the "red n' whites" who with that ability, will ensure more "green and white" col:r-cups—(this was a dirty-dirty dig-forgive us.)

The seniors leave Charlie Hop to the freshman class of next year whom they know will love him as dearly as they do. They leave their ennumerical privileges to next year's seniors, who must be overjoyed at the very thought of it. Don't let it overwhelm you, gals!

The "invenshunns" will go to the vons who invented everyting!

Last but not least, the seniors leave their good times, their mirth, their fun, and their best wishes to all the underclassmen who "shall remain after they have gone beyond the sunset."

Social Notes

by Carolyn Stanley

Good evening ladies—just think, only two more weeks and then we can all go out and "live it up" just socializing for the next three months ! ! !

Flash Bulletin ! ! The pins are flying! !

Pinned:

Mary Elva Robinson received Phi Kappa Sigma pin from Ed Cox of Randolph-Macon College.

Nancy Stark now wears a Kappa Psi pin of Roland Garrett's and Jean Coghill is pinned to a Kappa Psi, James Patterson. Both fellas are from Medical College in Richmond.

Many congratulations, gals ! !

Davidson:

The Beta Fraternity at Davidson College entertained at a "Bowery Ball" last weekend—and even some Longwood girls were there for the occasion (ill cognito of course). Nat Lancaster (Davidson's No. 1 Booster) was there and Jane Blake (who raked the Longwood Players costume box so she could go). Dienise Montaigne (who added the French touch by a song) and Barbara Southern (with a red skirt that would blind you!) Everybody seems to have had a great time!

Hampden-Sydney:

Our friends, the Sigma Chi's, out Hampden-Sydney way entertained Saturday night with a little party. Among the Longwood girls that attended were Peggy Ilyus, Joyce Welsh, Dot Douglas, Boop Islin, Betty Benton, Diane Burgess, Bobbie Clark, Molly Harvey, Lois Ann Childress, Margaret Dryden, Flip Blake, Betty Shackleford, Louise Turner, and Dale Brothers.

Walter Ward from Suffolk came to see Joyce Gatling again. This is big news—he's only been coming for four years now.

Sylvia Reames, Margaret Dryden, Stephanie Bauider, Mary Campbell, Katherine Miller, Anne Watkins, Ruthie Van Houten, Bonnie Moore, Shirley Roberts and Martha Donaldson with bathing suits in hand, journeyed down to Virginia Beach with the PiKa's to attend Scott Taylor's house-party. We hear the water was terrific and so were the sunburns!

Ring dances at VPI were a big success — particularly for Ann Moore, who received a miniature from Tommy Blackstock and Bev Taylor who got one from Perry Newcomb.

Dot Armstrong, Joyce Welsh, Rose Frost and Lois Childers were also in Blacksburg for the big "doings."

Visiting:

Challice Haydon visited Bill at Tech this week end and Garland Webster journeyed to Lexington to spend the week end at VMI.

Alumnae Assoc. Purchases Watercolor Sketch Painted By Former LSU Art Head

The Longwood Alumnae Association has recently purchased a watercolor sketch of the rotunda painted by Earl Looney, former head of the art department at Louisiana State University. Mr. Looney travels about the country and on requests paints homes and colleges.

The painting is considered an excellent and accurate picture of the rotunda. It took Mr. Looney approximately five hours to complete the work.

The Alumnae Association bought the painting as a service to the college and is planning to frame it. The association is now investigating the possibility of having postal cards made of the sketch to sell to students.

The Alumnae Executive Board held their annual meeting at Longwood College on the first Friday and Saturday in May with the following members present: Dr. Dabney L. Lancaster, Miss Frances Horton, the new president, of Roanoke, Virginia; Mrs. Jessie Brett Kennedy, first vice-president, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Mary Lou Campbell Graham, second vice-president, of Wytheville, Va.; Mrs. Myrtle Dunton Curtis of Richmond and Mrs. Jane Royall Phlegar of Norfolk, directors; Miss Nancy Clay Hiner and Miss Carrie Sutherlin, Farmville directors, and Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, secretary. Preceding the 8 p. m. meeting in Dr. Lancaster's office, the board enjoyed a dinner in the Snack Bar. Miss Ruth Gleaves and Mrs. Lancaster were dinner guests.

Dr. Gordon Moss, Dr. Jack Burke, Dr. Charles Lane, Mr. Malcolm Graham, Dr. Renaldo Simonini, Dr. Robert Brumfield, and Mr. Jack Ebersole will participate on the faculty team.

Members of the faculty, administration, and student body are cordially invited to attend the game.

Students To Sign As "Y" Big Sisters

Next year's little sister list has been posted on the "Y" bulletin board, Lu Beavers, president of the organization, has announced.

Patsy Abernathy, chairman of the membership committee, urges everyone to sign up for a little sister, as the freshman class of 1953-54 will be a large one and many big sisters are needed. It wil mean a great deal to each new student to have someone who is responsible for her welfare.

"Contagious Christianity" was chosen as the theme for the year at the "Y" set-up conference held on Thursday, May 14. Old members conferred with new members concerning plans for the coming year.

At this conference, three student workers connected with the local churches were asked to act as advisers to the "Y" group. Miss Lucile Peak, Baptist student worker will again serve in this position. Miss Kay Arrowwood of the Presbyterian student movement and Miss Melinda Ayers, Methodist director will also serve with the group.

Librarian Completes Bibliography Listing Writings of Faculty

Forty-six members of the present Longwood faculty and Farmville high school and elementary supervisors have written and published articles and books.

A faculty bibliography including these works has been compiled by Martha Holman Jenkins, Instructor in Library Science at Longwood and is now in the process of being mimeographed by the college library staff.

The committee for the faculty bibliography consist of Dr. Beverly Ruffin, professor of library science, Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology and Dr. R. C. Simonini, professor of English. The official title for the bibliography is "Faculty Publications".

The subjects of the articles and books written by the faculty members cover subjects in the fields of science, biology, music, physical eduaction, business education, history, home economics, geography, education, English and library work.

LONGWOOD JEWELERS

Longwood Seal Jewelry

From the Bleachers

by Louise Wilder

As the end of the year draws near, everyone begins to think of the things that have happened at Longwood during the year. As we look back over this year of sports we remember the fun we've had, the wins and losses, and experience we've gained.

The Athletic Association began the year by giving a demonstration of activities to acquaint students with the sports program. The demonstration included dancing, volleyball, swimming, tennis, hockey and archery.

The varsity hockey team was chosen and started it's season off with a 5-0 win over Roanoke College. The team tied with Madison in a home game, and traveled to the State Hockey Tournament at Madison to top R.P.I. 2-0 and tie Westhampton 1-1.

The varsity basketball team was announced in February. The team defeated Roanoke College 56-48. Westhampton topped the Longwood girls 39-27 in one game but lost 26 to 30 in the second. Bridgewater defeated Longwood 35 to 38 and Longwood topped Madison 61-43. The freshmen topped Windsor High School 35-29.

The tennis team participated in matches with Madison and William & Mary with wins in the doubles and one in the single match against Madison and no wins against William & Mary.

Granddaughter's Club Chooses Davis Head For 1953-54 Session

Clare Davis of Lynchburg was recently elected president of the Granddaughter's Club for the 1953-54 session.

Eloise Macon will serve as vice-president with Alice Calloway and Georgia Jackson acting secretary-treasurer and reporter, respectively. Sue Garber, Dale Brothers, and Nancy Saunders will serve on the social committee.

The purpose of the organization is to bring together all present students, wha are daughters or granddaughters of former students.

Drama Group Elects Porter As President

Ellen Porter of Deep Creek was recently elected president of the Longwood Players for next year.

Other officers of the organization are Nancy Nelson, vice-president; Virginia Sutherland, secretary; and Gaynelle Edwards, treasurer.

Ellen, who has been active in many dramatic activities, is vice president of the Association of Childhood Education; a member of Cotillion Club; and was cast in "Light up the Sky" and "Death Takes a Holiday".

Crutchfield To Head ACE For '53-'54 Term

The Association of Childhood Education recently elected Lois Crutchfield to its presidency. Ellen Porter will serve as vice president, while Betsy Jean Robinson will act as secretary. Virginia Sutherland will be treasurer next year.

Miss Kate Trent, supervisor of the first grade at the training school, will sponsor the group next year. She will replace Miss Alice E. Carter, professor of education, who is retiring.

Orchesis made plans for its recital called "Mocking Bird" and went to the Arts Forum at the Women's Division of the University of North Carolina in March. New apprentices were chosen for orchesis later in the year.

The Monogram Club began the year by giving thirteen bids and have just recently chosen new officers.

Color Rush was held with the red and whites winning four buildings. The green and whites won one.

The H20 Club gave the annual Christmas water show and also chose new officers.

May Day committee was chosen and the freshmen classes began practicing their dances for participation in the May Day exercise which had the theme "Ballad Tree".

Eighteen girls passed the Red Cross Life Saving Test and five physical education majors received their basketbal lofficial ratings.

The AA had a cabin party for the new and old members.

Miss Iler and Miss Brockenbrough went with some of the girls to a convention of the Virginia Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation at Old Point Comfort.

The intra-color swimming meet was held, and some of the girls represented Longwood at a play day at Mary Baldwin in April.

Sue Webb won a scholarship to the University of Tennessee, and Miss Burger is taking a leave of absence to play goalie on the national hockey team.

Now to move on to more recent events. Betty Tyler won the pingpong tournament. Members of the men faculty played the mens' student body Monday afternoon. I hear they had quite a game.

A red and white team played a green and white softball team last week. The red and whites won 4-3.

Nine girls, Miss Olive Iler and Miss Rebecca Brockenborough will attend a hockey camp in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania September 1-8. Those students making the trip are Elsie Wente, Anne Snyder, Helen Waltman, Carolyn Gray, Eleanor Koch, Jane Lohr, Mary Davis, Illia Des Portes and Louise Wilder.

President of the College, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster has granted the English professor a leave of absence for next year and Dr. Simonini will return to Longwood during the summer of 1954.

Green and Whites Receive Color Cup

The green and whites have won the 1952-53 Color Cup by an overwhelming margin, with points at the latest count 40 to 20.

Class hockey games gave the green and whites 10 points. The seniors beat the freshmen and tied the juniors, and the sophomores topped the freshmen 2-0.

Before class basketball and volleyball games began, the green and whites were leading 18-12.

Green and whites won class basketball and volleyball, archery, and tennis singles. The red and whites received 10 points by winning the tennis doubles.

The Color Cup was presented to the green and whites by Else Wente, president of the Athletic Association.

Miss Carter is planning to return to her family home in Warrenton where she will live with her brother and two nephews now at school, and as she says, "keep house" and work in her flower gardens.

Asked if she had any final advice to the future teachers now preparing at Longwood, Miss Carter smiled and said, "No, all that has been given in my classes."

But in closing she added that even though she is leaving friends and the well-loved teaching profession, "a part of my heart will always remain right here in Farmville."

Longwood College Purchases Paintings 'Chesapeake' by Jack Whitney Clifton As Newest Addition to Art Collection

A scene of surf and shore typical of the tidewater area of Virginia is the subject of the latest addition to Longwood College's collection of oil paintings.

"Chesapeake" an original painting done by a native Virginian, Jack W. Clifton, born and bred in the tidewater section, is the third painting in a permanent collection started in 1951.

This year's selection was chosen by the college committee headed by Mrs. Janice Lemen of the art department from a recent exhibit at the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, D. C. The Clifton painting was one of the works of 42 artists, chosen from among 890 to take patr in the exhibit. It has been on exhibit in the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and was recommended for sale by the Museum. Another Clifton painting "My Eyes" has been purchased by the Virginia Museum for its permanent exhibition.

Mr. Clifton has exhibited paintings at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, Norfolk Museum, Corcoran Gallery, and in Peninsula Artist Exhibitions. In 1948 and again in 1952, paintings done by this Virginia artist were chosen for the Norfolk Museums permanent collection.

Last years selection by the college, which is now in the Virginian room, is an oil portrait, "Kathy With Pearls" by Greta Mattson.

The first painiting in the collection is on display in the rotunda, called "It Started Early In the Morning."

The college committee is composed of Miss Bedford, Dr. C. L. S. Earley, and Miss Ruth Gleaves.

Starting his career as a cartoon artist, Jack Clifton has progressed to his own art studio and school, a modernistic structure overlooking Hampton Roads in Hampton. Having been born in Norfolk and lived most of his life in Newport News—and with a Navy hitch of six wartime years, Mr. Clifton has a long background for seascapes such as "Cneasapeake".

The Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia can be called the artists alma mater for after attending the 1933 session, he received a return scholarship each year through 1938, going abroad to study in 1937. After having his own studio in Philadelphia for two years, the Navy claimed him and the next six years were spent as an official Navy artist doing everything from posters to the portraits of topflight Admirals McClure, Leary, Le Breton. As Mr. Clifton put it the day the bomb dropped, he applied for a discharge. Soon after, he was married and both he and Mrs. Clifton taught at Davis-Elkins College, Elkins, W. Va.

Bachelor of arts degrees will be conferred upon Barbara Caskey, Betty Collier, Jackie Lackey, and Madison McClintic, while Robert Bradshaw, Mary Hurt Peery, Mary Meade Robertson, and Leonard Shaw will receive bachelor of science degrees.

Dance Group Elects Heads

Officers for Orchesis for the coming year are Barbara Blackman, president; Shirley Roby, secretary-treasurer; Moneda Key, costume chairman, and Lib Boswell, historian, announced Anne Murphy, retiring president.

In the initiation ceremony which was held recently, Mary Davis, Gail Dixon, Betty Newsome, Sylvia Reames, Shirley Roby, Ilia Des Portes, Becky Hines, Helen Waitman, Janet Wiggins, and Moneda Key were initiated into Orchesis. Those apprentices who will be initiated next semester are Mary Cowles, Beth Kent, Nancy Lawrence, Jean Carol Parker, and Fay Greenland.

A picnic for new members was held last Tuesday in Mr. Samuel Graham's back yard.

Nine Girls Pledge Journalism Group

Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, has issued bids to eight girls, according to Fifi Carter, newly elected president of the group.

Donnie Devine, Ann Carter Wendenberg, Lou Kitts and Jean Carol Parker of the annual staff received bids.

Members of the Rotunda staff receiving bids are Dot Douglas, Ann Thomas, Shirley Ward, and Phoebe Warner.

Pledging Pi Delta Epsilon from the Colonnade staff was Eloise Macon. These girls will be initiated next fall at which time the election of officers will be completed.

Pat Altwegg and Mary Ann King were recently elected to serve as vice-president and secretary respectively of the group.

Students Display Paintings In Freshman Dorm Parlor

Paintings by seven members of the present freshman class, four of whom are art majors, have been placed in the freshman parlor and will remain there until next spring. These paintings are from the art structure class and will replace the ones painted by members of the present sopnomore class which have been on display during this year.

Miss Virginia Bedford has also announced that Longwood has entered three pieces of student art work in the Fine Arts Division of the Virginia Highlands Festival which will be held from August 1-15 at Abingdon.

The works on display in the freshman parlor were painted by Margaret Duke, Bobbie Mays, Jane Harlow, and Virginia Obenshain, art majors and Jane Blake, Mary JoHutchinson, and Nancy Sydnor. The paintings include scenes of the Episcopal Church, the Methodist Church and the Student Building. There are two paintings of clown faces, done from models. These clown faces were painted in any style that the student wished to do them.

The three pieces of art work that have been sent to the festival at Abingdon, and entered in the college division of the exhibit were done by Margaret Sutphin, senior art major, Nancy Taylor and Audrey Morse, sophomores. These works include an oil painting, and a Negro head and free form bowl in cermanics.

Mr. Rogers Stuart is chairman of the Fine Arts Division of the Virginia Highland Festival.

The Abingdon Historical Society, the State Department of Education, the Barter Theater, and the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts are working together on this annual festival.

Enrollment For 1953-54 Totals 636 For Session; Excels '52 Registration

Registrar Announces 223 New Freshmen, 18 Tranfer Students

Six hundred and thirty-six students have registered for classes during the fall semester of the 1953-54 session at Longwood College, according to Miss Virgilia Bugg, registrar. This number is considerably higher in comparison with last year's enrollment of 588.

Two hundred and twenty three freshmen have been matriculated and 18 transfer students make the total number of new students 251.

There are five special students who are taking specific classes but not working towards a degree. One of these is the only foreign student enrolled at Longwood College.

These figures are accurate to this date but are subject to change since, according to Miss Bugg, all returning students have not yet matriculated through her office.

Transfer Students

New faces seen among the upperclassmen this fall are students transferring to Longwood from various colleges in Virginia, New York, Oklahoma, Connecticut, North Carolina, and Massachusetts.

Three of these are special students—Mrs. Claudette Blumenson from New York University; Mrs. Janet Sandra from Mt. Ida Junior College, Massachusetts; and Mrs. Caroline K. Shipp, Blackstone College.

Mary Ann Brightwell from East Carolina College, North Carolina, and Mrs. Geraldine Tonte from Central State College, Edmond, Oklahoma are enrolled this fall as day students.

Additions to the senior class are Betty Zoe Bailey, Doris Garlasco, and Lynell Bradshaw. Betty, from Salem, is a music major. Before entering Longwood she attended the Shenandoah Conservatory at Dayton where she was a member of the a capella choir, "Y" cabinet, and the newspaper staff. Betty was also secretary of the student government.

From Connecticut

Doris, an elementary major, is a native of Hartford, Connecticut. Previously she attended Willimantic Teachers' College in Connecticut where she was a member of the basketball team and college choir.

Lynell Bradshaw, a former student of Longwood, is majoring in elementary education. She is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, a national honor society in education.

The junior class added seven girls to its membership this fall. They are Shirley Osbourne, Sally Cecil, Anne Turley, Sue Raymond, Roberta King, Betty Lou Jefferson, and Iris Scott.

Shirley, from Sandston, graduated from Virginia Intermont at Bristol where she was art editor of the annual and vice-president of an honorary art fraternity.

Longwood President To Lecture to VEA

Using the topic, "Improving the Instructional Program," President Dabney S. Lancaster will speak to a District F meeting of the Virginia Education Association on October 3 in Lynchburg.

The meeting is being held in connection with the October 2-4 dedication ceremonies for the new $4,000,000 E. C. Glass High School in Lynchburg.

Hines, Met Basso, Appears As First For Artist Series

Jerome Hines, noted basso of the Metropolitan Opera Company will open the 1953-1954 Longwood College Artist Series schedule on October 22. The Artist Series, now in their third season, are cultural and educational programs designed for the entertainment of the student body, faculty and townspeople.

Mr. Hines engagement here is one of 45 concerts, in addition to his Met performances which he will give during his current American tour under the direction of Impresario S. Hurok.

Sir Hubert Wilkins will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Arctic and Its Influences on World Affairs". Sir Hubert is the consultant to the United States Government on the polar regions.

Dr. Roy Jesson, a new member of the Longwood faculty, will present a piano recital for the third in the series of programs. Mr. Jesson, a native of England, is both a pianist and organist and has written several compositions that were published by the Oxford University Press. He attended Oxford, the Royal Academy of Music in London, and received his Ph. D. in music at Indiana University.

The Columbus Boychoir, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Huffman, will present a program of choral music on January 12. This choir is composed of seventy boys between the ages of nine and fourteen who have outstanding soprano and alto voices.

Completing the series "Musical Americana," a folk concert in song and dances, will be presented on April 26.

Season tickets sold to townspeople will include the admission to all five concerts. Individual tickets may also be purchased for each performance. Longwood students receive their season tickets through their regular college fees.

Last year the Series presented Jean Erdman's Dance Troupe, the Don Cosack Chorus, the Mozart Orchestra, and Virgil Fox, organist.

Manlove to Replace Langhorne's Position As 1953-54 Fire Chief

June Manlove of the junior class has been appointed fire chief to replace Mary D. Langhorne who did not return to Longwood this fall.

June has appointed fire marshals for the four classes. These marshals are Mary Ann King, senior marshal, and Barbara Mitchel, junior marshal. Dale Brothers and Betty Ramsey will serve as fire marshals for the sophomore and freshman classes respectively.

Jean Hodges, last year's fire chief will serve as assistant fire chief this year. Mr. Raymond H. French is advisor to the group.

June, as fire chief, will serve as an ex-officio member of House Council. She and the fire marshals will supervise fire drills and enforce house council rules for fire drills. Fire drills are held monthly with one night and one day drill as a precautionary measure.

State Board Reviews Plan For Increases In LC Budget

Governor Battle Tours Va. Colleges

The Longwood College operating budget for the period July 1, 1954, through June 30, 1956 amounts to $1,664,749, plus $550,965 for capital outlay.

This was the request given to Governor John S. Battle and his financial advisors on their visit to Farmville on September 21. It was accompanied by a detailed breakdown and explanation from Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the College.

The budget under which the college is now operating totals $1,518,832, which is $146,671 less than the one under study.

In addition to the operating budget, the College administration is requesting capital outlay funds of $500,965, an increase of $484,965 over the present two-year outlay, when no major outlays were made.

In 1954, however, many capital improvements are planned to begin at the College. These include air-conditioning Jarman Auditorium at an estimated cost of $29,000, and adding to the library stack room and steel stacks at a cost of $20,000.

Other improvements in the college buildings include $30,000 for a Home Managment Cottage and equipment; $52,500 to install necessary equipment such as refurnishing bedrooms in an old dormitory, adding new ranges for the kitchen, purchasing motor vehicles, and obtaining educational equipment for all departments. In addition, an estimate of $15,000 has been requested for new bathrooms, plumbing and fixtures in old dormitories.

Dr. Lancaster indicates that the budget will be studied and voted on by the coming Legislature in its winter session.

Governor Battle's visit to Farmville was part of a state-wide tour of state institutions, by which he and his advisers could receive on-the-spot information for budget requests.

Because the state legislature meets only once every two years, the budget must appropriate funds to cover that length of time. It requires that a survey be made of all state organizations before funds be allotted.

13 New Faculty, Staff Members On Longwood's Administration For 1953-1954 College Session

Profs. Will Teach In Various Fields

The addition of 13 new members to the faculty and administration of Longwood College for the 1953-54 session has been announced by President Dabney S. Lancaster. New faculty members will teach in the fields of music, home economics, teacher and business education, biology, and English. An assistant business manager and a new nurse have been added to the college staff.

Mrs. Nell H. Griffin, acting head of the home ecenomics department, came to Longwood from the faculty of the University of Delaware. She has also taught at Michigan State College, Pennsylvania State and Winthrop College, South Carolina. She received her B. A. degree from Radford and her masters degree from Columbia University. Mrs. Griffin is a member of the American Home Economics Association and the American Association of University Women.

Biology Professor

Former Wildlife Education Specialist for the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, Mr. Robert E. Merritt, has been appointed assistant professor of biology. He has taught general science and mathematics in Watertown, New York, and has served as a research investigator for the State of New Hampshire. Mr. Merirtt holds a masters degree from Corneli University and a B. A. degree from New York College for Teachers, Albany, New York.

Mr. Richard K. Meeker, instructor of English, is a former member of the faculty of Springfield College and Bay Path Junior College, Massachusetts. Working for his Ph. D. degree in English, he holds his master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania, where he was a graduate assitant. His membership is found in the American Association of University Professors, the College English Association, National Council of Teachers of English, Kappa Phi Kappa, and Pi Delta Epsilon.

English Addition

Instructor in English, Mrs. Dorothy B. Schlegel has received degrees from Dickinson College, Pennsylvania, and the College of William and Mary. She has also completed the requirements for her doctorate at the University of North Carolina. Her previous studies were made at the University of Virginia, Columbia University, Middlebury College, and Western Reserve, Cleveland, Ohio. She has taught at the William and Mary Veterans Extension in Norfolk, and in the York County school system in York, Pennsylvania. She holds memberships in Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Kappa Gamma, and the Modern Language Association.

Miss Mary Puckett Asher, Mr. Charles E. Attix and Mr. Roy H. Jesson have been appointed instructors in music. Miss Asher has received degrees from Longwood College and Columbia University. Previously she had taught music at Virginia Beach and Warwick Elementary Schools. Mr. Attix has received degrees from Phillips Textile School and the College of Music at Cincinnati. Before assuming duties at Longwood, he did private teaching. Mr Jesson holds

Colonnade Selects Macon New Head

Eloise Macon, a junior from Lynchburg, has been selected editor of the Colonnade for the coming year according to Mr. Richard K. Meeker, associate professor of English, new adviser to the college magazine staff. A special meeting of the Student Publications Committee was called to elect the new editor to replace Molly Hersman who did not return to Longwood.

Barbara Southern, a junior from Roanoke, will be managing editor, stepping up from the position of essay editor which she held last year. Eloise served as last year's managing editor. Staff members to fill a few vacant positions will be announced later.

The Fall issue will follow the general type formerly used by the magazine, Mr. Meeker stated in discussing plans for the Colonnade. However, the staff hopes to center the magazine around one theme in the Winter and Spring issues. Mr. Meeker add that they anticipate finding much new talent in the school. The annual short story contest will be announced in the near future.

Tryouts Open For Rotunda

Interest, effort, and promptness are the qualifications for winning a position on the 1953-54 Rotunda staff. Tryouts for these positions began tonight at the regular newspaper staff meeting after supper in the Rotunda office.

Freshmen, upperclassmen, experienced or inexperienced are urged by Editor Ann Thomas and the present staff to give the Rotunda a try and be present at tonight's meeting.

If you are a newshound, news beats will be assigned and News Editor Dot Douglas will judge the accuracy and ability of all reporters. If handling the lighter side of daily events is your line see Martha Donaldson, feature editor. And for the versatile, opportunity will be given to try both news and feature writing.

The circulation department headed by Muriel Boswell and Nancy Hartman has openings for hard workers, and anyone willing to type on Monday nights before deadline time should see Ann Weatherholtz, copy editor. Copy readers and proofreaders are also needed.

Tryout for the newspaper will continue for the next five issues.

Longwood Publishes Two Booklets to Aid Interested Students

Longwood students will soon be given a new campus publication, according to Mrs. Meade L. Shickel, the college public relations director.

Student activities and college policies will make up the contents of the book which will contain 16 pages. The cover is a [illegible] color and displays a picture of the library. It will be used in connection with the catalogue and bulletin, and sent to prospective students. Mrs. Shickel said that the book should be completed during the latter part of October.

Another new publication, the college bulletin was released in August. It is a pamphlet-style folder telling the basic facts about the college and is sent to any high school graduate who has shown interest in going to college.

Greetings

On Monday morning, September 21, it was my privilege to speak in the small auditorium to the Class of 1957, and to extend to members of that class a welcome to the college.

I am confident that this fine group will make a grand record at Longwood and it is a privilege to assure the class again through the columns of The Rotunda of my personal welcome and by best wishes for success and happiness in the years ahead.

Dabney S. Lancaster, President

The entire Home Department Staff joins me in extending to both new and former students a very cordial welcome to the campus.

Let us all help to make this year Longwood's best.

With warmest personal regards to each one of you.

Sincerely,
Ruth Gleaves

Collegiate or College Student?

Ten days ago 223 Longwood rat . were just a part of the hometown crowd, but after a week of teas, tests, receptions, registration ad infinitum, they have been thrust into an entirely new period of their lives . . . physically, mentally, a . . . motionally.

Now they face the problems shared by thousands of college freshmen and by the sophomores, juniors, and seniors who have gone before them. Theirs is the problem and responsibility of incorporating all of the elements of a balanced, effective college life into twenty-four hours which will seem to shrink, shrink, shrink.

Yet, there is one more important question they—and the sophomores, juniors, and seniors must answer:

Will they be college students or merely collegiate?

One of the Vogue-dictated pleated shirts may make you collegiate but not necessarily a college student. A school made up of equal parts of classes, dance weekends, and clubs may make you collegiate, but not a college student.

Ideas make the college student—ideas, and the desire to know "who am I" and "what is life." A student shall love that which is new, vital, breathing; respect and use that which is old.

Someone is always telling the college student, "Well, you're here to study in the first place." Perhaps, but no study, no knowledge is of value unless it affects the person. The ideas, the learning and searching, every experience shall be towards the understanding of self, and fellow men, and the world.

Students must meet a tumultous world situation. They must demand of college that it give the time and effort to help them find the truth about human relationships, about honor, democracy, Good.

Idealistic? Yes, of course it is—but civilization was built upon ideals. Cynicism may be fashionable in some circles—it may also be a front for complete emptiness.

What is a college student?

She is one who with all of her getting of wisdom . . . gets understanding.

Thank You!

Progress, that's what it is—and those responsible for it deserve our appreciation and applause.

We're talking about orientation week, 1953. Perhaps to the freshmen it was one mad rush and probably quite bewildering, but to the "experienced" upperclassmen the weeks' activities seemed much more smooth and organized than in at least the past three years.

For example, the new system of matriculation eliminated hours of 'just waiting;" post office boxes assigned before school opened made mail available on Monday instead of letting it pile up for days because some people just didn't get round to seeing Mrs. Cox. Book lists, parties, staggered orientation classes that gave new girls a chance to digest rules instead of swallowing them whole as in former years; a week-end with a variety of events, left little time for an attack of homesickness. Then to top it off, a second week of orientation to clarify the first week!

Miss Cover, Elleanor Koch, and all those who worked with them are to be thanked by the student body, faculty, administration, and parents, too, for their hours of work, and their time spent thinking up things to do and ways to do them. They showed themselves in full control of every situation and conscious of the needs of every individual.

Orientation weeks, 1953, was a success.

We say, thank you, to all who had a part in it, for getting us off on the right foot.

Free Information

A reminder that benefits!

To new students of Longwood, the bulletin boards in Ruffner Hall, particularly those near the post office stairs, are comparatively unnoticed so far. The school year has not yet progressed enough to see their usefulness, and with so much rush last week no one had time to give them a second look.

The boards contain items and notices concerning sick calls in the infirmary, information about athletic participation and events, and church and "Y" news of both light and serious nature. These boards also serve to remind students about future meeting of certain organizations.

Suppose a student wants a ride home some week-end, or can possibly aid someone in obtaining a ride—a notice on the bulletin board can be very worthwhile. Various scholarships are announced in this same manner. Also, students find the "For Sale" division very useful at the beginning of each semester when second-hand books are in great demand. Other articles for sale may be listed here also.

To upperclassmen, however, these bulletin boards are very old friends; but, nevertheless, are still not being used to their best advantage. Many steps or much embarrassment in some instances could be avoided by a quick glance at the wires for notices of activity meetings. Also, less confusion could be attained by the removal of all outdated notices.

To all students, this is a reminder to use these bulletin boards and make them a benefit to you.

To Freshmen

Dear New Students,

Already you have won yourself a place in college life here at Longwood. Even though you have been here only a short while, you have surely come in contact with our cherished Longwood spirit. It extends from our rotunda throughout our campus, being kept alive by the students, faculty, and administration. As you go about your daily activities it becomes a part of you—a cherished part that you will want to strive to carry on as so many before you have.

You can probably already tell that friendship is one characteristic basis of this spirit. It goes much deeper than the friendly greeting of "Hi," meaning trust, confidence, and the sharing of so many experiences. Some friendships made here will be those never to be forgotten.

We "old girls" are grateful for the new life and spirit which you have brought. We look forward to getting to know each of you better and hope that you will be happy with us.

Sincere best wishes from all of us,
Mary Denny Wilson, President

Social Notes

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Well, if I put the names of those who didn't get married this summer, engaged and so forth, I'm sure my column would be quite short! And there again, if I tried to name the people that got unpinned—oh, well, that would be a low blow! Nuff of this though; on with the news. Looks as if everyone had a terrific summer.

Married:

Esther Davis to Edsel Fitzgerald.
Ann Parkinson to Dick Wagner
Gail Dixon to Al Dickson.
Liz Crockett to "Ki" Luzac.
Ann Bryan to "Swede" Larson.
Lucy Page Hall to Ted Kennedy.
Nancy Tanley to Teddy Masters.
Bobbie Allen to Buddy Garrett.
Mattie Harris to Jack Massey.
Challice Hayden to Bill Parson.
Mary Meade Robertson to Byrd Edwards.
Margaret Taylor to Joe Barlow.
Marty Miller to Phil Mason.
"Jo" Burley to Don Adams.
Ann Keith Handley to Harper Brame.
Billie Van de Reit to Manning Merritt.
Ann Glenn to Randy Atkinson.
Ann Westmoreland to Wally Houser.
Marie Swecker to Cary Harrison.
Nat Lancaster to Yancey Robertson.
Jean Southern to Walt Linsey.

Also married were Cleo Holladay and Betty Lou Garrett.

Enaraged: .....

Peggy Hood to Doug Smith.
Nancy Tanley to Teddy Masters.
Nancy Hartman to Carroll Thackston.

Also Gloria Anderton became engaged.

Pinned:

Wilma Salmon to Roger Justice (KA, University of Kentucky).
Joan DeAlba to Jack Dawson.
Boop Islin to Bobby Safell.
Beth Cheatham to Bill Thacker.
Barbara Hough to Bob Miller (Kappa Sig).
Peggy Illyus to Jack Bowyer (SAE).
Bobbie Assaid to Jimmy Mills (KA).
Dee Steger to Meadie Taylor (PiKA).
Liz Dehaven to Tommy Blair (German Club).
Nancy Tanley to Teddy Masters (Hi-Y Pin! Lucky Girl!)

Also pinned was Pasty Waite.

Hey Now--Stop, Look, Listen To What You Are Miss'in!

By PHOEBE WARNER

Sticky fingers, a stumped big toe,
A chewed up ticket to the movie show.
A tear or sparkle in each eye,
And ink-dipped pig-tail that made her cry,
A black eye ,or a scabbed knee,
Is something that I often see.
But who am I, I guess you'll question!
And I reply an apparition
A green, scared, little creature
Who some may call a "student
But never say I hate my work.
Although I quiver with each smirk,
Or sentence I endure the type
That little people should not recite
And never will I forget recess
When the rooms in a childish mess,
But, again the trial burst forth at lunch
Which is composed of a peanut crunch.
But only once are we practice teaching
And for that "A" we are surely reaching.

Betty Bailey: After the shock wears off it won't be half bad.

Dee Steger: I really have no comment. I am too tired, after having to pull a little boy out from under a table when he'd retired to rest!

So here's hats off to me and the rest
And student teachers who do their best.
So now stop, look, and listen
To what you others are really missin'.

Quotable quotes from the training school:

June Johns: My experience this morning is just not printable. (All interested readers see June for a lauch.)

Lou Kutz: Absolutely — absolutely nothing like it!

Ann Thomas: Tee hee, let me think of something good; maybe Mis sWatkins will read it.

Pat Altwegg: It's different from anything I've ever done before.

Mary Denny Wilson: I'll be glad when they stop calling me 'Miss Whistle.'

Elsie Wente: One—two—three—four—

Betsy Jean Robertson: For a treatment instead of a treat, try student teaching.

Betty Gillette: Giving other people homework is great!

Patty Derring: I like it. (Now that''s' different)

Margaret Felton: They're teaching me the three R's—wrestling—wrecking—roving.

Of Interest

By JOYCE GILCHRIST

This article is to serve as a warning to all students who may think they hear a jet plane running down High Street some day. Actually they wouldn't be far from wrong, because it could very possibly be a jet engine. It seems that the truckint business has become vitually interested in the idea of jet p.wer to replace the old Diesel trucks.

This jet truck looks very much like any other truck—except it apparently has no engine. There are Plexiglass windows on either side of the hood which gives this illusion. But there is an engine. You can tell by the noise—a high pitched whine, similar to the sound of a jet plane's engine and far different from the dull roar of a Diesel.

The engine which is really under the hood, is so small that it fits right into the bottom of the frame. This engine is known as the Boeing 502, developed and built by Boeing Airplane Company, one of the nation"s largest aircraft manufacturers. It is a miniature jet engine about one tenth the size of the Air Force standard jet engines. Total weight of the engine, installed in the truck and complete with accessories, is only 240 pounds compared with 575 pounds for the smallest standard auto engine in the U. S. and 3,000 pounds for a standard Diesel truck engine. Yet model 502 turns out enough horsepower to pull the largest truck on the highways, fully loaded.

The results of a year's testing of this engine under various conditions indicate that a midget turbine may well be a step toward a revolutionary change in power plants for trucks and even automobiles.

Several of the nation's leading truck and auto makers have small turbine projects under way but are reluctant to discuss them for fear of tipping off their rivals in this highly competitive field. A. A. Kueher, director of the Ford Motor Company's scientific laboratory, recently predicted that the gas-turbine engine ultimately will provide both a lighter and cheaper power plant for trucks and autos.

The jet age may not come as soon in ground transportation as in air travel, but it appears to be just as definite a part of our future.

Presbyterian Group Gives Food, Faith

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Editor's Note: This article is the first in a series of five to be run in successive issue of the Rotunda. They will be written by representatives of the various campus church groups.)

A degree from Longwood College will mean a great deal to each of you in the academic world of today; however, there are other things, equally important, that you will want to become an active part of your college life while attaining the goal you seek, whatever it may be.

The Westminster Fellowship hopes to parallel your growth spiritually with your academic growth while you are here on the Longwood campus.

Right down the street about four blocks, is the Farmville Presbyterian Church where we hope to have you join us on Sunday morning for the Westminster Fellowship Bible class and the 11 o'clock morning worship service. The Westminster Fellowship is no small part of the church! We believe that you will enjoy being a member and we know that we'd enjoy having you! So, we're eager for you to know us.

The group is composed of Presbyterian students from Longwood and Hampden-Sydney campuses. We meet at 7 o'clock each Sunday evening and have one supper meeting a month. We offer food, fellowship, and faith!

To us it is important to use our student days in an attempt to face our religious problems, to know facts, and to find a stronger basis for our Christian faith and living. Besides this we have "fun."Who can describe fun? You either have it or you don't. We have it! Nuff said!

Lucky Longwood Ladies Tell Tantilizing Tales Of European Summer

By MARTHA DONALDSON

This past summer while most of us were busy working, studying, vacationing, and loafing, we were being represented half way around the world in Europe. Yes, several Longwood people were touring the continent this summer, and, of course, we have a million questions to ask them upon their return. Naturally, we want to know what they are wearing in Paris and if the Riveria was really as fabulous as we have heard. Aside from these questions, we are also interested in where they went, what they saw, and what kind of receptions they received in the various countries they visited.

Five to Europe

Some of those visiting Europe were Dr. C. L. S. Early, dramatics profesor, Miss Draper, head of the French Department, seniors, Mason Moore, Mary Anne Evans, and sophomore, Lucy Thwing. Their scrap books are chocked full of travel folders, tickets, hotel knick-knacs and they have pictures bushel baskets full! Talking with them is like a small trip in itself.

This was an especially good year for traveling aboard for it was coronation year in England. This marvelous spectacle is a once-in-a-lifetime chance to see Great Britain with all the pomp and splendor she can muster. Dr. Early was one of the crowd that lined the great avenues of the splendid royal procession.

Warmly Welcomed

Mason Moore and Mary Anne Evans visited seven countries including England, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and France. They both said it was so fabulous that it was difficult to single out one place or one event that impressed them the most—they were impressed by it all, and were welcomed warmly wherever they went. However, they seemed to think the people of Italy were especially nice to them. It seems that the Italians think all Americans are millionaires!

Lucy Thwing took a trip similar to that of Mason and Mary Anne. Theirs were guided tours, whereas Dr. Early was on his own, Lucy was very impressed by Holland because of its friendliness and cleanliness. She talked enthusiastically about their quaint homes and customs. Of course, France would be expected to be Miss Draper's point of interest.

As can easily be understood, England made the travelers feel most at home, but they think the people of Germany were the most like Americans. They declared the ruins in Germany as being unbelievable, but much is being rebuilt as rapidly as you could expect a people to rebuild their war-torn country.

Switzerland seems to stand out as the beauty spot to all, but it is hard to choose the most beautiful when there are Paris, Capri, London, and dozens of others equally as magnificent.

After hearing all about Europe, the first urge anyone would have is to try in some way to make the trip herself, even if it meant pawning her clothes and roommate. After all, think of some of the things the travelers did—visited Capri, toured London one night with a Scotch guide dressed in a kilt, viewed Germany's World War II ruins, and also the ruins of the Roman Empire, rode a ski lift up to the top of a mountain in Switzerland, visited the Riviera and all of its gaiety, and did things that seem to us back home as being almost incredible and so distant.

To those who went, it is fabulous memory which they will never forget. It is truly a once-a-blue-moon thing, but all those who went only say, "Wish I could go back."

Maybe next year—or at least ten years from now—we'll be sailing, too, to see the sights of Paris, Cologne, London, and Rome.

Church News

By ANNE THAXTON

Episcopal:

The Rev. Mr Donald T. Oakes will preach at Johns Memorial Episcopal Church Sunday morning, October 4, at the 11 a. m. service and in the evening will talk to the Canterbury Club (the Episcopal student group of Longwood and Hampden-Sydney) in the Parish House.

Mr. Oakes graduated from Dartmouth College with a B. A. degree. From the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., he received his B. D. Ensign in the U.S. Navy, he was at Pearl Harbor and in China from 1944 through 1946.

As missionary to St. Paul's University, Tokyo, where he has been since 1949, he was chaplain, American history teacher, and football coach. Mr Oakes has organized the Nippon Seikokoi (Episcopal college work program to begin this year with a student center at Hokkaido University, Japan.

He is married and has two children, Catherine Anne, and David Thomas.

Donald Oakes was ordained Deacon in 1949, and Priest in 1950.

Baptist:

On September 26, at 8 p. m., Baptist students were entertained at the Baptist Church with a party. Refreshments were furnished by the ladies of the church.

Miss Rees Watkins, State young people's secretary, will be guest speaker for the first meeting of the Y. W. A., held at the Center, 7 p. m., October 6. Miss Watkins will speak on her summer trip to South America.

Presbyterian:

The Presbyterian Westminster Fellowship welcomed a large group of new Longwood students Saturday night at a party, which had football as its theme. Mr. James R. Kennedy, the minister, spoke to the group and introduced the various leaders and officers of the Westminster Fellowship.

Sunday night at 7 p. m., the Wes-Fell had its first meeting of the school year, and the first supper is scheduled for next Sunday at 6 p. m. in the church. Next Sunday, also, at 11 a. m., World-wide Communion Service will be held.

Next month's supper meeting will take place at Hampden-Sydney College.

One rat cap, plus one week of orientation, equals one confused freshman, Ann Thomas, of Richmond. Do the rest of you freshmen look as bewildered as this?

LC "Ladies", Class of '57, Survive Rigors of Receptions, Registration

By JEANNE SAUNDERS AND JAN KUYK

Since the beginning of time one or two unsuspecting freshmen have timidly offered to write a few hurried words on a "rat's rating" of Longwood. True to form we, to, have sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth—so help us Charlie Hop.

First a cheer for the girls in white—do we mean brides, nurses, or waitresses? No, we mean the "Y" girls without whose help we would not have been able to muster the courage to enter the front door of this fair establishment. The parents also add their vote of thanks. If these helpful young "Y" ladies hadn't hung on to the freshmen, Mama and Papa would never have been able to make a wild dash for the car and go speeding up High Street!

There's really not much that anyone remembers about those five drastic hours after Mater and Pater had bidden us fond farewell. There were a million people who had names that had to be remembered, and we went to bed exhaustedly mumbling something about 66 days before Thanksgiving.

This "coma period" through which every rat passes is best defined as a time of complete exhaustion. The symptoms are enjoyed by all lower classmen. Usually there's drooping of the eyelids, nodding of the head, drooping of the shoulders, and an occasional mumbling that sounds like KZPH! "Rest" is the usual prescription, but the only sure-fire cure is arsenic.

Our first morning at College is one that will forever be remembered — water running, doors slamming, people screaming, etc. Perhaps this doesn't seem to unusual, and it wouldn't be if it weren't five o'clock. We stumbled groggily to our feet and shook our roommates, who got up groping blindly for the alarm clock, screaming "Keep ringing, I'll find you!"

After breakfast we met umpteen more people, only this time we were formally introduced by the school's leaders. We then went merrily along to ma-tric-u-late, after we had consulted Mr. Webster to find out exactly what it meant.

Our homesickness began to wear off with time as more and more activities began to crowd out our "homesick hours". Among the more outstanding activities was the impressive signing of the honor code. This to many freshman marked their first real step toward "growing up".

The physical inspection was also an item for every diary. We shivered all over Farmville trying to find the infirmary. Once we had found it, we stood in line until we turned blue. When we finally reached the doctor, we were in dire need of him!

We really should say something about those English and typing placement tests, but we're not. Some things are better left unsaid.

The capping ceremony marked the end of the "green" period for many "rats". By that time we knew our way around a little better, and we were a wee bit more sure of ourselves.

All of the class of '57 flopped wearily into bed after the ceremony and fell fast asleep. The traditional rat caps were clutched in our hot little fists and our dreams were filled with red and white demons running around screaming—"Run, Rat!"

Seriously though, our first impression of Longwood has been a wonderful one, and we're sure this has been true in the case of many former freshmen.

The weary rat falls in her bed.
She's as happy as can be.
She cherishes the thought that she Is Miss College, 1953.

Paper Appoints Two

Two new appointments have been made to the 1953-54 Rotunda staff.

Muriel Boswell and Nancy Hartman, both sophomores, have taken over the job of circulation as co-heads of the staff. They succeed Barbara Powell who did not return to Longwood this fall.

The circulation staff of the paper has charge of distributing and mailing and the selling of subscriptions to faculty and alumnae. They also handle exchange papers for other schools

Assembles Bring More Outstanding Tuesday Sessions

By DOT DOUGLAS AND MARTHA DONALDSON

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! The assembly will assemble. Hold those knitting needles outside girls—we'll have fencing with them right outside the auditorium after assembly. Two purls will be given toward the color cap to any girl who can knit her opponent without dropping a stitch. (Now isn't that a cable stitch and we're not ribbing!) Meanwhile, ladies, gentlemen and what have yous, let's assembly.

This year you'll need no knitting needles, stationary, puzzles, dice, or pocket version of "How to Fill the Idle Hours". This year the assembly committee promises to keep you poised on the edge of your seats. This will be the greatest show on earth, not the greatest blow. No girls, don't wear your bullet proof vests, Mickey Spillane has cancelled his speaking engagement and Howdy Doody will entertain us.

Seriously, we won't need fictitous excitement for today Maria Jackson, a former Longwood student, will be here, after a wonderful year in Paris, with her interpretation of "Oui, Oui Paris."

Later on in the year we will have to sharpen our wits for the quiz program, a student panel, and, of course, Dr. Early will be on hand with the drama department and slides of his trip to Europe. While we catch our breaths after "green n' white and red n' white"" song contest, we'll learn all about the Jewish faith from a noted Jewish Rabbi.

Christmas won't be far away and then Dr. Molnar and his department won't "Stop the Music". The faculty won't hide their lights under a bushel this year for they plan to bring their talent into the limelight several times luding the year and there'll be dancing from Mrs. Landrum's classes too.

All in all our assembly year seems full of the light and the serious with many things we haven't mentioned like movies, religious programs, good speakers —included in this is a Korean speaker—and beaucoup de things to make us say with more enthusiasum. It's Tuesday! Let us assemble for the assembly!

Y LINES

By SHIRLEY W[illegible] E

With new plans and new leaders, Y.W.C.A. is looking forward to another successful year under the guidance of Lu Beavers, president.

Installation of freshmen into the organization is planned for October, soon after which the freshman commission will be elected.

As formerly, the student body will be given opportunity to sign for the "Y" committee with which they choose to work. Freshmen especially are urged to sign up for a committee.

The Y.W.C.A. is making plans for a religious emphasis week, and in cooperation with the Hampden-Sydney Christian Association is hoping to procure a speaker for some future religious service at each of the schools.

The organization wishes to remind the student body, and again especially the freshmen, to attend the regular devotional service held for their benefit in the Episcopal Church each evening. Members of the cabinet are already pleased to see so many attending church services and taking part in church activities and wishes to encourage every student to attend the church of her choice regularly.

Sophs Determine Floor Presidents; Others Temporary

Six permanent hall presidents were recently elected by the Sophomore building for the coming session. This is the only class that has completed the election and the other three classes have now their temporary presidents.

Those serving as temporary hall presidents are Shirley Stamp, Doris Kaufmann, Helen Wagoner, Frances Stubb, Anne Beckett and Garland Webster. Assistants to the above are Jane Hall, Shirley Tocha, Jackie Mayhall, Lenore Wilder, Evelyn Hall and Joan Harvey.

Muriel Beavers is manager of the sophomore class in new activities as temporary freshman hall president. Chosen to serve as temporary hall presidents for the freshman class are Virginia Pate, Jean Hines, Sara Wentzel, Betty Pierpont, Kitty Kamps, Bea Benedict, Rhenda Deering, Jean Mann, Elinor Everett, Florence Pollard and Connie Coyner.

Dot Armstrong, Nancy Tuttle, Masters, Joan Connelly, Jean Carol Parker, and Hilda Hartis were selected to serve temporarily as junior hall presidents.

Seniors acting in this position temporarily are Monecia Key, Jan Foster, Ann Perkinson, Wanner Mary Miller and Dee Steere.

House Council has added two new rules to the list of dormitory regulations, Peobie Assaf president, has announced.

1. A student is on her honor to report to her hall president by 11 a. m. the day following the receipt of a call down. If she fails to do so, an additional call down will be given.

2. The hall president must report the call down to the house president by 2:00 p. m. on the day it is reported to her. One call down will be given for each one of this duty.

Added to the staff of the college dietitians is Miss Dorothy Ballard of Norfolk. Miss Ballard is a graduate of the Granby School of High Point, Hospital, High Point, North Carolina. She has been nursing at DePaul Hospital in Norfolk. While here at Longwood she will complete requirement for her B S degree.

Mr. Jacob H. Wampler, new assistant business manager, is a native of Shenandoah. He received his bachelor's degree in chemistry at Virginia Military Institute and his master's degree at the University of Virginia. He served in the United States Army.

No more poison oak, no more broken bones from tumbling over tree trunks in Longwood Estate's natural ampitheatre—the view above, looking across the Dell towards Longwood House, shows the terracing and clearing that was done during the past summer.

Terracing of Longwood Dell Solves Poison Oak Problem

By DOT ARMSTRONG

As almost everyone who has ever journeyed out to picturesque Longwood Estate on a picnic, cabin party or simply a stroll-seeing excursion probably knows, there was at one time a very irritating and painful price to pay for venturing too far into the undergrowth surrounding Longwood Dell.

Unfortunately, poison oak has flourished and thrived on the lovely grounds of the estate, and particularly around the Dell for many years, and all former attempts to get rid of the persistent weed have failed.

Participants in the annual May Day celebration have always been especially annoyed. Each Spring droves of freshmen who were not warned and who scampered gaily through the trees and bushes at May Day practice, have suffered for days afterward as the results of their folly.

Last Spring the members of the college's secret organization known as "Chi" decided that this nuisance had gone on long enough and agreed to make the extermination of poison oak from Longwood Dell their project for 1953.

However, the original plan did not succeed. For the weeds grew back as quickly as they could be removed. After much consideration, the members of "Chi" decided that the only way to rid the Dell permanently of the poison oak would be to tear out all the undergrowth, cut down all the trees and terrace the ground around the dell.

Accordingly, a local company was assigned to the job, which got underway in the early summer, with Mr. Samuel L. Graham, college business manager, supervising operations. The necessary funds were raised by "Chi," and the college.

Now that the terracing has been completed, grass seed has been sown and plans are being made to place dogwood trees around the outer circumference of the ampitheatre. Longwood can now look forward with pleasure to a Spring and a May Day in an enormously improved and beautified Longwood Dell minus the hazard of poison oak.

Bright Chairs, Shades Replace Old Furniture In Longwood Rec Hall

Remarking on the new Recreational Hall furniture, Miss Emily Barksdale, chairman of the interior decorating committee, stated, "We feel that it brightens the room."

[illegible] furniture was purchased last spring, but was not placed in the room until summer. In selecting the furniture, Miss Barksdale, associate professor of modern languages and her committee considered its appearance, its durability, and its suitability.

Working with Miss Barksdale on the project were Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women; Mrs. Janice Lemen, assistant professor of art; and Miss Evelyn Hamner, college hostess; Miss Irving Armstrong, assistant librarian; and Mis Catherine Tupper, professor of home economics also served on the committee.

The shades now hanging at the "rec" were designed and painted by last year's art classes to blend in with the new furniture which is constructed of bright green metal and upholstered in modern styles of pink and green velon.

Dot's Dashes

By DOT DOUGLA.

Dr. Linsey and I made a survey of Longwood students and these are our sad statistics—

57.9% of us have a man.

42.1% of us don't.

37% of us want a man—now do you wonder about that other 4.9%—well, they are men! (We can't forget that Longwood is co-ed).

87.9% of us wear our roommate's clothes.

12.1% of us have roommates who aren't our size—or who just plain don't have anything to wear.

100% of us have petted—according to Dr. L.—for interdigitating is light petting.

97% of us don't know what interdigitating is.

3% of us know it's holding hands.

100% of us have 1/3 or more of our epidermis showing at all times.

42.1% of us have feather cuts, which means in 3 months 42.1% of us will have that molted look unless we have another hair cut.

57.2% of us dated "the best yet" this summer.

2% of us are still hearing from our devoted ma'es.

57% of us would like to know the secret of their success.

37.2% of us think Marterle's music is suggestive for studying.

62.8% of us think it's suggestive.

51.2% of us send handkerchiefs to the Laundro-Mat.

49.8% use Kleenex.

Well, these are just the highlights of our findings; read our new book in 6 volumes printed by the I. C. Badley Co.

Notice the pictures in this first fall issue of the Rotunda?

With the installation of a new engraving machine at the Farmville Herald, publisher of the Rotunda, the college newspaper has opened new possibilities for improvement through pictorial work.

Mr. J. B. Wall, editor of the Herald, has made the engraving services available to the Rotunda at a minimum cost and is preparing pictures for the first issues without charge.

The shining, new machine is equipped with a complete dark room for developing, printing, and enlarging pictures.

Science Department Exhibits Fossils, Minerals Contributed by Brodie, Derr; Specimens Compose Geology Museum

Minerals, rocks, and fossils, some old, rare, and valuable, some more common, compose a new science museum established at Longwood College and now on display in the Stevens Science Hall.

The two private collections of 2,500 sepicmens were given to the college in 1947 by David Arthur Brodie and H. V. Derr, both Virginians and both geologists and collectors.

Through the interest of Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster after he became president of Longwood College, and Dr. George W. Jeffers and Mr. Raymond French of the College biology and science department the two geologists decided to give their valuable collections containing many beautiful pieces from all parts of the earth to the College to be used by both students and public.

The two collections, which are considered as outstanding pieces of work, were stored until the new science building was completed and they could become part of a permanent museum. Dr. Charles F. Lane, head of the college geography and geology departments, has classified and labeled 400 specimens which are now on exhibit in glass museum cases in Stevens Hall. Each specimen is displayed with a card giving its properties, uses, value, and location. The 100 rocks are classified according to whether they are of igneous sedimentary, or metamorphic origin. Classified according to phylum, genus, and species are the 100 plant and animal fossils and the 200 minerals are described according to chemical composition.

The Brodie Collection, named in honor of the geologist's wife Elizabeth Brodie, originally of Gore, Virginia, contains items from all over the United States and Canada. The collector is a native of Ontario but received his education in Oregon where he later taught school. After working as supervisor with the Western State Experiment Station in Washington, he was appointed the United States Department of Interior to the Bureau of Plant Industry. From 1924 to 1939 at the time of his retirement, Mr. Brodie supervised the Insane Farm at St. Elizabeth Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Brodie now make their home in Florida.

Minerals and insects from all over the world are part of the Collection of H. V. Derr, of Fairfax, and formerly Audio-visual supervisor of the state. His interest in minerals began in his native Illinois where he started a collection more than 40 years ago. After graduating from the University of Illinois, he became an agricultural demonstration agent in Virginia and an active leader in 4-H club work.

The science museum is not yet complete but it is open to the public and is used in connection with classes in geography and geology.

Nine Girls From Longwood Visit Hockey Camp In Penn. With Phys. Ed. Professors

Nine Longwood girls, Miss Olive Iler, head of the physical education department and Miss Rebecca Brockenborough, associate physical education professor, attended Camp Tega with a hockey camp in the Pocono mountains of Pennsylvania from September 1-8.

Miss Constance Applebee, who has been the chief promoter of hockey in this country, was director of the camp. Approximately fifteen other women assisted with the coaching.

The camp has three one week sessions and is primarily for teaching hockey. However, Lacrosse is also taught. Instruction in techniques and skills, coaching and refereeing and playing both games was provided.

High school and college girls attended the camp with Virginia colleges represented the week of September 1-8 by Sweet Briar, Mary Baldwin, Westhampton, Madison, and Longwood. In addition to those, there were girls from Texas, Michigan, New York, New Jersey and Maryland.

Those girls attending from Longwood were seniors Else Wente, Elleanor Koch, Ilia Des Portes, junior Helen Waltmann, and sophomores Carolyn Gray, Mary Davis, Patsy Hamner, Jane Lohr, and Louise Wilder.

Office Records Show June 1953 Graduates Work In Varied Fields

Gradutes of last year's senior class are now holding positions in varied fields including social work, teaching, graduate work, office work, military service and marriage.

Joy Cox is now doing social service work for a welfare department in Southwest Virginia and Lou Jamison is continuing her service in the Women's Marine Corps.

Among the seventeen girls now married or planning to be wed in the near future are Barbara Caskey, Elizabeth Collier, Betty Goodson, Lucy Page Hall, Kitty Hamlet, Challice Haydon, and Ann Keith Hundley. Others are Sarah Ann Jones, Nat Lancaster, Margaret Steele Sutphin, Margaret Taylor, Billie Dove Van de Riet, Jan Van Horn, and Freia Goetz Vaughn. Nancy Woolridge Callchan and Nancy Crymes complete this group.

Celeste Bishop, Mary Hurt Peery, Elizabeth Stone, Helen Tanner, and Sue Webb are attending the University of North Carolina Graduate School, the University of Virginia School of sity of North Carolina Graduate School, the University of Lyon, and the University of Tennessee Grauate School respectively.

Medical Technology, the University

These holding positions in the business world are Betty Jo Jennings, Sonia Kyle, Madison McClintic, Carolyn Michael, and Leonard Shaw.

The names of those teaching in elementary and high schols will be listed in the next isue of the Rotunda.

Teacher Attends Hockey Assembly

Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor of science at Longwood College will represent the United States Field Hockey Association as its only council member at the International Federation of Women's Hockey Association Trienniel Conference to be held at Folkstone, England, September 30 to October 10.

In addition to serving as council member, Miss Burger will be an official delegate to the conference. The other two delegates from the United States are Miss Harriet Rogers, professor of physical education at Sweet Briar College and Miss Margaret McVey, of Richmond.

Miss Burger now on leave of absence from Longwood for graduate study is the vice-captain of the United States Hockey Team and vice-president of the United States Field Hockey Association. During the Conference, the American team will play teams from Denmark, England, France, South Africa, Holland, and New Zealand.

Other countries that are members of the International Federation of Women's Hockey Association are: Australia, Austria, Belgium, British Guina, India, Ireland, Scotland, Spain, Switzerland, Vancouver, and Wales.

Following the conference, the United States team will tour and play hockey in the Guernsey Islands, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, and England.

Nursing Class Elects L. C. Girls as Heads

Three former Longwood girls have been elected to class offices at Stuart Circle Nursing School in Richmond. Nell Cake was elected president of the class, Frances Motley, vice-president and Betty Bentley, secretary. These girls, members of last years' sophomore class, are the only nursing students in their class of 38 to have two years of college work.

At Longwood last year "Fran" served her class as student government representative. Betty received her "secretarial training" last year serving in that office for her class and Nell was a member of the "Y" cabinet as service chairman.

From the Bleachers

by Louise Wilder

Welcome to all the new green and whites! We'll be looking forward to seeing you at all of Longwood's sports events—either as a participant or spectator.

Hockey practice has started. The response the first day was wonderful! Keep coming out whether you can play or not because there are some girls on the varsity team now who had never played before entering Longwood. Whether you play varsity hockey or not, you'll be needed for your class team. Don't forget, Freshmen, you have to wear your rat hats until Christmas if you don't beat the sophomores in hockey! :

Varsity hockey practice is held Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 4 p. m. and hockey class is held Tuesday and Thursday at 4 p. m. So come on out and learn with everybody else. After all, those who played before need practice, too! Eight practices are required before you can play on a class team. The freshmen have an advantage over the upperclassmen because their gym class automatically gives them four practices.

Cheerleader Tryouts

If you're definitely not interested in hockey, you'll want to go to the cheerleader tryouts which will be held soon. Listen for an announcement from Moneda Key, head cheerleader.

Those who don't play hockey or lead the cheering have just as important a part in athletics at Longwood as those who play and cheer. After all what good is a team and cheerleaders without spectators. Longwood girls are known for their spirit and enthusiasm. Let's start living up to that reputation by supporting all class and varsity hockey games.

The first hockey game will be October 4 at Madison. Games with Roanoke on October 16 and Westhampton on October 31 are next on the schedule. Tentative games have been arranged with William and Mary and Sweet Briar.

Heard About Whisket?

Have you heard about the new game we have at Longwood called whisket? Some of the girls were introduced to it as a play day at Mary Baldwin last year. They were so enthusiastic over it that the AA decided to buy a set. As far as we know Mary Baldwin is the only other Virginia college with it. A team consists of nine people who have the same positions as a baseball team. The ball is hit with a bat and caught, pitched and thrown with a requet. Who knows maybe Longwood will become famous for introducing inter-collegiate whisket games.

That's all "from the bleachers" now—see you next week.

Orientation Week Discloses Changes; 50 Leaders, Assistants Aid Program

Streamlined changes in traditional Longwood orientation activities presented several new features in last week's program led by 25 senior orientation leaders and 25 junior assistants.

Miss Kathleen Cover, adviser for orientation, and Elleanor Koch, student chairman, planned the week's activities which included classes to study government and house council rules, signing of the honor code, physical inspections, meetings with department heads, and registration. Parties given by the "Y" and the junior class, a tea at the home of President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, and "unofficial" serenades and stampedes rounded out the week.

Because of new systems used in matriculation and registration 243 students were able to matriculate in 25 minutes Monday. They reported directly to the gym after English tests.

Wednesday all of the new students were registered by noon. The elementary and business education majors were divided in two sections. Also books were sold only to new students Thursday and most of them were able to get their books before classes.

Since school opened later than usual there were only three actual days of orientation but the classes will be continued until October 1 by having one important meeting a day for the freshmen.

Those activities remaining on the orientation calendar include a meeting on Wednesday, September 30 at 7 p. m. When activities in which freshmen and new students may participate will be discussed. One representative from each organization will be present to answer questions. Freshmen should bring pen and pencil.

On Thursday, October 1, at 1 p. m., all freshmen and transfer students will report to the gym for scholastic aptitude tests. They must bring two pencils and notebook or another object on which to write.

According to Mrs. Cover, the leaders have done a splendid job and the new students responded very well and seem to know their way around.

Orientation leaders and their assistants, chosen according to their interest shown in college and ability to accurately present college life to the freshmen, include Patsy Sanford, Mary Ann Ward, Pat Altwegg, Dot Vaden, Barbara Assaid, Joan Ward, Lou Beavers, Joan Conley, Mary Hundley, Betty Benton, Billie Tomlinson, Jane Bailey, Barbara Blackman, Ann Carter Wendenburg, Jane Branch, Eloise Macon, Betty Gillette, Joan DeAlba, Dolly Horne and Karen Spencer.

Also Betty Islin, Audrey Powell, June Johns, Donnie Devine, Lou Kitts, Trianne Lamkin, Moneda Key, Helen Waltmann, Mason Moore and Dot Douglas. Lucy Mann, Beth Kent, Ellen Porter, Jean Carol Parker, Betsy Jean Robertson, Gail Dickson, Mary Elva Robinson, and Nancy Nelson.

Also serving were Virginia Sutherland, Hilda Hartis, Ann Thomas, Pat McLemore, Else Wente, Dot Morris, Mary Ann Evans, Becky Hines, and Shirley Ward. Jean

A. A. to Give Games, Dance Prevue, Oct. 1

A demonstration of all big seal education activities offered at Longwood will be given on the campus tomorrow afternoon. The demonstration is sponsored annually by the Athletic Association to acquaint new students with Longwoods sports opportunities. It is directed by Jean Hedrick, vice president of the A. A.

The demonstration will begin in the gymnasium with modern dance, basketball and volleyball followed by swimming in the pool next to the gym. It will be concluded on the A. A. field with tennis, archery, hockey and basket.

Following the demonstration a picnic will be held on the circle behind Tabb Hall. At this time blazer awards will be given to the seniors who have been outstanding in the athletics during their college careers. The awards are based on sportsmanship, variety participation and scholarship. Blue blazers are given to those who have been outstanding in one or two sports and white ones are given to those who have participated in various sports.

All of these sports activities will be opened for participation by freshmen. They are urged to get a "preview" of athletics at the demonstration.

Seniors Order Caps

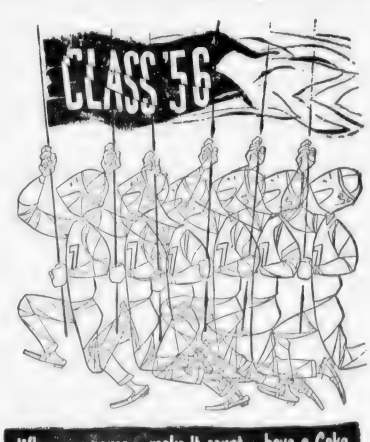
Sales orders are now being taken for caps, gowns, and tassels for members of the senior class. Ann Moore is in charge of the sales and urges that orders be placed immediately because two weeks are needed for filling them. Capping ceremonies will take place as soon as all seniors receive their new caps and gowns.

Notice

A new series of three kodachrome post cards showing views of Jarman Hall, Ruffner Hall, and the Student Activites Building have recently been printed. Done in natural color, they are now on sale at the Snack Bar for $.04 each or four for $.15.

Dr. Molnar Tells Of Opportunities In College Music

Auditions for the Longwood Choir and Orchestra began this week and will continue through next week according to Dr. John Molnar, head of the music department. They are being held in the music department of Jarman Hall. Again this year, one-half credit each semester will be offered for participation in these groups.



Those interested in the choir should report to the department any week day, with the exception of Tuesday between 3 and 5 o'clock. Students are reminded that although tryouts are required, not much readers ability is necessary, emphasis being more in tone quality and a good ear. The first rehearsal of the choir was held today but auditions will continue throughout next week.

Orchestra and band tryouts will be held between 3 and 5 o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Anyone who plays an instrument is invited to attend.

Again this year, the chorus, which requires no tryout, will be organized. One-half credit each semester will also be given for participation in this group.

Plans for appearances of these musical organizations include the Christmas concert, a projected operetta, and several concerts away from the college.

Pan-Hellenic Council Adviser Reveals '53 Scholastic Achievement Averages Among Various Sororities on Campus

Kappa Delta Attains Highest Place Award

Spring 1953 scholastic averages among the various campus sororities have been announced by Miss Kathleen Cover, adviser to the Pan-Hellenic Council.

The annual award given to the sorority with the highest standing will be made to Kappa Delta at the fall Pan Hellenic tea. Kappa Delta attained an average of 2.11. Delta Sigma Epsilon followed with a standing of 1.82. Ranking third was Sigma Sigma Sigma with 1.77. Others according to their averages are Zeta Tau Alpha 1.75; Pi Kappa Sigma 1.73; Alpha Sigma Alpha 1.62; Alpha Sigma Tau 1.60 and Theta Sigma Upsilon, 1.52.

Mrs. Cover has also released the 1952-53 yearly scholastic average for the sororities and Kappa Delta leads with a standing of 2.04. Delta Sigma Epsilon averaged 1.88, and Sigma Sigma Sigma ranked third with an average of 1.74. In order the other sorority averages were Zeta Tau Alpha 1.70; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.65; Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.65; Alpha Sigma Alpha, 1.61; and Theta Sigma Upsilon, 1.49.

College Completes Sorority Kitchen

With the addition of eight cabinets, an aluminum sink, a stove, and eight electrical outlets, a kitchen for the use of sororities and other social organizations was recently completed on the second floor of Student Building.

The improvement was undertaken as the annual project of the Pan-Hellenic Association, which is made up of representatives from the eight social groups on campus. The idea for the kitchen was conceived last spring and plans were laid for its completion.

An approximate cost of $700 was imposed to transform the empty room to a kitchen. Equal contributions from each sorority with an equal amount given by the college were the sources of finance for the project.

Ann Mallory, president of the Pan-Hellenic Association, stated that the kitchen will foster better relationship among the girls as well as fill a need for such an improvement. She also stated that other social organizations will have access to the kitchen when it is needed.

Mr. Jacob Wamsley, assistant business manager, Mr. Samuel Graham, business manager of the College, Miss Kathleen Cover, guidance director and adviser to the Pan-Hel Association, and a decorating committee acted as supervisers to the project.

Nine Students Serve On Assembly Comm. For Coming Session

Mary Denny Wilson, president of the Studen. Council has appointed Dot Douglas, as student chairman of the assembly committee. Two girls from each class have been appointed to the committee. Betty Frances Gillette and Peggy Hood have been selected from the senior class. To serve from the junior class are Nancy Nelson and Jean Carol Parker. The sophomore class is to be represented by Ann Field Brooking and Joyce Clingenpeel and the freshman class is to be represented by Gloria Kratzsch and Janet Kuyk.

These girls will submit students' ideas for assemblies to Miss Rebecca Brockenborough, associate professor of education, and chairman of the college assembly committee. These girls will work with that committee in planning and presenting weekly assembly programs.

A change in the method of assembly roll taking has been announced by the college assembly committee.

Every student will be given a number which must be checked off a list at every assembly. Eight monitors will be stationed at various entrances to Jarman Hall and each student will report to a certain monitor each Tuesday. This method replaces last year's system of assigning seats and checking for vacancies. The new system will be placed into effect next Tuesday at the regular assembly.

Longwood's first asembly of the year, held yesterday in Jarman Hall, presented representatives of the five Farmville church's in their annual talks to the students.

Six Practices Home Making At Longwood

Under the supervision of Mrs. Nell Griffin, head of the home economics department of Longwood College, six senior home economic majors have moved into the home management house.

They are Dorothy Edwards, Isabelle Karnes, Sarah Leatherman, Jackie Palmer, Martha Wilson, and Betty Hoffman.

This required course of study in the home management house will last for a period of nine weeks. During this time these students will buy food, plan meals, arrange budgeting, and will participate in household activities.

The six girls stated that so far they were enjoying the experience very much.

Enrollment

Shirley, secondary education art major, is minoring in elementary education.

Sally came to Longwood from Mary Washington to seek a liberal arts degree. She is majoring in sociology and is minoring in Spanish. Sally is a native of Roanoke. While at Mary Washington, she was a member of the Hoof Prints Hunt Club.

Anne, from Wytheville comes from Madison College as an elementary major. While at Madison, Anne held membership in the honor council, German Club, American Childhood Education, and Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

Coming from Danville and graduating from Averett College are Sue Raymond, Roberta King, and Betty Lou Jefferson.

Sue, seeking a liberal arts in English here, was co-captain of the basketball team at Averett and a member of the hockey team.

Roberta plans to major in elementary education here. At Averett she was the day student C. S. U. representative.

Betty Lou is a biology major in Seconadry education. She was on the editorial staff of the Averett College newspaper and a member of Phi Theta Kappa.

Iris, from Northern Neck Virginia, transferred from Radford College. Y.W.C.A., Athletic Association, Home Economics Club, and the B. S. U. claimed her membership. Iris is a home economics major.

Four girls transferred to the sophomore class. They are Marion Webb, Dorothy Rector, Jerry Lee Haley, and Frances Stubbs.

Marian, coming from Westhampton, is from Manokin. At Westhampton Marians' activities included membership in the Glee Club, Choir, B. S. U., and Baptist Choir.

From William and Mary, Dotty Rector was a member of the cheerleading squad, and college choir. Dotty's home is in Arlington.

Jerry, from Ashland, atended Mary Washington prior to her coming to Longwood. At Mary Washington Jerry was co-captain of the freshman basketball team.

Frances, a transfer from Norfolk Division of William and Mary, was a member of Kappa Kappa Kappa, and also treasurer of her class last year. Frances is majoring in English.

Executive Sec. Issues LC Dean's List Group For '53 Spring Session

New Ruling Effects 51 Juniors, Seniors

The dean's list, revealing the names of 63 students now enrolled at Longwood who attained a scholastic average of 2.25 and higher during the second semester of the 1952-1953 session, was released by Mrs. Mary Watkins, executive secretary, this week.

Listed below are the names of those students recognized for their superior scholarship.

Patricia Altwegg, Gloria Anderton, Barbara Assaid, Lu Beavers, Betty Benton, Barbara Blackman, Jane Blake, Florence Blake, Lynell Bradshaw, Anne Brookins, Joan Conley, Mary Cowles, Virginia Cowles, Nell Crocker, Lois Crutchfield, Juanita Dayberry, Wanda Doll, Emilie Eggert, Mary Alice Ellington, Mary Ann Evans, and Joyce Gillchrest.

Others are Elizabeth Gillikin, Herbert Goodman, Fay Greenland, Patsy Hamner, Joan Harvey, Leora Hayes, Doris Horne, Elizabeth Islin, Georgia Jackson, Ann Jones, Shirley Kemp, Beth Kent, Patricia McLemore, Eloise Macon, Ann Mallory, Edna Mann, Pollyanna Martin, Betty Jane Newsom, James Parker, Joyce Pomeroy and Phyllis Powell.

All Classes Meet; Choose Sponsors, Committee Heads

Dr. C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English, and Mr. Raymond H. French, associate professor of chemistry and physics were recently elected sponsors of the sophomore and freshman classes, respectively, at their first class meetings of the year, held last week.

The sophomores elected Dr. Earley to replace Dr. Wesley Lainz, and Dr. Jack Burke who did not return to Longwood this year.

Mr. French was unanimously elected by the freshman class to serve as their sponsor. He has served as sponsor for four other green and white classes, these being the classes of '41, '45, '49, and '53.

Also, the junior class elected Marlene Lucas to replace Mary Dabney Langhorne as house president and Karen Spencer was elected chairman of the Song Contest. To head the committees for the junior dance are Jeanne Lynch Hobbs, dance chairman; Jean Carol Parker, orchestra chairman; and Beth Kent, decoration chairman.

In for the elections, Garland Webster, was chosen as Student Standards representative by the sophomores, to replace Anne Shuff, who did not return this year. The sophomores also elected Nell Crocker, sophomore hostess and Georgia Jackson assistant hostess. It is the duty of these girls to see that girls assume hostess and telephone duty. Mary Ellen Hawthorne was elected to serve as chairman of the Song Contest for the sophomores.

State Legislators Will Tour Campus Friday, October 9

Twenty-one members of the Virginia State Legislature will visit the Longwood campus on Friday, October 9.

A tour of the entire college plant is included in the program. This visit and tour is part of a state wide tour for the legislators, of Virginia colleges, hospitals, and institutions which will help acquaint the legislators with the use of state appropriated funds. At the last assembly, special appropriations were made to pay the expenses of the tours and there will be three different groups. The tours are under the direction of Mr. J. H. Bradford, director of the budget.

The schedule of visits includes the second group which will arrive on Friday, October 23, and the third visit which will be Friday, November 23. The group will arrive by 2:15 P. M. on Friday in time for lunch.

President Dabney S. Lancaster has urged that the student body show their usual hospitality and friendliness to make the visitors welcome, and be on the look out for representatives from their home areas.

Senators in the first group are Carter Curry, Augusta; Walter H. Carter, Amherst; S. Floyd Landreth, Galax; and George M. Warren, Bristol.

Members of the House of Delegates in the first group will be Joseph E. Blackburn; Stuart B. Carter, Botetourt; Hale Collins, Clifton Forge; E. C. Compton; Dr. E. C. Grrear, Scott; Kossen Gregory; Edward M. Hudgins, Chesterfield; Charles E. Green; C. D. Price, Page; and Samuel E. Pope, Southhampton. Also, Garrett Moore, Joseph E. Proffitt, Floyd; Arthur H. Richardson, Dinwiddie; Julian H. Rutherford, Jr., Roanoke; V. S. Shaffer, Shenandoah; Harold B. Singleton, Amherst; Roy Smith, Petersburg; and Dr. Jack W. Witten, Tazewell. Program coordinator for the tour is Fred T. Saunders of the State Budget Department.

L C Men Students Organize For Year

Plans for a part in the Longwood circus to be held on Halloween Night were discussed at a meeting of the Men's Student Government Association held Wednesday, September 30.

Richard Daiger, a sophomore from Erica, and Jack Austin, a freshman from Buckingham Court House, were appointed to represent the men on the student standards committee. An athletic program, which would include basketball, was also discussed.

The group suggested that Dr. C. Gordon Moss, Professor of History, be named the new faculty advisor of Men's Student Government.

Six freshmen joined the Men's Student Government Association this year. They are Bobby Barden, Jack Austin, Harold Magnussom, Fred Stables, Rex Daye, and Harry Lancaster.

Wente Will Assist Activities, Oct. 31

By way of broomsticks and pumpkins, the Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus of 1953 will arrive at Longwood October 31 with a parade, four class skits, dance, and concessions.

"Halloween Capers" has been chosen as the theme of this annual event according to Pat Altwegg, newly selected general chairman.

Else Wente was appointed assistant chairman to aid Pat in carrying out the theme of the "witches day" in full accordance with the tradition of season. This theme will be represented by colors and decorations displayed in the parade; gowns worn by queen and court representatives from each class; costumes donned by skit ushers; and decorations in full colors disolayed by various booths in the recreation hall.

Lu Beavers will act as stunt chairman for the event. The heralding of the parade through the main streets of Farmville will be the responsibility of Mary Anne King, chairman.

Other committee chairmen are Else Wente, animals and costumes; Mary Denny Wilson, advertising and tickets; Betty Islin, decorations and booth; Queens Court, Pat Altwegg.

Mary Jean Carlyle, from Bedford, will serve as chairman of the senior skit. Co-chairmen from the junior class are Nancy Tanley Masters of Newport News, and Dot Douglas of Roanoke.

Foreign Language Informats Relate Various Impressions Of Longwood Students, Life; Farmville, United States

By GLORIA ANDERTON

Two charming misses from across the sea have arrived here in Farmville and have become members of Longwood College as new Spanish and French informants.

Sylvia Bascour, who comes to us from Santiago, Chile, will work with Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of modern languages.

Catherine Denise Dessaix, a foreign language major, comes to Longwood from Paris, France, for a year of study under the Fullbright Scholarship and will act as consultant to Miss Helen Draper, French instructor and professor of modern languages at Longwood.

Sylvia, an attractive dark-eyed brunette, is an English major, and attended the University of Chile for four years before coming to this country. She will stay here for one year. Along with teaching she will also attend classes and take the required examinations.

Upon her return to Chile next fall, she will receive her B. S. degree in secondary education and will be a fully qualified English instructor.

As we talked with Sylvia, she very enthusiastically said that even though she had been in Farmville and at Longwood for only five days, she liked it very much. She stated that she liked everything about the school, but especially the friendly attitude of Longwood girls. She expressed the desire to meet many people and make many friends while here, and to learn the ways and customs of the people of this country.

One of the odd things that she finds concerning the courses at Longwood is the fact that all students are not required to take courses in Spanish. According to Sylvia, in Chile students are required to learn English in the schools and universities. One of children, Sylvia said that she is the first member of her family to travel outside of her country.

Students To Become Official 1954 Seniors At Capping Service

A four year dream comes true t morrow night when ninety seniors will take part in the traditional capping ceremonies. Each girl, according to Nell Copley, president of the senior class, looks forward to the ceremony for it is at this time that each person in the class of 1954 officially becomes a senior. This takes place when the little sister, in white attire, hands the cap to Dr. Lancaster who in turn caps each girl as an official senior.

The Rev. Benjamin R. Bruner, pastor of the Farmville Baptist Church, will lead devotionals for the occasion.

Nell Conley, Lib Boswell, Ann Moore and Jane Johns, officers of the Senior Class, will lead the procession to the tune of "Red 'n White." The little sisters will walk in the procession beside their big sisters and will sit directly behind them.

Sagacious Sophs Announce Rat Rules to Shallow Frosh

By the SOPHOMORE CLASS

Lo k out you lowly freshmen! Rat Day will be Saturday, October 17, 1953. It will begin at the cheerful hour of 6:30 a. m. and end at 4 p. m.

There are several rules that would be advisable for all rats to know.

1. Rats must be dressed as confederate Jane. They must not wear any green. The following apparel must be worn:

Red socks, dyed or red crepe paper tied around white [illegible] and tennis shoes with red [illegible]

Dresses, pedal, tied with [illegible] and each one must [illegible] a cane of a confederate state.

Carry a confederate flag preferably homemade.

2. Each rat is not to spend more than fifty cents on her costume.

3. All rats must learn the sophs. They must be able to repeat it whenever a sophomore requests it.

4. Rats from home [illegible] and [illegible] Each rat must report to the procession beside their [illegible] and seem to sense that the fantastically, sagacious sophomores surpass us scholastically and socially, for standard statistic state sophomores stand stable, steadfast and staunch since stratosphere started. Such singular stamina surely speaks splendid success. Sophomores should really sever all connections with silly, shallow freshmen, since they are scraping in a schamachy. PRAISE '56!

4. Each rat must have at least five appointments. Every rat will be checked after dinner the night preceding Rat Day.

5. Appointments will be made the day before Rat Day.

6. Rats will clean sophomore rooms, entertain (name states in confederacy, sing Red 'n White to tune of Dixie, [illegible]-off, and [illegible] Shoes.

7. All rats notified must go to 'Little Rat Court". All rats must attend "Big Rat Court" wearing red and white.

8. All rats must obey the sophs and call them by "Miss".

9. All meals and classes must be attended. Ratting is confined to the campus.

10. All rats report to the lawn in front of Tabb Hall immediately after lunch.

11. All rats must report to the gym at 6:30 a. m. No appointments can be had until after breakfast.

A Suggestion

Student Standards is an organization that every student knows by name; but, only very few know in what manner does it function or why it has its presence on campus.

First of all, its purpose should be stated and then examined to find how it affects the students here at Longwood.

"The Student Standards Committee works to bring about a spirit of co-operation in the solution of student problems."

The key-words in this first part are co-operation and solution of student problems. Class representatives bring to the committee suggested improvements for the betterment of the college from interested students. Last year, for example, many water coolers were bought and placed all over the various buildings of the college. The need for them had become apparent by numerous student requests, which of course came through Student Standards Committee. Now, cold drinking water is available to everyone.

Other improvements which were made last year through the committee were the establishment of the calendar of organizations posted outside the dining hall to reduce the number of announcements read at meal-time; the establishment of a campus committee to work with Mr. Samuel Graham, business manager, and Dr. R. T. Brumfield, associate professor of biology, on the preservation of grass on campus and the general beautifying of the landscape; and the establishment of a calendar in the home office for location and time of meetings outside the college.

To continue with the purpose or — "and to foster high standards of action and scholarship." The committee regulates a student from taking part in too many extra-curricular activities by allowing her to be in no more than eight organizations. The committee also regulates grade averages for students who hold major and minor offices.

"It acts as a clearing house for problems between the student body and the faculty or administration."

The committee, by means of student requests, can inform or enlighten administration members of student problems which are unknown to them. For example, a very much needed improvement is the installation of a light behind the library for students who practice or work in the music building at night. This particular problem is before the comimttee right now for consideration.

It should be stressed, here, that any representative obtaining two unexcused absences will be dropped from the roll and a new one elected in her place. This practice insures each indiivdual class of having a voice in all decisions made.

Many plans and improvements are underway this year to instill in the students an awareness of the Student Standards Committee on campus.

Support it by your suggestions!

Don't Get Personal

"We'll remember you! On your knees, rat!" Does this bring a shudder to your soul? It shouldn't! Both freshmen and sophomores should be looking forward to rat day as a high point in college.

Theoretically rat day is supposed to initiate the novice into college life. It may appear, however, that the purpose of rat day is instilling the freshman with her own inferority and the sophomore with her own superiority. This should not, and in most cases, is not true. It is a day of fun, a day of good sportsmanship, a day of getting acquainted, a day for the freshman's really belonging, a day to be remembered with pride, not bitterness, by all.

Rat day is not a day for sophomores to vent personal feeelings, rather a day of impartial and impersonal ratting. Otherwise, the day will end in misery and homesickness for the freshman who has borne the brunt of personal grudges.

The upperclassmen also have a part in rat day, and that part is "out"-

Keep rat day a day of fun and good sportsmanship—and we'll remember you—remember you with pride and affection.

A Good Solution

One of the nicest privileges of a news paper editorial writer is to commend improvements and progress, giving credit where credit is due. The Rotunda counts it an opportunity to express the thanks and appreciation of the student body for some particular event, new method, or progress in school regulations.

Last spring the Rotunda "stuck its two cents worth in" about a certain college problem—and now that this problem is on its way to a solution we want to say thank you. thank you to the 1953-1954 assembly committee for a new method of assembly roll call. All of the old girls were pleased to note this new practice because it will avoid the confusion, and inattentiveness so prominent last year. And for the new girls it gives a good impression of Longwood assemblies. It is now our responsibility to support this new method of taking roll at the doors by promptness, cooperation, and courtesy to the monitors.

Our thanks again to the assembly committee for considering and changing this roll call method. We extend our best wishes for a season of good programs and successful work.

V. M. I.-Richmond Game

The bus was mighty crowded Friday afternoon when the crowd started out for a big week end in Richmond! Among those that attended the game were Joanne Farless, June Elder, Gail Patrick (the star of the Richmond band), Iris Scott, Karen Spencer, Lu Beavers, Shirley Osbourne, Rita Russell, Dale Brothers, Connie Coyner, Carolyn Smith, Florence Pollard, Dolly Hoorne, Wanda Doll, and Mary Ann Wright, Audrew Owen, and Betty Atkins. Our head cheerleader for V. M. I. was Donnie Devine, of course, along with Peggy Worthington, Dot Armstrong, Lou Kitts, Pat McLemore and yours truly.

U. Va.-South Carolina

Never let it be said that we'd let the U. Va. boys down (they're bound to win soon by the law of averages—I got this from your Dr. Linsey reporter, Miss Douglas). Those attending the game and the fraternity parties last week end were Bobbie Southern, Joyce Quick, Beth Kent, Mary Hundley, Rhonda Deering and Bev Harlow. Also, Sylvia Overton, Ann Turley, Ann Wit, Betty Davis, Shirley Kemp, and Ruth Gilliland.

Annapolis-Dartmouth Game

Ann Watkins, Trianne Lampkin and Louise Nelson were rooting for Navy at their game against Dartmouth last Saturday!

Mary Elva Robinson attended the Phi Kappa Sigma party at Randolph-Macon last week end. Miss Robinson is working for her MRS degree along with her B. S. and so commutes from Randolph-Macon to Longwood during the week.

Weddings of Interest

Last week Cleo Holliday was married in Suffolk to Rex Pardington, III. Those attending were Betty Benton, and Mary Hundley.

Your ex-social edito,' Barbara Caskey is in the social limelight in Richmond herself this week. "Caskey" was married Tuesday night to Jim Hopkins. Serving as her atendants were Betsy Hankins, Judy "Hosea" Cox and Pat McLemore!

Methodist Group Suggests 3 Goals

By DOROTHY MORRIS

Editor's Note: (This is second in a series of five articles to be published in successive issues of the Rotunda. They are written by representatives of the various church groups giving their personal viewpoints and the activities of the organization).

Now that the school year has finally begun in earnest, we should stop a moment and take note of the goals and objectives we wish to accomplish in this year.

Our goals should include lasting friendships with our classmates, determination to do our best in our scholastic studies, and the development of our own personal life.

The Wesley Foundation and Methodist Church are willing and ready to help you in achieving these three goals.

Our pastor, the Rev. Charles O. Kidd, and director of Wesley Foundation, Miss Melinda Ayers, are eager to know each student and to serve her at all times.

The Methodist Church welcomes you to its morning and evening services and also invites you to join its choir. The Church maintains the Wesley Foundation Center for your convenience. The Center is open to all students at all times—complete with kitchen, outdoor fireplace, easy chairs, piano, games. Come down and make yourself at home.

It's 1964....

Perhaps they are some of the old Tacky Alley gang or a few of those who trudged up four flights of stairs to Student. Or maybe they lived on third floor junior annex, or first floor Cunningham.

Anyway it is 1964 and a group of the old crowd, college days long behind, meet again after several years' separation. And the conversation goes like this:

"Remember back in '54 . . . ?"

"And Charlie Hop's new green 'n white class . . . "

"Wonder what became of . . . "

"And circus that year was on Hallowe en . . . "

And so it goes whenever the gang gets together—reminiscences, questions, a little news. Then someone pulls out an annual and the memories and laughter, names, faces crowd in quickly.

This is not one of those "paid political advertisements." It is simply a few words in support of the Rotunda's sister publication, The Virginian, Longwood's yearbook. As the Rotunda seeks to present a current report of college affairs, it is the purpose of the annual to establish a permanent record of campus life.

It is amazing how one's memory betrays and all those little "unforgettable" incidents become vague and disjointed. We forget names and faces over three months of summer—how much more we will forget them over the years.

Perhaps at the present the price of an annual seems too high for the typically "broke" college girls. But these prices are in keeping with the best quality of printing, engraving, and binding that is available. What is one year's cost of $8 compared with the years of use and pleasure?

Knock, Knock! Who's There? Don! Don Who? DeDondon!

By JACKIE MARSHALL

My name is Wednesday—Joe Wednesday. My faithful partner in law is Don DeDondon. The story you are about to hear is simply ridiculous and any characters similar to people living or dead is purely intentional.

Thursday, Octhober 1, 1953: It was just another day in Sophomore dormitory. Everything was boring as usual as my partner and I made the daily rounds down the dark sinister corridors where many of the toughest mugs in Longwood live. We ran into a few dangerous looking molls slinking around wearing next to nothing and dangling an emperor-sized cigarette from fuchia-colored lips.

I remained calm and collected and told Don to write up a report for the books. I went on back to my little walk-up flat to try to relax a while.

I put my water pistol on the desk, poured myself a root beer and started reading the paper; Dick Tracy was still working on the Canhead case.

I had been relaxing for a little more than twenty minutes when I heard it—"Knock, knock". I swung around, grabbed my water pistol, fell on the floor, slide under the bed, peeped through a moth hole in the bedspread—and waited.

Who could it be? I'm a cop; I have no social callers—especially late afternoon social callers. There it was again — "Knock, knock." I aimed my pistol at the door and with shaking voice, I said, "Who's there?" (A cop trusts nobody.) A voice answered, "Don." I said, "Don who?" He said "Don DeDondon." I breathed a sigh of relief and opened the door. Don seemed terribly upset. I told him to sit down a while. I fixed him a strong shot of tea. Then grabbing my arm, he pulled me after him mumbling something about "Crazy, man, crazy."

I strung along with him, mainly because my suspenders were caught in his jacket button, and he led me up to third floor. Where only a while before, I had seen peace and quiet, there was now great noise and confusion. A crowd of panic-stricken Sophomores stood gaping at something beyond my sight.

What was that? Huge red footprints could be seen leading from the door of the phone booth, which bore a make-shift sign saying, "Men's Dormitory" — up the side of the wall, over the ceiling and down into the Matron's room, which is occupied by two of our college inmates. Suddenly, there was a scurry of little feet, and two creatures ran madly down the corridor—hats in hands. "Catch these Rats", I screamed. But it was too late. Before we could have rounded up a posse, the culprits had galloped over the border.

We still have the footprints as evidence but no one here wears a sixteen triple A shoe. Don DeDondon and I are gathering even more evidence in order to have a case to present before the court when it meets October 17.

So ends another "yet-to-be-solved mystery" in the law report of Wednesday and DeDondon, Laws Incorporated.

Church News

By Anne Thaxton

Baptist:

Revival services will be held October 4 through October 11, by Dr. Sydnor L. Stealey, President of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary. Services are held at the Farmville Baptist Church at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. on Sundays, and Monday through Friday, services at 8 p. m. Everyone is invited. Youth night, with special music furnished by the B. S. U. Choir, will be on Thursday night. Come early in the week so you won't miss the wonderful sermons.

Episcopal:

After the supper meeting which was held October 4, the Rev. Mr. Donald T. Oakes spoke to the Canterbury Club in the Parrish House. Mr. Oakes organized the Nippon Seikokol (Episcopal) college work program to begin this year with a student center at Hokkaido University, Japan.

On October 11, after a candlelight service, Dr. Earley will show slides of the Coronation.

Presbyterian:

The first supper meeting of Wes-Fell was observed at the church on Sunday, October 4 with Dr. W. Guerrant, new Bible professor at Hampden-Sydney, as speaker.

On Friday, October 9, eight Wes-Fell Longwood students and eight Hampden-Sydney students, accompanied by Miss Kay Arrowood director of young peoples activities, will journey to Harrisonburg for the Westminister Fellowship Conference Synod held every fall. Longwood girls making the trip which will extend through Sunday are Elizabeth Pancake, Carolyn Stanley, Betty Wheeler, Pat Jones, Elizabeth Wilson, Georgia McCray, Nancy McLawhorn, and Joan Wilson.

From the Bleachers

by Louise Wilder

Congratulations to those who helped plan the Athletic Association demonstration! I have heard many fine comments about it.

I owe an apology to Clara Borum and to the readers of this article. I failed to include Clara as one of the girls who attended hockey camp from Longwood. She went the week following the other nine girls. She not only played on a mixed college team but also played with the coaches. So you can see that she worked hard and definitely should have been included in last week's story about hockey camp.

Twenty-six girls were chosen for a tentative varsity hockey squad. They are Clara Borum, Helen Waitman, Eleanor Koch, Hilda Hartis, Else Wente, Patsy Sanford, Janie Lohr, Anne Mallory, Mary Anne Word, Shirley Mallory, Fay Evans, Mary Davis, and Anne Snyder. Other members of the tentative hockey squad are Carolyn Gray, Ilia Des Portes, Roberta Wiatt, Ann Parkinson, Sarah Brisentine, Audry Owen, Nancy Hartman, Joan Ward, Becky Hines, Patsy Hamner, Edith Frame, Jerry Haley, and Louise Wilder.

Patsy Sanford, senior physical education major, was chosen captain of the varsity hockey squad. Congratulations, Patsy!

The hockey team certainly enjoyed the trip to Madison last Saturday. The girls from Madison and Longwood went to hockey camp together had a gay time chatting. Of course, they took time out from the conversation to enjoy the delicious refreshments that the Madison girls served.

Two Longwood alumnae were at the Madison game. Helen Castros, graduate of last year, drove up from Roanoke where she teaches physical education. Mrs. Turner Graves (formerly Margaret Lohr) came from Madison to support the Longwood girls.

You World Series fans take it easy. We don't want anybody ending up in the infirmary from excitement, but we do say three cheers for the Yankees—they did it again!

A singles tennis tournament will begin soon. All those interested in playing should sign up at the Athletic Association bulletin board this week.

Recreational swimming will be held on Wednesday nights at 10 p. m. and Friday afternoons at 4 p. m. again this year. Come on down and practice. Who knows, some swimming meets may be arranged this year.

Notice

Longwood's television set has has recently been removed from the small auditorium to the Rec in Ruffner Hall.

Mary Denny Wilson, president of student government which is responsible for the change has stated that it is hoped that more girls will know be able to use and enjoy the set. She urged that all students use the proper care in playing the set.

School Hockey Teams Take Season Openers Over Madison College

With only a week's practice the Longwood hockey team opened the season Saturday, October 3, with two games at Madison College.

Longwood topped Madison in the first game 4-2. The ball was kept in the Madison territory by Longwood the majority of the first half and the half ended with Longwood leading 3-0. The goals were made by Clara Borum, Hilda Hartis and Eleanor Koch.

Longwood held Madison scoreless until the end of the second half when they worked passed the Longwood team to make two successive goals.

Longwood's score was raised to four by a final goal by Helen Waitman, Eleanor Koch, Hilda Hartis, Else Wente, Jane Lohr, Patsy Sanford, Anne Mallory, Mary Ann Ward, Shirley Mallory and Louise Wilder played in the first game.

The second game ended in a 2-2 tie. Though it was the first game for many of the girls they were able to hold the Madison girls to a tie.

The remainder of the girls on the hockey squad played in the second game. Fay Evans and Jerry Haley made the two goals.

Outstanding participation in athletics obtained highest A. A. awards, blazers, for seniors Wiatt, Wente, Sanford, and Koch. Staff photo by Winder

Four Seniors of Longwood Receive AA Blazer Honors

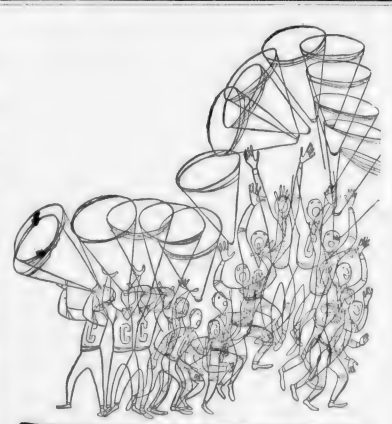
Four Longwood seniors received blazer awards following the Athletic Association demonstration, held last Thursday, October 1.

White blazers were awarded to Patsy Sanford and Else Wente. Roberta Wiatt and Eleanor Koch received blue blazers.

Blazers are awarded to the seniors who have been outstanding in athletics during their college careers. The awards are based on sportsmanship, varsity participation and scholarship.

Blue blazers are given to those who have been outstanding in one or two sports and white ones are given to those who have participated in various sports. A point system is used for sports participation, each event awarding a certain number of points.

All four of the girls are physical education majors and have participated in various athletic activities since entering Longwood.



They have been active in varsity hockey and basketball and participated in class hockey, basketball, and volleyball games. All have been members of the Athletic Association council.

Else is president of the Athletic Association this year, and was treasurer of the Athletic Association last year.

Patsy was secretary of the Athletic Association last year and is now captain of the varsity hockey team.

Roberta and Eleanor participated in class and varsity swimming and Patsy and Else have also played varsity tennis.

Completing the list are Betty Lou Southall, Dot Stringfield, Ann Thaxton, Mary Ann Ward, Shirley Ward, Else Wente, and Virginia Wentz.

Students To See 2 Limon Concerts At Sweetbriar; RM

Orchesis members and the modern dance class will travel to Randolph Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg tomorrow night to witness the performance of the renown contemporary dancer, Jose Limon.

Students of the dance appreciation class will attend the same performance on Friday night at Sweet Briar College, Lynchburg, according to Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, advisor and instructor of both groups.

Jose Limon is the outstanding male contemporary dancer of the second generation. Mrs. Landrum stated that it is hoped that he will appear on campus next year as a leading artist.

O'Neill's Play To Run Here

Eugene O'Neill's only comedy, "Ah, Wilderness!" will be presented at Jaman Hall on October 28 by the world famous Barter Theatre of Virginia.

A news release from John Ardinger, press representative for the Barter Theatre, describes the play as, "a tale of rebellious adolescence and tremulous young love. It is warmly compassionate good-natured and unpretentious, mellow with the wisdom of acceptance and gay with a sympathetic insight into the foibles of mankind."

The Barter Players have appeared here many times previously and last year presented "The Curious Savage" and "The Virginian" as their fall and spring performances.

Alumnae Chapters Report Activities

News from various Alumnae Chapters has been received and compiled by Mrs. M. R. Coyner, alumnae secretary.

The Richmond Alumnae Chapter is having a tea from 3:00 p. m. to 5:00 p. m., in the Monroe Room of the John Marshall Hotel, Thursday, October 29, for the alumnae who will be attending the annual Virginia Education Association meeting. All Longwood College faculty members are invited and urged to attend. Mrs. R. R. Carter, formerly Harriet Cowles, is the new president of this chapter.

at Culpeper High School is being sponsored by the Culpeper Alumnae Chapter of which Mrs. E. O. Willis, III, formerly Ann McMullen, is president. Mrs. Coyner, alumnae secretary, and Mr. Charles H. Patterson of the audio-visual education department, will attend, and Mr. Patterson will show slides of the college. The Farmville Alumnae Chapter is having a tea in the Student Building Lounge from 4:00 to 5:30 p. m. on October 14, honoring the new members of the Longwood College faculty and the new teachers in the Farmville public schools. Mrs. B. T. Taylor, Jr., formerly Martha McCorkle, is the new president of this chapter.

Special Students

Sylvia is very happy to be teaching Spanish at Longwood and hopes that by the time she leaves for Chile next fall, everyone will be able to speak a little Spanish.

Catherine, a pert blond, attended the University of Paris at the Sorbonne for two years and upon her return to France next June or September will receive her degree. She hopes to teach Greek or Latin in one of the schools in France.

Although she has only been in this country for eight days Catherine has grown to like it very much, and is very happy to be at Longwood. She is especially impressed by the peacefulness and quietness of the town and the college. The friendly spirit of the students of Longwood impressed her very favorably.

According to Catherine, none of the girls here seem to be worried about life in general, and especially about the subjects they are taking.

While talking to her, she said that life was very free and comfortable here compared with life in France. "Kati" besides her linguistic talents is also an artist on the side and likes to dabble in watercolors.

AKG Reveals Project; Circus Proceeds Help Public Address System

Ticket Sales Start Monday, October 26

A general overhauling of the present public address system constitutes the major project of Alpha Kappa Gamma this year, according to Pat Altwegg general chairman of Circus. The financial backing for this project will come from all proceeds from Circus.

The project will include the possible installation of a complete new system or the revamping of the present system in terms of a new amplifier and wiring facilities according to needed requirements. The money received from Circus profit each year goes to some project set up by AKG.

It has been announced that tickets for Circus will go on sale Monday, October 26, and all students, including those who are participating in stunts, are requested to purchase a ticket which is priced at 25 cents. Money from participating members will be collected at individual class circus practices.

On Tuesday, October 27, a short preview of class skits and stunts will be presented for the student body at the assembly program in Jarman Hall.

Circus centering around the theme, "Halloween Capers", will go into full swing on Saturday afternoon, October 31, at 3:30 p. m. when the parade of floats, cars, classes and clowns are scheduled to leave Longwood and proceed through the main streets of Farmville. The best class float will receive a prize of five dollars which will be presented after the performance that night.

The four 15-minute skits which will begin at 8 p. m. will be introduced by a ringmaster chosen from the junior class by AKG members. Her identity is not revealed however, until the night of the "Big Top". An animal trainer chosen from the sophomore class will open the night's festivities in the main ring. Else Wente, assistant Circus chairman, urges students to sign up to be an animal or clown in this event.

Judges will rate the class skits according to first and second best.

After the performance, the public is invited to attend the concession stands and booths in the main recreational hall. These booths are sponsored by the various classes and college organizations. The senior class will also sponsor a dance in the "rec" at this time.

Upperclassmen Elect 5 As Hall Presidents For 1952-54 Session

Five permanent hall presidents have been recently elected to serve in the junior and senior buildings for the completion of the 1953-54 session.

Those serving as senior hall presidents are Mary Pare Wade, Marilyn Thompson, Nancy Gilbert, Moneda Key, and Dee Steger. Betsy Jean Robertson has been chosen to serve as senior House President.

The junior class has elected Joan Conley, Jean Carol Parker, Hilda Hartis, Nancy Masters, and Betty Persinger as their five hall presidents, with Marlene Lucas acting as House President.

All classes, excluding the freshman class, have completed the elections of their hall and house presidents. Temporary presidents have been chosen to serve in the Freshman Dormitory.

State Legislators To Arrive Oct. 23 For Campus Tour

A second group of Virginia state Legislators consisting of 29 men will visit the Longwood campus on October 23.

The same type of program is planned. The visitors will tour the campus and buildings of the college after luncheon in the tea room. These tours are part of a statewide tour planned for legislators, to help acquaint them with the use of state appropriated funds. Mr. J. H. Bradford, director, of the budget, is director of these tours.

President Dabney S. Lancaster urges the student body to show their usual hospitality and friendliness to make the visitors welcome at Longwood. President Lancaster also urges the students to be on the look out for representatives from their home areas.

Senators in the second group are Lloyd C. Bird, V. Alfred Etheridge, Charles R. Fenwick, Mills C. Godwin Jr., Edmond C. Wiley, Victor P. Wilson, G. Edmond Massie, W. M. Minter.

Members of the house of Delegates include John B. Boatwright, C. W. Cleaton, George M. Cochran, Willis C. Cohoon, Hale Collins, J. H. Daniel, Harry B. Davis, Tom Frost, Wrendo Godwin, George H. Hill, Shirley T. Holland, William H. Irvine, E. Ralph James, Paul W. Manns, Lucas D. Phillips, Harold H. Purcell, R. Maclin Smith, William B. Spong, Charles Waldrop, Robert Whitehead.

Colonnade Editor Opens Annual Prose Contest Wed.

By JEAN LYNCH HOBBS

Well, here it is! The Colonnade is starting its annual literary contest today. This year, however, the contest is offering larger prize awards and is emphasizing both the humorous and hilarious and the more sedate and serious in literary work.

Eloise Macon, editor of the Colonnade, has announced this contest and also the appointment of new staff members to the positions of those who did not return to school.

Prizes offered to the winners of the prose contest include $5 for first place humorous essay, $5 for first place serious essay, $5 for first place humorous short story, and $5 first place serious short story.

The contest closes November 10; so all entries put your contributions in the Colonnade mailbox, or give them to Jean Lynch Hobbs, Eloise Macon, or Georgia Jackson.

According to Eloise Macon, editor of the Colonnade, members of the magazine staff for this coming year are managing editor, Barbara Southern; business manager, Betty Scarborough; assistant business manager, Hazel Hart; short story editor, Georgia Jackson; assistant short story editor, Jeanne Hobbs; and poetry editor, Barbara Assaid.

Other staff members include essay editor, Molly Harvey; assistant essay editor, Pat McLemore; review editor, Mary Cowles; art editor, Marlene Lucas; assistant editor, Florence Blake; head typist, Phyllis Nurney; and circulation manager, Laura Trent.

Mr. Richard K. Meeker, assistant professor of English and advisor to the Colonnade, entertained the staff at a social meeting at Longwood House.

Porter, Rice Lead In "Angel Street," Victorian Thriller

Ellen Porter, a senior at Longwood and Elwood Rice, a junior at Hampden-Sydney, have been selected to appear in the leading roles of Mr. and Mrs. Manningham for the fall play "Angel Street". The Victorian thriller in three acts will be presented on November 19 and 20 in Jarman Hall by Longwood Players in cooperation with the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs.

Other members of the cast are Jean Lynch Hobbs as Nancy, and Patsy Abernathy as Elizabeth Tom Moore and James Parker will alternate in the role of Detective Rough on Thursday and Friday nights, respectively.

"Angel Street" was first presented as a play under the title "Gas Light" in 1928 in England and in 1943 was presented as a film in the United States under the same title. It tells a demoniac story of Mr. Manningham, who under a guise of kindliness attempts to torture his wife into insanity. As the story progresses Mrs. Manningham is told that her husband is a manical criminal suspected of a murder committed fifteen years ago in the same house, and that he is planning to dispose of her also. Then the game begins of trying to uncover the necessary evidence against Mr. Manningham.

"Romeo and Juliet" previously planed for November 19 and 20 will be presented as the spring production.

Appearance of Jerome Hines, Metropolitan Opera Basso, Opens College Artists Series

Jerome Hines, Metropolitan Opera Basso

Students Receive Season Tickets

A concert by Jerome Hines, Metropolitan Opera Bass, will open Longwood College's Artists Series at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall tomorrow night.

Mr. Hines' engagement here will be one of 45, in addition to his Met performances, that he will give during his current tour. He recently returned from tours of both Europe and South America.

The six-foot-six-inch singer, who is originally from Hollywood, California, is celebrating his eighth year at the Metropolitan, where he has appeared in a large number of leading roles. His varied career includes the menacing role of Mephistopholes in "Faust", the benign one of Gurnemanz in "Parsifal", and the complex one of King Phillip in "Don Carlo."

During his tours abroad last summer, the basso sang with the Vienna State Opera, the Edinburgh Festival, and also appeared at Buenos Aires' Teatro Colon.

Accompanying Mr. Hines at the piano for the Longwood concert will be Alexander Alexay. Mr. Hines program, which will be in six parts, includes Handel's "Largo"; "Preach Not Me Your Musty Rules," by Arne; "Westron Wynde", English Anonymous; "Man Is For Woman Made," Purrell; "Zueignung", Strauss; "Der Musikant", Wolf; "Der Erlkonig," Schubert; Le Manoir de Rosemonde", Duparc; "L'Invitation au voyage", Duparc; "Bourree", Bach-Saint Saens; "The Maiden's Wish", Chopin-Lizst; "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso", Mendelssohn. "Into The Night", Clara Edwards; "Rain Tonight", Daniel Wolfe, "Lake Havenral", John Duke; "A Sailor's Life", English; "Mobile Bay", a sea chanty arranged by C. Daugherty; "Good Lord, What Wrong Wid de Corn", Joseph Brye; "Jonah and the Whale", MacGimsey and "De Glory Road", Jacques Wolfe.

All Longwood students will be issued season tickets to the Artists Series. They may be secured in Dr Lancaster's office.

Sophs Give Award To Rat Whitehead

Barbara Whitehead has been selected by the mighty sophs as the class of '57's best rat. The honor awarded this freshman was announced Monday night at Big Rat Court. This recognition will entitle Barbara to be the head of Rat Day next year.

Second best rat was Harriet Browning Chosen by the sophomores as the next best were Rats Caroline Stoneman, Flo Sahojian, Loretta Kuhn, Nancy Quarles, Betty Corey, Diane Acree, Loretta Kesterson, "Peanuts" Winder, Gerry Luck, and Mary Alice Powell.

Orchids were awarded to Rats Sally O'Malley, Brenda Assaid, Mary Mayo, Connie Colner, and Pris Brown.

Judges Vote Juniors Winners of Contest For Top School Song

The annual song contest was held yesterday, Tuesday, October 20, in chapel and for the second consecutive year was won by the junior class under the direction of Jeanne Lynch Hobbs. Karen Spencer was chairman of the committee and wrote the music. The words were written by Carolyn Stanley.

Chairman of the song writing committees for the other classes were freshmen, Carol Carson; sophomores, Mary Ellen Hawthorne; and seniors, Betty Bailey.

The Athletic Association, which sponsors the contest awarded a prize of $2.50 to the winners.

The contest was judged by Mrs. Kathleen Coker, Graduate Supervisor; Miss Mary Puckett Asher, of the music department, and Mr. Charles H. Patterson, of the Audio Visual department.

Songs were judged on the basis of spirit, originality, and suitability as a Longwood College song.

Frantic Frosh, Sagacious Sophs Debate This Question— 'Who Ran Who Ragged on Rugged, Riotous Rat Day?'

By JACKIE MARSHALL And PAT KELLY

I was dead—dead to the world, that is! I think I'd been asleep for about two hours when my door was flung open and the beautiful trains of "Good Morning to You" rent the air. I tried to ignore the singing creatures and was going down for the third time when consciousness overcame unwilling me. I opened one eye and closed it immediately. What the heck were those red and white monsters lined up in military order at the foot of my bed? I opened my mouth to protest but my brain was full of cobwebs and no sound whatsoever issued forth (after effects of the night before, no doubt!). Finally a hoarse squeak which represented my utmost efforts came out and with that reassurance I threw back the covers, bounded out of bed, and leaned weakly on the bedpost for support. As I viewed the strange-looking scene before me, the light dawned!

This was Rat Day!

My first impulse was to take advantage of my "Queen for the Day" superiority, however a better idea was to get those little monsters out—I was still groggy! Once they were out, I ran into the hall, beat my chest and screamed "Rat Day!" A few unladylike comments reached my ears from the still-dark rooms down the hall, so I went back and collapsed in bed again.

"Praise 50!" yells the mighty sophomore Sue Upson. Those "Confederate flags" are Rats Betty Cory, Ellie Everett and Mary Mayo.

By GALE BRANCH And NANCY LENZ

[illegible] rang, went the [illegible] as they echoed up and down the hall. It was 4:30 a. m. (days in Farmville start early) and on this cheerful Saturday morning 265 freshmen arose to face a new day. A new day had [illegible] but it would be beaten to a pulp by 4 p. m. in the afternoon for here was Rat Day. Only the [illegible] and special around, [illegible] Across through the [illegible] came a chant, a dirge, drum beat, and an endless line dressed in black. It was when I saw the [illegible] the red and [illegible] that I realized that for a [illegible] these "Confederate flags" [illegible] I awaked back to my room and lowered my [illegible] General Lee [illegible] speed of me.

Now at 4:30 I automatically became [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] Confederate [illegible] music [illegible] from my head. I put [illegible] new [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] white socks, [illegible] I [illegible] and [illegible] down the hall. I ate [illegible] and [illegible] out I really [illegible] I have [illegible] [illegible] on my hand. It [illegible] to question but [illegible] or try to [illegible] [illegible] I finally [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] I [illegible] to [illegible] "Dixie" [illegible] [illegible] and White.

Contagious Christianity

Contagious Christianity has been selected as YWVA theme for the year. The title suggests a challenge within itself, one that we hope will have a deep meaning for all. It should create in each of us a stern effort to put this motto to use in our daily lives.

How can we make our Christianity contagious? How can we make the girl across the hall, the studentr we are teaching, and all our associates know — that we have something they would like to "catch"!?

In the first place, each of us should have a light that will shine before others? Each one of us, with this light, is an indispensable individual, in the fact that our lives shine and influence others. We must live with that light—and work! The light that is in us shines through our everyday actions and deeds!

Church affiliation during our college days is most important. We must learn to make it a "must" in our weekly schedule and invite others to join in your worship services on Sunday.

Each girl at Longwood is needed for an active part of our "Y" work, and to join in our crusade for "Contagious Christianity." This week on Thursday the "Y" will sign up any freshmen who are interested in working on the Y. W. C. A. Committees, which include Prayers, Public Affairs, Church Cooperation, Publicity, Social, Sing, Library, and others. Be thinking of what you would like to do. These committees make "Y" work at our school! Won't you sign up?

Above all, if our theme is to be carried out conscientiously, prayer is our most essential asset. Prayers for others will guide us in our everyday living.

Keeping the light under a bushel will never do; vague good intentions are not enough—let our lights so shine that those around us may be led to see that "Contagious Christianity" is working in us and our school.

It Takes Everybody

Participation is the key-word:

In less than two weeks, one of the highlights of the school year at Longwood will take place . . . Circus 1953.

The events which compose a day of Circus are simple, entertaining, enjoyable, and in a word, fun! On Saturday afternoon, a parade through the streets of Farmville will take place. On Saturday night, each class will present a fifteen-minute skit in Jarman Hall where they will be judged and rated according to specified requirements. Animal stunts will precede the night's performance while activities in the main recreation hall will follow the presentations.

The events of the day are simple and enjoyable, but to look at these events more closely, we realize that hard work goes into making this day possible.

Circus just doesn't appear out of the sky overnight! Students begin planning, working, and worrying over Circus even a month before it is scheduled. Each committee, whether costume, props, or backdrops, stands on an equal basis with those actually participating in the skit. Everyone has their share to do but does everyone do their share? Some students carry all the load in planning and participating; others stand in the background just watching proceedings. Each person can take an active part if that person is willing to make an honest effort.

Likewise, faculty members co-operate and aid in every way to see that the tradition of Circus remains and is upheld! After all, Circus is for everyone, not just for a few, and complete participation is needed for a successful one. Returning alumnae, parents and friends should be added incentive to make it good.

Will Circus, 1953, reach this mark? The answer lies within each individual student.

Private and Personal

This is a purely personal editorial—straight from the Rotunda to—we don't know who, but there must be somebody!

Over the past few weeks, and many times last year too, the Rotunda's circulation staff has been a sounding board for many complaints—well founded ones—from faculty members who have not received their Rotunda.

Maybe we should call in Jack Webb and call it the Mystery of the Missing Masterpieces—Rotundas, that is—but like all good detectives we'll start with the facts. Naturally, the circulation staff has checked its records. Subscriptions are sold at a price of $2 to all faculty and administration members—and after all, they expect to see a copy of the paper at least once in a while. Every Wednesday that the paper is issued, Rotundas are personally delivered by the "newsboys" on the circulation staff to the designated faculty mail box—and that's where the facts end. On Thursday, the complaints of "I didn't get a Rotunda" start coming in. We don't know where those papers go—but we do know that they just don't pull a "Houdini" and disappear.

On Wednesday evenings at supper time, eight Rotundas are placed at each table in the dining hall—enough for every Longwood College student. Papers are also put in the day student's rooms. Therefore provisions have been made for a paper to be given to every student—you pay for the Rotundas, too, you know. If you don't get one at supper (you should have gone and you know it—ask your roommate to bring one for you. And in drastic cases see a member of the circulation staff.

Well, so maybe sometime you do want to send an extra copy to the folks at home. Usually there are a few extras in the dining hall—grab one of those or if your roommate doesn't use hers to start fires in these cold winter months maybe she'd give it to your worthy cause. And maybe, well—could you clip your own copy—send part to Mom and Dad and the social notes with your name in them to Joe?

Please we ask of you, whether student or anyone else connected with the college, don't yield to the temptation of those open faculty boxes—they paid for their papers, too, and expect the "hot" news to be awaiting them on Thursday morning.

After all, that's where the U. S. mails go through—and Webb may be watching you! Those boxes are private property—keep off—and out!

Rat Day

Hats off again to the sophomores and freshmen for the manner in which rat day was held alst Saturday, October 17. Favorable praises to this effect have been voiced by administration members and students, as well.

Rat day should be considered a means of better relations between the freshmen and upperclassmen. This objective was accomplished.

Church News

By ANNE THAXTON

Episcopalian:

Members of the Canterbury Club met at the Parish House for breakfast on Sunday morning and again for a buffet supper in the evening. Youth Corporate Communion was also observed last Sunday. Dr. Crawford of Farmville, spoke to the group since Sunday was observed as St. Luke's Day—Luke was the physician.

Presbyterian:

Dr. Charles Gibbony from the Presbyterian Board of Church Extension, spoke at 7:00 p. m. on Sunday to the Westminster Fellowship group.

Baptist:

Attention all B. S. Uers! Don't forget the convention to be held in Richmond at Grove Avenue Baptist Church on October 30-November 1. Dr. Steward Grizzard of Norfolk, Dr. William Hall Preston of Nashville, Tennessee and Dr. L. C. Johnson of Danville will be part of the distinguished personnel. There will be a chartered bus leaving on Friday afternoon—capitol bound.

Methodist:

On November 7 and 8, Longwood will be buzzing with Methodists from this area assembled for a week end conference.

Every Methodist girl on t campus is needed to take an active part in this meeting. We have four outstanding speakers and leaders who are going to be with us and direct us in recreation, discussion groups, and worship—Miss Stella Ward, Dr. Edgar Potts, Dr. James Robertson, and Wally Dodd. Keep this date marked on your calendar in red and look for more publicity as the weeks go by.

The College Circuit

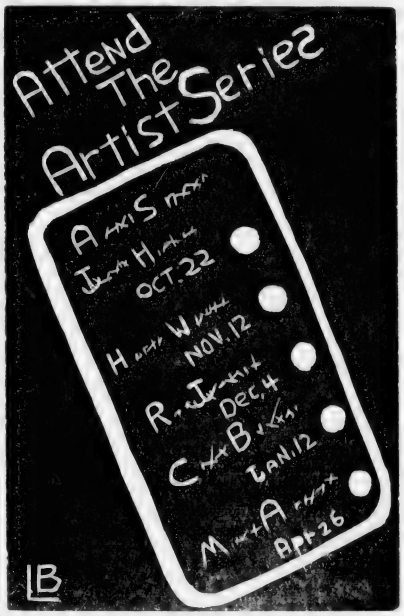
By MARGARET MILLER

Let's take a trip to some of the other colleges by means of our newspaper exchange system and see what is happening on other campuses at the beginning of a new year.

The students at Emory and Henry are planning to broadcast a variety of programs over station WGLG; basketball games, Emory church services for the "shut-ins" on Sundays, and a new feature, "Platter Party", an afternoon of popular music, will be produced and announced by the students.

At Randolph-Macon, 13 of their 413 students are from foreign countries. Nine of these are from Thailand; Argentina, Japan, Korea, and Malaya are each represented by one student.

Going north, we find that Central Michigan College with an enrollment of 2,099 has gained the title of the "friendliest college in the country." This is certainly a credit to their school and perhaps with more effort, Longwood College could appear on the mythical list of friendly colleges.



October 5 found Virginia Tech's German and Cotillion Clubs featuring the Wayne King show. The two and one-half hour show presented his entire TV cast of 30 people.

A recent Yale University Report on "drinking in college" discovered as a result of a survey that 74% of the 17,000 students interviewed in 27 colleges of all types were drinkers. Many of the co-eds questioned gave as their reason for drinking "to get along better on our dates."

The Rev. Albert G. Edwards, who held the Longwood girls spellbound by his Scottish accent in last year's Religious Week Assembly talks, will speak at Chapel Services on October 27, 28, and 29 at Hampden-Sydney College in connection with their Religious Emphasis Week Services. Guess we know a good speaker when we hear him; now H.S. C. will have its chance.

Several colleges have announced fall dramatic productions. Sweet Briar College will give "The Innocents" based on a short story by Henry James. Randolph-Macon in Ashland is rehearsing "The Hasty Heart" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner" will be given by Emory and Henry.

These are just a few of the news items from around the college circuit. Just thought you'd like to know what's going on.

Social Notes

By CAROLYN STANLEY

The Longwood vagabonds are well on the road again—traveling far and wide to try and add a little glamour to those poor dull men's campuses!

Off we go! (Original—ugh.)

West Point

Last week end Pat Altwegg headed for the "great white way" to spend a few days at West Point and saw the Army-Dartmouth game!

Tech-Richmond Game

Cheering the Tech Gobblers on to another victory on the week end of October 10 were Liz Dehaven, Fannie Scott, Malin Johnson, Lois Ann Childers, Garland Webster, Cindy Baldwin and Bev Taylor. Nice week end, but very tiring—huh, Fannie?

Some of our freshmen have started their "roaming" too. Barbara Benedict, Jean Mosley and Betty Jane Newsomes had a great time at Duke last week end!

Annapolis Week End

The Navy rooters last week end included our own Loretta Kesterson, Louise Nelson, Adele Donaldson and Suzanne Garner. Navy played Cornell in Baltimore.

U. Va. Homecomings

The U. Va. game against VMI proved to be a disaster for the Cavaliers—but a minor thing like that would never stop a celebration in Charlottesville. Those attending the game from here were Joyce Gillchrest, Betty Frances Gillette, Lucy Twing, Ruth Gilliland, Joyce Quick, Jane Lohr, Audrey Owen, Louise Turner, June Manlove, Ella Meore, Ann Mallory, Mary Jean Carlyle, Annie Leigh Lewis, Jane Harlowe, Paula Dovel, Colleen Goff, Beverly Harlowe, and Winnie Lounoff.

U. of South Carolina

Mason Moore attended dances in the deeper south last week end—and that's not a deep secret.

Those attending the game and dances during opening dances in Ashland included Mary Elva Robinson, Billie Miller, Dale Brothers, and Nellie Lucy.

W & L Week End

Billie Miller attended the Shipwreck Party at the PiKA House at W & L last week end.

Journeying to Williamsburg for the Tech-William and Mary game were Garland Webster, Ann Carter Wendenburg and Nancy Stark!

Engaged:

Congratulations to the girls that that have received beautiful diamond rings this week.

Pinned:

Ann Coleman received a Phi Theta Pi fraternity pin from Don Ross. Don attends Strayer College in Washington.

Garland Webster has a German Club pin from Jack Collins of Tech!

Spiritual Growth in College Constitutes Essential Need

By FAY GREENLAND

In addition to our physical growth, mental stimulation, and social development, our years in college provide opportunities for the development of the mots important phase of all, our spiritual growth. This is true because we have reached the age at which we may become aware of the need for an intimate relationship with God, because we have attained the independence which makes the choice our own, and because of the opportunities offered by the local churches.

To many students, the Episcopal Church has become a source of communion with God, and of the refreshment and strength which we seek. Episcopal students find a variety of activities awaiting us. Holy Communion followed by breakfast is held on Wednesdays at 7:15 a. m. especially for Longwood students. Girls interested in Altar Guild receive instruction and take charge of the altar for this service.

The Canterbury Club meets Sunday evenings in the Parish House, providing instruction, discussion, fellowship, and fun. The Parish House, complete with library, chapel, phonograph and records, magazines, kitchen, refreshments, and homelike atmosphere, is open to Canterbury Club members.

The Rev. J. A. Vache, rector of Johns Memorial Episcopal Church and student chaplain, is a friend and advisor, and he and Mrs. Vache are ever ready to help us with our plans and problems.

Participation in the activities of the Canterbury Club and of the church are steps toward regularity in church life and toward a closer relationship with God

Field Hockey Team Stays Undefeated After Victory Over Roanoke College; 9-0 Score Swamps Maroonette Squad

I ongwood's varsity hockey team triumphed over Roanoke College 9-0 in the locals second game of the season, Saturday, October 17, in Roanoke.

The Longwood girls outplayed the Roanoke Maroonettes the entire game. The first half ended with Longwood leading 3-0 with goals made by Hilda Hartis, Eleanor Koch, and Helen Waltman.

The Roanoke team, consisting chiefly of freshmen, was able to make only a few attempts at shooting for a goal. The ball stayed in Longwood's possession the majority of the game.

Teamwork and rushing the ball enabled the Longwood team to chalk up six additional goals in the second half. Clara Borum, Else Wente, Helen Waltman, and Elleanor Koch scored one each while Hilda Hartis added two to the record, making the final score 9-0 in favor of Longwood.

The game was also Roanoke's second of the season. Their season opened with Lynchburg College in a 4-0 loss.

Sixteen girls traveled to Roanoke with Miss Olive Iler, head of physical education department and Miss Rebecca Brockenborough assistant professor of physical education. They were Patsy Sanford, Clara Borum, Helen Waltman, Hilda Hartis, Elleanor Koch, Else Wente, Jane Lohr, Anne Mallory, Mary Ann Ward, Shirley Mallory, Carolyn Gray, Mary Davis, Fay Evans, Patsy Hamner, Ilia Des Portes and Louise Wilder.

Just as I had gotten used to the deep valley in my bed, another expedition arrived and started the hackneyed refrain again.

Soon, I joined my classmates for a good round of "Rat Persecution" after which I threw on my red and white clothing and with a fiendish grin upon my face headed gleefully for the gym. There I ordered, I commanded, I shouted, and I tormented for approximately one half hour. When I left, there remained behind me a trail of praising, singing, scrambling rats.

I got my second wind, had my room cleaned, my blouses ironed, my socks washed, and then gratefully sat down and commanded my rats to "turkle", scramble like eggs, bunch like grapes, make love to the wall, sound off, and write unmentionable letters.

Four years later at 3 p. m. my originality had shamefully dwindled to nothing. That's when my dignity left me and I became a "Rat Mother"—more for my sake than theirs. Due to an attack of the disease known as fatigue my room was packed with droopy, wilted, ragged, and terribly quiet rats—and Me!

When the bell struck the hour of four I knew for whom the bell tolled—me. I fell on the floor and for the first time in my life praised the beautiful chimes.

From the Bleachers

by Louise Wilder

There's work to be done in the sports world at Longwood before Thanksgiving—varsity and class hockey games, tennis play offs, and color rush.

The varsity hockey squad will play two Westhampton teams at 2 p. m., Saturday. Westhampton topped Madison 5-2 last week. Longwood beat Madison 4-2, so the outcome of Saturday's game should be quite interesting.

This is the first home game of the season. It will be a real test of the spirit and interest of Longwood girls. Take a break from all your work and support the team. I bet you'll enjoy it.

As you know, the team played Roanoke College last week. Roanoke is a co-educational school. It surely seemed unusual to see boys watching a hockey game.

Class hockey games will be played off before Thanksgiving. Don't forget your eight practices!

The tennis singles tournament must be played off as soon as possible. And if you are scheduled to play, please hurry. Cold weather soon will prevent your playing—it may mean your forfeiting your game.

Color Rush is tentatively scheduled for the Thursday before we go home for Thanksgiving holidays. Five runners will be chosen from each color team to compete for junior and senior buildings, Library Hall, Student, and the Rotunda. A girl from each color team will compete for one building at a time. The team winning will place its colors on the respective building. Al you girls who plan to run in color rush can work up a lot of wind practicing hockey. You see, you could accomplish two things at once.

Any organizations or groups of girls who want to spend the night out at the cabin at Longwood Estate be sure to get permission from Miss Olive Iler.

Be seeing you "From the Bleachers" next week.

Historical Society Sponsors Contest

A prize of $200 will be awarded next year by the Society of Colonial Dames in the State of Virginia for the most thoughtful and scholarly essay upon some person or phase of History during the Colonial period.

3. Give all quotations and references in footnotes.

4. A list of books from which material was obtained must be appended.

5. Place the writers name in a sealed envelope. If he wishes paper returned, be sure to enclose postage to cover same.

6. Style, originality of thought, accuracy, neatness, and punctuation will be considered in making the award.

7. The paper must be in the hands of the Committee by April 15, 1954, and should be sent to Miss Lucy N. Taliaferro at Monroe Terrace, Richmond, Virginia.

Mobile X-Ray Arrives Here

A mobile chest X-ray unit, sponsored by the Virginia State Department of Health, will stop at Longwood this week.

The X-ray unit will be at Longwood from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. on October 22 for the convenience of the faculty and students, and all the employees of the college. All connected with Longwood are urged to go to the X-ray unit at some free time during the day.

Dr. H. E. Jenkins, health director for Prince Edward County, strongly urges everyone to have a chest X-ray, provided free of charge by the Public Health Service. Pointing out that there are no sensory nerves in the lungs to warn a vicitm of impending danger he said: "The one best way to be sure you have a healthy chest—free from tuberculosis and other infections, and many other abnormalities such as tumor, is to have X-rays made of one's cheat at regular intervals throughout life."

The mobile unit will be set up behind the post office wing of Ruffner Hall.

Mr. Jesson Makes Report On England, U. S. Contrasts

By HELEN SUE McNEIL

By now most of us around Longwood know Mr. Roy L. Jesson, newcomer in the Music Department. You also probably know that Mr. Jesson is a native of London, England. In answer to many queries, here are some interesting details about Mr. Jesson, and, of course, England.

His home is in Barnet, which is now a part of Greater London, though 12 miles from the center of the city. Barnet is famous for a mention in Dickens (no reward for finding it in "Oliver Twist") who says that "every other house was a tavern." Mr. Jesson assures us that this is no longer true, though the old taverns can still be seen.

He early showed an exceptional aptitude for music, and eventually entered the Royal College of Music (a conservatory) in London with a piano scholarship. About this time he began composing for the School of English Church Music. Incidentally, some of the music he composed ten years ago for his home choir was sung this week in St. Paul's Cathedral, whose regular choir is now touring the United States.

Unfortunately Mr. Jesson's work was interrupted by the last war. During three years with the British army, he traveled around the Middle East, (Egypt, Palestine, and Transjordan). Ask him some day about the Bedouins!

After his release from the army, Mr. Jesson took up a music scholarship at Christ Church College of Oxford University. Christ Church is one of the largest and most famous of the university colleges; it was founded by Cardinal Wolsey in the 16th century and taken over by Henry VIII. history majors should note. One of his memories of Christ Church is of bus-loads of American tourists descending on the quiet "quadrangles," before dashing off to Stratford-on-Avon on the 'one-day tour' from London. These Americans were not responsible for his coming here later! He took part in all kinds of musical activities at the University, including playing piano and harpsichord for the Oxford-Bach Choir, which is world famous. He composed and conducted orchestral music for the summer productions of Shakespeare, which are given each year in the college gardens, and writing original music for "The Tempest" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

But we were most interested in any comments Mr. Jesson would make on the differences between American and English colleges. He notes that one big difference is our credit system. English colleges have no such system. They have, of course, graduation requirements; each student has an advisor from the faculty to see that the requirements are met. Graduation depends solely on how the work is done, and on passing the required examinations. The trend has always been to ekep the colleges as small units and avoid mass production.

Mr. Jesson also thinks that entrance requirements in English colleges tend to discourage anyone who is not truly serious about the work. Also English students develop more interest earlier in their special field than Americans do.

Of the three years he has spent in America, Mr. Jesson was at Indiana University two years as a graduate assistant. He also spent one year at Northern Illinois State Teachers College on the faculty. He thinks the Virginia countryside much more attractive than the mid-west. He likes Virginia, and Longwood, very much. He did admit he "sometimes" is

Dr. Lancaster Announces Recognition Given to College by Nat'l. Convention Of Association of University Women

Membership in the world's largest organization of women university graduates, the American Association of University Women, has been granted to Longwood College.

Announcement of the college's recognition and welcome into the organization was made in a letter to President Dabney S. Lancaster last summer. Mrs. Herbert Hawkes, chairman of the Committee of Standards and Recognition, wrote that the national AAUW Convention had accepted Longwood and provided three conditions of membership. These state that graduates of the college attaining the bachelor of arts degree, bachelor of science degree, bachelor of science degree in elementory education, secondary education, home economics, business and music are eligible for membership in any local AAUW group; also, that the college will be reinspected every three years, and that Dr. Lancaster will encourage all women faculty members to work on their doctorate requirements.

Longwood has been placed on the AAUW approved list as a corporate member which entitles the college to a voting representation at national, regional, and district conventions; subscriptions to the AAUW Journal; and access to the consultative service.

For fully accredited future graduates of Longwood, the College's acceptance means that they may affiliate themselves wit local chapters of the AAUW and take part in their activities and services.

Membership is also retroactive, which means that all past graduates of Longwood College are elegible for membership.

Application for membership in AAUW was made several years ago as the first step in recognition. The required campus visitation was made by AAUW representative Dr. Katherine Vickery, last spring. Membership is based upon four main requirements including hiah academic standards, adequate provisions for women students recognition of women on the faculty, and intellectual freedom for teaching and administrative staffs.

Soph Class In Charge Of Dinner, October 22

Honoring all girls whose birthdays are in October, the monthly birthday dinner will be given tomorrow night in the college dining hall.

The sophomore class will be in charge of the entertainment with Nancy Hartman as chairman. Theme of the banquet will be "Cotton and all the while I kept rhythm with my knees. They were making a lovely swirl as they knocked together. On through the day we went washing, bowing and scraping, singing the praises of '56.

When the afternoon finally ended and I had sought refuge in my room, I saw silent figures began to steal through the halls. A knock on the door, and a piece of paper slipped under the door were all I needed. My summons had come. I was to appear before the tribunals of the deep dark jungles of Banga Banga. I was led up hills, down steps, through a mush of everything disagreeable. I prayed for rain and it poured molasses.

Now that everything is over, and the end is in sight, I have a slight feeling of triumph. Yet, all I can see at present is that my nose may be permanently flattened from counting floor boards, that my hair may fall out from its shampoo of molasses and sawdust and that I may have a speech impediment from learning tongue twisters to honour a tribe of heathens dressed in red and white. Instead of being the high school big wheel, I have become a hub cap in college and I love it. For now I can truthfully say, I am a Freshman!

Lang. Groups Plan Project

A new project in the coming year has been adopted by the French and Spanish Clubs to welcome the two language informants who teach and study here at Longwood each year. This joint project of the clubs is the interior decoration of the language house and rooms. When the girls arrive here at school next fall, they will not find rooms barren of curtains, spreads and other homey touches, but will find their respective rooms ready and waiting for them to relax in and enjoy.

At recent meetings, the foreign language clubs elected their officers for the year. French club officers are Joanne Utley, president; Pat Mclemore, vice president; Florence Blake, secretary; Barbara Blackman, treasurer; Nancy Jones, music chairman. Moneda Key heads the Spanish Club this year with Fay Greenland serving as vice president; Rebecca Baird, secretary; Mary Jo Hutchinson, treasurer; Helen Warriner, reporter.

Recently, 13 members of the Spanish Club had a picnic in Mr. William Grahams' yard. A program was presented by several members of the Club. Esther Acosta and Emita Smith sang Spanish songs, Shirley Wilbourne read a poem, and the Spanish version of "Little Red Riding Hood" was enacted by Helen Warriner and Patsy Abernathy.

Members of the Le Circle Francois had a "coke and nab" party on October 13 to introduce the new members to the old ones. Catherine Dessaix, French informant ,led the group in singing French songs. Joanne Utley, president introduced the new members.

Sororities Pledge 20 in Fall Rushing

Ann Mallory, president of Pan Hellenic Council announced that 20 girls have pledged membership to the eight social sororities on campus in fall rushing.

Alice Calloway and Ilia Des-Portes accepted bid to Alpha Sigma Alpha.

Six girls pledged Alpha Sigma Tau. They are June Elder, Joanne Farless, Jackie Marshall, Phyllis Nurney, Nell Crocker and Betsy Jean Robertson.

Delta Sigma Epsilon bid Gaynelle Edward, Eleanor Long, Shirley Mallory, and Karen Spencer.

An nColeman and Joyce Gillchrest pledged Kappa Delta.

Pi Kappa Sigma bid Ann Foster, and Sigma Sigma Sigma bid Jemima Cobb.

Pledging Theta Sigma Upsilon were Bonnie Owen and Nancy Taylor.

Zeta Tau Alpha bid Margaret Ann Felton and Shirley Kemp.

Happy News!

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Graham are the proud parents of a baby girl, Joyce Marie. Congratulations on your little addition!

By JOYCE GILLCHREST

All American History parallel searchers and true, loyal Virginians should be deeply concerned with the publication of a new Society. The book, titled "The Spanish Jesuit Mission In Virginia, 1570-1572" was written by the Rev. Clifford M. Lewis and the Rev. Albert J. Loomis in an attempt to acquaint historians of early America and Virginia with book by the Virginia Historical an earlier era than the Jamestown of 1607.

The Spanish Mission of 1570 preceded our famous Jamestown by 37 years. Three of the primary motives which drove all of Europe to the New World were the interests of the Spanish, also, in their early endeavors in Virginia. The Spanish were searching for a passage leading to China, they were eager for new lands in which to spread Christianity, and they had a strong desire for new colonies like those of wealthy Mexico. This Mission of 1570 was peculiar in that it did not include any soldiers and apparently had no military ambitions when it was founded.

The Jesuit Priest authors have taken many precautions in an effort to be accurate and precise in gathering their information. They have concluded that the mission was located on the York River near King's or Queen's Creek.

The Jesuits brought an Indian guide and interpreter from Spain to help in their missionary work among the Indians. The guide, Don Luis, had been captured by the Spanish some years before in Virginia and educated in Spain. He left the mission a few days after its establishment and returned to live with his tribe. A few months later Don Luis led a massacre that destroyed the mission.

The book is the first complete record of the earliest known European attempt to settle what is now Virginia. The original documents have been reproduced in the book with translations along with several early maps of this area.

After this romantic and turbulent chapter of early American and Virignia history, the Spanish never again tried to settle north of Cape Hatteras and so left the way open to the English.

Regional Club Elects Officers for 1953-54 Warner Chosen Pres.

Phoebe Ann Warner from Roanoke was recently elected president of the Southwest Virginia Club. Liz DeHaven from Radford wil serve as vice president, and Betty Lee Copenhaver and Nancy Lee Harris both of Roanoke were eletced secretary and treasurer respectively.

Miss Emily Barksdale, assistant professor of modern language, is sponsor of the club. The purpose of the Southwest Virginia Club is to broaden friendships among girls of the Southwest Virginia Club is to broaden friendships among girls of the Southwestern Virginia area.

Barter Players Arrive To Give O'Neill Comedy

By GAIL LEONARD

"Ah, Wilderness!" which the Barter Theater of Virginia is presenting here tonight at 8:00 p. m. in Jarman Hall, is Eugene O'Neill's only comedy.

Mr O'Neill had hitherto grappled with the more psychological things of life but in "Ah, Wilderness!" he shows a tender understanding of everyday life.

The comedy reconstructs a typical American family and home during 1906. The family's chief concern is the youthful fervor of the boy, Richard, who is a high school senior and a rebel. He is passionately in love with a neighbor's daughter and means to marry her, but the girl's father, feeling that Richard is too wild, breask off their relationship. In adolescent desperation the boy gets involved with a chorus girl in a saloon and becomes riotously drunk. Satisfied that no damage has been done, Richard's father forgives the boy and helps him to straighten out his love affairs normally and amiably.

The theme is a familiar one, but O'Neill's tenderness with which he has developed it is all his—humorous without being patronizing, loyal to some old-fashioned principles of conduct, and compassionate towards young as well as old members of the family.

Under the direction of Owen Phillips, the same excellent cast of Barter players, sets and costumes have been retained for the national touring company as presented last August in Abingdon where it was a complete sell-out. Included in the past are Owen Phillips, Frank Lowe, Tom McMeehan, Kay McKendall, Dorothy LaVerne, and Blanche McKinney.

Tickets for the Barter production may be purchased tonight at the box office in the lobby of the college auditorium. Admission is $1.00 for students and $1.80 for adults.

Annual Meeting Of AKG Bestows Honor On Seniors

Alpha Kappa Gamma's annual fall convention has honored two Longwood seniors.

Betty Islin, president of the Longwood Joan Circle of AKG, national women's leadership fraternity, was elected to serve as 1953-54 secretary - historian of the national organiaztion. Elected to serve on the steering committee of AKG was Pat Altwegg.

These two Longwood seniors, accompanied by Mrs. Kathleen Cover and Virginia Wall, honorary members of AKG, traveled to Lander College, Greenwood, South Carolina, for the convention which was held October 16-18.

Using the theme, "Know Thyself," the convention agenda included various committee meetings, business sessions, the election of officers, and a formal banquet. As their part of the program, the Longwood delegation presented the national history of AKG. Pat Altwegg gave the history, using old letters and Rotundas, which were used and published in organizing the fraternity.

Other new national officers include Mary Carolyn Tatum, president of Columbia College, Columbia South Carolina; Alice Degnan, editor of the Torchbearer, and a student at the College of Charleston, South Carolina. Mrs. Julian Petty, of Columbia, South Carolina, is executive secretary.

Plans were set up at the convention for the coming years include the extension of AKG to other colleges. Chief activities of the steering commitee, which was formed at last year's convention as a guiding council for national AKG activities, will be the promotion of this extension work.

Social Science Group Honors 10 Students; Sets Initiation Date

Ten students accepted bids to Pi Gamma Mu, social science fraternity, last Monday night.

New members of the fraternity are Barbara Assaid, Lynell Bradshaw, Beulah Carter, Mrs. Gail D. Dickson, Herbert Goodman, Lula M. Grant and Fay Greenland, Trianne Lampkin, Barbara Southern, and Mrs. Joyce Booth Wilkerson also accepted membership into the fraternity.

These students will be initiated on November 11, when Dr. Walmsley, former head of the Longwood history department, will speak to the group on the history of Pi Gamma Mu.

Membership in this fraternity is limited to juniors, seniors and graduate students who have attained a high degree of scholarship and have been recognized for their study in the field of social science.

The purpose of this fraternity is to advance the study of social science problems and to instill in its members the ideals of scholarship, and scientific attitude.

Dr. C. G. G. Moss, head of the history department, is sponsor of this fraternity.

Methodists Set Conference At Longwood November 8, 9; 12 Colleges Send Students

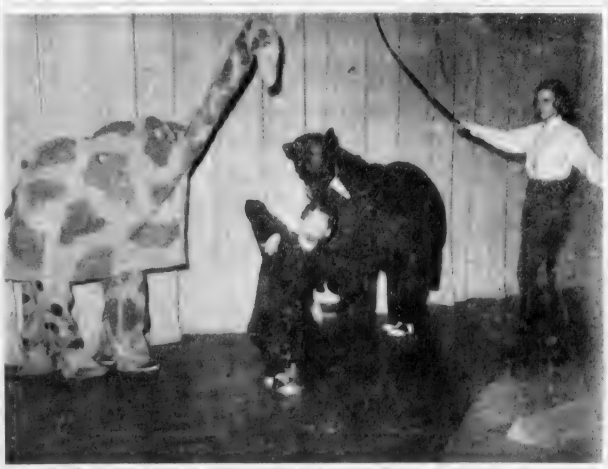
Longwood College, on the week end of November 7-8, will be hostess for the fall Methodist Student Conference of the Central Region of Virginia. This conference is a part of the Methodist Student Movement all over the world. Twelve colleges within this region will participate in the conference.

The theme of the conference is "Reach Higher — Grow Deeper." Speakers outstanding in Methodist work have been secured to speak, lead recreation, guide discussion groups and entertain. Speakers include Dr. Edgar Potts, minister, Epworth Methodist Church, Norfolk; Miss Stella Ward, Dean of Greensboro College, Greensboro, North Carolina; and Dr. James Robertson, minister, Highland Park Methodist Church, Richmond. Dr. Robertson will entertain the group at the banquet with his magician tricks and be the speaker for this occasion too. Mr. Wally Dodd, recreation leader, Greensboro, North Carolina, will lead recreation, make everyone feel at home, and see that everyone knows everyone else at "Get Acquainted Time" at the Student Center at 2 p. m. Saturday afternoon. The leader of some of the discussion groups will be faculty members at Longwood and other residents of this community. Rev. Charles O. Kidd, minister of the Farmville Methodist Church will lead the Sunday service.

In tying up the College YWCA theme of the year, "Contagious Christianity", with the Conference theme, several members of the "Y" will have charge of the opening worship at 9 a. m. on Sunday, November 8.

For all Methodist students, and any others who would like to attend this conference, the registration fee will only be $2.00 each which includes the banquet on Saturday night. All interested are asked to contact the Chairman, Ellen Porter, or Student Director, Miss Malinda Ayres, by Wednesday, November 4. The entire conference group will eat in the college dining hall on Sunday of the conference week end.

The student conference is planned for a time of fun, fellowship, learning, inspiration, and worship. At Longwood there are 250 Methodist students on campus, the largest group enrolled here during past years. Methodist students are urged to attend a conference that is planned for them and where a long trip is unnecessary.



Longwood student committees for the conference include table decorations, Ellen Porter and Loretta Brooking; program, Dottie Morris, and Nancy Sydnor; registration, Helen Warriner, Joanne Dyer, Frances Northern, and Louise Nelson; and open house, Joanne Dyer, Rose Frost, and Frances Northern.

Men's Government Plans Circus Booth

Would you like to have a "Smeerp"? (Pronounced "smurp").

The men's student government of Longwood is planning a "Smeerp" booth as their concession at the annual Circus celebration October 31. The "big secret" is "what is a 'Smeerp'? Eric Robinson, president of Tau Theta Pi, local men's fraternity and cooperators of the occasion says, "The boys aren't telling — just come Saturday night and pick out the "Smeerp" you want.

Five new officers were recently elected by Tau Theta Pi and Mr. Jacob Wamsley, assistant college business manager is newly chosen adviser. Eric Robinson is new president of the group, with Glen Vought, vice president; James Parker, secretary; Tom Moore, treasurer; and Charles Winfree, chaplain.

It's the "greatest show on earth"—coming to Longwood College on Saturday night featuring Animal Trainer Jane Blake putting ferocious wild beasts from the jungles of Africa through their fancy paces. In cases you didn't recognize them that's a giraffe, a monkey, and an elephant.

Blake Will Crack Whip As 1953 Animal Trainer

With the crack of the whip Sophomore Jane Blake, from Norfolk, will take over the official duties of Circus Animal Trainer when "Halloween Capers" becomes a reality in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m., Saturday.

Jane was chosen by Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, for her outstanding school spirit.

To set off the circus mood, the annual parade consisting of class floats and cars appropriately adorned with class colors, clowns, animals, and student representatives, will be heralded through the streets of Farmville.

The parade participants will begin forming on Chambers Street at 2:45 p. m. Saturday. Senior and Junior floats will meet behind the library while Sophomore and Freshman floats will form behind the dining hall. Leading the parade will be Freshman Representatives acting as flag bearers for the affair. Senior float, class members, and alumni cars will proceed up Pine Street followed by the junior, sophomore, and freshman classes. Upon arrival at Third Street the procession will move to Main Street and then up High Street to the rotunda.

Girls who are not on parade floats are asked to wear class colors and walk behind the class floats. All classes are responsible for color cars.

June Jouns is chairman of the senior float committee; Shirley Osbourne, junior; Gail Leonard, sophomore; and Jean Saunders, freshman. A prize of five dollars will be awarded to the class having the most outstanding float.

Carrying out the theme of "Halloween Capers," the queen and court representatives will be attired in fall colors at Saturday night's performance. Ringmaster and the identity of the court will be revealed at this time.

The four 15-minute class skits will be judged on the basis of originality, presentation and appropriateness. Judges for this year's Circus will be Dr. Francis Simkins, associate professor of history and social sciences; Miss Rebecca L. Brockenbrough, assistant professor of physical and health education; and Miss Mary Puckett Agee, instructor of music.

Ushers for the evening will lead off festivities by introducing the audience to Circus, followed by the ring of animals and clowns.

Tickets for the event have been on sale since Monday and are priced at 25 cents each.

After the announcement of the winning circus skit, the audience is invited to the rear where the circus festivities will end with the carnival of booths and concession stands representing various organizations. Proceeds will go to

Organizations Set Chest Fund Drive For November 3-6

The Student Standards Committee and the YWCA have announced that a College Chest Fund Drive which is similar to a community chest fund, will be sponsored on the Longwood campus, November 3-6.

Lou Kitts, president of the Student Standards Committee, and Lu Beavers, president of the YWCA, have stated that the college will follow the same plan which was used last year. Each student will be asked to contribute one dollar to the fund.

Having this one drive, which will include money for the Red Cross, The March of Dimes, The World Student Service Fund, and the International Christian University Fund, eliminates the numerous individual drives which arise throughout the year.

The Red Cross drive gives aid to both civilians and men and women in service in times of disaster or need.

Proceeds received for the March of Dimes, will help to support research work and polio-stricken children.

The World Student Service Fund is for students from all over the world who need financial help. Funds raised will be used for the reconstruction of libraries and other college buildings in war-torn countries.

The International Christian University Fund is a drive carried on by over 200 American colleges and universities for the construction of a university in Japan.

Drama Group Gets Charter

Ellen Porter, president of the Longwood Players, has announced that Longwood will have a dramatic fraternity to recognize those students who have been outstanding in college dramatics.

This national honorary organization known as Alpha Psi Omega has presented the Longwood chapter to be the Iota Tau cast of Alpha Psi Omega.

This honor society, the largest in college dramatics, has 300 chapters. To become eligible for membership a candidate must have done outstanding work in several departments of the theatre. He must have participated in dramatic productions with a minimum of acting, stagecraft, and other workshop activity as prescribed in the national constitution. Points toward membership may also be earned by participation in radio dramatics.

The charter members of the Iota Tau cast of Alpha Psi Omega at Longwood will be Sally Wilson, Nancy Nelson, Ellen Porter, and Tom Moore, and Dr. C. L. S. Farley is the faculty sponsor and will initiate the new members. Shirley Hall, Bess Hankins, and Barbara White, graduates of last June but who are eligible for membership in the chapter will return to Longwood for the initiation.

Pres. To Give Report To State Board Wed.

The regular fall meeting of the Virginia State Board of Education will be held Wednesday, October 28, in Richmond.

President Dabney S. Lancaster will present the first report of the 1953-54 session concerning the state of the college. The fall meeting of the Board is the particular one given to reports of the state colleges. Plans will be made to present a report of needs and standings to the January convening of the State Legislature.

The Circus Is In Town

A historical review of an event which which has become an endeared tradition at Longwood!

Circus, in 1923, was only a miniature of Circus 1953; but even so, the excitement, college spirit, and willing cooperation were very much present!

First of all, the alumnae of the State Female Normal School sponsored the Circus in the Armory on a Saturday night in April. This "gala vent" was given to benefit the Student Building fund. Various organizations and classes were in charge of both stunts and circus booths.

Opening with a blast of music, splash of color and a shower of confetti, circus 1923 began with various performances in the main ring. Such acts were entitled "Klever Klass Performances," "Timid Totters on Tight Ropes," "Modern Aesop's Fables," "Tin Pan Tappers," "Brilliant Bull Fighters," "Ben Hur Buggy Races," and "Klever Klowns."

For the next eight years, circuses of this nature, were held under different sponsors. It wasn't, however, until November 4, 1931, that Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, officially took over the circus festivities. Under this change of management, Circus became somewhat changed, also.

AKG began emphasizing class stunts of different natures. Organizations were allowed to compete for prizes but their importance was de-emphasized. A girl from each class was nominated for queen of the day. Elections were held to determine who would receive the honor.

The place for Circus was changed to the gymnasium upon the construction of Student Building. The wild animals, balloons, popcorn, and stunts all appeared under a large tent in the gym which was made into an arena. A ringmaster was in charge here.

For years now rapid changes have been made in the style of circus. Today, a parade is scheduled, four distinct class stunts have been planned, and concession stands have been set up in the "rec." AKG, which is still sponsoring the event, places all proceeds into some worthwhile projects. This year, the project is that of installing an improved public address system in the auditorium.

A queen is selected, now, from the senior class, while classes elect individual representatives to the queen's court. A ring master is still a tradition but an animal trainer has been added for flavor. The idea of animals and clowns is still in use. Jarman Hall has become the center of Circus.

Circus has changed from year to year but the tradition remains. May Circus 1953 be crowned with success again this year, as it has enjoyed in past years!

It's An Honor

It's another achievement for Longwood's dramatic department. Adding another success to its growing list of accomplishments, the college dramatics department has recently been accepted by the national honor society Alpha Psi Omega and a chapter of that group has been established on this campus. The instigation of the new "Cast" is well deserved and will afford many opportunities for the advancement and recognition of the dramatic arts and indiivdual talents here on the campus.

Honor societies are not new at Longwood nor are they confined to only a few fields of interest. Kappa Delta Pi, recognizing outstanding students of education, was established at Longwood in 1928, an honorary society science fraternity, Pi Gamma Mu, has been on campus since 1927; Pi Delta Epsilon, a journalism fraternity, was established in 1950; and Beorc Eh Thorn, a local English honor group was organized in 1935. Alpha Kappa Gamma, leadership fraternity, was founded in 1927. Each of the societies serves a purpose in the life of the college and in the service of the field they represent. Actually, each of these groups is recognized as prominent in its respective field, throughout the United States and many other countries. It is their purpose not only to recognize those students who are outstanding but to encourage and contribute successfully to the progress of the societies' ideals and standards.

As in all that is worthwhile in a successful life as we have come to determine it, these societies require the work and support of thier members. Too often, after acceptance in the groups, we are willing to "rest on our laurels" and let officers do the work—if any. Whyq should one belong to the group at all unless he believes in the purposes for which it was organized? Why join anything unless you are willing to put forth the effort to make it a worthwhile venture?

Longwood may be justly proud of her several honorary societies. They are tribute to the academic and social status of the college and they should require of us our interest and support because they have recognized those who are outstanding among them and because they seek to "do something" about their purposes and ideals.

Is It Fact or Fiction?

Do you remember those patriotic posters that were tacked up on busses and lamp posts during the world war and warned the public "Don't Talk — The Enemy May Be Listening" or "Beware of Spreading Rumors—The Enemy Is Everywhere"?

As a precaution against letting valuable information slip out, such slogans were kept constantly before the public. Somehow, in a time of strain, people seem more prone than usual to the weakness of "talking too much." Perhaps it's because every bit of information whether true, false, or just slightly exaggerated one way or the other, seems to comfort and satisfy. Everyone wants to know "What happened," "to whom," "why," when," and "wherefore." The person who can fill in the spaces is the center of atraction.

There is a distinct danger in "hearsay," even though we admit that it is a pretty general weakness. Unless we are extremely careful we may somehow spread an unexaggerated or untrue statement about a person or event. Although we pride ourselves on the thoughtfulness and consideration, such a story may unknowingly be a real unkindness to some person or group. And then, in simply repeating a story without understanding, we may be putting undue emphasis on what is really the least important aspect of the situation.

If we really want to discuss a certain event, our pride in relating only the facts, and our consideration for others should send us to some authoritative source for direct information. In the college, those sources include the administration, campus leaders, or the persons directly involved.

Mature adults seek to understand every fact in a situation before forming an opinion or spreading stories. It should be a challenge to us to stop and prove before we start, repeating or even listening to—these stories.

Church News

By ANN THAXTON

Baptist:

On Saturday evening at 7 o'clock a large group of BSUers had a skating party out at the new rink, followed fun and refreshments at the center.

Everyone is excitedly awaiting Friday and the first session of the state convention in Richmond.

Presbyterian:

Last Sunday evening a panel discussion was held by the Westminster Fellowship group on the Synod's West-Pel conference. Those taking part were Carolyn Stanley, Liz Wilson, Roger Elliot, and Royster Lyle. All met after church at Mrs. C. F. Wilson's.

Affiliation Sunday will be on November 1, with the church recognizing those college students who wish to affiliate.

There will also be a supper for the entire group out at Hampden-Sydney at 6 p. m., on November 1. Cars will be in front of the rotunda at 5:40 p. m. for those wishing transportation. Plenty of good food and a good program will be in store.

Methodist:

Did you remember to mark November 7 and 8 on your calendar for the Methodist conference here on campus? Forall you know, maybe one of the speakers will be the minister from your church such as Dr. Edgar Potts from Epworth Methodist Church in Norfolk. Registration for Methodist students will be $2.00. This includes the banquet on Saturday night. Please let Ellen Porter or Miss Malinda Ayers know by Wednesday, November 4 if you can attend.

Inter-Varsity Fellowship

The regular weekly Bible study group of the Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship will be held each Thursday at 5 p. m. in the "Y" Lounge. Girls of all denominations are cordially invited to attend. The Gospel of John is now being studied.

Rehearsal Whirls, Big Top Unfurls

By ROBERTA WIATT

Attention civilization!
Here comes a celebration
That provides a lot of fun for one and all.

Circus Day is coming 'round
But before the queen is crowned
Let's look in on the last rehearsal call.

"Dress rehearsal," read the sign.
"All be there. We'll quit at nine."
And the Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors, Seniors came.

But alas the night was long.
Not a class could sing a song.
And four chairmen shouted vicious, nasty names.

All the Freshmen made a fuss
It would have made anyone cuss
Just to see the way they acted on the stage.

Then the Sophomores did their skit.
"Ye gods! Who wrote that lousy script?"
Cried the chairman. Then she tore up every page.

Next the Juniors had their turn
But seems they had a lot to learn
Because they couldn't get a single cue on time.

The Seniors ambled from the wings
Forgot their dances—couldn't sing.
Their antics could not be described in rhyme.

"We've got to do this once more."
Said the chairman from the floor.
"And for goodness sakes let's get it done tonight."

Seniors labored—Juniors worked
Not a soph or freshman shirked
And at last the classes did their skits just right.

Every song was sung most fine;
And every dance was just divine;
Those performances deserved a prize or more.

Each was sure her skit would win
How the chairmen four did grin!
But the winner's circle holds just one—not four.

Social Notes

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Good evening gates! Big stale news at Longwood—Hampden-Sydney ban is lifted and the boys followed their stern promises that no Hampden-Sydney boy would be taking a Longwood girl to the dances—such sad news—sob! sob! Guess I will list the chosen "few" (9 to be exact) that were indeed the lucky ones!

Hampden-Sydney

With the delightful music of Don Grimes and a gym decorated in green and gray streamers the Hampden - Sydney Homecoming celebration including game, frat parties, dances, and buffet dinners was a big success! Those attending from here included Dot Armstrong, Ann Bankhead, Stephanie Bauder, Barbara Blackman, Sis Brown, Harriet Browning, Ann Caldwell, Alice Callaway, Ann Coleman, Janice Collins, Cookie Cook, Betty Cory, Bettie Crawford, Norma Jean Croft, Rhonda Derring, Martha Donaldson, Margaret Dryden and Gaynelle Edwards. Also at the dances were Charlotte Fitts, Ann Foster, Doris Harcum, Beverly Harlow, Hazel Hart, Molly Ann Harvey, Betty Islin, Lois Haynes, Betty Jean Jenkins, Joan Jones, Pat Kelley, Peggy Layman, Sarah Leatherman, Nancy McLawhorn, Julie Moncure, Kitty Nelson, Virginin Obenshain, Sally O'Malley, Jackie Palmer, Liz Pancake, Billie Miller, Kay Pelter, Betty Pat Rogers, Marion Ruffin and Betty Frances Scarborough. Also, Janie Scott, Joy Simmons, Dee Steger, Ellen Thomas, Sue Upson, Shirley Ward, Ann Watkins, Elizabeth Wilson, Jo Ann Wilson, Katherine Miller, Billie Tomilson, Jean Moseley and Shirley Garst. From all reports—everyone had a terrific time!

Virginia Polytechnic Institute

Journeying to Blacksburg for the sensational Homecoming dances at Tech this week end were Jean Carol Parker, June Manlove, Nancy Inge, Bobbie Assaid, Pat Cantrell, Garland Webster, Glenna Kesterson, Virginia Anderson, Suzanne Prillaman and Mary Jo Hutchinson.

Also Pattie Dearing, Mary Denny Wilson, Lou Kitts, Jane Branch, Hazel Benn, Lois Childers, Liz Dehaven, Fannie Scott, Becky Fizer, Mary Ann Maddox, and Nan Picinich. Also Pat Bodkin, Bev. Taylor, Malin Johnson, Shirley Mallory and Jerry Haley.

Pinned:

Nan Picinich received a German Club pen from Turner Headley of Tech. Many congrats, Nan!

William and Mary Homecomings:

Celebrating the homecoming events with the William and Mary Indians were Pattie Parker, Betty McAden, Gloria Krotzch, and Carolyn Gallagher.

West Point:

Somemore Army rooters in our crowd traveled to New York this week end. Florence Pollard and Carolyn Smith atended the Army-Columbia game and dances afterwards at West Point.

University of Richmond:

Barbara Peach and Barbara Moore attended the University of Richmond vs. Wake Forest game this past week end. Understand it was quite a game, too!

Baptists Name Activities

By ANN THAXTON

The Baptist Student Union is the link between the college and the church. With such able leaders as Miss Lucille Peak, our student secretary; Rev. M. Benjamin Bruner, our pastor; Miss Wanda Doll, our BSU president, and many Baptist students, our experiences, thoughts and activities are deepened and broadened.

Like most people who have gone out from their families to school or to work, we, too, have tendency to withdraw or just attend rather than become an active member in religious activities and have a sense of belonging to a truly important group. The BSU promotes fun, fellowship, and maximum Christianity.

There are three Sunday School classes for college students which are open for business every Sunday morning at 9:45 a. m. Everyone is urged to apply and receive unlimited benefits. There is Training Union each Sunday evening at 7 p. m. with the church service following at 8 p. m., plus a fellowship hour at the center after the evening service.

Let's not forget Noonday — pause in the busy day which everyone needs—held at the Center for ten or fifteen minutes each day directly after lunch. This week, our State convention theme, "The World, The Way, and You," is being emphasized.

There are many other interesting activities throughout the entire year which deserve honorable mention, but are too many to enumerate here. Our BSU also emphasizes missions, music, making vocations Christian and Christian recreation.

Rotunda Reporter Interviews Basso; Learns Versatile Jerome Hines Lists Hypnotism, Fishing Among Interests

By DOT ARMSTRONG

"The first and most important rule for a singer is never to eat before a performance," remarked Jerome Hines, noted Metropolitan Opera basso, as he settled down to a large steak dinner at approximately 7:30 last Thursday night. Then, bestowing upon this dazzled reporter his charming and inimitable grin, Mr. Hines added that he seldom complied with the rule-book.

In spite of his free and easy attitude toward such matters, the 6 foot, 6 inch singer has fared well so far. He started voice studies at the age of sixteen, and two years later, while a freshman at the University of California at Los Angeles, made his debut in "Pinafore" with the Civic Light Opera Company. As a result of his performance, he was engaged by the San Francisco Opera Company, where he bowed the following season as Monterone in "Rigoletto." Unwilling to leave school, where he was majoring in chemistry and mathematics, Mr. Hines managed to combine a full-time college program with his voice training.

By the time he received his B. A. degree in 1943, he had already appeared with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and at the Hollywood Bowl. From graduate studies in physics, he took time off to sing in opera festivals in Montreal and Central City, Colorado, as well as with the New Orleans Opera.

Winner of the Metropolitan Opera $1,000 Caruso Award and the first Cornelius Bliss Scholarship, he made his debut with the Met in the 1946-47 season in "Boris Goudounuff." Since then Mr. Hines has sung thirty roles there, including his most famous one, that of Mephistopheles in "Faust."

Unfortunately for his vast army of feminine admirers, Jerome Hines has been married to lovely, titian-haired soprano Lucia Evangelista since July, 1952. Both artists were performing with the Cincinatti Summer Opera at the time. Being a true sentamentalist, Hines had the ceremony performed again in September in the Crescent Heights Methodist Church, Hollywood, California, thus fulfilling his dream of having his marriage take place in the church where he sang as a boy.

Concerning his hobbies, Mr. Hines places hypnotism at the top of the list. As a matter of fact, he has hypnotized more than 150 persons, including many of his colleagues at the Met. Not content with this, he has even on occasion hypnotized himself, in order to induce relaxation before a strenuous performance.

"I think," he says, "that hypnotism can be extremely useful to any artist who masters the technique. It teaches three important lessons: ability to take advantage of difficult situations, assurance and relaxation. And believe me, those are three things every singer should know."

When asked whether he had done anything outstanding or unusual lately, the handsome singer replied enthusiastically, "I went spear-fishing!" this, he explained, is his very favorite occupation, next to singing and hypnotizing people.

Last summer Jerome Hines toured Europe, where he appeared with great success at the Vienna State Opera, the Edinburgh Festival, and in Italy. En route from Vienna to Edinburgh, he made a 10,000 mile detour to sing at Buenos Aires. Teatro Colon.

"Rome is the most beautiful city in the world," he commented warmly, "with Paris running a close second. England and Scotland, however, are far superior in living conditions. But the best place in the whole world to live is my hometown, Hollywood, California!"

Although he enjoys touring, Mr. Hines said wistfully that he would prefer to spend more time at home. In the course of his tours, he has sung at only two other girls colleges. With a twinkle in his eye, he remarked that it was a very nice experience which he wished would happen more often.

In addition to his many other activities, Mr. Hines is intensely interested in writing, and has had several articles published in magazines. He is currently working on an operatic passion play, and if it becomes famous, Farmville can claim for posterity that six pages of it were written here.

Physics, Math, Profs Go To R-M Opening

From the Bleachers

By LOUISE WILDER

Congratulations to students, faculty members, administration, and visitors who came out to watch the hockey game Saturday. I know the team appreciated your support.

Those of you who were unable to come to the game last week will have one more chance to see the teams in a home game this season. Next Saturday at 1:30 p. m. the first team will play the second team in a regular match game. This will help keep the team in shape for the hockey tournament the first week end in November.

Tennis singles are still being played off. This is another reminder to get the matches finished as soon as possible. Remember, everybody, this gives points for color cup so play hard.

The Athletic Association will sponsor a booth in the Rec the night of circus. Come on down and support the A. A. and practice up on your dart throwing. The A. A. needs the money. You'll have lots of fun and win prizes. You just can't lose.

Those class hockey games are getting nearer and nearer. How many needed more practices? You wouldn't want your class team to be short a player or not have a substitute, would you? The time of hockey practices is on the bulletin board. So come on out. I hear that a number of the freshmen are taking hockey in seasonal sports. You upperclassmen better beware.

The H20 Club will meet Thursday at 7:00. All girls interested in varsity swimming should attend the meeting. The club hopes to participate in a telegraphic meet some time this year.

See you "from the bleachers" next week.

Need Relaxation? Start Swimming

By LOUISE WILDER

Hi! this is Bobbie Bargebottom, first -ice-president in charge of new recruits for the Awkward Squad, the exclusive club for those who are still trying to paddle from the eastern to the western side of ye olde Atlantic pool. Care to join us? It really is fun!

Our model is Johnny Weismuller and our motto is "Keep Perseverering!" We know that swimming is a fine sport-quite recreative to be sure. Most people enjoy the smooth rhythm and graceful feeling of gliding through the water. Then there are those of us who enjoy swimming the length of the pool because, we know, we have to before we can grab that old sheepskin. So take my advice—Start Early! This other good reason for going may be a little off the record but swimming is good exercise, you know. I'll never give up hope of losing my barkebottom.

Key Chooses Squads To Cheer LC Teams For 1953-54 Session

By LOUISE WILDER

Moneda Key, head cheerleader nounced the results of cheerleading try-outs. Sixteen girls will serve on two cheerleading squads. These squads will cheer alternately for the hockey and basket ball games.

These girls are Charlotte Elliot, Sis Brown, Nancy Lee Harris, Elba Flynn and Ann Lee Gay. Other cheerleaders are Ann Witt, Christie Hulvey, Judy Harris, Lois Haynes and Betty Cory.

Sally O'Malley, Gayle Peeples, Charlotte Fudge, Kitty Nelson and Rhonda Deering will also serve

Mrs. Shackleford Arranges Visitation Program In Nov.

Beginning in November representatives from Longwood College will visit various high schools in the state, in cooperation with the school's college day programs.

The college day programs are planned to interest high school seniors in attending college and to help provide them with first hand information concerning the various colleges.

Mrs. Meade L. Shackleford, director of public relations at Longwood College, is in charge of arrangements to send Longwood representatives to the high schools.

Virginia schools planning to observe college day in November are Mount Vernon, Fairfax, Jefferson Senior in Roanoke, William Byrd, William Fleming in Roanoke, Orange County, and Green County. Six high schools in Norfolk and Portsmouth including Granby, Maury, Norview, Wilson, and Craddock, are planning a college day next month. Longwood will be represented at all the above schools.

In addition, 16 Southwest Virginia high schools and junior colleges, not observing a special college day program, will be visited by members of the Longwood staff.

These include Dublin, Pulaski, Draper, Hillsville, Woodlawn, Galax, Marion, Chilhowie, Glad Hill, Williaming in Abingdon, Virginia in Bristol, Richland, Tazewell, Graham in Bluefield, Marion Junior College, and Virginia Intermont College in Bristol.

On these tours, college representatives will have an opportunity to talk with seniors interested in college and personally interview many of the students enrolled in Longwood College.

In preparation for the visits, Mrs. Shackleford has asked that all students now at college talk with hometown high school girls and tell them about Longwood, so that they may have some basic information. She added that the comments of the college girls are more profitable as far as interesting prospective students than any other means.

Team To Attend Va. Hoockey Meet

Longwood's hockey team will travel to Richmond for the state hockey tournament on November 6 and 7.

Richmond Professoinal Institute will be the hostess school for the tournament. The games will be played on the Westhampton College fields.

All Virginia college hockey teams will be present at the tournament. The tournament is not an elimination tournament. Instead, each team will play two other teams. It is very probable that the two teams will be ones not included in a school's regular game schedule. During the games, judges will observe the various teams. At the end of the tournament, girls from the various teams will be chosen by the judges to try out for the first and second Virginia teams. Final All-State first and second teams will be picked from those girls trying out.

Last year Longwood's team beat RPI and tied Westhampton. None of Longwood's team were picked for the final All-State teams.

In Recognition

A recognition bestowing high honor . . .

Taking into consideration the characteristics of scholarship; cooperation and leadership in academic and extra-curricular activities; citizenship and service to school; and the promise of future usefulness, a faculty committee has selected ten Longwood students to be named in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges, 1953-54.

What does this recognition mean? Simply, this honor affords to these students a compensation for outstanding effort and achievement, and a standard of measurement which is comparable to other scholastic and service organizations. Each student will receive membership, without cost; a certificate, and recognition in the annual publication for the year during which he was selected. Student Placement Service is also provided by the organization if the student needs assistance in making employment contacts or obtaining recommendations.

These services rendered by this publication are enough within themselves to express the honor involved to the selected students. However, Who's Who may also be a service to those not chosen for membership. It serves as a goal to inspire greater effort in those who may not otherwise perform to the best of their abilities.

The idea of creating a national organization for student recognition was conceived 21 years ago. After much research, correspondence, travel and interviews, the Who's Who Among Students In American Universities and Colleges started its first publication in the school year 1934-35. Six hundred colleges and universities now participate in this worth-while program.

The honor which has been bestowed on this year's representatives well deserves our recognition. May this achievement offer hope and encouragement to the future and satisfaction in the past.

Cheer, Longwood Girls

On November 16, class hockey games are scheduled to begin and color rush is to be held on November 19, weather permitting. As usual, you will be hearing the ever-repeated phrase "come out and support your team." Some students who have captured that Longwood spirit will not need to be urged a second time, others will have to be dragged to the hockey field by their roommate, suite-mate, or other school-spirited classmate, and still others will stay in the dorms to continue their bridge game or to read the latest issue of True Confession. It is to the later group, especially, that this article is intended.

Sports play an important part in the school, just as any other phase of college life. When the dramatics club rehearses for a play, or the choir prepares for a concert, they expect to have an audience to watch their performance. You may well imagine their disappointment if after weeks of practice, no one shows up to see them perform. The same thing occurs when a team which has practiced for weeks has to play a game and discovers that no one, or only a handful of supporters, have showed up to urged them on to victory. You don't want your team to feel that there is no one to back them, or to care whether they win or lose

You will find that you have been missing out on an important phase of college life if you do not attend the college sports events. Start the year off right by showing some of that good 'ole Longwood spirit; show your team that you appreciate their efforts to try to win for you and that you are behind them all the way. Be seeing you on the A. A. field next Monday!

Food For Thought

"For a man seldom thinks of anything with more earnestness than he does his dinner."

That's the dry comment of Samuel Johnson and since the heyday of earliest Babylonian dinner parties many other men through ages—poets, diners, and college students—have had a few words to say on the subject of repasts for various occasions and situations.

Now, let's face it. Of course, you will not like all the foods served or the way they are prepared—it's not like home. An amount of similiarity and recurrence of the same kinds and types of food is expected. When a combination pleasing to many students is discovered, the frequent use of this meal facilitates planning. Then, too, only certain foods can be prepared well in large quantities; present food prices are also a necessary consideration. Have you ever planned and prepared three meals each day for nine months, for 650 people—or two people? The same factors hold true at home as well as at college.

The quantities of food served and the quality of preparation have been the two most frequent complaints so far this semester. We agree that it seems inexcusable that there is not enough food to serve eight people at each table. However, both of these are now under the cooperative consideration of the Student Standards Committe and the dining hall staff. Investigations and improvements are underway and will be made.

Two other complaints can usually be heard concerning the dining hall. The first of these, coming from the dining hall staff, is promptness to meals. The handbook states that there are 10 minutes between the last bell and locking the doors. Last year in an effort to help student waitresses arrive at classes on time after meals, this was changed to five minutes. So far, this year, the dining hall has been lenient in observing this rule, but because it does create a problem for waitresses, students are asked to show more understanding and make an effort to be on time.

The second complaint concerns the entire atmosphere of the dining hall itself. So maybe it isn't so quiet and restful as home. Any problem here must be traced back to the students themselves. There's a time and place for everything and if you think supper is the proper place for a rendition of "Dixie" then sing. But don't blame the meat course for indigestion.

It seems only natural that in a college as crowded with activities as Longwood, there would be occasions on which cheering and singing in the dining hall would be proper but as an every night occurrence the noise and confusion easily takes away from the attractiveness of dinner. One's public conduct is surely a reflection upon the training and guidance he has received at home. This holds true whether at a theatre, in a department store, or in a college dining hall. Observance of the simplest courtesies will not eliminate the fun at mealtimes but simply add to our enjoyment with a feeling of relaxation and pleasure.

In order to make real improvements the understanding and mutual cooperation of students and administration must be sought. These are a problem in the college community, but by recognizing them we can do something about it.

Virginia has recently "taken to the road" in an effort to extend to all resident of the state an opportunity to view some fine exhibitions. The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts' staff conceived and largely designed this trailer truck which was financed by trustees and friends of the museum.

America's original "automobile" made its first stop of what is to be a two-year tour last week in Fredericksburg with an exhibition of sixteenth and seventeenth century Dutch and Flemish paintings on loan from the collection of Walter P. Chrysler, Jr.

Itineraries will be so arranged that on completion of one of its long tours, the vehicle will have stopped to show its exhibit within fifteen miles of every Virginia home.

The trailer is equipped to carry almost all the possessions of the museum with exception of certain tapestries and sculpture too large to handle. A 220-volt power line furnishes enough electricity to run the artmobile's protective and educational devices, including a burglar alarm, control of temperature (70 degrees) and relative humidity (35-50 per cent), carbon dioxide and fire extinguisher, lighting, and sound system for lectures and background music.

This museum also has a curator who serves as driver and sole operator of the vehicle. He is William Gaines, an artist and specialist in art education. During exhibition hours, Gaines is posted in the information booth at the rear of the trailer. He takes admissions, switches on the background music, selects lecture records, and watches what is going on inside.

Perhaps his most difficult job is as driver. After three weeks of practice ,Gaines still has trouble double-clutching the big truck through four forward speeds. For the past two years, he has been driving a Crosley station wagon.

Our Longwood gals are often seen
At football games and dances;
Smiling, laughing, living awhile,
And exchanging friendly glances—
At U. Va.-Tech-W & L—
As well as other places—
But woe to the professor that has to look
At droopy "Monday morning's" faces!

Engaged

We would like to congratulate Nancy Stark, for she received this week end, a beautiful diamond ring from Roland Garrett, of Medical College of Virginia! Sue McNeill received a diamond last Friday from Harlan Stolzenburg of Camp Pickett.

Pinned

Norma Jean Croft has received a Chi Phi sweetheart pin from Joe Gillespie. Also pinned is June Elder to Chippy Wood at M. I. T. Oh, these spohomores!

Virginia

With the be-boop of Louie Prema—a sweet trumpet by Charlie Spivak—Openings at U. Va. were terrific as always— and enjoyed by all! Those in Charlottesville for the past week end included Peggy Ilyus, Joyce Quick, Lucy Thwing, Flip Blake, Jane Blake, Patricia Ashby, Beverly Harlowe, Adele Donaldson, Joyce Gillchrest, Ruth Gilliland, Patty Kappes, Judy Knight, Geraldine Luck, Florence Pollard, Elsie Webb, Lib Boswell, and Nancy Deaton.

Kay Pelter, Fannie Scott, Alice Callaway, Liz Dehaven, and Bobbie Assaid, attended the West Virginia-Tech game at Morgantown, W. Va., this past week end.

Journeying to the "big city" of Washington was Ellie Everett who attended G. W. homecoming celebrations. Speaking of Washington—did everybody know Jane Bailey visited her friend "Billy," there?

Wedding Bells

This past week end Mary Ellen Booth, a former member of the Junior class, was married to Swanson Hornsby in Newport News. Those that were able to attend were Nancy Nelson, who was Mary Ellen's bridesmaid, and Joan DeAlba, Pat Altwegg, Peggy Hood, Beth Kent, Mary Hundley, June Manlove, Nancy Tanley Masters, and yours truly.

Memories of By-Gone Days Reveal Normal School Ways

By SHIRLEY WARD

"Dearie, do you remember when . . . there were no paved streets in Farmville; only sand walks donned the State Female Normal School campus; and the girls of the day wore their hair knotted in the back with curls on the side if possible; if not, braids were permissible!

. . . the Hampden-Sydney students could only visit the Normal School on Friday nights! Girls received their greatest pleasure when they went to H.-S. to hear the boys preach on Wednesday night.

. . . the boys at H.-S. organized a Ministerial Band. On one certain occasion, they played at the Kappa Sig house where the Normal girls and H.-S. boys gathered for introductions!

. . . the Tea Room opened in November, 1921. An editorial in the Rotunda that year, expressed their delight on its opening. It stated:

"The Alumnae Association is opening a tea room in the school early next week. It will no longer be necessary for you to go down town to get a ... dessert and a cup of chocolate—you can be served in the tea room! By patronizing the tea room, you will save yourself the trouble of walking down town; will please Dr. Jarman and Miss Mary by keeping off the street; and you will help the Student Building Fund."

. . . it was of highest importance to students, faculty members, alumnae and townspeople to raise enough money for the construction of the present Student Building.

. . . "Rat Week" was, at that time, unknown!

. . . the Hampden-Sydney Orchestra played for the Cotillion dances, here. Girls were required then to invite one boy, two girls and visitors before being allowed to attend the dances.

. . . Physical Education Department sponsored hiking for credit! The original rules for hiking were:

1. Hiking means walking at the rate of one mile in 20 minutes.

... students in hiking ... not be less than six ... and must be under the ... approved ... the Physical Education Department.

... hikes were from Little Buffalo Street up to High Street and on the Hampden - Sydney Road to Baptist Hill.

... hikes were limited to 10 miles ... and, for beginners, 5 or 6.

On Sunday, November 8, twenty-one members of Wesley Foundation affiliated with the Farmville Methodist Church.

At the conference held here November 7-8, Rose Frost was elected treasurer of the Methodist Student Movement in Virginia.

Presbyterian

On November 8, at 7 o'clock, a Hymn Sing was led by Mr. Charles Attix, music instructor at Longwood, and Nancy McLawhorn. On November 21, there will be a party for the group.

2 L C Girls to Play in Hockey Tourney As Representatives on Virginia Team

Two Longwood girls placed on the two Virginia hockey teams chosen at the Virginia Field Hockey Association tournament held in Richmond November 6-7.

Shirley Mallory from Richmond was selected as goalie for the Virginia Team. Clara Borum from Burkeville was chosen center forward for the Virginia Reserve Team.

Players for the two teams were chosen on past experience, stick-work and individual skill, and ability to play as a part of a team.

No games were played at the tournament due to the heavy snow. However, every team represented at the tournament has been seen in a game this year by at least one member of the selection committee.

All girls selected for the two teams will go to the Southeast Tournament in Baltimore, Maryland, on November 14 and 15. Three Southeast Teams will be chosen in Baltimore to attend the National Hockey Tournament.

The teams placing people on the two Virginia teams were Longwood 2; Sweet Briar, 4; Westhampton, 4; Campus Characters, 1; Madison, 1; Richmond Club, 6; Little Colonels, 4; William and Mary, 1.

President Welcomes 22 'Granddaughters' To Club Membership

Twenty-two "granddaughters" were recently initiated into Longwood's Granddaughter's Club. To be eligible for membership in this group a student must be the daughter or granddaughter of a former Longwood girl. President Clare Davis initiated the new members who included Jane Lee Dougherty, Suzanne Garner, Jean Haden, Judith Lee Harris, Josephine Hillsman, Virginia Lee Henton, and Ann McMullen. Also, Barbara Persinger, Virginia Lee Pace, Frances Raine, Edna Elizabeth Ramsey, Ann Savedge, Elizabeth Yancey, Annie Jones, Nancy Quarles, Jane Bailey, Ann Thomas, and Margaret Miller complete the list.

AA Sets Color Rush

"Color Rush" marking the annual intra-class hockey games, will be held on November 19, after the Freshman and Sophomore hockey game. Tryouts for runners in color rush will be on Thursday afternoon at 5:00, immediately following hockey practice.

Hockey Team Goes To Meet

Fourteen Longwood hockey players accompained by Miss Olive Iler, professor of physical education, and Miss Rebecca Brockenborough, assistant professor of physical education, attended the Virginia Field Hockey Association Tournament at Westhampton College in Richmond on November 6-7.

Longwood was scheduled to play the Richmond Club on Friday afternoon and Petersburg Club Saturday morning. However, due to the heavy snowfall no games were played either day.

Friday's scheule of events was dropped completely. Saturday the State teams and coaches attended a business meeting in which the election of several officers of the Virginia Field Hockey Association was held and members of the Virginia and Virginia Reserve teams were announced. Following the business meeting, a luncheon was held in the Westhampton dining hall. At this time the Dean of Women and president of Westhampton's Student Body welcomed the teams and coaches.

Those girls attending the tournament from Longwood were Clara Borum, Patsy Sanford, Helen Hart.s, Elleanor Koch, Else Wente, Jane Lohr, Mary Anne Ward, Anne Mallory, Patsy Hamner, Carolyn Gray, Mary Davis, and Louise Wilder.

A Challenge

In the form of the largest event ever undertaken by the entire Longwood student body alone, May Day 1954 will act as a trial and a challenge to all. For the first time ever, this event will be completely under student supervision with a general chairman at the head of activities for preparation of the day.

Since the method of handling May Day is no new and vast in scope, too much stress on the importance of complete student cooperation cannot be voiced. Without this whole-hearted support, the undertaking will not be possible or practical.

Briefly, with the election of general chairman and business manager as leaders of May Day, nominations for various positions on the steering committees can be drawn-up and formulated. This action will be accomplished by the two heads and a nominating committee composed of student government members. When selections are completed, two names for chairman of each of the committees will be submitted on the ballot for student voting. Each elected committee head will, in turn, choose her committee members to work with her; then the rest of the planning, work and activitiy concerned, will fall directly into the hands of the entire remaining student population.

With the full realization that a definite change has occurred, students and administrative members should feel that this action is another step to more independent student expression in activities.

Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, associate professor of physical education, has acted, in the past, as adviser to May Day festivities. With her efforts and hard concentration of time, energy, and work, she has encouraged growth and versatility in past programs.

But May Day is still growing. This step which is being taken for the first time is substantial proof of this extension. Will it fail its purpose? Not if students display the same Longwood spirit expressed previously in all occasions; but the challenge is there. It is significant; it is important and it can be met.

Pride and the Press

It is with pride that the Rotunda announces the addition of 24 new members to its staff. After a try-out time of more than six weeks, these new reporters, typists, and distributors have been chosen on the basis of initiative, interest, and ability, to take their place on our staff.

Writing for a newspaper, particularly a college publication, is not so glamorous a job as the public may suppose. It involves countless routine details, time, checking and double checking, and effort. Inspired, perhaps, by a touch of "printer's ink dizziness" these new staff members have met the prime requisite for a newspaper position—they have shown themselves willing to work.

The chief purpose of the Rotunda—or of any newspaper—is to "sell" itself to readers by keeping them informed of current affairs. In the college community, its purpose is also to present a chronicle of campus events, to afford journalistic experience, to represent the opinions of the entire college population, and to uphold the ideals and spirit of the college.

During past weeks there has been much discussion of freedom of the press, especially of the college press. It is a chief democratic principle that freedom and liberty incur certain responsibilities and restrictions. Ideally, these restrictions are self-imposed. When the individual or group cannot do this, they must be set up by some external source. The responsibilities of freedom which must be accepted by the press on its highest and most democratic level or include strict adherence to fact, integrity even when expressing opinion, and the consideration of the rights of other persons or groups.

The greatest satisfaction gained in work on the Rotunda, even more than pride in personal accomplishment, is the knowledge that this newspaper is published without the jurisdiction of any faculty or administration member in forming policy. We feel that only in this way can we represent the college to the fullest. The material printed in the Rotunda is chosen according to the discrimination of the staff itself, consideration being given to importance, available space, currency, and chiefly, to the remembering and upholding of the ideals of the college. Perfection in this is a goal towards which we are still striving and the best possible judgment and representation in news coverage is an aim.

Thankful People

"Come ye thankful people, come . . ."

From our pilgrim forefathers in the autumn of 1621 to us, the present day citizens of the United States, thanks have been expressed to God for the many blessings He has bestowed upon His peoples during the year, by their traditional celebration of Thanksgiving Day.

A spirit of warmth and even greater love for his neighbor seem to radiate from every person during this season.

Thanksgiving is a time for laughing, a time for loving, and a time for praising. A feeling of excitement permeates the air at the mention of Thanksgiving, for in every individual the season is connected with a happy thought. He may be going home to be with mom, dad, and sis; he may be going to the big game in his hometown; or he may have a great feeling of satisfaction because he has given another person a happy Thanksgiving.

In reality, these thoughts are in our midst all during the year but Thanksgiving season seems to bring them out in the open. Although it is a reminder to us, we should not wait for this season to show God our gratefulness but think of every day as a day of Thanksgiving.

Judging from all my research—it must have been a "lost weekend" around our quaint little town of Farmville—There are several days in a week—three in a weekend and four to catch up on one's sleep.

Congratulations to Marian Ward who has a lovely diamond from Lary Carter of Suffolk.

Adelaide Kirby received a Sigma Nu pin from Mac Bridgeforth, Jr., who attends University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.

Phyllis Powell also received a pin from Clifford Jenkins, an Alpha Gamma Rho, who graduated from the University of Maryland.

Va. Tech

The jazzy music of Louis Prima, and the sweet sax of Buddy Morrow set the stage for Tech Opening dances of the Cotillion and German Clubs! Longwood girls were well represented in bitter cold of 20 degree weather. Burg this past week end. Those who attended included Kay Pelter, Liz DeHaven, Fannie Scott, Barbara Felthaus, Cindy Baldwin, Anne Moore, Beryle Whitt, Garland Webster, Jackie Marshall, and Margaret Duke. Also, Betty Barr, Ellen Thomas, Jean Hayden, Pattie Deering, Mary Ann Jennings, Eloise Macon, and Lorette Brooking attended.

Still others (those Hollins girls didn't stand a chance!) were Sis Brown, Lois Ann Childers, Mary Davis, Becky Fizer, Ellen Hamlett, Doris Harcum, Nancy Harris, Mary Jo Hutchinson, Virginia Johnston, Carolyn James, Gayle Peoples, Betsy Richardson, Elizabeth Riley, Bev. Taylor, Ann Thomas and Dorothy Thomas.

Also Bobbie Southern, Ann Carter Wendenburg and yours truly traveled to B-burg.

W and L Homecoming

The Homecoming week end for W&L was a biz success—could be because they beat Virginia! Alice Calloway, Connie Coiner, Betty Jean Jenkins, Iris Arnn and Peggy Hood were all on hand for the celebration.

Richmond

Those who journeyed to the big city for U. of Richmond Homecoming game against Wm. and Mary were Karen Spencer, Mary Ellington, Betty Pat Rogers and Gail Patrick. Also Iris Scott, and Barbara Peach attended.

Randolph-Macon

Always a great game of the year is the Hampden-Sydney-Randolph-Macon game! It was Homecoming for Randolph-Macon, and Ashland went all out for the occasion—low lights and everything! It is difficult to tell who was sitting on which side, but I'd bet my last dollar on Dale Brothers, Mary Elva Robinson, and Peggy Worthington—who I know were on the R-M bleachers! Also attending the game were Pat Altwegg, Anne Foster, Dot Douglas, Margie Smallwood, Diane Acree, Stephanie Bauder, Shirley Childs, Betty Cory, Bettie Crawford, Norma Jean Croft, Margaret Dryden, Shirley Garst, Jerry Haley, Billie Miller, Boop Islin, Anne Bankhead, Elizabeth Pancake, Anne Poole and Sylvia Reames. Also Pattie Parker, Nellie Lucy, and Katherine Miller, and Martha Donaldson attended.

Simonini Family Relates Experiences of Life Abroad

By MARGARET DRYDEN and GAIL LEONARD

"Paris—a wonderful city—but the traffic! I suspect that the medals Frenchmen wear on the 'Champs d'Elysees' on Sunday are not for getting their man on the field of battle but for getting him in the middle of the street."

So commented Dr. R. C. Simonini on traffic in France's capitol city. Dr. Simonini, chairman of the Longwood College English department, is studying and lecturing in Italy this winter on a Fulbright scholarship. Recent letters to members of the English department and friends in the student body relate their first impressions and activities to date.

Most of the scenery which the Simonini's have observed has been most attractive. Dr. Simonini compared the vineyards of southern France displaying colors of red, yellow, brown, and green, to a Van Gough painting. In contrast, Mrs. Simonini remarked that Genoa impressed her as being one of the dirtiest waterfront cities that she had seen.

Since the family is living in Florence, they gave a full description of that city. The following is quoted from one of their letters:

"Florence is a magnificent city of art and culture where every stone has its Italian and English artistic and literary associations. The Browning's Casa Guidi is just across the Arno near the Pitti Palace! the children play in the Cassive park where Shelley wrote his 'Ode to the West Wind;" the cypress-shrouded English Cemetery at the Piazza Dostello contains the graves of Mrs. Browning, Landar, Clough, and others; Bellosquardo, where "the beauty of hills and skies inspired the quality of thought and art" in Cooper, Hawthorne, the Brownings, and James" overlooks the city opposite us; and across the river near Jarre del Gallo is the house of Galileo where he was visited by Milton. Then there are the Italian poets . . . but enough of this lest I sound like the Ente Provinciale per il Jarisino."

Dr. and Mrs. Simonini, and their two children, Diane and Charlie, are living in a "pension" with an Italian professor and his family. Much of their free time is spent visiting palaces, churches, museums, parks, and driving to nearby towns. A humorous incident occurred when Charlie, the younger child, upon seeing Raphael, famous portrait of Pope Julius II, decided that he looks like Santa Claus—and told everyone in the Uffizi so! On the other hand, Diane thought it was rather silly that Michelangelo's David should not have any clothes on and that some of the Romans should have bathed out in the open.

As a whole the Simonini's are enjoying their stay in Italy. Naturally, they are interested in receiving news from home. Their address is as follows:

Collegiate Chatter

Things are in full swing at other colleges, so let's take a quick trip to a few campuses to see what's going on.

An appreciative audience at Sweet Briar College enjoyed a concert of varied selections given by the Italian quartet not too long ago.

From RPI's "The Proscript," we learn that four college newspaper editors were permitted behind the Iron Curtain to observe Russian college life and college newspaper factilities. They visited the Soviet University and were free to roam Moscow streets, plan their own activities, and walk in and out of Soviet classrooms, questioning students and instructors.

The entire student body and faculty of Sullins College attended the concert given by the St. Paul's Cathedral Choir of London, England. This was the fourth performance by the choir since their arrival in New York on September 31. Their United States' tour marks the first time in their 800 year history that the choir has left England.

Still at Sullins, we see that Ray McKinley played for their first dance, the Cinderella Ball. According to "Look and Down Beat Magazines," the McKinley group with Ray himself at the drums) was chosen "Most Versatile Band in the Land."

This ends another trip to other colleges for this time. Be on hand the next time we head for interesting campuses—no reservations needed.

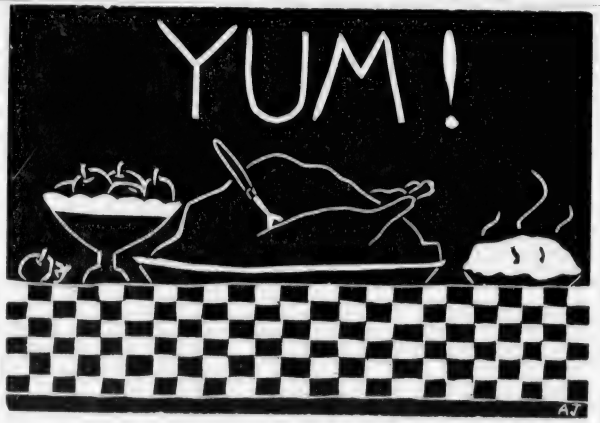
Dear Miss Anderton:



In the October 7. 1953 issue of your famous newspaper, "The Rotunda," of world-wide circulation, you stated that the Chilean student in L. C., Miss Silvia Bascour, is "an attractive, dark-eyed brunette."

She is attractive, O. K., but if you take a closer look you'll realize that her lovely eyes are not dark, but yellow-green and sometimes light brown, depending on the color she is wearing and the luminosity of the day.

My congratulations to the publishing staff of your nice newspaper.

Color Rush is here again! What colors will be flying over the Rotunda, Student, Library, Junior and Senior buildings? To see the winners for yourselves, stay for a few minutes after the last class hockey game tomorrow for Color Rush races. Those girls running for red and white will be Nancy Hartman, Roberta Wiatt, Patsy Sanford, Jane Lohr and Edith Frame. Green and White runners will be Barbara Tyler, Dot Morris, Pattie Parker, Buzzy Hartis and Helen Waitman. One girl from each color team will run for each building. Come out and give your team runners some support!

Though it does not get much recognition, soccer is another team sport taught at Longwood in the fall. A round robin soccer tournament was held in Mrs. Emily K. Landrum's 10 a. m. and 11 a. m. freshman physical education classes. The two highest teams and the two lowest teams in the tournament met in rival games on the AA field last week. Of the two highest, Nancy Tolley's team from the 10 a. m. clas won over Katherine Kamp's team from the 11 a. m. class by a score of 8-0. Of the two lowest teams, Nancy Striplin's team of the 11 a. m. class beat Harriet Browning's team from the 10 a. m. class 4-2.

"Rec" Leadership Class

The Recreational Leadership class under the direction of Miss Olive Iler is conducting a survey to find the recreational interests and needs of the girls at Longwood.

If enough people are interested in certain activities, it may be possible to offer them to the girls as an enjoyable and profitable way to spend their spare time.

The list includes swimming, canasta, bridge, scrabble, bingo, checkers, badminton ,ping-pong, suffleboard, hiking, dancing, handicrafts, group singing, instrumental groups, book reviews, debating and dramatics.

Anyone who wants to buy a bathing suit can purchase one in the dressing room on Mondays, Wednesdays and Friday at 11, 2 and 3 p. m. Everyone who uses the school pool must wear a regulation suit.

Jean Hodges, a senior from Waynesville, North Carolina, has been active in class and varsity athletics and is vice-president of the college Athletic Association. Last spring she served as chairman of the property committee for May Day. Jean is also a member of Cotillion Club, Monogram Club, and Future Teachers of America.

Mary Lou, a business major senior from Smithfield, is now serving as treasurer of the Commercial Club. Also active in intramural athletic, Mary Lou has served on the Athletic Association council as manager of class softball. She is a member of the Cotillion Club, Future Teachers of America, and Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority.

Publishers Announce Sale of History Book

Eight thousand copies of "A History of the South," by Dr. Francis Butler Simkins, Longwood history professor, have been placed on sale to the public.

The 655-page book, listed by the publishers as "the complete story from Jamestown settlement to the present" will be the sixth book that Dr. Simkins has written and published. Others include "The Tillman Movement in South Carolina," "South Carolina During Reconstruction," "Women of the Confederacy," "Pitchfork Ben Tillman," and "The South, Old and New, 1820-1947." He has also recently completed a history text of Virginia for seventh grade students.

2 Hockey Players Journey To Meet

The 1953 Southeast Field Hockey Tournament was held at the Friends School, in Baltimore, Maryland, November 14 and 15.

Virginia, Delaware, Baltimore and Washington were represented by two teams each. Shirley Mallory and Clara Borum from Longwood played on the Virginia and Virginia Reserve Team, respectively.

The Virginia Team lost to Washington 4-1 and tied both Delaware and Baltimore 3-3. The Virginia Reserve Team was undefeated. It won over Washington 7-0, Baltimore 4-1 and Delaware 6-0.

A first and second Southeast team was chosen Sunday afternoon. Seven players from the two Virginia teams placed on the two Southeast teams. There were five from Washington, four from Delaware and five from Baltimore on the Southeast team. The Southeast team will attend the National Hockey Tournament at Hunter College in New York during Thanksgiving.

Student Assemblage

Council, Ann Foster, a senior, was elected to fill this position for the present year. She had been temporarily appointed at the beginning of this semester, when it was necessary to call an emergency meeting of the Board. The new amendment will allow for such emergencies which may rise in the future. As the system now stands, the chairman is not appointed until spring or when needed.

Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology, was re-elected by the student body to serve as faculty advisor to the council for the third consecutive year.

Installation of Connie Colner, and Loretta Kesterson, newly elected representatives into the council, was conducted by Mary Denny. Three dining room hostesses, Ellen Porter, Billie Thompllinson, and Patty Deering, and fire warden, June Manlove, were also inducted.

Home Ec Club To Sell Cake

One-quarter pound red cherries, one-half pound of raisins, two teaspons all spice, and one Merry Christmas song. These are few of the ingredients members of the Home Economics Club have been measuring out for the past few days for fruitcakes and plum puddings.

At the last club meeting, the Home Economics majors decided once again to sell these two Yuletide favorites. Joan Williams was appointed chairman of the committee to select a recipe and to assemble supplies. The chairman or the committee for selling is Mary Barksdale. The cakes and puddings will be made by the sophomore and junior food classes.

The fruitcakes are to be sold for $1.20 for one pound and $1.00 for each additional pound. One dollar per pound will be the price of the plum puddings. All orders must be in by Thanksgiving.

5 To Represent LC At Madison, Nov. 21

The H20 Club is really going to town . . . Harrisonburg, that is, for Joan Ward, Patsy Hamner, Else Wente, Elleanor Koch, and Ann Snyder are attending the Aquatic Workship at Madison College this Saturday, November 21.

The club is also making plans for the water pageant which will be presented on December 10, under the chairmanship of Roberta Wiatt.

FTA Initiates 38, Sponsors College Activities Institute

The executive secretary of the Future Teachers of America, Mrs. Wilda F. Faust addressed a group of representatives of all the various Longwood organizations last Monday night, November 16.

Mrs. Faust is conducting a College Institute on Extra-Instructions activities at Longwood on November 16, and 17. The Institute was sponsored by the local chapters of F. T. A. Kappa Delta Pi, and the Association of Childhood Education.

In speaking to the group Monday Mrs. Faust brought out the various interest groups or organizations should work together in sharing experiences and programs. Mrs. Faust also suggested that the F. T. A. could institute such a movement, since extra curricular activities are important facets in the educational world.

On Tuesday an assembly program was devoted to the Institute in which Mrs. Faust and Miss Katherine Hoyle, director of Field Service, Virginia Education Association, spoke to the students.

On Tuesday night at the regular F. T. A. meeting which was open to the entire student body, 38 new members were initiated into the local group. They include June Wilmouth, Virginia Wentz, Nellie Culpepper, Paula Dovel, Sylvia Reames, Claire Krienbaum, Betty Denton, Mary Elva Robinson, Betty Frances Gilette, Betty Jane Newsome, Maxine McElroy, Virginia Moon, June Johns, Nell Copley, and Moneda Key.

Other new members are Beulah Carter, Jo Biddlecomb, Pat Donnetty, Jemima Cobb, Lillian Guthrie, Marilyn Thompson, Mary F. Carter, Edith Frame, June Cullip, Dot Stringfield, Laura Trent; Betty Baily, Nell Bradshaw, Nan Bland, and Sue McNeil, Beverly Johnson, Trianne Lamkin, Ellen Porter, Joyce Wilkerson, Jeanne Jacoboon, Betty Hood, and Tom Moore and Ann Thomas were also initiated.

Assembly Notice

Plans for regular college assemblies for the next few weeks have been announced by the assembly committee. The music department will sponsor an assembly program on November 24 and on the following Tuesday, December 1, Maria Jackson, a graduate of the Longwood class of 1952, will speak on her year in France on a Fulbright Scholarship.

L.C. H-SC To Give Combined Concert

The combined choirs of Longwood College and Hampden-Sydney College, at the request of the Franklin Rotary Club, will present a Christmas Concert for the benefit of the Indigent Children's Clinic in Franklin at 8 p. m., on Saturday, December 5.

The 90 students of the combined group will travel by bus, leaving early Saturday afternoon. Following the concert a reception will be held in the town house.

Selections from the Christmas portion of choral literature will be sung individually by the two groups, and mixed choral numbers will be performed jointly. The Christmas portion of Handel's Oratorio "Messiah," will be sung during the latter part of the program.

The annual Christmas concert by the combined choirs of Longwood College and Hampden-Sydney College will be given at 8:00 p. m., Sunday evening, December 13, in Jarman Hall, as was announced by Dr. J. W. Molnar, head of the music department.

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

A K G Selects Nine In Tapping Service Held Tuesday Night

Miss Stubbs Honored As Charter Member

Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary leadership fraternity, tapped six seniors and three juniors last night in Jarman Auditorium.

Also, at this meeting Miss Florence Stubbs, professor of sociology, was presented with a certificate in recognition of her initiation into the fraternity on May 12, 1928. The newly purchased gavel of the organization was dedicated to Miss Stubbs.

Barbara Assaid, senior of Roanoke, is an elementary education major. She is recognized for her work as president of House Council and for being listed among Who's Who in American Colleges. Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Gamma Mu, Boere Eh Thorn, and Alpha Sigma Tau claim her membership. Bobby also serves as Poetry Editor for the Colonnade magazine.

A business major from Blackstone, Nell Copley was chosen by the fraternity for her leadership as president of her class, vice-president of the YWCA and for membership in the Future Teachers of America, Pi Kappa Sigma, Cotillion Club, and Commercial Club.

Mary Ann Evans an elementary education and social science major from Richmond serves as Business Manager of the Rotenda, and Treasurer of Pi Gamma Mu.

LC To Install Light Facility Near Library

Installation of a light behind the library, a project two years in the undertaking by the Student Standards Committee, will become a realization in the near future, according to Mr. Samuel Graham, business manager of the college. The light will benefit students who attend programs in Jarman Hall at night and students using the music facilities in the auditorium. The request for a light was placed before the committee two years ago when students complained of the darkness behind the library.

Other improvements by the committee are also underway. A washing machine will soon be purchased for the sophomore and freshman buildings together. A machine for senior and junior building has already been bought and will soon be installed. A required amount of money will be imposed on students for use of the machines.

The piano in the dining hall will be moved down to the recreation hall before the combo party, in connection with Senior dance, on Saturday afternoon. This instrument will be used in place of the present piano

Season's Greetings

YWCA Pageant To Feature Yuletide Customs In France, Mexico; Madonna

"Christ is Born Into the Hearts of Men"—the program to be presented as the Y. W. C. A. Christmas Pageant this year, will be given December 15 at 10 p. m., in Jarman Hall.

As in preceding years, the Madonna will be selected from the senior class by the student body. A ballot box has been placed outside the dining hall for today and tomorrow. In voting students should consider a girl who has the characteristics of the Madonna.

Dottie Rector will serve as narrator for the pageant. In the manger scene Camille Atwood will portray Joseph; the Madonna's identity will not be revealed until the performance.

In the next scene the traditional Last Posadas, a Mexican carol depicting the journey of Mary and Joseph to Bethlehem is sung. The host, Fay Greenland who is symbolic of the innkeeper, welcomes the weary travellers, depicted by the invited guests, Esther Acosta, Silvia Bascour, Mary Cowles, Jeanette Morris, Margaret Miller, Mary Jo Hutchinson, Nancy McLawhorn, Ann Coleman, Diane Acree, Frances Stubbs, and Winnie Lauhoff.

A French cathedral is the setting for the next scene in which Mary Mayo appears as a peasant girl. Pat Johnson, a choir girl sings the French carol, "Cantique de Noel."

In the final scene, Betty Lee Copenhaver, Barbara Peach, and Florence King will be seen as wise men. Appearing as shepherds will be Virginia Lee Pohe, Betty Wheeler, and Marguerite Franklin. Nancy Hartman will take the role of an angel.

After the pageant, the traditional White Christmas Service will be held. Heads of all organizations, dressed in white ,will present an offering which will be used for Christmas welfare work in and around Farmville.

The pageant was written and produced under the direction of Georgia Jackson, chairman of Prayers Committee.

Dorm's a Storm, As Seniors Swarm To Ball

DAY DREAMS will soon come true for senior class president, Nell Copley, as she leads the figure at 1953's senior dance in a whirl of sparkly "Christmas Magic."

By STEPHANIE BAUDER, PAT KELLY, GAIL LEONARD

'Twas the night of the dance and all through the dorm,
Nell Copely was running, her head in a storm,
Her formal was hung in the closet with care,
But where were her slippers? They surely were't there!
Her suitmates were resting all snug in their beds,
While thoughts of the combo danced in their heads,
P. Waller and Jean just lay there in stitches,
For they knew Nell's slippers were in the drawer with her britches!
Out on the lawn there arose such a clatter
They sprang from their beds to see what was the matte.
When what to their wondering eyes did appear
But Bandleader Kline spreading good cheer!
With his eight N. C. Staters so cool yet so hot,
They knew "Christmas Magic" would surely be tops!
Into the room came Lib with a Cry—
"Hurry you all—dance time is nigh!
On with their gowns, they dressed in a flash,
And the pranksters revealed Nell's slippers at last!
Down to the parlor so pretty and bright
Till she came to him—her man of the night!
The figure to all was a beautiful sight,
And the couples agreed—"A Wonderful Night!"

'Christmas Magic' To Transform Gym Into Silver World

Sat. Night Dance To Feature Klein

Seniors, underclassmen and their escorts will waltz, in a blue and silver world of "Christmas Magic" at the annual Senior Dance to be held Saturday in the College gymnasium from 8 to 12 p. m. Buddy Klein's orchestra from North Carolina State will furnish the music.

The theme "Christmas Magic" will be carried out in the decorations being planned by Ann Wagner, and in the traditional figure which will be led by Betsy Hankins, honorary class member and Nell Copley, senior class president. A medley of Christmas music will be played during the figure. The actual formation will be kept secret until the night of the dance.

An after-the-dance party will be given for the seniors and their dates in the rec, which will be decorated in accordance with the Christmas spirit.

Combo Concert

A semi-formal combo concert on Saturday afternoon from 3 to 5 p. m., in the rec will also be an added attraction. Buddy Klein's orchestra will furnish the music for this also.

Asked to stand in the receiving for the dance were Dr. and Mrs. Dabney Lancaster, president of the College; Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women; Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor of science; Miss Olive Iler, associate professor of physical and health education; Nell Copley, senior class president; Lib Boswell, vice president; June Johns, treasurer and Ann Moore, secretary.

Chaperones for the dance will be Miss Nancy Chambers, assistant dean of women, Mr. Raymond French, Dr. and Mr. George Sellers, Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Moss, Miss Lucille Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle, Miss Winnie Hiner, and Mr and Mrs. Norman Myers.

Seniors serving on committees are Irene Bobbie Blackmon orchestra, Shirley Ivey publicity, Virginia Sutherland; invitations, Ann Moore; after-dance party, Libby McClure; and circus, by Nell Copley.

Tickets for the dance have been priced $2.40 drag and $1.80 stag. Separate tickets will be used for the combo concert at $1.00 each.

All senior attending the dance will be covered in the traditional white while underclassmen have been requested to wear dresses of a brighter color.

Registration Set

Registration for next semester will take place Tuesday, January 17, beginning at 1 p. m. Scheduling will be held in the heads' department on the first floor of the science building.

Complete instructions will be announced by Mr. Mary S. Watkins, executive secretary of the college, and they will be published in the January issue of the Rotunda.

Choirs Unite Sunday Night For Program

Voices of the Hampden-Sydney and Longwood College choirs will join in the presentation of their traditional Christmas Concert on December 13, at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall.

The program of the concert was announced by Dr. John W. Molnar, director of the group. Dressed in formal attire the men's choir, combined choruses, and solo groups will sing several anthems and Christmas chorales.

Amidst Christmas greens and holly decorations, the men's choir will open the program singing "Echo Carol" by Jungst.

"Springs in the Desert" by Jennings; "Noel of the Bressan Waits" arranged by Davis; "The Lame Shepherd" by Voris; and "Alleulia" by Thompson will be presented by the combined choruses of both colleges.

Other selections included in the program are "The Virgin's Slumber Song" by Reger; "Asumpta Est Maria" by Aichinger; Stanley's "What Can This Mean?"; "Christmas Snows of Sweden" arranged by Gaul; and "Glory to God in the Highest" by Pergolesi.

Continuing, the combined chorus will sing "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming" by Praetorius; "Mary Had a Baby" (Spiritual) arranged by Dawson; Scott's arrangement of "Susanni" (14th century English); and "Gloucestershire Wassail" also arranged by Scott.

Mr. Roy Jesson will accompany on the organ the following selections from Handel's "Messiah": "And the Glory of the Lord"; "His Yoke is Easy"; "O Thou That Tellest Good Tidings"; "Recitative, There Were Shepards"; "Glory to God"; and the ever famous "Hallelujah Chorus"

Concluding the program the combined choruses will present "A Merry Christmas" arranged by Warrell; and the age old Christmas carol "Joy to the World" by Handel.

Soloists from Longwood include Betty Zoe Bailey, Dorothy Morris, Doris Horne, and Mary Ann Wright. Nan Bland, Nancy McLawhorn, Karen Spencer, Wilma Salmon, Mary Ellen Hawthorne, Joyce Clingenpeel, and Carol Carson will sing the ensemble. The soloists and quartette from Hampden-Sydney include George Pillow, Thomas Thorne, Joseph White, and Wilson Kolmer.

To one of the numbers sung by the Longwood Choir, Betsy Welbon will play a violin obligato. Lura Beavers, Howard Hanson, and Mr. Roy Jesson will be piano and organ accompanists.

The concert which will be performed again at College Church, Hampedn-Sydney, on Monday evening, December 14 is open to the public.

A Real Christmas

In an attempt to put the birth of Christ back as the center of Christmas, the Richmond Junior Chamber of Commerce undertook a project through which they will promote less commercialized Christmases in their city.

Richmond, however, is not the only city where Christmas has become too commercialized. In nearly every town, large or small, within the United States, stores now present their Christmas toy parades and window gift displays so early in the month of November that even the spirit of Thanksgiving has been practically elminated.

The citizens of Richmond are chiefly worried, as should everyone be, that the Chritsmas spirit of reverence is being overrun by the Christmas commercialized spirit of gift giving and celebration. It is true that Christmas should be, to an exent, a time of gaiety and fun, however there are forces working at this moment in an attempt to profiteer on our rejoicing. We must awaken and realize this problem before the true Chirstmas spirit is lost entirely.

During the coming holiday let's attempt to instill in the minds of our family and friends the real sacred meaning of the celebration of the birth of Jesus. Let your support of this project be your Christmas gift to Christ.

To Faculty Members

May we offer two reminders to faculty members—the assigning of tests before an artist series program should be avoided, and the over-running of time in the fifty-minute class periods should be watched more closely.

The college annually makes arrangements for artist series programs to enable students of Longwood to broaden and develop interest in various fields. The programs also bring to the students some of the nation's more noted personalities and performers.

Recently there have been two excellent artist series programs, but how many students attended? Very few! During these performances, the audience very readily felt the embarrassment of having only a "hand-full" of students present. On the other hand, the artist looking out from the stage into his small reception, unquestionably felt the self-consciousness of the occasion. The embarrassment the college feels for exposing the artist to a small attendance, is also an undesired factor.

What is the cause? Simply, students have to remain in the "dorms" to study for tests or quizzes assigned for the next day instead of attending the programs in Jarman Hall.

The assignments of the tests are probably made, in every case, unintentionally and unwittingly by professors who do not refer to the scheduling of the programs. This article is being written only to serve as a reminder to faculty members to check twice before assigning a test. If this matter can be worked out satisfactorily, students could indeed give the artist the welcome he deserves.

The next reminder comes in the matter of the professors' retention of classes beyond the fifty-minute class period. The matter again concerns the unintentional action of the faculty. Many instructors, at the end of a class period, add on a few more minutes in order to conclude the thought of the lecture, or in some cases, to finish reports being made by students. On the other hand students themselves cause overtime in classes in that discussions become so interesting, time is completely forgotten.

In these instances, additional time may be warranted, but what of the professors who continually run over day after day? This practice inevitably forces students to arrive late to the next class, and this action does not always meet with the approval of that instructor.

These two suggestions have been voiced by many students. We hope that the criticisms can be used constructively.

Statistics Show

Black shrouded death and festive, sparkly Christmas are strange companions.

But they ride together on America's streaming highways, vying for supremacy, for the lives of holiday travelers. Theirs is a sad struggle, one to give joy and happiness in seasonal celebrations; the other to bring pain and grief to homes and communities. Each year, in increasing numbers, Death claims his December prey, victims of tragic highway accidents.

For American college youth, the holiday season is a hurry and bustle of going home, parties, shopping, trips, places to go, and things to do. And the vast majority of all of their holiday jaunting will be by automobile. In the holiday haze surrounding this month, drivers too often thoughtlessly take an extra chance or a needless risk to gain a mile or a minute . . . too often they lose a life.

Statistics have shown conclusively the increased dangers and rate of accidents during this season. Now, before the last minute rush, we who drive cars or will be passengers in automobiles for this holiday season, need to examine our own knowledge concerning highway traffic accidents, and learn the various factors which increase highway dangers—typical winter weather, excitement, preoccupation with last minute things to do, increased speeds, rise in the amount of night driving, fatigue. We can use our facts and our intelligence to lessen these dangers by applying them to our own driving habits. By taking the ordinary precautions or a few extra minutes, motorists will promote a happier and safer Christmas.

After all, Christmas is a time of giving— don't take a chance with life. Death is an unwelcome holiday celebrant.

Little Jackie, All Confusion; Belief In Santa--Conclusion

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Dear Santa Claus,

I am a boy and i am 8 years old. People been telling me that there comes a time in ever bodys life when they either keep on beleiving in you or all of a sudden they are big shots and Santa Claus is for kids. I'm at that time now and have been having a very hard time of it. I go to scool and I like it all right exept for arithmatick and i do not like that worth a toot. Other than that my Mom says i am normal child. I have red hair, bule eyes, some freckles and two pairs long pants which I got for my berthday. My house is a big white one on a farm in case your not shore. I know you have a hard time keeping up with every boy in the world—and girls. I just want to get this strait. For many, many years i get up Chrismus morning and see presents under the tree and they say from Santa Claus and every Chrismus my friends come to may house to see what Santa Claus brins me and all my Moms and Dads friends come to see what Santa Claus brings them. Also I always go Chrismus singing on Chrismus eve and we sing all the carralls and also Rudolff the red nose and up on the house top clik, clik and other songs about you.

My teasher says that everbody beleives in Santa Claus cause he is the spirt of good Will. I do not know who Will is.but I do know that when I ask my Dad what Santa Claus is, he says he is the jolliest nicest old man in the world and we should all follow his path cause he has got the sprit of love and Chrismus cheer.

When some of those big tuffies come around and say it is kid stuff I could say something that would prove they are wrong. Do Do you remember 2 Chrismus ago I wrote and asked fro a baby brother? I said I would not tell anybody if you would only bring it and you did. Well, I beleive in you, Santa. So do my famly. So do not be insluted. Mom says when I grow up to have my own home I will still beleive in you excpt in a grown up way. Besides —if you are not a real thing, why does Mom say you will bring me switches if I an not good and why are you on the radio and in books and magaseens and why do children all over the world write you letters? Shucks. I don't Believe much in Frosty, the Snowman, but I think your great. I guess Chrismus would not be real Chrismus without you. At Chrismus I know that for once all children all over the world were waiting for you like me and feeling real happy and all.

Well, this has been a very long letter like I have never wrote before. I am not us't to it but know you would like to hear about me.

Love,
Jack

Of Interest

By JOYCE GILLCHREST

The final tragedy given to this country by Eugene Gladstone O' Neill was his death last week in Boston, Massachusetts. As a young man he escaped death by tuberculosis, but at 65 he could not conquer Parkinson's disease which palsied him or pneumonia which finally killed him.

Only one nostalgic comedy, "Ah, Wilderness", by this author lacked the elements of insanity, incest, suicide, and murder so characteristic of his more than 30 tragedies.

O'Neill's early life led to nothing but disaster. While attending numerous boarding schools, Eugene was very hard to handle, was suspended from Princeton for throwing a piece of brick through a station master's house. This marked the end of his formal education. For the next six years he was a general bum, taking odd jobs, sailing the Atlantic as a common seaman, and living in water-front dives. Never before has such a course of conduct paid off so constructively in the history of English literature. From these years of his life came such plays as "Anna Christie", "The Long Voyage Home", and "The Hairy Ape".

It was at this time too that O'Neill contracted tuberculosis and was sent to a Connecticut sanitorium. During this period of rest and confinement he came upon the works of European dramatists which gave him his inspiration to write for the theatre himself.

Within the next 37 years this man was to see his work published and acted in almost every country of the world. He was to make a million dollars and win a Nobel Prize and three Pulitzer prizes.

Some of his greatest plays, "Strange Interlude", "Mourning Becomes Electra", and "The Iceman Cometh" all ended on a characteristic key of courageous hope. O'Neill said that he loved life, but he loved it naked.

Typically he had the heroine of "Mourning Becomes Electra" say in the last act, "The damned don't cry."

"AMERICA'S SINGING BOYS"—The Columbus Boy Choir which will appear in Jarman Auditorium, as fourth of the Artist Series presentations. They are under the direction of Robert Hoffman.

Columbus Boy Choir To Give Concert In Jarman Auditorium on January 12 As Fourth In Artists Series Program

The Columbus Boychoir, under Herbert Huffman's direction will give a concert in Jarman Hall. The concert to be given at 8 p. m .on January 12, is one of the events of the Artist Series.

Since 1943, the Columbus Boy's Choir has given concerts of favorite music, including comic opera to nearly 500 audiences. These audiences have been in nearly every state in the United States and in several provinces of Canada.

Among the well-known concert halls in which it has appeared are Carnegie Hall and Town Hall in New York City and the Academy of Music in Philadelphia The Boys Choir has sung before 15,000 people in New York's Madison Square Garden. It has appeared with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Other activit.es include radio and television programs over all the major networks, and a State Department film for world wide distirbution and an RKO Motion Picture "America's Singing Boys" which was shown in 8,000 theatres.

Boys from the Columbus Choir have been chosen to sing the leads i noperas, as was the case of Chet Allen who sang his way to national acclaim and a movie contract in the opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors."

Publications such as Life, Time, and Newsweek magazines have recorded the achievements of this group.

Members of the Boys Choir School come from all parts of the United States. They are accepted at any time during the year and wherever the choir goes auditions are held in search of new talent.

Mr. Roy Jesson, instructor in music, gave a piano concert as the third program in the Artist Series.

Mr. Jesson, a native of London and a student of Christ Church College of Oxford University, has written and published a great many musical pieces for choral groups and movies. "The Tempest" and "Midsummer Night's Dream" were an example of the work he set to music while at the University.

Mr. Jesson's program here at Longwood began with the playing of Hayden's "Variations in F minor, or two original themes." Following this were pieces by such celebrated composers as Beethoven, Gabriel Grovlez, Jaques Champion de Chambonnieres, and Chopin.

"Divertimento in the form of Variations", "Intrado", and "Burlescacanon - Valse - Finale" were played for the Longwood audience by Mr. Jesson as examples of his own compositions.

Biologists Will Go To Boston Dec. 26 To Nat'l. Conclave

Dr. George Jeffers, head of the biology department, and Dr. Robert Brumfield, professor of biology, will attend the annual meeting of the American Associatoin for the Advancement of Science to be held from December 26 through January 1 in Boston, Massachusetts.

Dr. Jeffers, one of the two representatives from the National Association of Biology Teachers, is on the steering committee for this meeting. This committee is composed of the officers of the association and representatives of affiliated societies.

Policies of the A. A. S. are set and evaluated by the committee at their meetings which are held at the beginning and the end of the convention.

Dr. Brumfield will present to the botany section of the convention his paper entitled "The Inhibitions of Curvatures in Timothy Roots by 2, 4, 6, Trichlorophenoryacetic Acid." Dr. Brumfield did his research for this paper at Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

As many as 300 and 400 meetings will go on at one time at the various hotels in Boston. The Statler Hotel will be the headqaurters for the convention, while the exhibitions will be shown in the Mechanics Building.

Work of UN Topic At AAUW Meeting

Using the topic, "The Work of the United Nations", Dr. Bessie Carter Randolph will speak at an open meeting of the American Association of University Women at Longwood College, Friday, December 11.

A former president of Hollins College, Dr. Randolph will speak at 8 p. m. in the small auditorium. Dr. Randolph was at one time on the faculty of the Farmville State Teachers College. She is a professor of political science and government. In addition to Longwood and Hollins, Dr. Randolph has also been on the faculty of the Florida State College for Women, now a part of the Florida State University.

President Dabney S. Lancaster will introduce Dr. Randolph and the meeting is open to the public.

Judges Rate Publications; V I P A Holds Meet at R-M

Critique sessions for yearbooks, newspapers, and magazines, a business session, banquet, and a dance were included on the agenda of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association Convention held at Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Lynchburg College this past week end.

Shirley Ward, a junior and managing editor of the Rotunda, was appointed director of publicity. Other officers elected to serve at the 1955 convention to be held at Virginia Military Institute and Washington and Lee in Lexington, are President, Margaret Dowdy, of Lynchburg College; Vice-president, Will Molineaux of William and Mary; and Secretary-treasurer, Dave Clinger, of Washington and Lee.

Judges and critique leaders were Mr. W. L. Burton of Lynchburg College, business staffs; Mr. Ozzie Worley, state editor of Roanoke World-News, newspapers; Mr. W. S. Lacy, editor of the Commonwealth, magazines; and Mr. Jack W. Murray, Roanoke Engraving Company, yearbooks.

In the newspaper critical division, William and Mary's Flat Hat placed first; R. P. I.'s Postscript, placed second, and Randolph-Macoan Women's College's Sun Dial received honorable mention. The Sullins' paper received an award for excellence in newswriting. Helianthus, the Randolph - Macon Woman's College yearbook ranked first in this competition and also received the award for excellence in lay out. William and Mary's annual, The Colonial Echo, and Wigwam, R. P. I's yearbook took the honorable mention award.

Randolph-Macon Woman's College also was awarded first place in the magazine division with their literary publication, the Potpourri; The Royalist of William and Mary placed second; honorable mention was gained by the Virginia Tech Engineer, which also received an award for excellence in lay out.

Although the Rotunda did not place in the competition, Mr. Worley stated that "heads were exceptionally well-written, the make-up was ceptionally well-written, the make up was creditable, the stories were well-written, the general appearance of page one was very good—"

Representatives from all three of Longwood's publications attended the conference with Ann Thomas, Gail Leonard, Shirley Ward, and Pat Kelly as the Rotunda's delegates. The Virginian sent Mary Ann King ,who served as 1953 secretary-treasurer of the VIPA, and Jean Carol Parker, Donnie Devine, and Peggy Worthington, Eloise Mason, Barbara Southern, and Mr. Richard V. Meeker, associate professor of English, represented the Colonnade.

State Education Board Considers Grad. Work At Longwood, Madison

Courses May Begin In Summer Session

Requirements for Master's degrees in education may soon be fulfilled at Longwood College if plans now under consideration by the Virginia State Board of Education are approved.

The plans being formulated by a committee composed of President Dabney S Lancaster, of Longwood, President G. Tyler Miller, of Madison, and Dr. Dowell Howard, State Supervisor of Instruction, will provide for graduate study to be done at both of these colleges. A committee meeting will be held in Richmond this week to determine requirements and provisions of the courses. If these are approved graduate work will begin next summer. Most of the future work of this type may be done in summer schools, though the course will also be provided in winter sessions At least one year's work or 30 hours credits will be requisite for the Master's degree. Fewer hours are required if the degree candidate completes a thesis.

Courses Planned

The major part of the requirements for the Master's degree to be offered here will be in education course. These may include such courses as Methods of Research, Curriculum Development, Trends of Modern Education, Advanced Courses in Child Development.

Some of the graduate hours may be filled by additional electives in one certain field. This field would be a continuation of the college major of the secondary education student. In the case of elementary education majors, graduate electives may be taken in many fields.

In discussing the possibilities of initiating graduate work on these two state college campuses, Dr. Lancaster stated that only the most outstanding students would be selected as candidates. Entrance to the graduate classes would be based on the strictest standards of character, academic background, ability, and interest.

The placing of graduate work in these colleges would serve as another of the several steps in the progress of educational standards for teachers. This follows the gradually increasing requirements of certification from normal school certification through the new standard requirements of graduation from accredited colleges.

A teacher holding a master's degree is given monetary change in salary and possibilities of advancement.

Class Picks Mays, Marshall To Head Soph. Production

Jackie Marshall and Barbara Mays were chosen co-chairmen of the 1953 Sophomore Production at a recent class meeting.

The co-chairmen have chosen the various committee heads for the production which will be presented on January 15.

Jane Blake will head the prop committee, and Patsy Abernathy is managing make-up. Beverly Taylor is lights chairman.

Co-chairmen on publicity are Margaret Duke and Gail Leonard. Lou Wilder and Bettye Maas will manage sale of tickets, and Ellen Thomas will head the costume committees. Shirley Kemp and Pat Kelly will head the program and usher committees.

Mary Ann Wright, Carolyn Grey, Fannie Scott and Barbara Clark were chosen to work together on dances. Songs will be directed by Mary Ellen Hawthorne, Joyce Clingenpeel and Liz Dehaven.

The girls on the theme committee, who originated and developed the theme for production are Georgia Jackson, Gail Leonard, Loretta Brooking, Betsy Welbon, Jane Blake, Molly Ann Harvey, Barbara Mays and Jackie Marshall.

Tryouts for parts were held on Monday at 5 p. m. Marshall discloses that the program will be approximately an hour and a half long. The theme will be revealed in a later issue of the Rotunda.

Jackie, an English major from Suffolk, is a member of the Coulillion Club, Granddaughters Club and Rotunda staff. She is also a member of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority and serves on the Service Committee of the YWCA. Jackie states, "Our production is different from the traditional shows given by previous classes and I think that the audience will enjoy it, because the theme is a little out of the ordinary."

Barbara is an art major from Richmond. She participates in choir and Rotunda staff and is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha, social sorority. "Bobby" is quoted as saying "Sophomore Production will be presented with the purpose of honoring the senior class and providing the student body with a profitable evening's entertainment."

Admission will be 35 cents.

Spanish "Fiesta," French "Fete de Noel" Reveal Yule Customs at Rec Party Friday

By PAT JOHNSON and HELEN WARRINER

The French and Spanish Club Christmas party falls this year on Friday, December 11. This occasion, called the "fiesta" by the Spanish students and the "fete de Noel" by the French, is a real yuletide party with all its usual fun, though not with the usual American trimmings. To make Silvia Bascour and Catherine Dessaix feel more at home here in our country, and to teach ourselves more about other countries, the festivities will evoke Christmas customs as observed in France and Spanish-speaking countries today, or represent old legends from which many present - day customs have come.

The events that take place at the party cover a span of time from December 6 to January 6. The French and Spanish classes believe they have enough magic carpets or three dimension glasses to whisk guests from one country to another fast enough not to miss a single event. Interpreters, too, see that no one loses his way in the maze of languages.

"The Legend of Saint Nicholas," an old ballad of the Middle Ages, which was an era of great religious faith and belief in miracles, will be dramatized by some of the French classes under the direction of Sally Wilson. Today in the eastern and northern parts of France, Saint Nicholas, the patron saint of little boys comes on December 6 and brings presents to good little boys and switches to bad ones.

In Mexico, the Christmas festivities begin on December 16 with the posadas, parties held nine success nights through Christmas Eve. The posadas, which means inn, represents the search of Joseph and Mary for lodging. A group of friends come to the home of another and sing a song begging admission; after they are welcomed by the family of the host they enter. All gather around the "nacimento," or nativity scene and reverently sing carols.

The students who take the parts in the Mexican family are Mary Cowles, Marilyn Thompson, Shirley Wilbourne, the children; Esther Acosta and Peggy Worthington, the parents; Lorene Allen, the aunt; and Pat McLemore, the grandmother.

"The Jongleur de Notre Dame," another legend of the Middle Ages which depicts the love and devotion of the monks and a humble juggler for the Holy Virgin, represents more the spirit than a Christmas custom in France. Some of the French students under the direction of Nancy Nelson dramatize this old legend as told by Anatole France in his beautiful nineteenth century story of the same name.

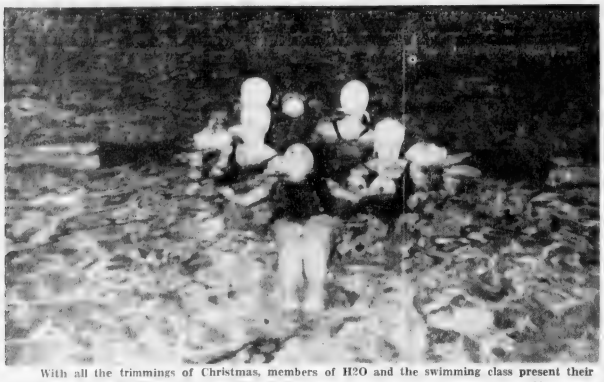
On Christmas Eve in France the entire family goes to mass. There "O Holy Night" forms a part of the service with other songs which center around the "creche" or nativity scene. Barbara Mays will sing "O Holy Night". The beginning French class will sing "Michaud Veillait" and "Il Est Ne le Divin Enfant." Mary Jo Hutchinson, Helen Warriner, Anne Caldwell, Jane Brugh, Cindy Baldwin, Frances Raine, Margaret Dryden, Virginia Cowles, Betty Lee Copenhaver, Martha Lee Foote, Nancy Striplin, Belle Fitzgerald, and Patricia Johnson sing "Les Anges dans Nos Compagnes." Dorothy Rector directs the freshman songs and James Parker plays the piano.

In Spain, too, there is the midnight mass and the supper of Nochebuena. On Christmas Day, there is often the pagan celebration of the bull fight. What a contrast. Beginning Spanish students will furnish the "aficionados" and the "protagonistas." The matador is Jean Lynch Hobbs; Diane Acree is her assistant "toreror." The ferocious bull, bred especially for this fight, comes from the ranch of Charles Rex Daye and Robert Barden.

Later in the day we have a delightful custom brought us from Puerto Rico—the "aguinaldos." These are special gifts to those who have served us well during the year. Esther Acosta is in charge of this number. Assisting her are Mary Jo Hutchinson, Helen Warriner, Shirley Wilbourne, Mary Cowles, Silvia Bascour, Moneda Key, and Mary Gravely

It is especially in Normandy today on New Year's Day that may be heard the cry, "au qui l'an neuf," "with mistletoe the New Year." It is a cry echoing back to the time of the Druids to whom this plant symbolized youth and immortality. Today the French use it as we do to decorate tables and doorways. Nancy Jane Jones interprets the old and the new in her composition of the mistletoe dance.

Now it is New Year's Eve in Madrid, and we celebrate with the Madrid custom of eating a grape at each stroke of the clocks as it strikes midnight.



Santa Claus, "Pere Noel" to the French, arrives a bit late to our party, but he visits the French children on Christmas Eve night just as he does those in America. He stops on his way to our party to bring us some refreshments. He is accompanied by an American personage, Rudolph, the Red-Nose Reindeer. Patricia Johnson sings his song in French translation, while Barbara Blackman interprets it in dance in honor of Pere Noel.

On the Eve of the Three Kings' Day, we see the children of our family excitedly getting ready for the happiest day of the year, the day when each will find the toys left him by the wise men as they go bearing gifts to the Christ Child. Debbie Walsh is Gaspar, Medford and Barbara are read, and Inez Corn and Sharon the camels are prepared. When all the asleep, the [illegible] and leave the [illegible] for the good little children.

The general chairman of the Spanish program is Inez Greenland. The pianist is Lorene Allen.

Pat McLemore is the French program chairman. Gale Branch, Dee Armentrout and Betty Lee Copenhaver are on the decorating committee.

H2O Group Will Present Water Ballet Forming Traditional Christmas Tree Tomorrow Night At Longwood's Pool

A Christmas water ballet displaying all of the traditional symbols of Christmas through rhythmic swimming forms will be presented tomorrow night in the Longwood pool.

Sponsored annually by the H2O Club, the pageant will be given at 5 p. m. and 7 p. m., with admission set at 15 cents per person.

The pageant this year will be centered around a Christmas tree, its decorations, and the toys under it. The tree decorations will include Christmas balls, tinsel, and a star. The toys will be dolls, ducks and doll divers.

Forming the tree will be Lou Kitts, Sarah Lou Wendenburg, Ann Snyder, Mary Anne Jennings, Euphan Carter, Julie Moncure, Betsy Richardson, Carolyn Clark, Christia Julvey, Lib Boswell, Helen Waitman, Hilda Hartis, Pat Hamner, Nancy Quarles, Frances Bailey, Kitty Kamps, Malin Johnson, Joan Ward, Dottie Morris, Doris Kvasnicka, Pat Cantrell, Joan Gibson, Paula Dovell, and Ellen Dize.

The star will be formed by Mildred Parker, Else Went, Betty McAden, Barbara Williams, Shirley Kemp, Karen Spencer, Elizabeth Pancacke, and Carolyn Gray.

The balls will be formed by Rhonda Derring, Lois Haynes, Ann Pond, Nancy Hughes, Maxine Dize, Ilia Des Portes, Betty Lee Copenhaver, Shirley Rocha, "Peanuts" Winder, Loretta Kuhn, Loretta Kesterson, and Adele Donaldson.

Jean Hodges and Patsy Hamner will take the part of diving dolls, and the baby dolls will be Elleanor Koch and Pat Altwegg.

Ducks will beformed by Nancy Masters, Virginia Forward, Mary Lou Burnette, Winnie Louoff, Lou Pomeroy, Virginia Poke, Nancy Deaton, Phyllis Nurney.

The tinsel for the Christmas tree will be formed by Yvonne Mewborne, Mary Elva Robinson, Mary Denny Wilson, Gerry Luck, Flo Pollard, Barbara Whithead, Charlotte Fitts, Patsy Free, Barbaar Tyler, Virginia Cowles, Sue Upson, Bettie Adkins, Claudette Cross, and Patty Parker.

Roberta Wiatt is chairman of the pageant. Edith Frame is her assistant.

L C Men To Open Basketball Season With Crewe Dec. 10

The Longwood men's basketball team will open its season tomorrow night when they play Crewe High School, at Crewe.

As yet, a completed schedule has not been arranged, but it has been decided that games will be played on Friday and Saturday nights, with the exception of next week's game. This game will be on Thursday night in the Longwood gym with the Madison College five.

Members of the Longwood team are Freddie Stubbs, Bobby Barton, Bey Dave, George Coburn, Herb Goodman, James Parker, Rathmel Deaver, and Eric Robertson. Mr Charlie Hop French is water boy.

There will be no admission charged to these games, but a silver offering will be taken to help defray the cost of uniforms, new screen and winter that were purchased this year.

Mr Jacob Wamsley, assistant business manager, is acting as coach. It is his opinion that the boys have a promising team and should increase good basketball for the entertainment of both students and town people.

Alumnae Publication To Come Out Jan. 4, First of 1954 Issues

Before January 4 3,500 Alumnae [illegible] will be received by the Longwood Alumnae office.

In the December magazine there are a number of articles which concern us. Mrs. Bovel Covington secretary should appeal to Longwood College students. Some of those are the "Treasurer's Letter" by Dr. D. S. Lancaster, and "How Old Is Longwood" by Dr. Martin Schmidt assistant professor of history. In the latter article is a picture of Longwood dated back to 1868.

Other articles are "Alumnae Return Home on Alma Mater's Birthday," "Alumnae Magazine" a poem by Miss Elizabeth C. Eggleston a former member of the Hampden-Sydney English faculty. There is also a number of many poems for the seasons as "Founders Day" and "A Kind of Being at Home" by Mary Dupree written in 1909.

Junior Eng. Test Set for January 7

The date of the Junior English test has been set for Thursday, January 7, from 7 to 9 p. m. in Jarman Hall, as announced by Mrs Mildred D Davis, chairman of the English Department.

All Juniors, including transfer students, will be tested on reading comprehension, effectiveness of expression, grammatical usage and other mechanics of written composition.

Any student with unsatisfactory achievement in two or more areas of the standard test will be expected to avail herself of the opportunity of enrolling in a special course in remedial English or in a remedial reading-composition course, depending on the nature of the deficiences revealed.

Y Sponsors Caroling In Town Next Week

Familiar strains of "Silent Night" will ring through the streets of Farmville as Longwood girls go Christmas caroling next week.

The music committee of the Y sponsors the Christmas caroling annually and it is open to the student body.

TV Audiences To See Band Make Debut

Do any of you Longwood girls have a few spare moments on a Sunday afternoon? Then take time out to view a brand new dance band that is making its debut before TV audiences this week.

This new band—The Band of Manhattan—will make its first public appearance on Omnibus, the Ford Foundation television program, on Sunday, December 13 (CBS-TV, 5 p. m. to 6 p. m., EST).

The band has been styled by Will Lorin, a composer and arranger whose radio, television, and recording studio is well known in professional music circles.

The Band of Manhattan will star Jimmy Abato who is rated by many critics as the finest alto saxaphone artist now playing in this country. Abato's experience includes performances under Toscanini, the New York Philharmonic, and Stokowski. He was also a members of the late Glenn Miller's band, which is still a favorite all over Manhattan.

Will Lorin has pointed out that the band has been especially created to meet the demands of modern college tastes in dance music. He also stated that the band is anxious to hear from campuses all over the country, and that this will be an unusual opportunity for college students to take an active part in the deevlopment

By LOUISE WILDER

Color Rush, hel don the athletic field on November 19, resulted in green and white banners flying over Junior Building and Library Hall and red and white banners waving over the Rotunda, Senior and Student buildings. Runners for red and white were Roberta Wiatt, Jahn Lohr, Nancy Hartmann, Muriel Boswell, and Edith Frame. Green and white runners were Helen Waitman, Hilda Hartis, Dot Morris, Barbara Tyler, and Patty Parker.

Color Rush is not connected with color cup points but is a tradition which has existed at Longwood for years and is always held during the week before Thankgiving.

Points for color cup now stand 10-0 in favor of the red and whites! These points came from winning all the class hockey games. The sophomores won out over the juniors 2-0 and the seniors beat the freshmen 2-0.

Hockey Results

The two closest and most exciting hockey games—as always—were between the sophs and the frosh and the juniors and seniors. Both games ended in a 1-0 score in favor of the two red and white teams. The freshmen held the sophomores scoreless until the second half. Both teams put all they had into the game but special praise goes to the freshman team for an excellent game. Every girl played well as a part of a team. Keep up the good work freshmen! You almost beat the sophomores and believe me you had them worried.

The seniors were unable to score against the juniors until literally the last minute of the game. The ball traveled from one goal to another. It looked as if the game would end scorless. But in the last minute of the game, the senior team (and from the sidelines it looked like the entire team was in the striking circle) was able to get the ball over the end line for that one precious point. Though the games between the sister classes did not affect color cup, you might like to know that the juniors beat their sister class 5-1 and the sophomores beat the seniors 1-0.

Class Spirit

Red and white may be leading green and white in points for color cup but green and white is tops with spirit. The enthusiasm and interest shown by the green and whites at the class hockey games was great. The same few loyal red and whites were there but th predominant songs and colors were green and white. How about it red and whites, is it going to be like this through tennis, volleyball, and swimming? Points from these four activities go toward color cup, too. A little more backing from the red and whites would help.

Varsity and class basketball, and class volleyball practices have started. Eight practices are required to play on the class teams. Get your practices early! Practice for class basketball is at 4 p. m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons. Volleyball practice is at 3 p. m. on Tuesdays, and Thursdays, and 7 p. m. on Tuesdays. Varsity basketball practice is at 5 p. m. on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

The varsity basketball games which have been definitely scheduled are Madison on February 19 and Bridgewater on February 20. Both games are away.

The Athletic Association Council will be in charge of taking pictures at senior dance Saturday night. A 5x7 picture will cost $1. Each additional print will be fifty cents. A member of the AA Council will visit each room to sign you up for sometime during the dance. Support the AA and at the same time have a souvenir of your wonderful evening at the Senior Dance of '53.

Ping-pong tables and balls are provided for everyone's use in the sophomore and main rec. Take advantage of this reservation, but please remember the balls are put there for everyone's use and should be kept on the tables at all times.

Will be looking for you "From the Bleachers" in 1954. Have a merry Christmas!

National Council Warns Motorists Of Road Hazards In Holiday Traffic

Thirty-eight thousand persons dead; more than a million injured. This is the record of United State traffic accidents during 1952. The complete compilation of automobile accident facts, published annually by the National Safety Council was released last month.

These statistics show that of 38,000 traffic accidents last year only 11,000 occurred in urban areas. The records for rural areas have been consistently higher since cities began extensive campaigning for safer driving. The National Safety Council also shows that more accidents occur at night time with 27 per cent of collisions between 4 and 8 p. m. It is shown, also, that 26 per cent of all fatal accidents involving drivers under twenty-five years of age.

In a breakdown of reasons for accidents in the United States, the Council reports that violation of speed laws and driving while under influence of alcohol cause the vast majority of all accidents. Of all fatal accidents 33 per cent are directly caused by speeding, 23 percent are directly traced to intoxicants.

The records also noted that the week-end's heavy traffic include most of the highway accidents with Saturday accounting for 22 per cent; Sunday, 18 per cent; and 15 per cent. Only 8 per cent of drivers in fatal accidents were women.

As precautions for holiday driving the National Safety Council has urged that drivers and pedestrians consider several tips which should provide a safer holiday:

1. Stay alert even in the last minute rush. Avoid intoxicants if driving or walking.

2. Remember that darkness and bad weather are signals for slower speeds.

3. Be sure your car and yourself are in good condition, prepared for emergencies.

4. By increasing travel time alloment by 10 per cent, drivers can reduce accident possibilities by 90 per cent.

'Wonderful' Smiles Jackson In Talk on Year in France

"It was wonderful", could never begin to describe the eventful months that Maria Jackson spent last year while studying at the University of Lyon in France under Fulbright Scholarship, however, her radiant smile we are all familiar with, implified that it far exceeded her expectations, clever anecdotes concerning her entire trip with each of us.

Through well-chosen illustrations, clever anedotes concerning her own experiences and a host of adjectives that painted exotic Paris, elegant Rome, and dazzling Madrid, she enabled her audience to take a quick trip abroad.

Maria spoke with warm sentiment concerning her home in Lyon with a prominent lawyer, his mother, his wife and their three children Marique, Max, and Reland. In introducing them to us individually we were captured by the lasting friendships she had made in a foreign land, thus it drew us closer to our neighboring countries and their people.

Language difficulties seemed to present the largest problem, but evidently had their advantages, too. Our speaker explained that she had to learn to express herself with a twinkle in her eyes, a nod, or hasty shrug. However, judging from her amusing tales of misinterpretations and misunderstandings, these contacts with the French language will remain lasting memories.

In a short time Maria acquainted us with the customs of Lyonnais society, the University formalities, and even the "cuisine" or cooking, when she described a long list of delicacies that make up a "company mid-day" meal in France.

Her audience wes completely entranced when she spoke of the "highlight" of her trip over the Christmas holidays. Journeying with friends to an unknown country, the tiny village of Les Baux, all of a sudden they found what she explained to be "as much as the town of Bethlehem" Here, under the spire of a large Christmas star they knelt in Communion with people of all nations from all walks of life.

In conclusion Maria told of an incident that made it evident that her friends in France would not forget her either. "Little Marique, had a doll named "Eve" who was her sole responsibility. She loved it as much as she loved her Papa. Never have I belonged more completely as I did the night she tipped into my room in her little night shirt, holding Eve in her arms. "Maria" she said, 'you may keep Eve in your room tonight; you know, she said confidentially she wants to go to America, too, when she grows up!"

Maria, as an ambassador to France, has made two great contributions—to herself, for applying herself conscientiously to the task that she realized was hers—and to Longwood, that she dearly loves, in sharing her experiences with us For through her delightful presentation of a year that has been an inspiration in life for her, we were able to grasp the true meaning of brotherhood —and that learning to live successfully is a gradual process of growth, "from understanding to tolerance, from tolerance to appreciation, and from appreciation to sympathy—not a sympathy built on pity or over-sentimentality, but a sympathy built on understanding, tolerance and appreciation."

REMEMBER PARIS AT CHRISTMAS TIME? Two natives of France and one "adopted" daughter, reminisce together. Shown are Catherine Dessaix, a Longwood student, Maria Jackson, Longwood alumna, and Mrs. Sid Rothe, formerly of Paris, now a resident of Farmville.

Members of College Dance Classes To Give Assembly Program Jan. 12 Under Leadership of Mrs. Landrum

Showing development of dance through its many varied types and formes, Orchesis and the dance classes will present a comprehensive dance recital at Longwood's regular assembly program, January 12.

Members of the modern dance club and the tap and modern dance classes have chosen a theme which shows dance from its earlier, simpler forms when it was simply a part of folk songs and music through the more stylized forms, the preclassics with music written especially for dance type, and up to modern dance.

Under the direction of Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, the music and dance have been coordinated under four sections which develop the themes, "Song Into Dance," "The Waltz as a Dance Form," "The Preclassics in Dance," and 'Dance and the Emotions."

In the first section, both song dance will be used to develop the idea of what is a song in one country is a dance in another. Nan Bland, Lib Boswell, Mary Cowles, Trianne Lampkin, Jean Carol Parker, and Karen Spencer will sing a Mexican folk song, an English Round, and an American Folk tune. Each song will then be shown as a folk dance, tap dance, and modern dance.

The second section, the waltz as a beloved and well known form will show the "Landler," an original waltz done in folk form. The "Skater's Waltz" will be demonstrated in the tap idiom. The development of this work has been the semester's work of the tap class. Delibles' "Waltz" from the ballet, "Naila, the Water Nymph" will be shown in ballet techniques by Nancy Tanley Masters. Joan De Alba, Carolyn Gray, and Shirley Roby will interpret the waltz in the modern side using Poulene's "Waltz."

Orchesis, the modern dance club, will develop the third section which begins with music composed expressly for dance. The earliest type of this composition was a pavanne, an authentic dance from a Harst arrangement of the oldest recorded pavanne will be danced by Mary Cowles, Rhonda Deering, Faye Greenland, Moneda Key, Trianne Lampkin, Pattie Parker, Lucy Thwing, and Sue Upson.

Two dances using the same type of muscular movements as the pavanne will follow; a duet, "Imposition" by Beth Kent and Jane Blake set to a prelude by Bowles; and a trio, "We Three," a study in singular austerity, by Barbara Blackman, Mary Cowles, and Joan De Alba.

A contemporary suite by Miller will feature dances in a Schottische, a study in humor, by Mary Hundley and Moneda Key; a waltz trio, a study in lyricism by Barbara Blackman, Patti Parker, and Rhonda Derring; a polka, a study in satine, by Mary Jo Davis, Fay Greeland, Jean Carol Parker, and Sue Upson.

A group composed of Fay Greenland, Trianne Lampkin, Nancy Tanley Masters, Lucy Thwing, and Jane Blake will lead a march figure which will be used as both an introduction and finale to highlight the whole section.

The concluding section will show another approach to dance composition through the use of the emotions as a basis for creation. The theme of love will be used as a structure for development of this section. Tryouts for these studies, which are semester projects for the modern dance classes, will continue through this week.

"First Love" will make use of a prop; "Young Love" will show how two bodies must learn to move as one through study of modern sculpture.

"Mother Love" will show the theme through stress on focus on movement paterns suggested by studies of the Madonna in both painting and sculpture.

A group work temporarily entitled "Nightmare" is planned to conclude the program.

Freshman Class Makes Preparations For Traditional, Formal Yule Banquet

Longwood has that Christmas look with plans and preparations being made for various Christmas activities.

Highlighting these events will be the traditional formal Christmas banquet, sponsored by the freshman class. It will be held on Wednesday, December 16.

The organization of the banquet is being handled by the Freshman Commission. They have chosen the conventional Christmas tree cut-outs to adorn the menus. Entertainment will also be provided between courses by the Commission. They have chosen three "fifty-seven-ites", Barbara Ames, Barbara Burnsides, and Frances Raine, to work with Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, in planning the menus.

Miss Virginia Bedford's two freshman art classes will be responsible for the major decorations in the dining hall. The featured attractions are to be Christmas mobiles. These structures will be suspended from wire framework beneath the chandeliers. From the wire will hang the colored glazed paper sculpture. The seasonal spirit will be represented by petite angels, bright stars, colorful masses of paper fluff, and a variety of other such objects. Each mobile is being constructed by a group of six girls. There will be nine mobiles in all.

Miss Nancy Chambers, assistant dean of women, has summed up the feeling, "It is like nothing else feeling, "It is like nothing else that we have. I always look forward to it."

Frosh Groups Will Sponsor Social Teas

Putting into practice what they have been learning in class, the orientation groups began their entertaining last week when the first tea was given for some of the faculty and students. Acting as hotesses the members of the 1 p. m. Monday class of Miss Nancy Chambers, assistant dean of women, received members of the faculty, three seniors from Cumberland High School, and several Longwood upperclassmen.

On Tuesday, December 8, Miss Chambers' Monday 10 a. m. class entertained three Farmville High School seniors and their advisor and other guests at tea. Carol Carson sang "White Christmas," and guests joined in the singing of Christmas carols.

The class which meets on Tuesday at 9 a. m., conducted by Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women, will hold an after-dinner coffee Wednesday night, December 9;

PDE To Sell Food

Initiation of nine new members into Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalism fraternity, took place last Thursday in the Honors room.

Those students receiving this honor were Jean Carol Parker, Betty Frances Ssarborough, Mary Ann Evens, Anne Carter Wendenburg, Lou Kitts, Dot Douglas, Pheobe Warner Shirley Ward.

Plans are underway by the organization to raise money by selling doughnuts and coffee next Sunday morning in the senior and junior buildings, and freshman and sophomore buildings.

Social Notes

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Thanksgiving is a thing of the past and Christmas lurks around the corner—"Christmas Magic," the theme of Senior Dance, will set the stage for the holiday festivities at Longwood this coming week end. Halls decorated with strings of popcorn and the scent of pine, carol-singing in the Rotunda—plus the last minute term papers, tests and that favorite pastime, student teaching—all go together while we are counting the days. As this goes to press—the 19th of December is only a mere ten days away.

V. P. I.-V. M. I. Game

Guess who won the game at Roanoke on Thanksgiving Day? I'll never tell, but it wasn't Tech. To name the people that attended from here would take up the whole 13 inches I am allowed in this column So take up your annual, leaf through it — and anybody you see hailing from Roanoke, Rocky Mount, Christiansburg, Radford and all points North, East, South, and West — were there!

V. M. I. Dances

What could be a better way to enjoy your Thanksgiving holidays than spending the three wonderful days at V. M. I. ring dances! Dancing around the giant silver ring to the delightful music of Ralph Marterie was Shirley Mallory, Donnie Devine, Carolyn Smith, Leslie Ann Smith, Jane Bailey, Margaret Beavers, Nancy Talley, and Dot Armstrong. Those that were dating juniors and participated in forming the ring figure were Nancy Hartman, Hartman, Jahn Lohr, Audry Owen, Jane Lohr, Audry Owen, Muriel Boswell and Kay Pelter.

Congratulations to Frances Bays who received an S. A. E. pin from Jim Swollen of the U. of Richmond.

Also Jane Scott is now wearing Parke McIlwaines Sigma Chi pin Parke attends Hampden-Sydney College.

Cocktail Party

The girls of third floor Junior Building and invited guests attended a delightful cocktail party Saturday afternoon in the parlor at 5 o'clock, honoring Misses Mary Jones and Barbara Mitchell. Hostesses for the occasion were Misses Margie Smallwood and Carolyn Stanley (waitress Mrs. Masters).

Miscellaneous

Peggy Byus and Ellen Brent Dize attended the Medical College masquerade ball at the University of Virginia this past week end.

Attending the Sigma Chi party at Roanoke College was Shirley Garst, Bonnie Moore, Shirley Wilhide and Bev Taylor.

Those that were at Lynchburg College dances this past week end were Evelyn Hall, Frankie Williams, Marguerite Franklin and Sally Cecil.

Arlington Supervisor Will Visit Here Jan. 7

On January 7, at 9 a. m., Mr. Charles Walsh, assistant superintendent in charge of personnel of Arlington County will be at Longwood to interview prospective teachers. Those seniors who are interested in applying for jobs in Arlington County should plan to talk to him on that day.

The girls who accepted positions there last year Jean Longwood are Ann Dudley, Jean Krienbaum, Ann Murphy, and Janet Wingfield. Mrs. Mary Watkins, executive secretary, stated that is is the first of many such visits which will be made by various school superintendents to find teachers for next year. This interviewing procedure is a service of the Longwood placement bureau.

Mrs. Jenkins, Anderton Review Books In Keeping With Christmas Season; Suggest Books For Yuletide Giving

By MRS. MARTHA JENKINS and GLORIA ANDERTON

Looking for a Christmas gift for a young girl or boy? Want a Christmas book for yourself that you will cherish not only at Christmastime, but all through the years to come?

The Longwood library now has on display several books about the festive season that will be enjoyed by young and old alike. Some of these books contain plays for young actors, others feature poems, stories and legends about Christmas, while others are complete novels telling in some way how the miracle of Christmas helped some one in need of understanding and guidance.

Among the books on display there are collections of plays, stories, poems, and legends are Burack's "Christmas Play for Young Actors," which is a collection of royalty-free stage and radio plays, Eaton's "The Animals' Christmas," a collection of Christmas stories, legends, and poems about animals and Gardner's "Let's Celebrate Christmas," which includes a number of party ideas, carols, plays, poetry, and stories suitable for use in school, home and church.

If you are looking for a book which contains recipes for medieval dishes, and a special recipe for "Christmas Carol Punch," you will surely be pleased with Lewis's "A Christmas Book."

On the light side of Christmas there is a book on display written by Harris called "The Night Before Christmas, In Texas, That Is." This books is a parody of Clement Moore's famous Christmas classic, "The Night Before Christmas" and contains humorous illustrations. In this group there is also included a gay little story written by Faster called "Miss Flora McFlemsey's Christmas Eve." The book tells about Miss Flora McFlemsey, a discarded doll who on Christmas Eve walked downstairs from the attic to see the Christmas tree. Santa, who was one doll short, found her there and left her as a present: but she was very unhappy in her old faded clothes until the Christmas angel helped her to become the most popular doll on the treet. This book would appeal to little girls between the ages of 4 and 8, who might be on your shopping list.

For those of you who are looking for a book dealing with the serious thoughts of Christmas the library offers three good selections. They are McKukin's "Room at the Inn," a novel, Menotte's "Amahl and the Night Visitors," and the universal Christmas favorite, Tazewell's "The Littlest Angel."

"Room at the Inn" is a story concerning a Kentucky mountain family. The mother was injured and hospitalized while the family was traveling on Christmas Eve. The father and son were faced with a dreary Chirstmas until the magic of Christmas was brought about by a peroxide blonde, a Negro maid, and a spinster, aided by the unquestioning faith of the little boy.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors" is a narrative adaptation by Francis Frost and preserves the exact dialogue of Menottes opera. It is the story of a poor shepherd and his mother who gave shelter to the three kings on the first Christmas Eve.

Tazwell's "The Littlest Angel" tells of the trials of a newly arrived little agel in Paradise, who grew lonely and caused trouble until the understanding Angel took charge of him.

Men To Hold Yule Banquet

A Christmas banquet in the Tea Room, complete with all the festive trimmings, will be held by the Men's Student Government on December 17.

At the last meeting of the Longwood's men students, plans for a juke box dance in January, and a production to be given in the spring were also made. Herb Goodman, president of the group welcomed Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss as new faculty adviser.

Fund Totals $147.22

During the recent college chest drive, $147.22 was collected from the students to go into four combined funds on campus—March of Dimes, Red Cross, World University Service Fund and International Christian University Fund.

Joint Band Holds Tryout Rehearsal

The first rehearsal of the Hampden-Sydney and Longwood College combined band was held on Monday evening. This band is being organized as an opportunity for everyone who plays an instrument. Also, the band will take part in future concerts and musical presentations at both colleges. There were about 35 members present.

Such marches as Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever", and "Washington Post" are being played. Also the overture from the "Student Prince" and popular music such as "When the Saints Go Marching In" and "Time On My Hands" are among the selections now being rehearsed.

The next rehearsal will be Friday afternoon, December 11, at 4 p. m. in the band room.

Students Approve Two Amendments To LC Constitution

Changes State Election Dates

Two amendments to the Constitution of the Student Government Association were passed by the student body at a meeting held on January 5. These amendments have been approved by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college.

The first addition was made to Article 5, Section 3 (f) in the Constitution and is stated "the date of major elections should be set as the first week in March."

The entire section before the addition was made read "The candidates for election shall be elected from the two highest receiving the highest number of nominations from the office. These names shall be posted immediately upon approval of the Dean of Women and the President of the College. Any girl nominated for one minor office may be eligible for nomination to another one of less importance in another organization. Any girl elected for a major office may not run for a minor office."

An addition to Article 5, Section 9, was also made as a second amendment.

The entire section before the amendment was passed states "The Editors-in-Chief and the Business Managers of the Rotunda, the Virginian, and the Colonnade will be selected two weeks prior to major elections, by a committee composed of the retiring editor, the faculty adviser of each publication and one senior appointed by the Student Council and approved by the student body."

The addition to this section continues with "who shall be appointed in the spring. She shall serve as chairman of the Publication Board for one year."

Registration Set For L C Studnets Tomorrow 1 P. M.

Juniors, Seniors To Schedule First

Registration for the second semester of the current session will be held in the Biology Department of Stevens Hall on Thursday, January 14 beginning at 1:00 p. m.

Juniors and seniors will make their schedules from 1:00 to 3:00 p. m. Freshmen and sophomores will begin their scheduling at 3:00 p. m. No student will be allowed to schedule more than 17 semester hours of work. If any one wishes to take additional hours, he must secure an "Application for Additional Hours" from Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary. Before the day of registration everyone should confer with his department head concerning his schedule.

Schedule cards will be available in Stevens Hall. These schedules, when completed, should be approved by the following individuals:

Curriculum 1, Dr. J. P. Wynne, professor of Education and Philosophy; Curricula II, III, VIII, and XI, head of the department in which one plans to major; Curriculum IV, Mrs. Nell Griffin, professor of Home Economics; Curricula V and V-A, Dr. Merle Landrum, professor of Business Education; Curricula VI and VII, Dr. John Molnar, professor of Music; Curricula VIII-A and IX-A, Dr. C. F. Lane, associate professor of Geography.

Students are urged to have their schedule cards in order before Thursday, to save time.

Class of '55, To Give 'L' Esprit' In Jarman Hall on Friday Night; Pageant - Play To Begin at 8 pm

TAKING THE LEAD IN SOPHOMORE PRODUCTION, "L 'Esprit", Patsy Abernathy will portray Joan of Arc, Friday night in Jarman Hall. Jackie Marshall and Barbara Mays are co-directors of the pageant-play.

Marshall, Mays Co-Direct Play

"L'Esprit," a three-act pageant-play will be presented at Longwood College on Friday at 8:00 p. m. in Jarman Hall. This program, known at the college as Sophomore Production, is presented annually by member of the sophomore class.

Barbara Mays of Richmond and Jackie Marshall of Suffolk are co-directors of the show.

For the past several years the productions have been musicals or comedies. This year, however, the program is of a more dramatic nature. The French title, "L' Esprit," translated as "the spirit," symbolizes the spirit of Joan of Arc throughout her life. This theme was selected for the production by a committee of six sophomores, Betsy Welbon, Georgia Jackson, Molly Ann Harvey, June Blake, Loretta Brooking, and Gail Leonard. The dialogue is original; however, the facts of the story are authentic.

Joan's life will be portrayed. The little French village of Domremy, Joan's home, sets the mood of the play with its peasant dances and villages and village comic scenes. Patsy Abernathy will be featured as Joan.

In the second act, amidst jesters and court activities, Joan visits the court of Charles VII to plea for support.

The drama of Joan's trial and her persecution will be portrayed in the third act by dialogue and modern interpretive dance.

Other sophomores holding speaking parts are Georgia Jackson, James Parker, Dorothy Rector, Loretta Brooking, Ann Snyder, Jane Hall, Jane Blake, Betsy Welborn, Betty Pat Rogers, Mary Alice Ellington, Becky Fizer, and Dottie Hamrick.

Five sophomore girls are serving as chairmen of committees. Margaret Dryden is in charge of make-up; June Blake, props; and Mary Ann Wright, Mary Ellen Hawthorne, and Joyce Clingenpeel, costumes. Jan Wilder, tickets; Ellen Thomas and Jean Cuthill will handle costumes. Fannie Scott and Mary Ann Wright will handle dance.

Publicity chairmen are Marsha Dale and Gail Leonard.

King Appoints Two To Staff

Freshman positions on the annual staff will be filled by Elsie Meade Webb and Caroline Stoneman, according to Mary Ann King editor of the Virginian.

Elsie Meade from Emporia, worked on the activity section of her high school annual. She is an English major here and is a member of the Granddaughters Club.

Caroline is from Richmond. She attended Thomas Jefferson High Schol where she was a member of the high school's magazine staff. A biology major, Caroline's college activities include freshman commission.

High School Girls To Visit Longwood; College Plans Activities For Weekend

High school guests from all over the state of Virginia will visit our campus this weekend.

Many activities have been planned to entertain the seniors and show them a bit of the college life here at Longwood.

The high school seniors will start off their visit by attending the Sophomore Production. On Saturday they will tour the campus; also a basketball game is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon which they will see. Following this game will be an orientation tea which will give the guests an opportunity to meet faculty and students. As a closing for the weekend's entertainment the seniors will go to the sectional club "Jamboree."

Girls will visit our campus from Albemarale, Richlands, Glade Springs, Rappahannock, Marshall, Lincoln, Leesburg, Covington, and Manchester high schools. Also Kembridge, Chuckatuck, New Kent, Goochland, and Lovettesville high schools will be represented.

Plans have been made also for visitors from Collegiate High School in Richmond, Woodrow Wilson High School in Portsmouth, Maury High School in Norfolk, Washington and Henry High School in Richmond, and Deep Creek High School in Norfolk County. Prospective students will come from Granby High School in Norfolk, Courtland High School in Courtland, E. C. Glass High School in Lynchburg, Ashburn High School in Manassas, Madison Heights High School in Madison Heights, and Greenville County High School in Emporia.

Visitors are also expected from Hopewell High School in Hopewenn, Mt. Vernon High School in Alexandria, and Washington and Lee High School in Arlington.

Enthusiastic Audience Greets 'Boy Choir'

by MARTHA DONALDSON

Last night in Jarman Hall, twenty-six little boys captured the hearts of a capacity crowd, amusing them, amazing them, and completely entertaining them. These boys were the Columbus Boychoir of Princeton, New Jersey and were part of this season's Farmville Artist Series.

This writer was left with the incapacity of finding adjectives fine enough with which to describe their concert and the clear, bell-like voices of the boys. Our hearts were in our throats during the more serious presentations. We were amused by their entertaining presentation of the one act opra, "Apothecary," and many hearts fluttered as the strains of "If I Loved You" were heard. The Lord's Prayer, as an ending, left a hushed, spellbound and very appreciative audience, who would have stayed to listen to this very famous boychoir as long as they would sing for them. It is hard to remember a program in the past which has ever reached such a marvelous ovation or finer comments.

The boys performed in the absence of their Director, Herbert Huffman. They were directed by Donald Bryant who usually assists and accompanies the boys at the piano.

The program ended leaving an appreciative audience which had enjoyed the program so much that they hated to have it end. However, there were many people who stayed after the performance to talk to the boys. This brought very much enjoyment and inspiration to this writer plus much information about the Columbus Boychoir.

The boys received their fans very warmly and enthusiastically answered the many questions which were asked of them. They were fun to talk to for they all had very pleasing personalities. Their manners, composure and intelligence were outstanding features which made them very refreshing to talk to. Last of all they are little more than typical boys and very sweet, lovable ones.

These boys of Boychoir attend Columbus Boychoir School, a private school in Princeton, New Jersey which has the enrollment of approximately 62 boys. They are chosen through auditions of their voices. The 26 boys in the choir make several tours, and while on these tours the boys ride on a special bus which has desks, teachers and a piano. The boys, therefore, do not miss out on their lessons or practice while away from schools, in fact, the boys are kept a year ahead scholastically.

The boys who attend Columbus Boychoir School don't attend after the tenth grade for usually around then their voices change. They have a summer vacation, however, some of them attend their summer camp, Camp Chautauqua in New York state.

It is easy to see that these boys, who come from all over the United States, enjoy what they are doing. All of them said that they "love it" and one boy said, "the best part of it was visiting girls' schools." They were all quite excited over the fact that they are on their way to Florida and will stop in Atlanta next.

When the remark was made to one of the boys that their's was the best concert that we have ever had here at Longwood, being very diplomatic he said that the Longwood group was their best audience so far.

Everyone at Longwood hopes that the Columbus Boychoir will be back on campus in the future to thrill us again. They were truly wonderful.

It was hard to say goodbye to the boys for we would like to have them stay but they had to run to make their bed time so they left for the Weyanoke where they spent the night before moving on to another cancert and another audience.

Sectional Clubs Plan Fun, Entertainment For Saturday Night

By PHOEBE WARNER

It's new!—It's different!—It's fun!—and it's only a dime! Yes, fellow contemporaries your boredom shall end for the sectional club "Jamboree" is on its way.

This Saturday night the Halifax, Mecklenburg, and Charlotte Club, the Northern Neck Club, the Richmond Club, and the Southwest Virginia Club are putting on this frolicing affair for the enjoyment of students, faculty, and high school guests.

Activities planned for the night include a prize to be given at the door, a "White Elephant Sale", a bit of square dancing, and entertainment at its best.

The clubs were able to book especially for the occasion, Jean "Eartha Kitts" Hobbs, Carol "Blues" Carson, and mistress of ceremonies, Mary Ann "Godfrey" Wright.

An an added feature to the "Jamboree" one of the clubs will sell cokes, candy, cigarettes, and nabs.

Don't miss the fun, this will be one time you won't be bored down in the "rec."

The clubs have taken on this "Jamboree" as a new project to make money to entertain club members and high school seniors who visit our campus.

From Here To Exams

Since our return to school an atmosphere of gloominess has reigned over our campus. It seems that although there is much to do as far as school activities go, there are few social events planned and morale seems to be at low ebb because exams are right around the corner.

Although there is little going on now that is really enjoyable, our time could be used to an advantage by catching up on parallel reading, class projects, and preparing for our exams without letting these become a burden. If this is practiced, time will not seem endless and exams will not take on impossible proportions.

Whereas at the moment you may not have a pressing schedule, there are those who do. Cooperation and consideration are two important factors which will help all of us during the next few weeks.

Although there is much study to do in the next few weeks, it is not the only factor contributing to scholastic success. Rest and recreation are both needed. Remember that a good night's sleep can change your outlook for the next day.

We will welcome the ending of exams, but until then let's "grin and bear it."

The Dining Hall

A few weeks ago the Rotunda published an editorial entitled, "Food for Thought." Remember? It concerned that most universal topic of collegiate conversation, the dining hall. At Longwood, both students and administration have come to agree that the dining hall atmosphere has become less "homelike" and less relaxing and enjoyable.

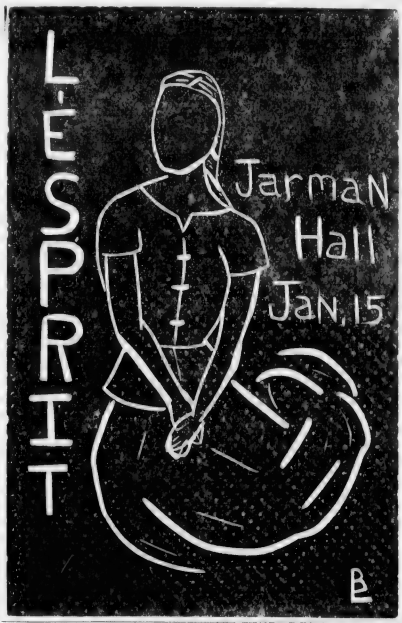
During the past two months, the Rotunda staff has observed carefully the reaction of students and those in charge of the dining hall to suggestions and criticisms offered not only by the newspaper but also through the work of Student Standards. We have found that certain suggestions which have been approved and recommended by the administration and student standards have still not been given the attention and action due by the dining hall staff. On the other hand, students themselves have not taken the responsibility necessary to improve the situation.

First, we should like to point out our full understanding of the tremendous tasks involved in preparing and serving meals, with variety and attractiveness, for 650 persons. Yet there seems no reason why there is not enough of one type of food prepared and divided into correct proportions to serve eight people at each table comfortably. Too often there just isn't enough and generally the students agree that if ample portions were allowed, there would be fewer complaints about the type of food. Meat dishes should allow enough servings for ten people, insuring ample for eight. Where is the extra when often there isn't enough to go around? Then, too, why couldn't some arrangement be worked to provide enough food for seconds? When a student goes back to the kitchen for seconds why can't she ask for enough food for a certain number, instead of being given enough for one or two servings and thus necessitating several return trips?

Our next point concerning the food preparation is having it served hot. Of course, the kitchen ovens and stoves can accommodate only a certain amount at one time, but could hot steam tables or other equipment be provided which would keep the food hot until it could be served? Half of the battle of preparing and serving meals, we feel, lies in having them cheerfully hot and attractive. Who could enjoy cold macaroni served in a tin pan? As the situation is now, half of the food is cold before everyone is in the dining hall.

Our third criticism is a real and well justified complaint. It has come before Student Standards many times and can still be heard daily. The highest standards of cleanliness in food service must be observed in the dining hall. If soiled silver, spotted glasses still edged with lipstick, and broken and chipped dishes were occasional occurrences we would feel little right to complain, but it happens daily and it is unnecessary.

We can see the reaction of many students to this editorial right now. Big, gloating grins — "They've hit the nail squarely on the head, only I could add a dozen other complaints they haven't even mentioned." They could probably be right, too. But we feel that these are the more important ones now and the most easily remedied, so far as the dining hall staff is concerned. But there are certain responsibilities we ourselves have failed to take.



Off we go to such places as Westhampton, Randolph-Macon, Hollins, and Madison, and come back raving about the wonderful dining halls with refined, relaxed atmospheres. What's the magic secret? It lies in the attitude and manners of the students themselves. We need to stop using the food and service as an excuse for bad table manners.

Noise, scraping of chairs, and loud and sarcastic voices are absolutely inexcusable during the blessings. This is a time of reverence and prayer and should be so observed. Even if a student's personal life gives no meaning to the blessing, ordinary conventions and politeness demand the respect and consideration of others.

It has become the habit of some tables and their hostesses (all of whom are upperclassmen) to completely serve the meal and begin eating before the students have even entered the dining hall. In our homes (and everything we do here is a reflection upon our homes) it would be unthinkably rude for any person to begin eating before the blessing is said and all are served. It is completely unnecessary for some tables to start their meals before the rest. It is not smart, but simply ignorant.

We have again presented only a few of the complaints which are part of an unpleasant situation in our dining hall and which regularly cause tensions and dissatisfaction. We feel that no solution will be reached through the work of only one of a few people. Instead we suggest that each class carefully study and consider the situation and draw up lists of constructive criticisms to be turned over to the administration, which will, in turn, we know, give them fair consideration and action. Each class then, too, must analyze student behavior and manners and take steps in improvement.

The Rotunda will serve as a sounding board for any suggestions and constructive criticisms which may be expressed by students or administration. We do not intend to let this matter drop with an editorial. It has been an unpleasant situation for too long and now is the time to do something.

OF INTEREST

By JOYCE GILLCHREST

If any one of us had a hundred dollars to spend within the next few weeks just as we wished, perhaps the most beneficial way would be to take a reading course. Though this doesn't sound exciting or amusing, our exam grades would be boosted considerably; hence, a happier individual.

Tests conducted by Steven Warren, a graduate of University of Pennsylvania, reveal that people often use as little as 20 per cent of their reading capacity. As a result, Mrs. Warren set up a school in Chicago, the Foundation for Better Reading, which is starting its fifth year this week.

The courses offered by the Foundation ranging in prices from thirty to one hundred dollars feature equipment which helps the student speed by reading with home training. In addition to a camera device which detects regressions (looking back) the Foundation is experimenting with a pair of glasses with mirrors. These glasses enable the instructor to check the subject's eye-movements while reading. They are also mechanical devices that the student can use to speed up his reading.

Subjects tested four years after taking the course are still better than they were when they had just completed it. They subscribe to the purpose of the foundation: "Bigger visual bites and better mental digestion."

Some sensible hints we could all follow during the next few weeks are:

1. Eliminate lip reading or vocalizing.
2. Read in phrases, not single words.
3. Don't look back. Regressions reduce speed and add confusion.
4. Develop reading rhythm. To do this divide the written thoughts with dots or check marks.
5. Decide whether you are reading for pleasure, for content, for story line, for style, for words, or for figure and read accordingly. As Bacon put it: "Some swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested.

Morning Fears, Icy Tears, Enough To Last, 50 Years

by JACKIE MARSHALL

It must be morning—Oh hum! I can get up, put on a bathrobe, and go eat some delicious home cooking with the family or I could just turn over and sleep until 10 o'clock.

What in the world is that noise? Is my little brother clanging a bell downstairs? Oh, No—No! It's seven o'clock and I'm—I'm back at school in my own hard, little, iron bed—and it's those awful, old bells ringing. Oh, sob, sob! Now, I must get up, I must get dressed, I must take my hair down, and I must eat breakfast in the dining hall. What did I ever do to deserve this? I've always been a good girl. I've always reported my calldowns a week late. I've always helped ball at least two feet of water out of the hall after a water battle. I've always told my folks I was sorry when I flunked all my subjects. Subjects? Did I say subects? What is it about subjects that causes my eyeballs to pop out, my hair to fall out, and my legs to fall off. Let me see: subjects — books, books, teachers—laughing at my ignorance, my ignorance—!! By George, I've got it! Exams! That's what it is—exams! The week in which all Longwood turns into green-eyed, purple, polka-dotted, monsters! The week in which everyone stealthily creeps around on tip-toe in the middle of the night, beginning, searching, ever searching for somebody to teach them four months of Math in one hour.

Yes, now the black gloom of depression settles over my soul as the realization of it all dawns upon me and seeps in, around, and between my poor, weak, brain like ocky, gooky syrup on a dried up pancake.

Wait, I could chop my right hand off and not be able to write. No, it wouldn't work. I can't brush my teeth with my left hand. I could punch my eyes out and not be able to study. Nope, I couldn't watch Julius La Rosa on television. I could play Russian Roulette. No, No! This will never do. If it's the only thing I ever learned in Girl Scouts—it was "to be prepared." So, as a good, girl scout, I shall prepare to quit school.

Hey Roomie! Get up and put the window down! My tears are freezing me to the pillow!

Social Notes

By MARGARET MILLER

The holidays are all over, but the memories. Lots of Longwood girls brought back pins and rings to remind them of those two glorious weeks.

Ann Turley received a Sigma Chi pin from Jack Crawford.

Also, Paula Dovel received a diamond from Bob Fuller.

Sylvia Reames is wearing an engagement ring from Bill Dunovan and Nellie Lucy is engaged to Bill Cleaton from Randolph-Macon.

Virginia Moon is engaged to Warner Crocker.

Barbara Blackman is now wearing Howard Wynne's Lambda Chi Alpha pin. Howard attends Hampden-Sydney.

Barbara Moore received a diamond from Otis Curling over the holidays.

Joan Conley received a Theta Psi pin from Jack Leonard of Lehigh University.

Three sophomores came back pinned:

Kay Pelter is pinned to Buzz Matting, a Delta Tau Delta at the University of Kentucky.

Jane Lohr was pinned by Harry Lee, a Delta Kappa Epsilon at the University of Virginia.

Ann Poole is wearing a Lambda Chi Alpha pin from Billy Andrews a student at Randolph-Macon.

Mary Alice Ellington received Gene Thomas's Lambda Chi Alpha pin not too long ago. Gene is at the University of Richmond.

Fourteen freshmen returned with diamonds.

Loretta Kesterson received a ring from Lester Mcnanin of the Naval Academy.

Nancy Talley is engaged to Kenneth Hostetter.

Brenda Assaid received a diamond from Basham.

Carolyn Jones and Frank Riddick from Tech are engaged.

Virginia Hinton is engaged to Robert M. Hayden.

Carolyn Gallager received a ring from John Selden.

Shirley Fishback received a diamond from Jimmy Croser.

Irish Arhn and Joe Meadows are now engaged.

Barbara Peach is engaged to Tony Auby of the University of Richmond.

Naomi Parthing received a ring from Clinton Satterfield.

Braddus Eustace and Charles Allen are engaged.

Patsy Shoppe received a ring from Clifton Lafoon.

Judy Knight is engaged to Bob Boos.

Hilda Brown, a former student is engaged.

Congratulations to all of you!

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

An appalling situation has come to my attention and that is the high degree of disinterest among the student body toward reading the newspaper. May I say right now that this letter is not a plug for any certain paper but is only an expression of my personal feelings It is times like this when the world is in such a precarious position that we as students (and I use the term loosely) should take practical note of the news.

Longwood is not a world in itself as many of us would like to think—we are part of the world and in order to make worth while contributions we must be informed—of course, it is hard to stimulate interest in some phase of the paper such as the financial and editorial pages. However, if certain pr fessors would make it a point to ask pertinent questions in class the answers being found only in the morning paper, I'm sure there would be a greater interest taken until gradually reading the paper would become a habit that one could not dispense with very easily.

Another suggestion to create stimulation in the paper is to form a current events organization which would meet once a week to discuss something of interest found in the paper that week.

Nat'l Methodist Student Movement Draws Students To Kansas Conference

"I celebrated New Years Eve in a different way than I ever have before, by taking communion with 2,500 fellow students who represented every race and almost every country in the world. There I felt more a part of the world MSM and not just of a local group."

This midnight communion service was to Louise Nelson, a Longwood junior, the most impressive service of the week long, Fifth National Conference of the Methodist Student Movement which she and two other Longwood students attended, December 28-January 2 at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas.

Rose Frost, Joan Dyer, and Louise accompanied by Malinda Ayres, Wesley Foundation director at Longwood, traveled 1,200 miles to the interacial Quadrennial Conference, which students representing all of the 48 states plus 500 foreign students met to respond to the conference call "For Christian Students, now is crossroads."

It is impossible to pick out one thing about our trip to tell about", the girls agreed, but they did say that, "Coming from a small school we were naturally amazed at the 635 acre campus of K. U., the huge modern buildings, and the 7,500 student capicity of the University. We were really a little lost". A greater understanding of the Methodist student movement and a feeling of real friendship gained through fellowship with students from all parts of the world, were they agreed the most important aspects of the conference.

"How a university Christian movement might be used for God for the transformation of the world" was the challenge presented to the college students as the program theme, "Christ Transforming Culture" was developed.

"Most of all we realized that we were a part of a world wide movement and we felt the challenge and obligation of leading others to Christianity," was the girl's comment on this theme.

Included in the program were worship periods, Bible study groups, creative interest groups and recreation hours.

From the Bleachers

The 1954 girls' basketball season will officially open Saturday, January 16. Two Longwood teams will play two Westhampton teams on the home court at 2:00 p. m.

Other games scheduled for the season are Norfolk Division on February 10 and Roanoke on February 12. Both of these will be home games. The next two games are away with Madison and Bridgewater on February 19 and 20, respectively. On March 5, another away game has been scheduled with William and Mary.

Names of girls on the team were posted before the Christmas holiday. The list was composed of sixteen upper-classmen and five freshmen. They were Clara Borum, Dale Brothers, Virginia Burgess, Nell Crocker, Patsy Hamner, Doris Harcum, Hilda Hartis, Eleanor Koch, Jahn Lohr, Patsy Sanford, Anne Snyder, Helen Waltmann, Mary Ann Ward, Else Wente, Roberte Waitt, Louise Wilder, Barbara Ann Scott, Nancy Tolley, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Barbara Whitehead, and Delores Winder. Roberta Wiatt is manager.

Swimmers! Don't forget the recreational swimming hours—especially on Sundays at 3:00. See you there!

Student Reviews Cocteau's Film 'La Belle et La Bette'

By PAT JONES

What does one go to the movies for? To be instructed, to be entertained, to be taken out of oneself, to laugh or cry, to be dazzled, to remember—all of these things are motivations for moviegoers. I saw a film last Friday night that embraced them all. The name of it was "La Belle et La Bette."

Indeed, "The Beauty and the Beast" was not so much a movie for the youngsters as it was for those who claim to be grown up and above such fairytale outlandishness, for "La Belle et La Bette" quite engulfed them, taking them by the hand and leading them as a child through fairyland again, where they marveled not at magic, but expected it, where they cringed from the Beast and delighted in floating on air, where they caught their breath with suspense and wondered at the magnificence of the locked treassure.

With the French movie industries' appreciation of the fineness of art, the gloomy forest created atmosphere, the method of fading picture into picture gave the thought continuity and the impression of continuing sight. Jean Cocteau missed no trick in making this an outstanding production. Jean Maurais' portrayal of the Beast was truely classic for the audience went from horror to pity, and instead of being repulsed, at the end, one even wanted Beauty to marry the Beast.

Yes, actors, costumes, setting, photography—all blended together to so enrapture the audience that between those promising phrases "once upon a time" and "they lived happily ever after," each person was wafted away to another world — a world of childhood dreams, the magical world of fairyland.

The lovely ornamental costumes decorated the scenes with just the right artistic touch, and the lighting, important as it was to the mood and atmosphere, was marvelously handled to give a smooth professional air.

Beware! Sly Male Wanders In Dorm

By PHOEBE WARNER

Notice to Longwood College Professors, cooks, housekeepers, gardeners, students, and—classmates:

I wish at this time to apologize, on behalf of the Rotunda Staff, to a most worthy and distinguished member of our college for not recognizing him in any way when he came here in September.

I am especially surprised at the girls for not noticing this modest example of masculinity at its best. This newcomer is especially notable for his good looks which are due to his soft green eyes and his black hair tinged with gray.

I must point out, however, that although he is gray at a very young age, his grayness is still a sign of the knowledge and wisdom he possesses.

It is Sam, who sees and understands your forlorn and somewhat disgusted looks as you sit in the rec playing bridge while you slyly glance from the corner of your eye the haughty Hampty Damptys holding up the corner walls with their big broad shoulder (pads).

But never fear your secrets are safe with Sam. You know, if you sophomores had talked to Sam, he could have given you some great pointers on the Rats for Rat Day—for you see, Sam is Hoot's cat who lives in a little corner on Student.

L.C. Men Lose To Kembrige

The Longwood boys' basketball team played Kenbridge High School in a home game January 9 in the Longwood gymnasium. The final score was 53-41 in favor of Kembridge High School.

The Longwood boys lost in the final quarter of the game, to the opposing team, however. The Longwood team was leading 12-7 at the end of the first quarter. Half-time found the score tied 27-27. At the fourth quarter Kenbridge took the lead for a final to edge the Longwood team in a score of 53-41.

Those seeing action for the Longwood team were Mike Wamsley, Pete Oliver, Billy Barden, George Ogburn, Fred Stables and Eric Robinson. George Ogburn led the scoring with 18 points.

Do You Want a Transfer? To Me, You'd Best Refer!

By CAROLYN STANLEY

They say "the grass is always greener on the other side of the fence" well now, I wonder. Let's take a little tour, or take a stander into the "Rules For Schools" book and get the straight scoop.

Always griping? complaining? In other words—aren't you pleased with your present environment? Things could be worse—perhaps improved.

Follow through my research closely— and there may be a slight chance that the old college you're attending is pretty much okay—

A new procedure has been introduced at Roanoke College in Salem concerning "over cutting". A fine will be charged for unexcused absences! (Perhaps a fair idea, but think of all the people that would lose more lunches in the tea-room that way. Especially before holidays when the fee is five dollars for each class cut.)

Dancing and smoking are not permitted on the Bridgewater campus and the students at Wheaton College in Illinois are not allowed to play cards or attend movies!

Girls at Mary Washington are forbidden to wear blue jeans on campus. But here's a real jerker—three assemblies a week are required at both Madison and Mary Washington, with only three cuts a semester in assembly. (one just happens to come on Friday at 12:30. What a way to knock a weekend!)

Randolph Macon girls have restrictions on hours when visiting at other schools, and the girls at Mary Washington cannot smoke in Fredericksburg other than their own individual rooms. Hollins and Westhampton girls are permitted to smoke only in special "smoking" parlors.

However—the story can look brighter in some other phases.

Westhampton College has a "buz system" that is used to call girls in their individual rooms for phone calls and when they have callers. (result—no noisy halls!) Also, they use a means of "punch cards" for signing "in" and "out". But incidently— no laundry except one sheet a week. Rub-a-dub-dub.

But let's take a look at the boys schools just in case you'd like to transfer.

Cadets are never allowed to hold hands with their favorite girl except on "Flirtation Walk" at West Point. At "Flirtation Walk" a romantic leeway is permitted. And girls—you wait to be invited there! (Emily Post)

The Navy boys at Annapolis are allowed a certain amount of spending money regardless of their financial background. As little as three dollars a month for a plebe, or first year man and thirteen dollars a month for a first classman(senior). Out of this comes all the extras—entertaining, soft drinks, candy, stamps etc. They must have a hard time balancing the budget!

So times can be rough all over you see! So perk up and be proud of your advantages, for you've had a peak on the outside and what an eyeful—.

Longwood College Starts New Band

For the first time in the music department of Longwood College a band has been organized.

This band is composed of thirty-five students from Longwood and Hampden-Sydney Colleges.

Mr. Russell Hoier, high school band director in Farmville, with the help of Dr. John W. Molnar, professor of Music at Longwood directs the band.

The band practices every Friday afternoon at 4 p. m., in Jarman Hall. Although it is still in the early stage, performances have been planned.

Members of the band from Longwood include Nancy Quarles, Karen Spencer, Tom Moore and Eddie Siersema. Also active in the bank are Peggy Simkins, Tommy Biggs, and Gail Patrick.

Students interested in participating in the new band may contact Dr. Molnar for further information.

Senior Class Meets

Mrs. Mary Watkins had a meeting of the Senior Class January 13, at 3:30 p. m., in the small auditorium. The meeting was sponsored by the Placement Bureau.

Mr. S. L. Lambeth, assistant superintendent of the Norfolk City schools, spoke to the group about procuring jobs for the future.

A C E States Future Plans

Lois Crutchfield, president of the Association of Childhood Education, recenty disclosed the project of the group which centers around the stimulation of interest in Childhood Education.

The club has taken as its project the aiding of a brother and two sisters in the elementary school.

As part of this project, the girls gave the family Christmas gifts and food. Also they are helping the children with their school subjects.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college, and Miss Adams, principal of the elementary school, spoke to the group at a recent meeting.

Soph Receives Award In Roanoke Contest

Virginia Lee Obenchain, a sophomore from Roanoke, was awarded second prize last week in an art contest sponsored annually by the Norfolk and Western Railway Magazine.

Virginia Lee's painting, a still life in pastels, was her first contest entry; however, she has taken an active part in art work at Longwood where she is majoring in art.

Other campus activities which claim Virginia Lee's time are Zeta Tau Alpha, Cotillion Club and Southwest Virginia Club.

L C Gives Three Radio Shows Weekly

Listen to Longwood on the air! Each week Longwood College presents three radio programs on the WFLO Farmville radio station. The programs are produced by students for the purpose of entertaining listeners about current campus affairs.

On Monday from 4 p. m. to 4:05 p. m., a news broadcast giving first-hand news of happenings around and about Longwood is presented by Loretta Kesterson.

The regular Wednesday program is announced by members of Speech 101 class. This program, during the year, will consist of excerpts from plays, poetry readings, interviews, a variety show, and a quiz program. The chairman of this program each week will be a member of Speech 101. The regular time is 4 p. m.

On Friday from 4 p. m. to 4:15 p. m., the program is "Songs by Sue". This program consists of songs played and sung by Helen Sue McNeil, a Longwood senior.

Next week's regular– program will feature singing by freshman Margaret Mustard. Freshmen Jan Kuyk and Nancy Lenz will plan and announce the program.

Longwood President To Take Comm, Job In Historical Society

In commemoration of Robert E. Lee's birthday, January 19, the Virginia Historical Society will hold its annual board meeting at Battle Abbey in Richmond.

President Dabney S. Lancaster, recently appointed to the executive committee of the Society, will attend this meeting as his first official duty as a board member. The present Society is a merger of two organizations, the Virginia Historical Society, and the Confederate Memorial Association. A museum of Virginia history is maintained in General Lee's confederate war home in Richmond by the Society and the official publication is the Virginia Magazine.

Dr. Samuel Morrison, professor of American history at Harvard University, will speak at the banquet held using the subject "Virginia and the British Colony."

"Snow Ball"

VOLUME XXXIII | Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia, January 27, 1954 | NO. 9

Jrs. Throw 'Snow Ball' In Winter Wonderland At February 13 Dance

'Vagabonds' To Add Evening of Melody

Those present at "The Snow Ball," the annual Junior Dance to be held in the college gymnasium from 8 to 12 p. m., on Saturday, Febrary 13, will be waltzing in a winter wonderland of snow and mist.

To provide the music for this occasion, the juniors have chosen the Vagabonds, a comparatively new band from Lynchburg, who are now playing the college circuit. The Vagabonds perform with a freshness of style comparable to other well-known bands. Since they are eager to play in this part of the state, the junior class is most happy to give them the privilege of playing on the Longwood campus, according to Jeanne Lynch Hobbs, dance chairman.

Under the direction of Beth Kent, the theme, "The Snow Ball" will be portrayed by a color scheme of pale blue, white, and silver. In the center of the gym will be a huge spotlighted snowball made of cotton and broken glass. The pale bule sky will appear realistic with the presence of white clouds. To complete the scene icicles and snow-covered evergreens will be present throughout the gym.

Junior class members may be identified by the snow muffs each will carry. All this with the aid of indirect lighting are designed to cast a spell of enchantment upon the dancers.

After the dance there will be a "combo" party in the "rec" for juniors and escorts with class talent providing entertainment.

The receiving line at the dance will include President and Mrs. Dabney Lancaster, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women; Mr. Raymond French, associate professor of chemistry; Miss Nancy Chambers, class sponsor; Ann Fellowship Grants Sen. Year's Study At Mexican Univ.

"I was amazed and really speechless! It seems like it is something that would happen to somebody else."

This statement was made by Fay Greenland, a senior from Norfolk, who has just received a scholarship to study toward a masters degree at the University of Mexico during 1954. Fay is one of six students of the United States to receive this scholarship offered by the Mexican Government.

A Spanish major at Longwood, Fay was selected as the recipent of the scholarship by the Institute of International Education. She will leave Longwood in February and will prepare to go to Mexico where she will begin her studies in the School of Philosophy and Letters at the University of Mexico on March 1. Fay remarked that she had always wanted to go to a Spanish speaking country where she could practice what she had learned.

Fay also wishes to express her gratitude to members of the faculty who in their willingness to help have made this possible.

At Longwood College Fay is vice-president of the Spanish Club, vice-president of the Future Teachers of America, historian of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education; a member of the YWCA Cabinet, Pi Gamma Mu, national social science fraternity; the French Club, Orchesis H20 Club, and president of Canterbury Club.

She received the Snyder Foundation scholarship of $500 during her freshman year at Longwood.

LC Students Select Moore As Chairman Of Elections

First Week In March Set As Voting Date

Ann Moore, senior from Moseley, was recently elected to serve as chairman of nominations for elections for major and minor elections, 1954, and to serve as guide to publication-head appointments.

Requirements set up for the selection of chairman are that the student be a member of the senior class and that she be a non-sorority girl.

Duties as chairman will begin after exam week when Ann will meet with the publication board for the purpose of guiding nominees in their appointments made by the major staff members of the Rotunda, Virginian, and the Colonnade, with their advisers. The heads of organizations must be appointed two-weeks prior to major elections.

The election of major officers, under Ann's supervision, will follow these appointments. Heads from each major organization will submit names of their nominees to the chairman who will engage in necessary functions to approve nominations. These elections must be held and results recorded during the first week in March.

Working in committees, Ann will carry out the same procedure employed in major elections, for the selection of minor officers.

Ann is now secretary of the senior class, treasurer of the Future Teachers of America, a member of the college choir, commercial club, Kappa Delta Pi, and the BSU. Business education is her major.

Commenting upon the election Ann states "I think its wonderful to have been elected and I hope that I will be able to carry out the duties of the office successfully!"

'Y' Announces Theme, Speaker For Feb. Week Of Religious Emphasis

Ward Edits Paper For Tryout Issue; Leonard Assists

Tryouts are being held again this week for the various staff positions on the Rotunda. Assuming the position of editor-in-chief is Shirley Ward, junior.

Trying out for other staff positions are managing editor, Gail Leonard; desk editor, Martha Donaldson; news editor, Pat Kelly; and feature editor, Dot Armstrong.

Evelyn Finks Hall has assumed the duties of copy editor for this issue. Church news was written by Pat Johnson. Gale Branch has taken over duties of social editor while Margaret Dryden has written the humor column.

"Of Interest," a regular column written by Joyce Gillchrest, was taken over this week by Pat Cantrell.

Dr. Earley Plans Trip For Longwood Girls

For Longwood students, New York has become synonymous with Easter vacation, and once again the annual three day trip for sight-seeing and show-seeing is being planned.

The cost will be $40 and will include four nights in the Hotel Taft and tickets to three or four of the leading Broadway shows.

A maximum of 34 students will be permitted to take the trip and all interested must sign up by February 5.

Dr. C. L. S. Earley will chaperone the group.

DR. J. P. ALLEN will be guest speaker for Religious Emphasis Week.

Longwood College Adds New Courses

Three new courses will be offered during the second semester according to Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary. These courses include Dramatic Arts 304, Home Economics 300, and a continuation course of Health Education 342.

The course in dramatic arts is designed primarily for juniors and seniors majoring in elementary education who have not had previous work in dramatic art but who are interested in a course of this type. This course will give information concerning arrangement and production of plays for elementary school children.

Home Economics 300 is an elective course which will emphasize the use of various mixes and will give instruction concerning the new [illegible] on the market. Also included in the course is instruction in the preparation of quick meals.

Dr. Allen To Lead Talks, Discussions

"Contagious Christianity" has been chosen as the theme of the 1954 Religious Emphasis Week, with Dr. J. P. Allen of the First Baptist Church in Charlottesville serving as guest speaker for the one-week program on February 14-18.

The Y.W.C.A., which sponsors annually the emphasis on religion week, will introduce Dr. Allen to the students in Jarman Hall Sunday night when he will give an address at 7 p. m.

Carrying out the theme, the speaker will lead prayers Monday at 6:45 p. m. and speak to the students again in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m. This will be followed by the annual reception in the Student Lounge for the faculty, administration and the heads of organizations.

Dr. Allen's schedule for Tuesday consists of a chapel speech at 1 p. m., a discussion group at 5 p. m. in the student lounge; prayers after supper; and an address in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m.

On Wednesday the "Y" Cabinet will meet with the speaker at 4:30 p. m. Dr. Allen will again lead prayers and at 8: p. m. he will hold a consecration service in Jarman Hall.

On Thursday the speaker will hold a morning service in the Episcopal Church at 6:45 a. m.

During the week, Dr. Allen will have personal conferences with any student who would wish to discuss any topic with him.

"Contagious Christianity"

As we stand upon the threshold of our 1954 Religious Emphasis Week program, let us stop and consider our reason for conducting such services—there is a reason, a logical one, a challenging one.

For nine months we attend college to increase our intellectual knowledge, we become more mature in social settings and launch ourselves towards a professional career.

We attend church on Sunday and prayer services in the evening, but sometimes our attendance becomes only a habit. A full college program needs a period of religious emphasis where the entire student body can worship together and re-dedicate themselves to Christian ideals. We attend many of the same classes, enjoy the same social functions, but worshipping together can bring us even closer to each other.

"Contagious Christianity" has been chosen for our theme this year, one that should live not only during a week, but every day. If Religious Emphasis week is to be a success we must begin now to prepare for it. Remember that there are many who will fail to take part in the program unless you encourage their interest. Religion is everybody's job!

The Y. W. C. A. urges you to support the Religious Emphasis program as fully as possible. With the prayer and participation of everyone it is our hope that it will be the most effective week on campus this year.

Your Y. W. C. A.

Again The Dining Hall

Now that we have raised the dining hall problem, we cannot allow it to be avoided or dropped.

However, the purpose of this editorial is not to present further complaints berating either the dining hall or the students. We feel that the unpleasantness of the situation may be atttributed to both the dining hall and the students and that the Rotunda's presentation of those problems which we described in our last editorial is completely justifiable.

During these two weeks we have received many favorable comments and a few dissenting remarks concerning our stand on both dining hall meals and student behavior. The problems have been considered time and again by Student Standards, the home department, and students, and suggestions have been made for their improvement. So far, we can see very little that has been done to institgate improvements either by dining hall or student body.

It is, then, our purpose to present a few suggestions, ask some questions, and request some answers. And, first of all, we urge that the dining hall staff and the college students be willing to work cooperatively. Complaints are caused by both, one disagrees with the other, and so on. We'll have to forget our own injuries for a while and try working together.

Our first suggestions is that the Rotunda itself, classes, sororities, and other groups promote the discussion of the problem. Too often some constructive project is begun here only to have it fail because of general apathy. If we are as concerned with this as we say, then the time for this consideration can be found. After exams each class could undertake, on its own, a serious, responsible study of the problem, either through class meetings, or committees. A list of suggestions and criticisms should be compiled to present to the dining hall, and a study of attitude, behavior, and improvements by the students should be made. We feel that the senior class, aided by the juniors, should take the leadership in this situation. The seniors have watched the whole thing develop; they ought to be able to more easily recognize the true sources. As leaders of the school, their influence will be most readily felt and their example, followed.

To both juniors, as present hostesses, and sophomores, as next year's hostesses, we also present the responsibility for the problem. The feeling that serving as a table hostess is a privilege has deteriorated until it is nothing more than a joke. There are certain dining hall rules for which hostesses are definitely responsible but which are seldom followed. Juniors, talk over the whole thing at your tables, present criticisms to the Rotunda, Ellen Porter and the dining hall committee, and take the job seriously. Sophomores, begin now to realize that this a junior-year task. As individuals, you and the rest of the student body, recognize the situation and approve our stand, but nothing will ever come of it, unless you—and all of us—are willing to think and speak out.

Of the dining hall staff, we ask "why?" The complaints we've made are certainly not new, and they are obviously true. Are they due to insufficient funds, inadequate equipment or disinterest? We don't know. That's why we sincerely ask that you present your side of the question.

One commendation we should like to make right now. Our cheers to Alpha Kappa Gamma for their school spirit and interest shown by the purchase of a good public address system for the dining hall. Already many appreciative comments have been heard and so have the announcements. You made a big first step toward dining hall improvement.

But of the rest of the student body, we also ask "why?" The unpleasant attitude, confusion, and griping are certainly apparent. Are they due to poor home training, lack of maturity or disinterest?

Now's your chance—the Rotunda's next issue is February 17 and letters of discussion (signed) will be welcomed for publication. It is up to you now.

Of Honor

Examination time is a time of testing. Examinations are not designed to 'catch' the unwiley student. Nor are they a contest of wits between the instructor and student. Rather they should be looked upon as an opportunity to pull together loose ends, to organize and to synthesize. The wise instructor provides the means for demonstrating such mastery, and he is the final arbiter.

At Longwood, examinations take on added zest because they provide the occasion for testing our vaunted Honor System. Each time the Honor Code survives this test, it emerges stronger than before.

Amid the strain and stress of next week's examinations, students are asked to remember that the Honor System of the College is being tested too. Each student takes the Honor System into the examination room with her. Remember that.—

How To Fail Now And Avoid The June Rush

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Read this column, then cut it out and pin it to your bulletin board. It tells you how to live through exam week (or, how to get home next semester by invitation!) The title of this article is "Helpful Hints For Exam Week."

1. Save one set of cuts until exam week. Then cut all your courses. (There's no rule against it!)

2. Don't buy any extra food. Scrounge off your next - door neighbor. After all, who could refuse a starving classmate?

3. For freshmen—if you want good, sound advice on how to study for exams, ask anyone but the upperclassmen. They're still trying to find out, too.

4. For freshmen and sophomores—for one week a year you have unlimited lights. Use them! Stay up all night, even if you don't have to study. (if you don't, this is no place for you). You can play or write letters, anything, but stay up. That way you won't feel any pain during your exam ('cause you'll be sleeping.) For juniors and seniors—do just the opposite, go to bed early and let the frosh and sophs feel superior for just one week.

5. Don't stay in any exams more than one-half hour. If you do, you'll get muddled. (If you don't you'll flunk but you probably will anyway.)

6. If you think an exam is unfair, protest. Demand that the professor change the questions to suit you. He likes to make out new exams, especially since it only took him two weeks to make out the one for your course.

7. Always remember to thank the professor for the wonderful exam and let him know you really enjoyed it. After all, a little "apple polishing" might get you a "D" instead of an "F".

8. Get your housemothers to help you study. During exams, things are so quiet in the dorms that they need something to occupy their time.

9. How to stay awake—
   1. Take one bottle of "No-Doze."
   2. Keep your windows open to the top; better still, just remove them.
   3. Drink at least one pot of coffee. You couldn't possibly fall asleep.

10. Don't study for too long a period. Study for fifteen minutes, then read one of those popular books such as "My Grandfather Was a Siamese Twin," or "My Brother Has Two Heads" for about an hour. Strike a happy medium.

OF INTEREST

By PAT CANTRELL

In regard to professions, the adjectives underpaid and overworked seem the best words to bring the teaching profession foremost to the minds of many people.

Some may wonder why people complain about teacher's salaries when their pay has risen in the past few years. They work six hours a day, five days a week and have a two month vacation. This sounds fine enough until you take into consideration the time-consuming jobs which come after - p. m. These jobs include lesson planning, paper grading, and report preparation, not to mention no salary two months out of the year.

Virginia's newly-elected governor, the Honorable Thomas B. Stanley, advocates a change in this situation. The increase in the teacher's salary, which he wishes is modest; but still it is a step in the right direction.

Governor Stanley proposes a salary scale from $2,400 to $3,000 a year, to be reached in eight years with $150-a-year increase. If the Virginia Legislature votes this bill to pass, they may have difficulty in obtaining the sufficient funds. Teacher's salaries, currently run on a scale from $2,000 to $3,200 a year with $100 increase a year and reaching the maxium in twelve years. Ex-governor, John S. Battle, made his budget with this in mind, and if teachers' salaries are increased, money must be taken from another fund; or the procedure under which State school funds are distributed to localities must be revised. Either one of these would be difficult methods.

In his inaugural address on January 20, Governor Stanley stated, "The efficiency of the school system is measured largely by the efficiency of the teacher. I believe increased salaries will prove a potential factor in retaining our present staff and in obtaining additional well-trained teachers."

Social Notes

By GALE BRANCH

It looks as if "we who are about to die" are trying to cram much social life into our last few days preceding that ominous period when we shall find ourselves cramming less pleasant things into our somewhat vacuous craniums.

The two week ends before last found many of our Longwood lassies attending the KA dance and the Chi Phi party at Hampden-Sydney. Among these girls were "Sis" Brown, Betty Cory, Barbara Whitehead, Betty Jean Jenkins, Connie Coiner, Ann Wayne Fuller, Betty Islin, Gerry Luck, Patty Derring, "Cookie" Cook, Anne Bankhead, Carolyn Stanley, Mary Jo Suttles, Barbara Blackman, Dale Brothers, Anne Caldwell, Anne Coleman, Norma Croft, Nancy Deaton, Martha Donaldson, Georgia Edmonds, Faye Edwards, Jackie Edwards, and Elinor Everette.

Others were Charlotte Fudge, Sue Garber, Jerry Haley, Beverly Harlow, Judy Harris, Doris Horne, Peggy Ilyus, Beth Kent, Mary Ann King, Sarah Leatherman, Shirley Willihide, Julie Moncure, Louise Nelson, Bonnie Owen, Elizabeth Pancake, Patty Parker, Barbara Jean Kelly, Irene Semones, Carol Smith, Jackie Chapel, Jane Bailey, Frances Raine, Betty Ramsey, Betty Riley, Anna Mae Saunders, Frances Stubbs, Mildred Sutherland, Bobbie Tyer, Dot Underwood, Jo Ann Wilson, Jean Windley, Shirley Garst, and Sara Lou Wendenburg.

Attending also were Loretta Brooking, Harriet Browning, Pat Cantrell, Carol Carson, Betty Crawford, Margaret Duke, Suzanne Garner, Doris Harcum, Mary Ann Jennings, Martha Joyner, Adelaide Kirby, and Sally O'Malley.

Many of these girls attended both.

The University of Richmond had its anual Military Ball on January 16. Those who attended from Longwood were Fran Bays, Gail Patrick, Sara Glenn, and Karen Spencer.

Mary Elva Robinson visited Randolph-Macon last weekend to attend fraternity parties.

We now have two more ladies whose left hands are adorned with diamonds. Joan Darnell received hers Christmas from Gray Lynn of Hampton; Bobbie Clarke received a ring from Buddy Allen last weekend. Congratulations girls!

Jeanne Lynch Hobbs and Hazel Hart attended a party on board ship, U. S. S. Lattiner, last weekend, in Norfolk.

Crewe Edges LC Pioneers

The Pioneers, Longwood's men's basketball team, met the Crewe Junior Chamber of Commerce five on January 18, in the Longwood gymnasium. The game ended in a 47-52 win for the Crewe team.

The first quarter ended with a 13-8 score in favor of Crewe and the Jaycees kept the lead during the rest of the game.

The Pioneers gave their strongest opposition during the fourth quarter when the score became tied, 36-36. Long shots by both teams then brought the score to ties again at 38-38 and 40-40. Another field goal for each team raised the score to a tie once again at 42-42. Later in the fourth qaurter Crewe broke the tie by looping five more points to win 47-42.

Playing for the Longwood team were Rex Daye, George Ogburne, Jake Walmsley, Pete Oliver, Fred Staples, Eric Robinson, Billy and Bobby Barden.

February 7-14 have been set as dates for the annual B. S. U. Vocational Emphasis Week—a period of time for study, dedication and social activities.

Mr. Rogers Smith, field representative for the foreign mission board and former state student-secretary for Tennessee will speak to the group at a party which will be given on February 12 at 6 p. m. in the college tea room.

On Tuesday, February 9, the regular meeting of YWA will present Miss Edna Dawkins, personnel secretary for the Home Mission Board, whose topic will further develop the theme of "You in God's Service".

Union Vespers

The Virginia Midwinter Conference of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship will be held at VPI on February 13 and 14. "Modern Man Looks At the Bible" is the theme for the conference. Dr. Francis Steele, formerly of the department of Oriental Studies in the University of Pennsylvania, will discuss questions concerning the theme. Delegates representing Longwood College will be present at this conference.

Staff Sets Election

The Virginian will again sponsor the election of Senior Personalities, Mary Ann King, editor of the annual, has announced.

The election, which will be held after exams, will select two seniors who have been outstanding in their class and school spirit to be featured in the June 1954 year book. Those girls selected to "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges" are not eligible for this honor.

Sportsters, let's discuss the major topic of conversation at the present time—exams. This time of the year is a strain on everyone. Everybody's busy catching up on all unfinished work and trying to start studying for exams. Some people drive themselves hour after hour, day after day—never stopping to take a deep breath. This is not good. Relaxation is extremely important! Everyone needs approximately a fifteen minute break for every two hours of study. The break rests and relaxes you and prepares you to study better for the next two hours. So why not take a break from your work in one way or another. Walk down the hall and talk to a friend about anything except studying or exams. Go to "Rec" swim on Wednesday night at 10 p. m. Play a game of ping-pong. Listen to some favorite music or just take a nap. Any of these will help.

Congratulations to Clara Borum for being chosen Captain of the girls varsity basketball team. Thanks to those who supported the basketball teams at their first game of the season on January 16. The next home game will be on February 12 with Roanoke. The boys team also appreciates the girls attending their home games.

Class basketball and volleyball games are yet to come. Remember to get your eight practices for the color cup is still at stake!

Orchesis Bids 15 Students Into Group

Fifteen members of the modern dance classes have been issued membership bids to Orchesis, the modern dance club.

Patsy Abernathy, Betty Bailey, Jane Blake, Sally Cecil, Barbara Clarke, Caroyln Clarke, Jean Coghill, and Margaret Duke were given bids. Also, Lois Haines, Nancy McLawhorne, Bonnie Moore, Florence Soghoian, Betty Lou Southall, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Patty Parker, and Rhonda Derring were asked to join the group.

Barbara Blackman, president of the group, has announced several plans for group activities which include a trip to Greensboro, and a spring dance recital.

Members of the club plan to attend the annual Dance Forum at Woman's College, Greensboro, N. C., February 12 and 13. "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain" will be danced by five members. First presented at the recent dance program in assembly, this song into dance, shows the development of forms and models.

A follow up of the recent "Afternoon of Dance," given by Orchesis and the dance classes, has been planned for the spring. Originally intended as another assembly program for April 6, the program may be changed to April 2 for an evening concert. This program will be planned to further inform and educate the student body in the development of dance through its many forms.

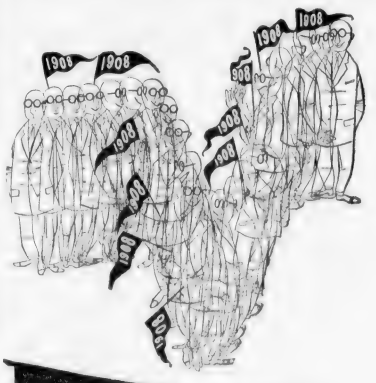
Westhampton Defeats LC

Westhampton College's varsity basketball team defeated the Longwood quintet in the opening game of Longwood's season on January 16 by a score of 35-31. The teams met on the Longwood courts.

A field goal by Longwood opened the scoring in the first period of play. At the close of the first quarter, Westhampton held the lead, 19-7. The team from Richmond retained their lead at half-time where the tally stood at 17-15.

Westhampton entered the fourth quarter leading 17-25. Longwood failed to gain any lead during this period and the game ended in a 35-31 victory for Westhampton.

Longwood succeeded in five out of twelve attempted foul shots, while Westhampton made five out of seventeen tries.



A second team contest followed the varsity game. Longwood's second team retaliated for their varsity's loss by defeating Westhampton's second team by a close 34-33.

Longwood took the lead from the beginning with an 11-8 headway at the end of the first quarter and a 19-14 half-time lead. In the third quarter the Longwood team raised their lead, 34-19. In the fourth period, Westhampton raised its points which made the score 34-33.

'Wonderful', Reviews Jones Of Gershwin's Negro Opera

By PAT JONES

Music, sets, costumes, characters—they're wonderful! There is something great about a production when it can capivate an audience so thoroughly as "Porgy and Bess" has. George Gershwin's opera was performed in a truly magnificent manner in Richmond's Mosque last week.

Leading the actor's billing, Cab Calloway had the spectators' admiration as he acted with his usual verve, for in the role of Sportin' Life, his superb interpretation was overwhelming, and the audience couldn't help tapping their feet and laughing in the enjoyment of his actions.

Leontyne Price, who played the part of Bess on Monday night, was perfectly wonderful, and La Vern Hutcherson as Porgy had everyone spellbound during his rendation of "Bess, You Is My Woman Now"; however, the massiveness of the Mosque caused much volume to be lost.

The characterization of Crown, marviously done by John McCurry was especially effective during the hurricane scene; his towering physique made him appear almost terrifying. He was lacking only in singing, which did not measure up to the others. No review would be complete without mentioning Helen Colbert's lovely singing of "Summertime." Hearing her voice floating out over the people assembled, almost brought tears to my eyes.

Designed by Wolfgang Roth, the sets were most picturesque, conveying the atmosphere of the simple, crowded living of the colored settlements, and one could not help but notice the costumes and send mental congratulations to Jed Mace, their designer; the people in charge of the lighting also received such commendations, for everyone was breathless watching the rising of the sun.

"Porgy and Bess" was quite a success in Richmond on the eighteenth of January. Everyone threw himself into his part with such fervor and enthusiasm that the audience added their own to it.

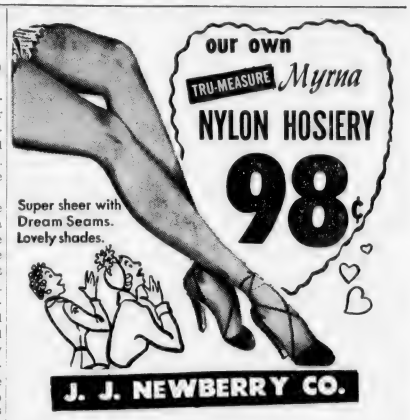
As a Times Dispatch reviewer wrote: "A superb performance and a stunning, pulse-pounding production . . . .There is great theatre at the Mosque this week."

Lecturer To Speak In Assembly Feb. 9

Mr. Donald Grant, noted lecturer on world affairs, will speak on "Dynamic Forces Transform the World" in assembly on February 9.

A graduate of Edinburgh University, Scotland, Mr. Grant has been a student of European and world affairs since World War I. He received the gold metal of the Universities of Vienna and Innsbruck.

Mr. Grant has studied and lectured on Asia and the Pacific. He returned to Europe in the 1930's where he became acquainted with the challenging ideologies of that continent.



In world War II, the Ministry of Information used him to explain the World to the British people. In 1948 Mr. Grant worked in GeGrmany for the American Military Government. Again he toured Europe in 1951 renewing contacts made in the 1920's.

LC To Offer Reading Help

The developmental reading program for the second semester will meet in two sections, Tuesday and Thursday at 9 a. m. and Tuesday and Thursday at 2 p. m. A third conference hour will be arranged later.

Students who enroll will take a diagnostic reading test and a vision test before beginning the six-week program. The course carries no academic credit, but there are no outside assignments.

Students with noticeable reading difficulties have been invited to attend, but anyone who would like to read more efficiently may participate in the program. Students who satisfactorily complete the course will have reports to that effect placed in their folders in the Dean's Office.

SMOKE REGULAR OR KING-SIZE CHESTERFIELD...

THE QUALITY YOU WANT

No matter which size Chesterfield you buy you get the same premium quality cigarette, and all the flavor and mildness that goes with it! You get the world's best tobaccos, selected by Chesterfield buyers with the help of our research chemists . . . and proven, by actual tobacco tests, to be highest in quality.

THE LOW NICOTINE YOU WANT

Before we buy tobaccos for Chesterfields, our laboratories take samples from all over the tobacco country and analyze them for low nicotine content. The extra care pays off! In recent "tobacco tests," the six leading brands of cigarettes were chemically analyzed. The findings: of them all, Chesterfield is highest in quality — low in nicotine.

THE PROOF YOU OUGHT TO HAVE

A group of Chesterfield smokers have been examined by a doctor every two months for almost two years. 45% of them — on the average — have been smoking Chesterfield for well over 10 years. The doctor's examinations show . . .

no adverse effects to the nose, throat and sinuses from smoking Chesterfield.

Consider Chesterfield's record with these smokers — with millions of other smokers throughout America. Change to Chesterfield and enjoy the taste and mildness you want — highest in quality—low in nicotine—best for you!

Devine, Southern, Ward To Assume Editorships Of Three Publications

Editors and business managers of Longwood's three publications were announced in yesterday's assembly by Anne Moore, 1953 election chairman.

Barbara Southern will be editor-in-chief of the Colonnade and Betty Scarorough has been re-appointed business manager. Editor of the Rotunda will be Shirley Ward and Betsy Welbon will act as the newspaper's business manager. New editor of the annual is Donnie Devine assisted by Peggy Worthington as business manager.

Stepping into the place held this year by Eloise Macon, Barbara Southern will become the Colonnade editor. Barbara, a junior from Roanoke, was the magazine's managing editor. She is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Orchesis, and Cotillion Club.

Donnie Devine, a junior from Richmond, will fill the position of editor-in-chief of the Virginian, which was held by Mary Ann King this year. Donnie, who has been on the annual staff since her freshman year, served as photography editor for the 1954 annual. She claims membership in Pi Delta Epsilon.

Ann Thomas, this years Rotunda editor will be succeeded by Shirley Ward, a junior from Roanoke. Shirley, managing editor of the Rotunda this year, is a memebers of Beore Eh Thorn, Alpha Kappa Gamma, Pi Delta Epsilon, Student Government, and Student Standards.

Junior Betty Scarbrough continues her job as business manager of the Colonnade. "Shu" is from Capron. She is treasurer of the junior class.

Peggy Worthington, a junior from Rocky Mount was appointed business manager of the Virginian. She is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Beore Eh Thorn.

Replacing Mary Ann Evans as business manager of the Rotunda will be sophomore Betsy Welbon. Betsy from Arlington, served as advertising manager of the Rotunda this year.

YWCA Plans Early Service To End Week

Tonight at 8 p. m., Dr. J. P. Allen, leader of Religious Emphasis Week at Longwood will conduct a Consecration Service in Jarman Hall. Tomorrow morning an early service will be held at 6:45 a. m. in the Episcopal Church. This service will bring to a close Religious Emphasis Week which has had as its theme "Contagious Christianity."

Services which were held earlier this week, included prayers led each night by Dr. Allen in the Episcopal Church and evening services in Jarman Hall. Dr. Allen's initial address was Sunday night at 7 p. m. A reception in honor of Dr. Allen was held in the Student Lounge following the service Monday night and also, he spoke in chapel on Tuesday at 1 p. m.

Dr. Allen has led seminars on Monday and Tuesday nights and there will also be one tonight at 10 p. m. The theme for the Monday night seminar was "Making the Bible Live and Move," and Tuesday night, "Practical Christian Ideals for the Marriage and the Home." The theme for tonight's seminar is "What Can I Know About the Will of God?"

Foster To Reign Over May Day; Assaid To Serve As Attendant

Festival To Portray Virginia History

When springtime comes with its traditional pageantry, Ann Foster, of Cumberland, will reign as Queen over Longwood's May Day festival, "Past and present in the Heart of Old Virginia."

Barbara Assaid, of Roanoke, was selected Maid of Honor to preside with Ann and ten representatives were chosen for the court in last week's election.

Senior members of the May Court are Mary Ann King, of Smithfield; Sylvia Reames, Petersburg; and Betty Ishn, Warwick. Juniors are Beth Kent, Richmond; Nancy Masters of Newport News; and Joan DeAlba of Warwick.

Patsy Abernathy of Virginia Beach; Peggy Layman, Roanoke; and Jane Lohr, of Madison; will represent the sophomore class, and freshmen members of the court will be Irish Arnn, of Martinsville; Loretta Kesterson of Alexandria, and Amy Ramsay of Hampton.

"Past and Present in the Heart of Old Virginia," presenting the history of Prince Edward County, will be the theme of the May Day festival. Jean Hodges, chairman of May Day, and the theme committee have selected this idea in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the founding of Prince Edward County, which is being celebrated during 1954.

The story will begin with the days of Indians and plantations in early Virginia and show the growth and development of towns.

A chief factor in the history of the county is Longwood College and this will be represented in music, dance, and narrative as part of the pageant.

This year students from all classes will have the opportunity to participate in the dances, carrying out the new plan of a completely student directed May Day. Members of the May Day committees will speak to class meetings during the next two weeks, explaining the new procedures and students will be asked to sign up for participation. Rehearsals should bewin within the next three weeks.

The newly chosen May Queen is an English major. Anne is president of Beore Eh Thorn, a member of Cotillion, Future Teachers of America, French Circle, and Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority.

This year Bobbie has served as president of the House Council. She is an elementary major and a member of the Association of Childhood Education Student Standards, Student Government, Future Teachers of America, Colonnade, and Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority.

College Schedules Orchestra Mar. 8 For Anniv. Series

The National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Howard Mitchell, will appear at 8 p. m., in Jarman Hall on March 8. This is the first in a series of programs commemorating the 200th anniversary of Prince Edward county.

Hans Kindler founded the National Symphony Orchestra during the depression after seven attempts by others had failed. It was the first symphony orchestra in Washington. Kindler conducted the orchestra until his death in 1949, at which time Mitchell, then the first cellist assumed the position of director.

Mitchell has gone deeply in the field of classical music for children. The orchestra gives many free concerts for children in an effort to further their appreciation of music.

During the month of March the orchestra will give concerts at other colleges in the State of Virginia.

The admission price will be $1 for students and $1.50 for adults.

Dr. Allen Engages in Versatile Activities

By PAT JONES

The individual of the week is Dr. J. P. Allen, our Religious Emphasis Week speaker, who, as everyone knows by now, is a most vertsatile as well as a sincere and inspiring person.

Dr. Allen was born in Birmingham, Alabama, and after graduating from Louisiana College in Pineville, Louisiana, and the Southern Baptist Seminary, he did graduate work at Yale University and Union Theological Seminary in New York.

While in college Dr. Allen was editor of its newspaper, and derliving much pleasure from sports, he played tennis and managed the football team. His current love is golf, and when time allows, he frequents the Keswick Country Club links of Charlottesville. The possessor of another hue, too—that of the camera—Dr. Allen has discovered among his church congregation others who have also cultivated this interest, and he says they have formed a club in which all camera fiends are welcome.

Another of his outdoor loves is fishing, especially bass fishing which sneaks in his schedule when he isn't looking. Besides speaking to the various business clubs, Dr. Allen has been a member of the Kiwanis Club, and to this impressive list of interests, he would add psychology, which is something of great importance to him. Psychology is a science that is practically essential in the field of religion, and he delves into it with deep interest.

Speculation on psychology brings to the mind of the Longwood student "child" psychology, and upon the entrance of the word "child," Dr. Allen would mention his little girl Patsy is eleven years old and quite evidently, the "apple of his eye." In speaking of his daughter, Dr. Allen says he has noticed that her curiosity having cultivated this at an early age.

When he was asked about his work on other college campuses, Dr. Allen said that he has spoke two weekends of the month for such engagements as ours; however these two weeks quite often multiply As-id- from the fact that he enjoys these visits. Dr. Allen says they are checks and balances on [illegible] challenges Christian doctrines that the young people and old person accept, and without this challenge the ministry would be prone to [illegible]. This year Dr. Allen has accepted engagement on [illegible] Wake Forest, Averett College and [illegible].

The Real Purpose

Every experience we have leaves its effect on us. Whether these experiences are good or bad, our lives are in some way altered.

This week has been designated as Religious Emphasis Week on the Longwood campus and with "Contagious Christianity" as its theme, it has presented real opportunities for Christian growth. Dr. Allen as leader of services is bringing inspiration to all who hear him.

"What is the purpose of this week of religious emphasis and what effect will it have on us?" some people might ask. We place emphasis on religion for one week during the school year in the hope that it may place emphasis on religion on a lifetime basis for all who participate.

These services should leave Longwood spiritually stronger giving the students a new awareness of the meaning of their religion in everyday living. In this way our College YWCA has offered an experience for our lives which should leave us with a deeper, more workable faith.

Those who profit most by this week of services will be those persons who take an active part. If you have been attending the services your participation must surely have directed your thinking into wider channels, presenting more questions, solving some, and helping you to consider your religion constructively.

If you have failed to join in the program thus far, it is still not too late. You can gain much by attending the remainder of the services this week.

Religious Emphasis Week is for each of us. Only when we participate do we really stop to think and take stock of our religion as it stands. As we think, we may learn and feel a new and stronger faith. This is the real purpose of Religious Emphasis Week.

A Matter of Good Manners

How many guest speakers and entertainers, who visit Longwood for Assemblies and Artist Programs will applaud our manners when they leave?

After being acclaimed by spatters of applause at the wrong time—our guests probably think a course in Etiquette should be included in the curriculum.

We could save ourselves and our guests embarrassment by remembering a few simple rules.

1. Applause for a religious speaker before or after his talks is not in good taste.

2. It is not in proper taste to applaud any speaker if his talk ends on a religious note.

3. Sacred music is never to be applauded.

4. Applaud any basically serious musical program if it ends on a light note. (For instance, the Christmas concert).

5. When musical selections are given in groups, applaud only at the end of the group.

6. Applause is not proper between movements of a symphony or similar composition.

7. If a situation comes up for which we can find no applicable rule let good taste and common sense direct us.

. When applause is timely, let your acclaim be enthusiastic.

9. Going up to the guest after his talk or performance will leave a pleasant memory with him of the college.

If we remember and use these rules, we will leave a lasting impression of good taste on our guest speakers and artists, and perhaps they will applaud us too!

A Few Facts

Wipe that tragic frown off your face and let us not hear those fateful words, "Oh no, not the dining hall again!"

Because it is the dining hall again and this time we have facts, figures, and formulations.

The Rotunda promised to act as a sounding board for any discussion, from both students and dining hall, concerning the recent problems and complaints raised about meals and manners. And first to come through with constructive discussion was the the dining hall. There has been mostly silence from students—perhaps we are too busy eating before the blessing has been said to take an active part in solving the problems that we were first to raise!

Chief among our complaints has been quantity and quality of service of the food. The two factors have been given careful consideration by the dining hall staff and double checks have been made to insure enough servings in each serving dish—and we've noticed the extra hotdogs and hamburgers and seconds on mashed potatoes. The practice of the dining hall is to serve cold foods before the dining hall is opened and retain hot foods as long as practical to insure warmth at serving time.

Of course, we've often turned up our noses at broken, scarred china—but statistics show that these are constantly being replaced.

During the week of January 14 alone such new items as 25 meat platters, 27 cream pitchers, 60 cereal bowls, 18 vegetable bowls, 36 bakers, 100 dinner plates, 2 water pitchers, and 8 dozen cups were placed in use.

A clarification of dish washing procedures has also been made and certain figures present proofs of improvements. A new glass washer for the sterilization of glasses has been ninstalled and among the more than 25,000 glasses washed during the past two weeks only 25 have been returned or reported not clean. A pre-rinse system for preliminary cleansing of dishes, prior to actual washing has been initiated and the dishes are soaked in Clorox and scrubbed with Dutch Cleanser weekly. Both maids and waitresses have been cautioned to check the silver carefully.

We should like to thank the dining hall staff for making this information available to us—and thank them, also, for the certain noticeable improvements made in the meals during the past weeks. We realize, of course, that there may be "slips twixt kitchen and lips" and other things that can be done, but surely they at least, have shown themselves interested and considerate of our suggestions and complaints.

Within the next months, we know that the dining hall staff will expand its good start more and more, and we hope that in turn we will realize even more the importance of our attitude and behavior in improving the dining hall.

Social Notes

by PATSY FREE

The high spot of the week was "The Snowball"—annual Junior Dance. After very little research, the conclusion was derived that a list of names would be too hard on the printing bill. Anyway, everyone knows who attended by the excited chattering that filled the dorms during the past couple of weeks. For a run down on particulars, we find that the dreamy music of the "Vagabonds", plus the delightful decorations of blue and white—topped off by a huge snowball—set the back ground for a good time. The vivacious juniors and their dates, still looking for a good time, were entertained, from 12 a. m., to 1:30 a. m., by a combo.

Engagements

A new engagement has developed right here on the grounds of our Alma Mater. Last Tuesday, Betty Riley received a diamond from Tom Moore. Clara (Bo-Bo) Borum received a ring from Bill McCarter of Richmond.

Pi Kappa Alpha

With even less research, it was discovered that, after the trials and tribulations of exam week, quite a few (definitely a few) lucky girls had a chance to break the monotony by attending the Pi Kappa Alpha Party. They were Stephanie Bauder, Florence Blake, Betty Cory, Bettie Crawford, Norma Jean Croft, Nancy Deaton, Adele Donaldson, Suzanne Garner, Shirley Garst, Beverly Harlow, Dolly Horne, Betty Jean Jenkins, Lou Kitts, Peggy Layman, Gerry Luck, Billie Miller, Shirley Willhide and Mary Ann Wright.

V. P. I.—Mid-Winters

Despite oncoming exams, the week end of January 27 found several smart Longwood girls at V. P. I. for mid-winters. These girls, not terrified by exams, were Carolyn Stanley, Ellen Thomas, Anne Carter Wendenberg, Judy Harris, Faye Edwards, Jackie Edwards, Patty Parker, Adele Donaldson, Jeanette Puckette, Nancy Deaton, Betty Shaffer, Garland Webster, and Patty Deering.

Married

Ann Turley to Jack Crawford of the University of Virginia. Bringing back news of the wedding party was Sally Cecil, Ann's attendant.

Phi Alpha

Nancy Lenz, Gale Branch, Jan Kuyk, and Ilis DesPortes attended the Rho Tau dance of Phi Alpha Fraternity at the John Marshall Hotel on February 6.

All in all, Longwood has been jumping (over what?) the past few weeks and this reporter, for one, is ready to sign off and call it quits.

OF INTEREST

By GLORIA ANDERTON

A selection of 12 oil paintings included in a group of almost five hundred paintings featured in the Virginia Arts Exhibition are now on display in the Browsing Room of the college library.

These paintings in the exhibition "Recent Oil Paintings by Virginia Artists," were chosen by a jury of three men—the American realist painter, Edward Hopper; the internationally known modern sculptor, Jacques Lipchitz and Gordon Washburn, critic and director for the Fine Arts Department of Carnegie Institute.

Paintings now on display in the library are "Black and White," painted by Jewell Campbell; "Summer Afternoon," painted by Barbara Lou Courtney; "Cliffs at Eggleston," the work of Horace Day; "Sand, Wind and Sailors," William Robert Gaines, and "The Ranconteur" painted by Agnes McMurran Johnson.

Other works on exhibit are "Late Summer," Jean Craig Jones; "Yellow Window Shade," painted by Robert Pollard Kinney; "Virginia Mountain Town, 1900" by Jack Oglesby; Still Life," Joseph Wray Potter; "Resting," painted by Frances Lee Rex; "Window," by Thomas Kenneth Rowe; and "Still Life," the work of Charles Smith.

The hallmark of art today is variety. America has been the recipient of countless new ideas. The art of Virginia reflects these, as this exhibition demonstrates. Painting as a "mirror of nature" has given way to the very personal creation of the artist. It is the artist's world that is shown to viewers, and to participate in his enjoyment of it one must see it with his eyes. The decorative charm of the "Window" and the impact of pure color shapes in "Black and White" illustrate the personal manner in which different artists respond to their environment.

The Virginia Arts Exhibition is held every two years and is a public service activity of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. The Museum purchases several works from this exhibition for its permanent collection of Virginia art.

This year the Museum purchased "The Window," "Still Life," by Potter ,and "My Eyes," by Jack Whitney Clifton.

Those Meaningful Valentines Bring Moans or Groans

by NANCY LENZ and GALE BRANCH

Friday, I was walking innocently up the stairs reading my lone valentine when a thunder of hoofs came galloping down upon me. Swept along with the pack, I soon found myself in the post office with over three hundred girls—all trying vainly to open their boxes at the same time. What was the wild force driving everyone to the post office when the mail had been put up hours ago?

Then I heard among the roar of mutterings one significant word, "grades". Grades? What about those little items that come out twice a semester in bulk form, once to tell you how you're doing and last to tell you how you've done?

Oh! The idea penetrated my ivory dome, grades for the semester were to come out today. No wonder the residents of Longwood College were breathlessly reading those white slips of paper as if their lives depended upon them, for well they might. Of course, almost all of us make the dean's list, but the question is, "Which list?" Are we among those lucky ones who can stick around for each and every class this next semester, having only one set of cuts, or are we on the list of those who can pull out every time the fancy strikes? I listened to find out.

Bessy Brain moaned aloud saying, "I got a "B" on gym!;" Not to mention that she made "A" on everything else. Doreen Dunce exclaimed, "I passed science! Forgetting that she flunked everything else. "I didn't even make a "C" average. Mother'll kill me!" said Louise Lazy in a shocked voice. That could be because she played bridge, played records, and simply played througout the year.

I looked in my hands at my own grades. Where is someone to open this envelope? Oh well! I'll try myself. Rip! That wasn't so bad. Now, inside, shall I take a peek? I must know! Can't wait any longer. Perhaps if I look at them fast it won't be so bad. There! Opened. Eyes, look down. That's right, Hum-m-m, at least my bridge has improved this semester.

Church News

By JANE BRUGH

Episcopal—On Sunday night, February 14 a Valentine party was held in the Parish House following Dr. Allen's speech in Jarman Hall. On Sunday night, February 21, the World Day of Prayers will be observed at 7 p .m. at the church.

On the night of February 21, at the 8 p. m. worship service, a dedication service will be held at the Baptist Church. At this time, students may join in consecrating their vacations into Christian channels.

College Modern Dance Group Attends Annual Arts Festival In Greensboro; Orchesis Gives Special Presentation

Orchesis, Longwood's modern dance group was one of three college groups chosen to give a special presentation at the Eleventh Annual Festival of Arts, held at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, N. C., February 12 and 13.

Competing with 15 dance groups from colleges in North and South Carolina and Virginia, the Longwood group, together with those from the University of North Carolina and Mary Washington College, was selected to dance their compositions with the dance group of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina.

The Longwood group presented the theme and variations from a Louis Horst arrangement of "She'll be Comin' Round the Mountain."

Emily Frankel and Marc Ryder a Dance Drama Duo who evaluated all groups, made several criticisms of the Longwood dancers, and commented, "The dancers looked like they enjoyed dancing their theme and its variations. Group choreography was very good. The whole composition was danced well. The ending was a bit flat, but the soloist against the group was handled very well."

Groups were evaluated from the point of view of the audience with these questions in mind: What is humanistic about the dance? What is to be communicated? What is intrinsic?

"She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain" was completely rechoreographed with Nancy Masters, as soloist. Other dancers were Barbara Blackman, Barbara Clarke, Patricia Parker and Shirley Roby. Betty Zoe Bailey was the accompanist.

Other dance groups taking part in the festival were from Mary Baldwin College, Duke University, East Carolina State Teachers College, Limestone College, Greensboro College, Coker College, Madison College, Radford College, Winthrop College, College of William and Mary, and Randolph Macon Woman's College.

Nancy Masters was chosen as one of four students to be given a personality test to determine the type of person who goes into the field of modern dance. The ratings of the four students will be compared with those of students of modern dance in different regions of the country in order to correlate psychological reasons of students for electing to dance.

L C History Group Joins Association

Membership in the Virginia United Nations Association was granted to Pi Gamma Mu, honorary history fraternity, recently, according to Virginia Sutherland, president of the organization.

A letter written to Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college, urged that at least one group on campus join the association. Pi Gamma Mu, as the result of Dr. Lancaster's request, accepted membership. Material made available to the group for use in planning various programs.

A program committee consisting of Herbert Goodman, chairman; Mrs. Gail Dickson, senior; and Trianne Lampkin, senior, was appointed to direct the programs for the remainder of the year.

Theater Will Install Cinemascope Screen

A man speaks from just behind you, there's a panorama of Roman chariots—it's Cinemascope, soon to be seen at Farmville's State Theater.

Announcement has been made by Alvin R. Simmons, manager of the State and Lee Theaters, that during this week the State will be equipped for Cinemascope, the new wide screen, and eight stereophonic sound speakers have already arrived in Farmville.

The first presentation in Cinemascope will be "The Robe," a wide screen picture in technicolor that recently had a lengthy run in Richmond and other cities within the state.

Mr. Simmons states that after installation of the new equipment the theater will have facilities to show both the regular size movie

From the Bleachers

by DELORES WINDER

From the Bleachers our view of coming sports news presents a calendar of events which start the new semester off with a bang.

Representing Longwood at the coming meeting of the Virginia Athletic Federation for College Women are Joan Ward and Carolyn Gray. The convention slated for February 26-27 will find Mary Baldwin College, Staunton, playing hostess to the delegates from colleges all over the state.

Two freshmen, Loretta Kuhn and Fay Evans, have been asked to join the varsity basketball squad.

Class practices for basketball and volleyball have resumed. Basketball practice is held at 4 p. m., on Tuesday and Thursday. Volleyball is at 7 p. m., on Tuesday and 4 p. m. on Wednesday. Be sure to attend these practices and fill your requirements for class games.

The freshman basketball team has elected Nancy Tolley as captain. They opened against Brasville High School which defeated them 40-39. In their second game of the season they defeated Farmville High School.

Rec swimming is held each Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m. Come on out and take a refreshing dip.

The entire basketball squad will travel to Harrisonburg on Friday, February 19 for a two game stand with Madison Friday night. They will spend the night at the college and have a game scheduled with Bridgewater College on Saturday.

LC Team Defeats Roanoke

Piling up a record 71-49 score against Roanoke College, last Friday, in the local gym, the Longwood basketball varisty won its first game in two starts, January 16, saw them edged by Weshampton 35-31.

Roanoke opened Friday's game with a field goal scored on the play from the center. Longwood's Virginia Burgess sank the next tally and it was succeeded by a fast and furious first period. The buzzer ending the first quarter found the score all tied up at 15 all.

When the teams took to the courts in the second period, the Longwood six pulled ahead and the Roanoke lassies were notable to equal the score again. At half time Longwood led 31-24.

Returning to the hardwood after the half Longwood proceeded to build up their lead to a 52-34 third quarter score. At the close of the game Longwood was winning 71-49.

Longwood succeeded in 5 out of 12 fouls while Roanoke tallied 7 out of 14 tries.

Starting for Roanoke College were forwards, Orr, Ritter, and Glass; Guards, Arnold, Testerman and Bohan.

Longwood started Burgess, Sanford and Borum at forward and Wiatt, Koch and Ward at guard.

Two Junior Members Of Honorary Society To Go To Convention

Representing Longwood's Beta Upsilon chapter, Pat McLemore and Peggy Worthington, juniors, will travel to Purdue University in Lafayette, Indiana, to attend the national bi-annual convocation convention of Kappa Delta Pi, an honorary society in education.

On March 11, delegates throughout the United States will begin a three-day session of meetings workshops, and social functions for the purpose of unifying discussions in the field of education and the professional field of teaching.

This convention marks the nineteenth conference of this type to be held by the national society.

Four Attend Conv.

Four members of the Student Government Association attended a regional convention of college student councils at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina in Greensboro, last weekend.

Dot Vaden, Jane Bailey, Jane Blake, Loretta Kesterson and Dr. George W. Jeffers, adviser, to the group, participated in workshops, and discussions through the two-day session.

Camp Leader Talks To Girls

Miss Katherine Warner will visit Longwood College Saturday, February 27.

Miss Warner is a representative of Camp Swatonah in New York and will talk with all girls who are interested in summer camp work. She will interview girls in the Virginian Room from 9:30 p. m. to 3 p. m. Arrangements may be made for special interviews with Miss Warner, by seeing Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women.

Camp Swatonah is about 120 miles west of New York City in the heart of the Pocono Mountains. Several Longwood girls are among them. Dot Douglas, Elsa Wester, Mary Hundley, Fannie Scott, Bert Kent, and Mary Elva Robinson have worked as counselors at the camp and recommend it for any girl who is looking for experience and an enjoyable summer vacation.

ginia students attend Dr. Allen's church, for he is very popular among college students; two of the members of his congregation are Nancy Hughes and B. J. Staples.

Commenting on college girls and giving us an insight into his now famous sense of humor, Dr. Allen compared girls with clocks: "mostly face, and very little head; when they once get wound up, its hard to get them to run down, and they usually do something striking to call attention to themselves several times a day." But we know he's just teasing; we can tell by the twinkle in his eye.

Monogram Group Adds 5 Members

Five girls have accepted bids to the Monogram Club according to Patsy Stanford, president of the organization.

Ila DesPortes, Mary Lou Barlow, Mary Ann Ward, Helen Waitman and Held. Harris will be initiated into membership. Bids were issued according to athletic ability, scholarship, and sportsmanship of the students.

"Red and White" day, which is sponsored each year by the Monogram Club, was observed Monday with the selling of red hearts in accordance with Valentine's Day. The Monogram Club will also sponsor "Green and White" day on March 17.

Thirteen New Students Enroll For '54 Spring Semester; Transfers, High School Grads Voice Ideas of Longwood

The second semester of 1953-54 brought 13 new students to Longwood. Two former students are listed among them.

Carole Gaynelle Wyman graduated from John Marshall High School in Richmond in January. "The girls are so friendly," Carole remarked among her first impressions. "and the classes are harder than in high school, but I enjoy them more. I expected Longwood to have a real many rules, but much to my surprise it does not."

Joanne Andrews lists Warwick High School as her alma mater and attended Bob Jones University in Greenville, South Carolina, last semester. Joanne claims, "I can read the friendliest school I have ever seen; I am crazy about it here. I had expected to lose weight catching up on all my work, but I have gained instead!"

Jeanne Adair Price of Virginia Beach is entering Longwood after spending last semester at Westhampton College and two years at Averett College. After attending Averett she taught kindergarten at Virginia Beach for a year, and then entered Westhampton College.

Barbara Belle Powell attended Longwood last year and has returned this semester as a sophomore. A library science major, she is a member of the Rotunda circulation staff.

Other new students are Arleen June Rose from Fort Lee, who is a freshman, and Nancy Carole Desmond of Culpeper, a freshman transfer from Mary Washington College.

Special students have also enrolled this semester. They are Mrs. Lenoir Coleman, a graduate of Longwood who is renewing her certificate; Mrs. Imogene West from Tunstall, town student; Walter Putney, town student; and Robert Solenberger, town student from Charlotte Court House. Other town students are Mrs. Nicole Rothe, Mrs. Adele H. Watkins; and James King from Keysville.

Head Attends Meet

Mrs. Charles Griffin, college Home Economics department head, will attend a National Convention of Home Economics teachers in Mississippi next week.

Mrs. Griffin will leave on Saturday, February 20, and will return here on February 28 after the conclusion of the convention.

LC Player's To Present 'Romeo And Juliet'

"Romeo and Juliet," William Shakespeare's tragedy in five acts, has been rescheduled by the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs to be presented as their spring play for the 1953-54 dramatic season.

The play will be staged on Founder's Day week end, March 22 and 27.

The cast selected in the fall will remain the same except for a few minor changes. This week, Director C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English, announced the following cast members. Nancy Nelson as Juliet and Elwood Rice as Romeo take the leads as the two famous lovers. Other members of the cast are James Parker, and Jeanne Lynch Hobbs as Lord and Lady Capulet. George Ogburn and Beth Kent as Lord and Lady Montague. Nancy Tanley Masters as Juliet's nurse and confidante, James Nichols as Mercucio, Vernon Austen as Benvolio, Russell Vass as Tybalt, Sam Chilton as Paris, and Tom Moore as Friar Laurence.

The cast also includes Spencer Hamrick as Balthasar, Howard Hanson as Peter, William Pillow as the Prince of Verona, Charles Dunn as Sampson, Ray Kelley as Gregory, Tom Biggs as Abraham, and Spencer Hamrick as an apothecary.

The pages and attendants will be played by Peggy Ilyus, as Mercurio's page and Patsy Abernathy, Roseline.

Frances Marker, Marilyn Thompson, Virginia Sutherland, Sarah Leatherman, Mary Carter, Ellen Porter, Frances Bailey, Barbara Burnside, Christine Hulvey, Gloria Kratzh, Sarah Wilson and Florence Blake will appear as the townspeople of Verona.

Dorothy Rector is serving as stage manager.

Tom Stewart and Dave Meleney, both of Hampden-Sydney are in the process of building the sets which include three acting levels.

Elizabeth McClung is handling costuming for the show.

February Graduates Receive Assignments In Educational Fields

Nine Longwood seniors completed the requirements for their degrees in February. Seven of the girls have already secured teaching positions, one in high school and six in the elementary grades.

Beulah Mae Carter of Bedford is now teaching the second grade in Danville; a comemrcial major, June Cullip from Pulaski is also teaching in Danville. Janet Dunkum of Dillwyn, is in Chesterfield County teaching the fourth grade; and Mrs. Esther Davis Fitzgerald is at home in Buena Vista, but is doing substitute teaching.

Mrs. Jean Lafoon is teaching fourth grade in the Farmville Elementary School. Virginia Moon is teaching the second grade in Lynchburg and music major, Mrs. Marjorie Fore Morris of Farmville, is not teaching. Demaris Stroud is also the fifth grade in her home town Hampton and Betty Heilbrun is now residing at her home in Criskill, New Jersey.

Major Elections Coming Up

The Rotunda

Consider Candidates Carefully

VOLUME XXXIII | Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia, February 24, 1954 | NO. 11

Moore Announces Slate Of Major Nominations; Voting Set For Mar. 1, 3

Three Nominated For Each Office

Twelve students' names have been submitted to appear on the ballot for major elections which will begin on March 1, according to an announcement by Ann Moore, chairman of the nominating committee.

Jane Bailey, Dorothy Vaden, and Ann Carter Wendenberg have been selected to run for president of the Student Government Association. Carolyn Stanley, Joan DeAlba and Jean Carol Parker will serve as candidates for the Youn Women's Christian Association. Nominees for House Council will be Nell Crocker, Joan Conley, and Jackie White. Those names appearing on the Athletic Association ballot will be Hilda Hartis, Helen Waitman, and Mary Ann Ward.

Voting time has been slated to begin at 1 p. m. on March 1 and end at 6 p. m. On the first ballot one name will be eliminated. On the March 3 ballot, the choice will be made between the remaining names.

In judging each candidate, Ann urges the student body to consider carefully the qualifications of each girl before voting.

Jane Bailey, who is a junior from Lexington, is now a junior class representative on the student council. She is also a member of the Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority.

From Danville, Dot Vaden is now serving as secretary to the Student Council Association. This year marks her third year on the Council. She is also a member of the Virginia staff, where she is now serving as assistant buiness manager, and Alpha Kappa Gamma, Kappa Delta Pi, and the Cotillion Club.

A junior from Aylett, Ann Carter Wendenberg, is now serving as treasurer to the student council. She is also a member of the YWCA, Virginian staff, Richmond Club, Longwood Players, AA Council, and Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority. She is also serving as president to the junior class.

Carolyn Stanley from Winchester, has served for three years on the YWCA Cabinet. She is a member of the Rotunda staff and Kappa Delta, social sorority. She served on Freshman Commission and also acted as freshman circus co-chairman.

A business major, Joan DeAlba from Hilton Village is now serving as secretary to the YWCA. She also holds membership in the Cotillion Club, Orchesis, and Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority. During her freshman year served as a member of Freshman Commission and the Student Standards Committee.

Jean Carol Parker, a junior from Emporia, is acting as treasurer of the "Y". This year marks her third year with this association. During her freshman year she served on Freshman Commission and acted as freshman counsellor her sophomore year. She is also a member of the Virginian staff, College Choir, Pi Delta Epsilon, Orchesis, ACE and Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority.

Nell Crocker, a sophomore from Smithfield, is now serving as treasurer to House Council. She is the sophomore hostess and a member of Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority.

Joan Conley, of Fredrickica, Delaware, is a junior mathematics major. She has served as hall

Orchestra to Give Concert on Mar. 8 In L C Auditorium

The National Symphony Orchestra, renowned as "the orchestra of the Presidents" will present a concert under the direction of Howard Mitchell in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m., February 8. The concert will be sponsored by Longwood College.

The organization received its descriptive title through its reputation achieved by a prominent part in the last two inaugurations. The orchestra played for the festivities for former President Harry S. Truman's inaugural in 1949 and also gave a special concert on January 18, 1953, as a part of the celebration surrounding the inaugural of President Eisenhower. During the 1930's the National Symphony Orchestra was invited on two occasions to give "command performances" at the White House for the late President Roosevelt.

Established in 1931, the National Symphony Orchestra was quickly recognized as a necessary part of the cultural life of the nation's capital. In spite of the competition of older and larger orchestras, it soon established itself as one of the outstanding symphonic organizations in the nation. The orchestra has toured as far North as Canada, and as far South as Florida. Children's concerts ,annual appearances with the well-known ballet companies of the nation, and "pop" concerts were part of the National Symphony's yearly schedule, and after several years, the Orchestra was responsible for establishing the world-famous "Symphonies under the Stars" services at the Watergate, near Lincoln Memorial.

During the last four years, under the direction of Conductor Mitchell, the National Symphony Orchestra's activities have undergone a rapid expansion. Educational activities of the orchestra have been greatly increased and series of concerts in communities

Frosh Report On Progress Of Students In Production

By JAN KUYK and JEANNE SAUNDERS

Amid groups of earnest modern dancers, frantic directors, frustrated musicians, and the time-worn cries of "on stage everybody," the freshman production is underway.

Flo Soghoian and Caroline Stoneman are steadily graying at the temples as they hopelessly try to answer the hundreds of questions being hurled at them from every corner of Jarman Hall. Flo's favorite expression when she reaches her lowest depths of despair is, "Tear up the script!" (This is voiced in her typical Brooklyn accent.) Whereupon her weary associate, Caroline, usually grabs the nearest movable object and throws it wildly into the orchestra pit. (This goes over big with the guys in the orchestra.)

There is a leading character in this production. After hours of "how now brown cowing," and weeks of deciphering handwritten script, Cindy Baldwin managed to cop the part. The only hint that can be given as to the basic nature of this part is that it most definitely is not connected in any way, shape, or form with L'Esprit!

Adorning the marquee on opening night will also be the names of Pat Jones, Barbara Whitehead, Bobby Tyre, Nancy Lenz, and Joan Jones. The speaking parts will be rivaled for supremacy by the agile modern dancing of Sara Lou Wendenburg and Loretta Kesterson and the ballroom dancing of Patty Parker and Rex Daye.

An ode is in order for the gentleman who has been working long and hard in his own amaible way —Charlie Hop. He has picked no special field for his services. He has worked on every phase from props to lights.

Speaking of props, Shirley Hardy, the chairman, has been secretly digging around for weeks. Her room is beginning to resemble a curio shop. She tips her hat to the girls who have worked so faithfully with her.

Mix a little fun, a lot of cooperation, and an abundant supply of genuine hard work, and the result will be—the freshmen are hoping—a whopping good time that will be remembered for many moons.

King Reveals Election Results; Virginian Will Feature Copley, Hodges As Senior Personalities

Nell Copley and Jean Hodges were chosen "Senior Personalities" to be featured in the June 1954 Virginian.

Selection Based On Class Spirit

Nell Copley and Jean Hodges were chosen last week to be featured as senior leaders in the June 1954 Virginian. Breaking the tradition of several years the annual has revealed the names of the seniors selected as "personalities" and representatives of their class and college spirit.

On releasing the names of Mary Ann King, editor of the Virginian, commented, "We feel that the students are more interested in the results of the election right now instead of waiting until the the Virginian arrives in June for the announcement. These girls have been recognized as leaders we want everyone to know about them."

Nell, a blue-eyed, smiling native of Blackstone, is a commercial major who has led her class during its senior year as president, and as vice-president during the sophomore and junior years. As vice-president of the Young Woman's Christian Association, Nell recently served as chairman of the Religious Emphasis Activities.

She started her career as a class and school leader in her freshman year as a member of the "Y" Freshman Commission. She is also a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national leadership fraternity; Future Teachers of America, Commercial Club, and Cotillion Club. Her social sorority is Pi Kappa Sigma. This year she has also served on the Student Standards Committee.

Always a leader in the athletics tall, brown-haired Jean from Waynesville, North Carolina, has served as vice-president of the Athletic Association during this year, and has participated in all class games and sports. Recently elected chairman of the 1954 May Day, Jean also acted as chairman of the senior dance last December. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Cotillion Club, Monogram Club, and Future Teachers of America.

Chosen annually by the student body, from a list of names submitted by the annual staff, the senior personalities are presented in the feature section of the annual.

Longwood to Offer Varied Courses in Summer School

Offering courses in everything from the arts to mathematics, Longwood College's 1954 summer school will begin classes on June 21.

Registration of students for the summer session will take place on June 21, and classes will end on August 14.

The summer session, which will include two, three, four, five, and eight week courses, is designed for various groups of students. The courses are planned for teachers in the public schools of Virginia who wish to work towards a bachelor's degree, renew their teaching certificates, or study specific educational problems and develop new skills.

The summer session is planned for present students who may wish to accelerate their program of study by attending three regular sessions and three or four summer session. Students who do not meet the minimum require?ment and wish to repeat courses in order to return for the regular session, and those who wish to improve their academic averages by repeating courses in which they have low grades. New students, including freshmen, who wish to begin their study may also attend the summer session.

Among course offerings will be several workshops which are planned for those able to spend only a short period in summer school. A workshop in Dance for Elementary and High School Teachers will be offered from June 21-July 2 under the direction of Mrs. Emily K. Landrum. A short course in Specific Problems in Education will be offered from June 21-July 9 under Dr. Edgar M. Johnson.

There will be a five weeks course in Crafts, The Role of the Classroom Teacher in Guidance, Geographic fluences in American History, Home Furnishings and Equipment, General Mathematics for Teachers in the Elementary School, and Fundamentals of Speech.

Those wishing to take a full year in Biology or Chemistry may do so in the eight week session.

Miss Elizabeth Burger and Mrs. Janice S. Lemen, who have been on a leave of absence will return to teach in the summer school.

The summer catalogue which has just been published with attractive new format is now available in the registrar's office.

Porter Goes 'Abroad'; Reports on UN, New York, Capitol

By ELLEN PORTER

How would you like to "go abroad," see New York, and gab with the V. I. P's at our Nation's Capitol all in one week? Believe me, it is possible.

Last week I was privileged, honored, I should say, to attend a Citizenship Seminar for Students sponsored by the Methodist Student Movement which was held in New York and Washington, three days, respectively. I was one of two students from Virginia attending out of the fifty-three delegates representing twenty-one different states, and many more colleges. Our purpose was to study the organization of the United Nations and the issues being discussed at the present, there and in the Capitol. So, that's what we did, beginning at 3 p. m., Sunday, February 14. A professor of the Boston University School of Theology, and a much-loved person throughout Methodism, Dr. Harold Ehrensberger, reminded us first that "every Christian has a responsibility in today's world." After a delicious supper prepared by the Woman's Society of Christ Methodist Church, 60th & Park Avenue, we heard a panel composed of M. M. Thomas of India, Dr. T. Takeuchi, of Japan, and Richmond T. Baker of Columbia University, present Asia as they saw it. And with the place of controversy it holds today, there is much to see.

The highlight of the evening was a trip out to Staten Island on the ferryboat, which goes past the Statue of Liberty and gives a wonderful view of the shoreline, even through fog. Of course the trip was made even more interesting with a cup of hot coffee and the presence of a few "Texas Millionaires."

Monday was spent at the United Nations buildings, and that's where my trip aboard comes in! When you step onto the U. N. grounds, you are out of the U. S. The land was given by J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., but the buildings are being paid for by an international fund; so it cannot be called U. S. property. Slick, huh?

The buildings are utterly superb, and are to me a visible symbol of all this world can do for itself, if the U. N. is allowed to continue all its operations.

The highlights of this day to me were a day by day description of how the Netherlands and Indonesia settled the dispute as to whether their colonies would be dependent or independent, as told to us by Dr. Frank Graham. Then a visit to the Trusteeship Council, where we put the little earphones over our ears and turned the switch to "English" so we could understand what the Frenchman who was giving a report on the French Cammeroons was saying. I also turned the dial to the other four languages — French, Spanish, Russian and Chinese — just to hear how it would sound. The Chinese was the most weird sound with its nasal, whiney sounds, but I think I'd find the boomin' Russian hardest to follow. All delegates have to speak in one of the five. Also, a Japanese dinner at the Japanese Methodist Church. And we really ate with chopsticks! There were no other utensils to use, except our "claws," and actually it was quite simple to learn the Oriental way.

Then, this must not be left out. The evening was completed by an excursion up to the 86th floor of the Empire State Building, where I saw that much talked about city, from a higher perspective. It was a wonderfully clear night, moon

Players Plan Series Of Evening Sessions To Hear Recordings

The world's great plays brought to the stage of Jarman Auditorium via the magic of records and phonograph!

Starting tonight at 7 p. m., the Longwood Players will present a series of recorded programs of famous plays. Tonight's program will feature excerpts from Euripedes' "Medea" with Judith Anderson.

These sessions will be open to all who are interested; the group will meet on time and coffee will be served. Later programs in the weekly Wednesday night sessions will present excerpts from "Hedda Gabler", and such actors and actresses as John Gielud and Eva Le Gallienne.

At a recent meeting of the players, Dr. C. L. S. Earley, professor of dramatics, announced the acquisition of a new reveldrama for three sided curtain, for use in future theatrical productions.

Criteria

When election time arrives in one more week, exactly how much thought or consideration will be given to the qualifications and abilities of the various candidates?

Surely, one must realize that to be nominated for a major or minor office is an honor within itself, and is an indication that the nominating committee feels confident that the candidate is capable of holding office. But, if you, as the voter, depend upon this as the only basis for selection, then the voting process will be no more than the closing of your eyes and marking the ballot, according to your opinion of the nominee's popularity or appearance.

Is this a time basis for selection? Campaigning, in the usual sense, is not demonstrated at Longwood. There are no posters, speeches, or "hading out of cigars" present in our election system. Since this campaigning process is absent, it is understandable that many students are ignorant of the candidates' qualifications. Then what qualifications, you may ask, need to to be considered.

First of all, the candidate must have the ability to carry on all functions and duties of the office, and the ability to conduct herself wisely and judiciously. Secondly, she must possess a willingess to carry out these functions, and an ambition to see her organization progress. To carry out this advancement, she must actually be able to introduce new ideas and projects.

The ability to get along with others, and work co-operatively is another important qualification. In this, she should possess a pleasing manner, an open mind, and a courteous and a tactful attitude. Her leadership should be representative of her organization.

The last and probably one of the most important qualifications is the ability of the candidate to follow and respect the leadership of officers in various other organizations, and be willing to share the load of work and problems which occur.

Popularity has no place in the way you vote!

When election time arrives, will these qualifications be considered? You, as the voter, will be marking the ballot—only you can answer this question!

It's Important

Could Martin do without Lewis or the Post Office without Charlie?—No.

Neither could the newspaper do without its circulation staff, which is definitely the backbone of the Rotunda. Many people, however, do not realize the importance of this staff to the newspaper because of the back seat it apparently occupies.

In considering this, a clear understanding of the organization of any newspaper is needed—that pattern consisting of the editorial staff and business staff. Specified ones of us write features, editorials, and news. On the other hand, the business staff is concerned with advertising, circulation, and the handling of money. Although these two have jobs distinctly different they must, neverthless, work together for one could not stand without the other. Both are necessary for the success of any newspaper.

The circulation staff has many jobs it must undertake, all of them centering around one objective—getting the newspaper to its readers. For the importance of any newspaper—the Rotunda no exception—lies in the reading of it.

Those serving on the circulation staff now deserve much credit for the work they have done. However, this group has been greatly handicapped by having too much to do and too few people to do it. Because of this the staff cannot put their best into their jobs and therefore flaws occur, complaints are made, and subscribers don't get their papers. This staff sends out papers to subscribers, alumnae, and advertising services; takes the papers to the dining hall, faculty, and town students; and mails out the paper to prospective high school students.

Although there may be little material gain or glory, in this last, it offers the satisfaction of knowing that an important job is being well done. You would be just as much a part of the Rotunda as its editor for you moved the paper to the public! We need your help.

These jobs are not hard and could be done quickly and easily if there were an adequate number to do them. If you are interested in this and feel that this is an important issue this would be worthwhile way to use your time.

Think about it.

Just For The Record--Recording Companies Release New, Different Disc of Low Price, High Quality, Old Tunes

By GAIL LEONARD

Just for the record, various recording companies have recently released new and different discs with the flavor of modernism and others have delved into the past and brought back moments in the golden treasuries of music.

Camden Records, a new label just released by RCA, has arrived in Richmond and is to be sold exclusively at a local department store there. These discs feature lush quality recordings of outstanding musical selections at extremely low prices. "Stardust Melodies," played by the combined orchestras of Raymond Paige and the American Youth Orchestra, is one of their most entertaining 12" L. P. records and lists among its 15 selections such all-time favorites as "Stardust," "Rhapsody In Blue," Donkey Serenade," and "Night and Day."

Performances of continental orchestras have been waxed by Epic Records, a Europea label, and are now being distributed in this country by Columbia.

The late Glenn Miller, the band leader who popularized "swing" and dance music in the late 30's and early 40's, has been honored with a treasure album released by RCA containing reissues of his most memorable hits including "String of Pearls," "In the Mood," "Little Brown Jug," and "Tuxedo Junction." This album is covered in white leather and displays his autograph in gilt printing. Note: if interested in purchasing this album, save your pennies, for it retails for $25.

In the evening when you are a little weary after a full day of classes try listening to 'Music Out of the Moon," a new adventure in music. This Capitol L. P. recording introduces the little known instrument the Theremin. An almost human tone that has an eerie, vibrant beauty, is created by the instrument. The Theremin is played by the motions of the hands in the air over an electronic field, and the result is music that can affect the sensitive mind in a way that is sometimes frightening and always fascinating. This music is a type that has been extremely successful as a mood-creating background for motion pictures such as "Spellbound," "Lost Week-End," and "Spiral Staircase."

Of Interest

By HARRY LANCASTER, JR.

Longwood is only one of several state educational institutions and since we are all Virginia citizens, perhaps you would like to know about another state institution where your writer has attended "summer school." Perhaps it seems quite different from Longwood, but in many ways it is quite similar.

As you drive along the highway between Waynesboro and Staunton in the Shenandoah Valley, you may notice a large group of buildings located near the small town of Fishersville. They were built during World War II for casualties of the Battle of the Bulge and comprised the Woodrow Wilson Army General Hospital. In 1947 they were acquired by the Commonwealth of Virginia and they are now jointly operated by the State and Augusta County as the Woodrow Wilson Educational Center, which is composed of the High School, the Technical School, and the Rehabilitation Center

Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center, better known to its students as WWRC, consists of fifty-two buildings or about one-third of the Educational Center. Its purpose is "to provide vocational diagnosis and counseling, physical restoration, and job training to the severely disabled so that they may resume suitable employment and return to normal life." In other words, WWRC tries to make the physically handicapped as independent as possible. The majority of its students attend the Technical School where they learn a trade such as watch repairing, shoe repairing, barbering, hair dressing, auto body and fender work, and sewing to name a few. The working day lasts from 8 a. m until 4 p. m., the same as Longwood's.

The buildings at WWRC are one-story and are situated about twenty-five feet apart. They are connected by seven miles of corridors which lie parallel and at right angles to each other. The Army constructed it in this manner so that in the event of bombing the buildings could function independently of one another. Since there are no steps it is possible for a student to go to any building in wheelchair.

Each student is assigned a counselor from the staff of the guidance department whose job is to help the student with his problems and to coordinate his program between the various departments. A student may be taking watch repairing and therapy. Physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech therapy, and arts and crafts are offered as well as vocational training. Incidentally, occupational therapy is not primarily concerned with occupations, as the name would lead you to believe, but with the use and control of the arms, hands, and figures and with such activities as typing, feeding and dressing.

WWRC has many facilities to make the life of its students as nearly normal as possible. There is a canteen where anything from a magazine to a loaf of bread may be bought, a juke box, a rec hall, a TV set, a gym, movies, a small library, a pool room, and a chapel. A students from the Union Theological Seminary serves as chaplain and lives at the Center. There are Protestant services three times a week and Mass once a week. There is also a student govern-

Roving Reporter Reveals Astounding Peculiarities

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Longwood College! The institution of learning, the promoter of good will, the home of blossoming ladies, and the producer of such characters as can be found nowhere else on the face of this good, green earth.

Outside of everyday socializing with your classmates, have you ever dug deep down into her behavior and habits? I did this the other day and the facts I uncovered are truly astounding.

During my research, I came upon some of the most interesting material. Now, it is a common custom for most Longwoodites when they arise in the morning, to trudge—and I do mean trudge—through half of the long morning with a look of pure disgust upon their drawn faces and a display of pure meanness in their actions. Not Barbara Mays, however. When her little alarm clock gives forth with a shrill blast and the sun's first blinding rays tear through the window, this wee lassie opens her bright eyes, sings "Good Morning, Dear Sun," and begins a wonderful day with zip and bounce. Egad! To be like that!

By further probing I discovered things quite interesting about the night life in Longwood dormitories. Mrs. Nancy Jean Tanley Masters has a fashion all her own. Now, everyone who finds it necessary to roll her hair at night also finds it necessary to rig up some form of night cap. That's normal, I agree—but, why does Tanley cut off the right leg of all her pajamas to make the nightcap?

Then too, there's always Georgia Jackson. She really is the most entertaining person to talk to when she's asleep. Many a night I have become lonely and gone up to Georgia's room to carry on an intelligent conversation while she is deep within the realms of unconsciousness. We've talked of health, weather, and college events. But all ends when she wakes up and tells me to "get outa here."

How about these people who bathe in Jergen's Lotion? Yes, Dot Douglas, I agree it's better to have a soft lovely complexion than scaly skin.

There are many more such choice peculiarities as smoking in closets—a carry-over from a nonsuspecting family at home, no doubt.

Snack Bar Sets Play Mood

By PAT KELLY

I was sitting in my usual place in the snack bar. I say usual because I spend about ninety per cent of my time there. The other ten per cent is spent in sleeping and attending classes; basket-weaving, advanced bridge, boat-rowing, kite flying and appreciation of jazz. The latter is taught by the noted Dr. Richard Realgone, member of the Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin St.

At the next table sat my close friends, Betty Bridge, Fanny Finesse, Trudy Trump, and Barbara Bid. They were indulging in their favorite pastime—(can't you guess what?)

That noise! What was coming down the steps? A herd of elephants? No, it was my classmates, Alice Athlete, Phyllis Phys. Ed., and Molly Muscles striding down for a big orange.

Allowing five minutes out of the day between 11:54 and 11:59 for a quick "pick-up," Sally Studious and Beatrice Bookish hurriedly choked down their black coffee while reviewing their notes for the next class.

There is a television set, Charley Channel, Al Antenna, and Vera Video had just settled down in their accustomed positions for another exciting episode of "Mary Backstage, Noble Wife," "Hunt for Yesterday," "Life Can Be Miserable," and other so-called entertainment.

In another corner of the rec Lily Lightfoot and Bobby Ballet were at it aagin. This time they were shagging to the tune of "Who's My Pa-pa." Their dancing was brought to a halt when Hannah Housemother pulled the plug.

Just as I arose to take leave of the snack bar until tomorrow morning Rena Rec called out, "See you around the campus, Sally Snackbar."

Miss Horton To Talk Here Founder's Day

Miss Frances Horton, president of the Longwood Alumnae Association will speak at the seventy-first Founder's Day program on March 27. This Founder's Day will be a reunion of all the four and nine classes.

In addition, as a part of the Saturday morning program, there will be a special service in memory of Miss Leola Wheeler, a former teacher at Longwood who died recently.

The play "'Romeo and Juliet" will also be given as part of the annual convention of the alumnae.

Men To Close Season Mar. 4

Longwood men's basketball team will wind up its 1954 season, next week.

Leading off in the final series will be a game with the Madison team tomorrow night in the Longwood gym, with game time set at 7 p. m. and admission price 25c. On Saturday the team will meet the Ferrum team at home on the Longwood court. Jake Wamsley, coach, of the team has commented that although there is no official rating of these opponents, they are both considered very good.

Next week the team will conclude the season with games against Crewe High School and Camp Pickett.

Recent games saw the Pioneers defeating the Cumberland High School team 45-32 and losing to Pamplin High School.

and all, the Queen Elizabeth could be seen docked in the harbor, and left me quite satisfied with all the reports and indoctrination I had had. The real completion came after a cup of coffee, with French icecream in the New Yorker .By that time I could hardly make it to the sixth floor of the Hotel Martinique.

The most interesting thing that happened in all the events of Wednesday was a visit to the hearing of the Un-American Activities Committee in the House Office Building. I heard three persons questioned about their participation in a certain organization called the Philadelphia Teacher's Union, which has only 150 members out of the 8,000 teachers in Philadelphia.

Thursday was spent mostly hearing Senators. I visited Harry Flood Byrd—Senator from Virginia. In five minute speeches while they took a break from the hot debate over the Bricker Amendment, we heard Senator Paul Douglas, Senator William F. Knowland, Congressman Jack Jovits, Congressman Sam Rayburn. With four remaining games, the Congressman Joe Martin, and that same night Allan Borth who is on the editorial staff of the Washington Post.

Friday was spent at the Egyptian and Lebanon Embassies, touring the White House, and the Supreme Court Building where we visited Justice Harold Burton, and visiting with Senator Wayne Morse, Independent from Oregon. The whole affair was culminated by a very impressive worship service at Lincoln Memorial.

My last impression can best be seen in a quotation that was overheard in one of Dr. C. L. S. Earley's classes, on finding me absent from class, "Oh, Porter's gone to New York! She'll never be the same again!

Longwood Varsity Defeats Madison, Bridgewater, Second Team Wins Two

By ELSE WENTE

With a record of one win, one loss, the Longwood basketball team journeyed to Harrisonburg Friday to face the Madison team, scoring wins over both their first and second teams.

The Longwood first team, gaining the lead in the early minutes of the game, had a tough time trying to maintain their slim margin over the Madison six. Sparked on by the sharp-shooting forwards and quick-footed guards, the Longwood team, gaining a substantial lead in the final period of the game, was able to chalk up a 53-42 victory over the hard-fighting Madison team.

Following in the footsteps of the first team and not wanting to be outdone by them, the Longwood second team was able to score a win over the Madison second team, deefating them 33-24. Thus the first game of the weekend ended victoriously for the Longwood lassies.

Bridgewater Games

Well satisfied by their win over Madison the previous night, the Longwood basketball team travelled to Bridgewater Saturday to break their second undefeated season with a 58-53 win.

During the major part of the first team game the scores of the two teams remained close together, each team trying to gain the lead. Although Longwood was in the lead for the most part of the game, they relinquished it to the Bridgewater team at various times during the period of play. With a final wave of energy in the remaining periods of the game, the Longwood lassies surged ahead to come out victorious, downing the Bridgewater team 58-53.

In the second game the Longwood players had a much easier time, taking the lead at the beginning of the game and holding it throughout. With a 17-point lead at half time, the Longwood team emerged victorious again, scoring a 48-43 win over the Bridgewater team.

Traveling to the games this week-end were Clara Borum, Dale Brothers, Virginia Burgess, Nell Crocker, Patsy Hamner, Doris Harcum, Hilda aHrtis, Elleanor Koch, Jane Lohr, Patsy Sanford, Anne Snyder, Helen Waitman, Mary Ann Ward(Else Wente, Roberta Wiatt, Louise Wilder, Nancy Tolley, Sara Lou Wenbenburg, Barbara Whitehead, Delores Winder, Loretta Kuhn, and Fay Evans.

AEC Gives Contract To Foard For Study With Dr. Brumfield

Donald E. Foard will assist Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, professor of biology in his research, according to a contract by the Atomic Energy Commission. He will arrive next Monday, March 11, to begin his work.

Mr. Foard, from Alexandria, attended Concordia Junior College and the University of Virginia. He did graduate work in theology at the Concordia Seminary, but transferred to the University of Virginia for graduate work in biology.

The terms, stipulated by the contract, are for a year's research on cell growth and division in higher plants stimulated by radiation.

Dr. Brumfield has devised a plan whereby surface cells may be photographed at the growing root tip. Radiations have an effect on growth and division of the developing cells at the root tip. By photographing the root tips at half hour intervals over a period of about twenty-four hours, valuable data can be recorded.

Mr. Foard will go to Oak Ridge, Tennessee this summer to assist Dr. Brumfield. This will be Dr. Brumfield's fifth year of research at Oak Ridge.

Va. Pianist Give Recital

Mrs. Florence Richardson Robertson, Richmond pianist, will present a concert at Hampden-Sydney tomorrow night.

This recital will be a repeat performance of the one given at the University of Richmond on February 14.

On Mrs. Robertson's program for the evening are "Two Sonatas" by Domenicico Scarlotti, "Sonata in G Minor Op. 22" by Robert Schumann, and "Grande Polonaise Brillante, Op. 22" by Frederic Chopin.

Rides out to Hampden-Sydney for the concert are offered to all music majors. Others interested in attending may inquire for rides at the Home Office.

College President To Meet With Va. State Legislature

Two questions of importance to Longwood students will be discussed Thursday at a meeting of the Virginia House of Delegates Committee on Education.

President Dabney S. Lancaster will represent the college at the session February 25 in Richmond. The discussion of these issues is relative to business and bills to be presented during the remaining days of the Legislatures' biennial assembly.

The committee will first discuss the fees charged out-of-state students. As it now stands out-of-state students in Virginia colleges are charged only a nominal amount above the state students expenses and the state budget allows the same amount of funds for all students. The committee will discuss whether an increase in the expense of out-of-state students as now established should be made.

The second question deals with the right of state colleges to refuse the application of graduates of state high schools. During the past several years state colleges have sought to raise entrance requirements in order to insure students who are capable of college level work. It has been maintained that any state operated school should not reject a graduate of any state accredited public school.

Supervisor To Speak With College Seniors About Teaching Jobs

Representing Warwick City and York County, Mrs. Winder, supervisor of instruction will be at Longwood to interview prospective teachers on March 3.

All seniors who are interested in this area should make an appointment with Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary and head of the Longwood Placement Bureau.

Several states other than Virginia have sent requests to the Bureau for prospective teachers. These include New Jersey, California, Michigan and government work in the Hawaiian Islands. Any students interested should contact Mrs. Watkins.

Faculty To Visit Va. High Schools

The program of high school visiations by Longwood faculty and administration members to various secondary schools throughout the state is continuing this week.

Northern Neck schools will be visited Friday by Mr. Raymond French, instructor in chemistry, who will act as a public relations informant for Longwood. Included in the group are Tappahannock, Warsaw, and Farnham high schools. He will also visit Heathsville High School in Northumberland County.

Mrs. Meade Shackleford, director of public relations, will attend "College Day" at Culpeper tomorrow.

Last Monday, Mrs. Shackelford, attended "College Night" at Stafford County High School.

Of Interest

ment, an assembly once a month, and a student newspaper although it was inactive last summer.

The student body at first glance seems to be a conglomeration of persons. Some look perfectly normal; others are on crutches, in wheel chairs, or on stretchers; still others are minus arms, hands, fingers, or legs. They are not such a glamorous or handsome group to look at; however, you get the general impression that you are pretty lucky to be as well off as you are. After you stay there awhile, you become inured to the grotesqueness and get acquainted with them. Fate has dealt them some hard blows but they do not feel sorry for themselves. They are determined to fight back and to continue to fight back. You cannot help but admire their intestinal fortitude. Another thing you notice is that they are not very different from yourself. Some of them are married; they often have dates with each other; one girl married a VP graduate this summer in the chapel.

The staff at WWRC constantly tries to help the student become more mature, independent and helps them to learn themselves. This, I think, is one of the most important aspects of WWRC; for no matter how good the buildings or equipment are, if the staff of teachers are not capable and do not assume the correct attitude toward their work, the school will not fulfill its purpose.

We can be justly proud of our State for making available the type of services provided at WWRC.

Indians To Take Over In Heap Big 'Tom-Tom' As Frosh Present Show

College life, Indian style, with squaws, teepees, heap big chiefs, and the "Great Green Father" will be depicted on the stage of Jarman Hall Saturday night.

"Tom-Tom" presenting all the important features of freshman life tribe fashion, is the three-act production being presented by the freshman class at 8 p. m., on March 5.

Cindy Baldwin, narrator of the show, introduces the various acts. In music, dance, and dialogue the first scene shows the arrival at college of the "squaws" and "fair maidens". Welcomed by Big Chief Lancaster, portrayed by Pat Jones, they are then introduced to the faculty "chiefs." Loretta Kesterson will dance in this scene.

Life in a "teepee"—or college dormitory—is shown in the next scene with "Squaw Joan Jones" who is pinned to a Hampden-Sydney brave, and all the other squaws discussed the local college warriors, other squaws bewailing the lack of braves. Carol Carson sings "the Dorm Blues" in this scene.

Head Rat Day Chieftain Barbara Whitehead, leads the rat day "war dances" with all the traditional superiority for the sophs and fright for the freshmen. Before a stark, weird forest scene modern dancers will enact the terrors of rat day.

The dance of the year, the "Feather Hop," will feature dances by Patty Parker, Rex Daye, and Sara Lou Wenbenberg. A series of Indian style take-offs and all types of dances will be used in this act.

Culminating the year, senior "squaws" receive their "birth-bark," after Chief Lancaster's graduation address. Then the History Prof. Will Lecture At Princeton

An invitation to lecture at Princeton University has been extended Dr. Francis Butler Simkins, associate professor of history at Longwood College.

Dr. Simkins, well-known in Southern historical fields, will be a visiting lecturer in the American Civilization Studies, from September 1954 to February 1955. He will lecture on phases of New South history and conduct seminars and conferences with seniors. He has been granted a three months leave of absece from Longwood.

This prize lecture position was established at Princeton by the graduating class of 1932 and has been extended to many outstanding scholars and teachers. This honor is not the first of its kind to be given Dr. Simkins. In 1928, he was Centennial lecturer at Mississippi College and again in 1949 he was visiting lecturer at Mississppi. The Dunning Prize of the American Historical Association was awarded him in 1932.

Dr. Simkins who has been on the faculty of Longwood since 1927, recently published a new book, "The History of the South" which is the complete story of the South since Jamestown. This year he is serving as president of the Southern Historical Association.

Dr. Simkins received his A. B. at North Carolina State College in 1918 and his A. M. from Columbia. He taught at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, North Carolina State, and Emory College before coming to Longwood.

All the Chocktaws, Chickawas, Chatahoochie, Cihppewas, and Flo Soghoian, Cindy Baldwin, and Caroline Stoneman are gathered for the big freshman pow-wow "Tom-Tom."

National Symphony Orch, Will Appear Monday; Mitchell Will Direct Concert

Under the direction of Howard Mitchell, the National Symphony Orchestra will present a concert in Jarman Hall March 8 at 8 p. m. This conert is being presented in connection with the Bicentennial celebration of Prince Edward County and is sponsored by Longwood College.

Included in the program of the concert are "Carnival" Overture by Dvorak, the "Swan of Teronela," by Sibelius with an English horn solo by Vernon Kilpatrick, the Tone Poem "Don Juan" Op. 20 by Strauss. After intermission, the National Symphony Orchestra will present Tschaikowsky's "Symphony No. 5 in E. Minor" Op. 5.

The National Symphony Orchestra which is now in its 23rd year of existence has had a number of world famous soloists appearing regularly with it as guest artists. During the last four years such distinguished conductors as Bruno Walter ,Sir Thomas Beecham, Leopold Stokowski, Dimitri Metropolous, George Szell, and Leonard Bernstein have filled guest conducting assignments.

Such special events as locally produced children's "ballets" — "Hansel and Greetl," "Cinderella," and "Adventure in Oz," concerts in collaboration with the Barber Shop Quartets of the city, annual Gershwin nights, choral concerts featuring the excellent choruses of the nation's capital, have, under Dr. Mitchell's leadership, welded the National Symphony Orchestra into an organization that combines the highest standards of artistic achievement with the wide goals of community service.

Among the artists who are engaged for the National Symphony's twenty-third season in Washington's Constitution Hall are George London, Heifetz, Oscar Levant, Astrid Varnay Rubenstein, Issac Stern and Leopold Stokowski. Handel's "The Messiah" will be sung by the combined choirs of four Washington Churches in addition to the above mentioned Howard University Choir will sing engagements. For the climax, the with the orchestra in a presentation of the "Beethoven Ninth Symphony." Other soloists scheduled to highlight National Symphony programs are William Kappell, Maryan Filar, Gina Bachauer, and the two duo pianists, Vronsky and Babin.

Horne To Give First Concert of Student Series on March 19

Beginning a series of student recitals, Dolly Horne, senior voice major, will present a recital on Thursday, March 19 in Jarman Hall.

The music recitals are an annual event at Longwood. This spring's series will present two voices and two piano recitals.

On Sunday, April 25, a group of ten voice students will present a joint recital. Helen Sue McNell, a senior music major, and Sally Wilson and Nancy Jane Jones, juniors, will give a joint piano recital on May 8. Concluding the series will be Lu Beavers piano recital on May 9.

Culminating the work in the music department, the student recitals are presented to show the growing ability of the music students; and to offer an entertaining program of good music to the student body.

Longwood Girls Plan Hospital Visitations

On March 14 a group of Longwood girls will journey to Camp Pickett to entertain the patients in the Recreation ward. These trips are sponsored by the Red Cross and are organized by Nell Copley and Mildred Parker.

The entertainment is informal and includes group singing and on some occasions, special talent.

Anyone interested in going to Camp Pickett to entertain the service men may contact either girl in charge of organization. Transportation will be provided for about thirty people. Other trips will be made in April and May.

Longwood Alumnae Group To Observe Seventy-First Founder's Day Mar. 27

Celebrating the seventy-first anniversary of the founding of Longwood, or as it was known in that year, 1884, the State Female Normal School, members of the Alumnae Association will meet on March 26 and 27 to hold the annual Founder's Day convention.

Using the topic, "Preserve the Past, Invest in the Future of Longwood College," Miss Frances Horton, national president of the Alumnae Association, will be the chief speaker of the Founder's Day program, at 11 a. m., Saturday morning.

An academic procession of the seniors and faculty of the college will begin the program. A part of the program will be devoted to a memorial service in honor of Miss Leola Wheeler, retired dramatics director of the college. In this service Dolly Horne will sing "O Savior, Hear Me." Mr. M. Boyd Coyner, associate professor of psychology and Mrs. Lucy Haille Overbey Webster, who studied under Miss Wheeler, will pay tribute to her.

Following an organ selection by Mr. Roy Jesson, assistant professor of music, Miss Horton will speak to the group. The recessional will close the program.

Other week-end activities planned for the alumnae include registration on Friday and Saturday morning; a coffee at 9:15 a. m., in the Student Lounge, and a luncheon for the alumnae in the Ruffner Recreation Hall at 12:30 followed by a business meeting of the association at 1:30 p. m. Also Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster are giving an open house at their home from 4 to 5 p. m.

The week-end guests will then attend dinner in the dining hall, and conclude their festivities by attending the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs' presentation of "Romeo and Juliet."

The classes having their reunion this year are those ending in the fours and nines. These alumnae have planned to hold reunions on Saturday night and a breakfast on Sunday morning.

More reservations have been made than ever before at this early date, stated Mrs. Ruth Coyner, alumnae secretary, of the coming Founder's Day week-end

Students Elect Major Officers; Vaden, White, Parker, Waitman Win

Macon Gives Brief Review Of Colonnade

"We're hoping that this issue will be the best yet, and we appreciate the cooperation of all those who are working to make it a success."

This statement was made by Eloise Macon, editor of the Colonnade, concerning the forthcoming issue which will be released the last week in March.

Catherine Dessaix, the French informant, has completed her design for the cover. She states that in her work she has attempted to portray the expression of a foreign girl's personal and mental reactions toward American college life.

The stories chosen for publication include two which won honorable mention in the short story contest. "The Bargain" by H. K. Magnusson is an actual experience which occurred during a Mediterranean cruise.

Dot Armstrong uses the Salem witch burnings as a theme for her story "The Wizard." The essays of the forthcoming issue utilize the medium of local interest. Ellen Porter's essay reveals what goes on behind the scenes of a play such as "Romeo and Juliet" and Jackie Marshall writes about the life of Robert Russa Moton, who was born in Amelia County and became the president of the famed Tuskegee Institute.

Another new addition to the Colonnade will be a feature section, using more art and photographic work. New reviews of the various Artist Series and shows, and poetry will also be published.

Minor Elections Slated For March 17

Dot Vaden, Jean Carol Parker, Helen Waitman, and Jackie White were chosen by the student body in yesterday's election to serve as president of the Student Government Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, and House Council, respectively, during the year 1954-55.

Dot Vaden, a junior chemistry major from Danville, is new president of the student body. During the past year she has served as secretary to the Council. Dot is also assistant business manager of the Virginian, and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Kappa Delta Pi, and the Cotillion Club.

New "Y" president, Jean Carol Parker, is an elementary major from Emporia. This year she has been treasurer of the "Y" and a member of the Virginian staff, Choir, Pi Delta Epsilon, and Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority.

Helen Waitman, who will serve as Athletic Association president, is from Charles City. She has been on both hockey and basketball varsity teams and this year has been secretary of the AA Council. She is a member of the Monogram Club and Cotillion.

An elementary major, Jackie White is new head of the House Council. This past year she has been secretary of the Council. Jackie, from Norfolk, is a member of ACE, Cotillion, and Theta Sigma Upsilon, social sorority.

The new officers will take their positions in April. Minor elections have been slated for March 17, Ann Moore, chairman, has announced.

Alpha Kappa Gamma Taps Five Girls For Character, Leadership Qualities

Four seniors and one junior received recognition by Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary leadership fraternity, during the regular assembly program in Jarman Hall, Tuesday.

Following the reading of the qualifications for membership, the group tapped Lou Kitts, Ann Moore, Mason Moore, Patsy Sanford, and Eloise Macon, who were considered for membership on the basis of leadership, character, and service.

Lou Kitts from Tazewell is serving as chairman of the Student Standards Committee this year. She also is a member of the annual staff, Pi Delta Epsilon, FTA, Cotillion Club, and Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority.

Majoring in business education, Ann is now serving as head of the nominating committee for major and minor elections and secretary of the senior class. Other organizations of which she is a member are FTA, Kappa Delta Pi, college choir, and BSU.

From York, South Carolina, Mason is now serving as senior class representative to student government. She has taken active part in class games and athletics. Her membership is also found in FTA, Cotillion Club, and Zeta Tau Alpha, social sorority where she is acting as president of the group.

Patsy Sanford, a physical education major, is also active in class games and athletics. She is serving this year as president of the Monogram Club and holds membership in FTA, Cotillion Club, and Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority. She was listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges last fall.

A junior from Lynchburg, Eloise has served as editor-in-chief of the Colonnade this year. She also holds membership in Beore Eh Thom, Longwood Players, and Kappa Delta Pi.

Betty Islin, president of AKG, led the tapping service at the close of the assembly program. Mr. Roy Pearson, a representative of the Standard Oil Company in Hong Kong, spoke on "Communism and How it Works."

In the private jargon of the newspaper world, 30 signifies completion. Scribbled at the end of a news story, feature or column, it means the copy is finished; the story is ready for the press.

With a worn out copy pencil, we are ready to mark 30 to a year's work on the Rotunda. No more headaches over headlines, no more juggling makeup, stretching or shrinking stories to make them fit the space, no more 2 a. m. sessions over a typewriter—and we're more sad than glad!

Of course, it'll be nice to know we don't have to spend week ends frantically editorializing or digging news to fill an unexpected hole. But the experience of working with fellow students and faculty — that's the part we'll miss. Long gab sessions in the staff room discussing campus events and problems, and solving all the world's difficulties, a hamburger from Willie's, and getting "punchy" when the hour grows late are the most wonderful memories of this past year.

As we look back, of course, we see lots of mistakes, and not all have been of the typographical variety. There have been times when the opinions we expressed were the result of poor reasoning or inadequate information. Sometimes, we withheld or "watered down" views, news, criticisms or suggestions that surely should have been published. But as members of a student newspaper staff we have sought always to uphold certain standards of our college scholastic journalism, and our paper. Almost a year ago we defined the goals toward which we were pledged to work. Naturally, not all of these standards have been achieved; if they had we would know that they were set too low. It has only been in working toward such improvement that our paper has in any way succeed in becoming a more representative, more technically correct, serviceable, and enjoyable paper.

More than ideals however, it takes the kind of people with whom we've worked this year to meet deadlines. And so—

To the 1953 Rotunda staff—our managing editor, all the associate editors, every reporter, typist and member of the business staff—goes our sincere thank you. We'd have quit after the first issue if it hadn't been for your unfailing cooperation, ever new ideas, and your ability to be there when needed. All we had to do was yell "help" and you were there to save us from drowning in the printer's ink!

To the entire staff of the Farmville Herald goes our medal for everlasting patience and fortitude. You taught us how to run a newspaper, and many times your criticisms, and suggestions have meant a better Rotunda. You've always gone beyond the call of duty to help and we appreciate it.

And to our "public"—after all, your pleasure is the ultimate objective of our struggle—goes our thanks for your criticism and praise. If the paper is at all worthwhile it is because of your interest and support.

This is 30 for us and we hate to leave, but it's just the beginning for the Rotunda.

It Needs You

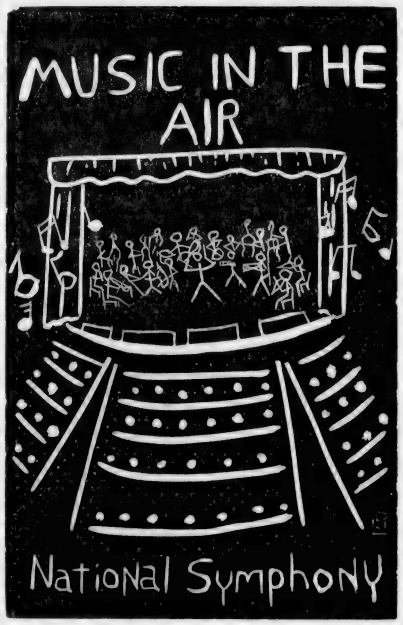
Next week, another phase in the preparation for May Day will begin.

Various dances, which have been selected for presentation in the spring pageant, will be demonstrated in an effort to create interest in May Day activities, to inform interested persons of basic dance steps, and to stimulate enthusiasm for taking part in the festival. Demonstrations of the minuet, quadrille, square dance, modern dance, and other folk dances will be presented.

These demonstrations have been set for two days next week. One day has been designated for freshmen and sophomores who are requested to meet in the small auditorium after dinner. Each dance will then be presented by several members of the May Day dance Committee. Each student will then sign up for the dance in which she is interested. Following the same procedure, juniors and seniors have been requested to meet on the second day. Members of all four classes who sign up mary participate in May Day.

Student participation in this undertaking is imperative, and student cooperation in all of the various phases is necessary. This year marks the first time a May Day program has been completely planned and carried out by students. Everyone will be watching to see how we handle this activity. May Day this year will definitely gave the way for student independence in major projects. The success of May Day depends upon the students.

Another "Best"



There's music in the air and the weather promises perfection!

By all reports the opportunity to be provided Longwood College students next week is a rare one. The National Symphony Orchestra which will appear in concert here next Monday, has become renowned for the quality and beauty of its orchestral presentations, and through the years has become one of the finest orchestras in America.

Music is imaginative as sometimes no other artistic expression can be. Through its mood it suggests an idea; the listener absorbs the mood and carries the idea to completion. A remarkable thing about music is that it conveys a different message to each individual. One of the most elating experiences a person can have is to feel swept up by the strains of magnificent music and such is the music we are to hear on March 8.

This music should be part of our lives for good music adds harmony and beauty to ordinary living. Make it your own.

We have been most fortunate this year in our Arists Series, for we have been hosts to guests who rank high in their fields: Jerome Hines, Metropolitan star; Roy Jesson, pianist; and the Columbus Boychoir. Now it is our privilege to again be audience for another "best."

Prince Edward County Links Colorful Past With Present

By MARTHA DONALDSON

Indian raids, longhouses and pioneers. Cavaliers, hoop - skirted belles and Lee's Retreat. These people and events are all a part of the colorful and interesting history of Prince Edward County.

The people of the county are delving into Prince Edward's history and finding out some very interesting things. Dusty trunks in attics are producing long-forgotten personal effects, clothing and musty letters. Old homes are being investigated for information to link them with the past, and old history books are providing from their yellowed pages, events of this county's history.

Why all this sudden interest in the past? Because this is Prince Edward County's Bicentennial year and everyone from President of the Celebration, J. Barrye Wall, Jr., to the newsboys and school children will be participating and working to make this celebration a success.

Unlike most celebrations of this type witnessed in our various home towns and counties, this is not a three or four day affair nor is it just a several week's celebration. The Prince Edward County Bicentennial is a series of events which started in January and will continue until October.

The scope of the Bicentennial is large not only in the land area, for it covers the entire county, but is also large in the number of people who are taking part in it. Each of the six Magisterial districts will sponsor individual projects such as garden tours, visits to old homes, a reconstruction of an Indian village, and exhibits of relics, historic letters and papers. This is all in addition to the main program which will feature courses in the history and geography of the county in the public schools, the National Symphony Orchestra, the commemoration of Lee's Retreat, Longwood College May Day, School and College Commencements, church homecomings, dedication of Southside Hospital, Medical Institute, the annual Five County Fair, and a costume ball.

All in all, the Bicentennial celebration will be a seven month long educational and cultural program which offers much enjoyment to the people of Prince Edward County. The Bicentennial is a marvelous way for the people to become familiar with the history and progress of their colorfully historical county. No doubt, the spirit of many of the earliest settlers and later inhabitants will live again when Prince Edward County pauses to look back along the road it has traveled for two hundred years to gain from it new knowledge and pride in the county.

Social Notes

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Another great week end full of fun and frolic, on the home-front this time. For a quick glance around the social whirl, let's begin in Virginia at the small college of Hampden-Sydney near Farmville.

Midwinters at Hampden-Sydney proved to be a most enjoyable week-end of dances, combo parties and picnics. Dancing to the delightful music of the "Aristocrats" from Roanoke, were Frances Bailey, Barbara Bane, Ann Bankhead, Loretta Brooking, Dale Brothers, Carol Carson, Connie Coiner, Cookie Cook, Betty Corey, Bettie Crawford, Norma Jean Croft, Nancy Deaton, Pattie Derring, Nancy Desmond, Elinor Everett, Charlotte Fitts, Sue Garber, Shirley Garst, Bev Harlowe, Judy Harris, Doris Harcum, Betty Jean Jenkins, Martha Joyner, Loretta Kesterson, Adelaide Kerby and Sarah Leatherman.

Also, Betty Maas, Sally O'Malley, Elizabeth Pancake, Flo Pollard, Suzanne Prillaman, Betty Riley, Betty Pat Rogers, Nancy Saunders, Janie Scott, Doris Underwood, Sarah Lou Wendenberg, Betty Wheeler, Jean Windley, Barbara Blackman and Billie Tomlinson attended. Still more, included Virginia Anderson, Stephanie Bauder, Ann Caldwell, Nell Copley, Adele Donaldson, Elba Flynn, Suzanne Garner, Evelyn Hall, Dolly Horne, Peggy Ilyus, Mary Ann Jennings, Joan Jones, Peggy Layman, Gerry Luck, Billie Miller, Gene Phillips, Jane Railey, Florence Blake, Marion Ruffin, Rheta Russell, and yours truly.

Despite rules, regulations, chaperones and any additional gripes and complaints—Hampden-Sydney boys still know where to find the charming ladies in this world, a credit to their college.

And so my friends this will conclude my two years of reporting on the latest social events that center around our campus. May I wish for all of you many years of good and happy times

And remember me—pacing the halls for "social news"—

We, the optimistic, self-centered, superior Americans think of the Russian people as a comic, slow, inferior people. The time is rapidly approaching for this point of view to change before the situation becomes reversed revealing the illusive thinking of our day. Most people would be astonished —even appalled—if they knew the advancements being made by the Soviet Union.

For instance, in Russia today there exists a central agency whose function is to collect scientific reports from technical journals all over the world. Each report is translated by an expert in the appropriate field. Thus, Russian scientists who keep up with these reports need never to perform an experiment which someone else has done. Here in America no such system as this exists. Though the reports are collected by the Library of Congress no attempt is made to translation and distribution. A prominent American physicist laments: "We know the Russians are doing much good work, but we're not taking advantage of this resource. If we ever fight them, we'll be sorry we didn't bother to find out what they've been up to."

Some people are under the impression that the Russians can't approach the American level of achievement in science because dictatorship can tolerate no real independence of thought and expression. However, the number of scientists and engineers in Russia is rapidly passing the scientific manpower of our country. Why? Partially because secondary education in the Russian schools dotes mainly on mathematics, physics and chemistry. The position of a scientist is so evaluated that this group comprises an upper class in a supposedly classless society. Scientists are highly paid and highly pampered by the government to induce their best work.

From some reliable sources on both sides of the Iron Curtain, the staff of the "Newsweek" has ascertained that while some fields of endeavor have prospered under Russian dictatorship, others have staggered aimlessly.

Russian chemistry is good in some ways. Industrial and pharmaceutical chemistry is still on the level of American chemistry of 1915. Little has been done on fine

Baptist Student Union

On Wednesday, March 3, at 8 p. m., several of our girls will have charge of the W. M. U. program on home missions at the First Baptist Church.

A playlet, "The Challenge of the Cross," will be given by our group at Hampden-Sydney, March 10, with music furnished by the B. S. U. Choir.

Wesley Foundation

The Randolph-Macon and Mary Washington Conference was held the week-end of February 20-21, at Ashland. There were seven of our group present.

This week-end, March 6-7, eight of our Wesleyan girls will attend a student conference at Randolph-Macon's Woman's College, Lynchburg.

With the beginning of Lenten Season, several of our group plan to practice self-denial and "do without" such things as cokes, in-between snacks and etc., to save money which will be used for buying sports equipment to be sent to Southern Rhodesia, Africa.

Letters and devotional booklets have been sent to Wesleyan girls concerning Lenten Season and Easter.

A banquet is being planned for April 2.

Patsy Abernathy is our new president since Faye Greenland, our past president left on a Fellowship to Mexico.

Mr. Howard, rector of St. Luke's Church, Blackstone, Virginia, will speak to the Canterbuy Club after the usual 6 p. m. supper meeting on Sunday.

Westminster Fellowship

Twelve students from Longwood and Hampden-Sydney will attend the Synod Conference at Roslyn, March 5-7.

LC Players, Jongleurs Progress In Rehearsals For 'Romeo And Juliet'

"There have been dozens of versions of 'Romeo and Juliet'," said Dr. C. L. S. Earley, director of the Longwood Players, during an interview yesterday afternoon, "and naturally we are forced to cut and edit our show in order to bring the playing time in under two and one-half hours."

William Shakespeare's five act tragedy "Romeo and Juliet" will be presented jointly by the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs on Founder's Day week-end, March 27 and 28.

Dr. Earley, relaxed amid the half-finished sets, and rehearsing cast members, stopped his round of directors' duties to comment on the forthcoming production.

"We are following as closely as possible the script used in the 1952 production at the Old Vic which featured Alan Badel and Caire Bloom," he continued.

"We examined closely the manuscript edited by Professor William Stunk, Jr., of Cornell University for the Norma Shearer-Leslie Howard movie version in 1936. However the Old Vic version carries more of the true feeling of the play. It has been changed many items to suit different occasions and has been done by a famous man and wife team, a brother and sister duo; and at one time two sisters played the title roles."

Though psychologists insist that the movie public's fervor of "happy endings" indicates the insecurity and anxiety of modern time, as much as three centuries ago audiences were demanding—and getting a "happy ending for "Romeo and Juliet." In fact, many of the Board's plays have been at various times, transformed and tampered with until they bore slight resemblance to the originals.

Many mid-seventeenth century audiences could not bear to see the drugged Juliet awaken in her bier seconds after Romeo, having believed her dead, had taken poison, and then watch her stab herself with her husband's sword. Then James Howard ,a forerunner of today's "writer's" who covered Shakespearean plays into musical comedy books, obligingly made "Romeo and Juliet" into a tragi-comdy, with the lovers "living happily ever after" at the play's end. For those who abhorred this version, the orginal tragedy was performed on alternate nights.

Still later, Restoration period audiences were regaled by an adaptation of "Romeo and Juliet" by Thomas Otway which was called "The History and Fall of Caius Marius." It was laid in ancient Rome, and had the family feud of the play turn on the wranglings of plebians and patricians.

At the climax of this version of the play, the lovers do expire, but not until they have first been reunited and permitted a kiss and tragic farewell scene.

Other freshmen having singing dancing, or speaking parts on the show are Jean Gibson, Barbara Tyler, and Nancy Lenz.

Caroline Stoneman and Florence Soghoian, both of Richmond, are co-directors of the production.

The script was written by Nancy Lenz, Caroline Stoneman, Flo Soghoain, eJn Kuyk, and Jeanne Saunders. Committee heads are Gale Branch and Nancy Lenz, backdrops; Adele Donaldson and Adelaide Kirby, make-up; Mary Mayo, Ann Lee Gay, and Frances Raine, costumes; Shirley Hardy, and Peanuts Winder, props; Martha Joyner and Sandra Dyer, programs; Patty Parker and Flo Soghoain, dance, and Pat Ashby and Margaret Beavers ,tickets. Jan Kuyk will serve as stage manager.

LC Players Release Schedule of Records For College's Benefit

Longwood Players have released a schedule of recordings to be played during the rest of the semester. The performance "Murder in the Cathedral" will be continued next week on March 10. On March 17 and 24 the "Importance of Being Earnest" will be played. "Hedda Gabbler" will be given March 31 and April 7. The recorded presentation of the "White Cliffs of Dover" will be given on April 14; "Don Juan in Hell" will be presented on April 21 and 28 and "Macbeth" on May 5 and May 12. The concluding program will be "John Borwn's Body" which will be given May 19.

The Freshmen girls basketball team added another win to its list last week when it met the Randolph-Henry High School team on the Longwood court. The Randolph-Henry team was previously undefeated for the season and played in the district tournament this week.

The Freshman team will play the Suffolk High School team, Saturday, March 6, in the home gym. The Suffolk team is coached by a 1953 graduate and physical education major of Longwood, Nell Bradshaw Green.

Several members of the Longwood alumnae from Norfolk gave a tea for the Longwood varsity team last week end after the game with Norfolk Division. The team enjoyed the food and could be easily spotted by the flowers given them.

Class games follow basketball season. Don't forget your eight practices.

Becky Hines and Joan Ward attended a convention of the Virginia Athletic Federation of College Women at Mary Baldwin College on Friday, February 26. Longwood representatives were in charge of the nominating committee for th meeting.

The fields of mining and metallurgy rank closely with that of the U. S. largely because much of their achievement has been copied from us. In the field of astronomy Russia ranks among the best. They especially lead the world in the Arctic region. It has been reported that they possess 60 observation stations along the northern coastline which compare to our one station at Point Barrow Alaska.

Comunistic theories have bogged down advancement in the biological world. Because the belief that the state can do whatever it wishes to plant, animal, or man controlled environment is everything. Politics dictate what shall be investigated as well as just what the results shall be. Thus, the biological sciences have contributed little to the scientific strength and advancement of Russia. It has been estimated that the Russians could catch up with of our country to take advantage us within 5 or 10 years. There is little room for pathology and psychology in Russia since here is little room for maladjusted people.

LC Pioneers Finsh Season

Longwood men's basketball team ended the season on the home court last Thursday night in a meet with Madison College. The Pioneers lost their final game to the Madison men with a score of 61-47.

The winners obtained the lead in the first quarter and held it throughout the game.

The score at half-time was 30-18. High scorer for Madison was Grantz with a total of 20 points. Leading the Longwood men was Bert Maskin with 12 points. The Pioneers made good 86 per cent of their free shots.

The scheduled game with Ferrum Junior College on Saturday night was cancelled.

Girls Defeat Norfolk 51-41

The Longwood girls basketball team traveled to Norfolk, Friday, February 26 ,to take the Norfolk Division of William and Mary 51-41, in its sixth game and fifth win of the season.

The game got off to a slow start with neither team able to make many of the attempetd shots. The score remained close throughout the game but the Longwood team was able to pull ahead in the final quarter to win 51-41.

Traveling to the game was Clara Borum, Virginia Burgess, Anne Snyder, Nancy Tolly, Else Wente, Robert Wiatt, Elleanor Koch, Mary Anne Ward, Helen Waitman, Hilda Hartis, Jane Lohr and Louise Wilder.

The final game of the season will be away with William and Mary, Friday, March 5.

Dance Professor To Make Report

Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, associate professor of physical education at Longwood, has been asked to critically evaluate the modern dance materials and outlines as proposed for the New High School Physical Education Bulletin which is in the preparation of publication by the State Department of Education. Previously, Mrs. Landrum drew up the original outline for the Rhythms section of the new Elementary Physical Education Bulletin, which was published last fall.

She will evaluate the materials for teaching modern dance in the high schools of Virginia.

KD Receives First Rating

Scholastic averages of the eight social sororities on campus have been tabulated for release by Miss Virgilia Bugg, college registrar.

Kappa Delta leads again this semester with the grade average of 2.05. The group now holds the silver scholarship bowl for which has been awarded to KD for three consecutive years.

Rating second place scholastically, Sigma Sigma Sigma obtained a grade of 1.994. Ranking close for third place, Alpha Sigma Alpha acquired an average of 1.-8505, with Zeta Tau Alpha following with an average of 1.8505.

Alpha Sigma Tau obtained a rating 1.84; Delta Sigma Epsilon, 1.74; Theta Sigma Upsilon, 1.688; and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.685.

Mysterious Male Reveals Views on Longwood Life, Lassie

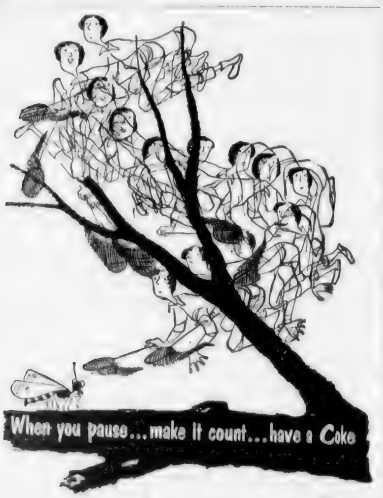
By JACKIE MARSHALL

Shhh! Don't tell anybody but I got the facts and nothing but the facts on just how Longwood College appears to an outsider. This is from a most reliable source. I'm not playing any hunches, it's all straight from the shoulder, off the cuff, on the sleeve and under the hat. Keep this quiet and don't be half safe—keep it mum!

Now that we understand each other we'll get down to brass tacks. I had a good long talk with this fellow who made a week-end tour of Longwood. He lived, incognito, right among us Longwood lassies. Well, this guy really told me about it. He said that Sunday mornings he's never seen such a peaceful place. In fact, he was so impressed with this fact that he got up at 8 o'clock and spent three hours meditating on the silence.

He also clued me in that there's never a boring moment on this spacious campus. He said we have four dorms, a science building, an auditorium, a laundry, a library and they're spread out so far apart that in his estimation a person has no time to get bored in the process of communicating between buildings.

Also, from the male's point of view, he'd never seen so many beautiful and friendly females in one place. This was one of his most definite conclusions.



Only one thing bothered this agent of the F. C. I. S. LL. (Public curiosity of the inside story of Longwood life.) He thinks everybody looks just terrible at seven o'clock a. m. and he hates to see such beauty marred.

Off the record, he also gave his opinion of the Farmville stores. "Farmville," said my gallant friend, "has the best water pistols I've ever seen."

All in all, my brother, George enjoyed his visit to Longwood very much and ten years from now when he's 19, he'll have a heck of a lot to tell the boys.

Tune to 870 on your dial for the Longwood Hour, Wednesday at 3:45.

Dr. Lancaster States Standing of College On Budget Program

President Lists Capital Outlay

The General Assembly budget bill included funds for the operation and maitenance of the College for the next biennium almost equal to the amount requested by Longwood, President Dabney S. Lancaster has announced.

Although Dr. Lancaster said that he has not received the budget bill as passed by the legislature, he believed that the operating funds for Longwood have not been changed in the bill.

In the budget bill, Dr. Lancaster asked for approximately $10,000 more for operating expenses than the figure now appearing in the originally written budget bill. An amount of $813,900 is listed for the first year of the biennium for operating expenses. A figure of 831,060 is listed for the second year.

A total amount of 1,644,960 was in the General Assembly budget bill for the biennium. The College originally requested $1,664,749 for operating expenses for that period.

In the budget bill funds for capital outlay, which include items such as improvements and additions totaled $103,000. Twenty-five thousand dollars of this amount is for the completion of the sprinkler system in Student Building. Other items include $11,000 for a storage vault for coal and a concrete roof for the power plant; $15,000 for new plumbing fixtures in Ruffner Hall; and $20,000 for general educational equipment.

Also included in this capital outlay total are funds which the legislature placed in the budget bill in addition to those recommended by ex-Governor Battle: $10,000 for general educational equipment; and $2,000 for the puchasing of plumbing fixtures; $10,000 for kitchen equipment; and $10,000 for the purchasing of property to be used for expansion of the College.

Requests by the College for these purposes were turned down: an air conditioning unit in Jarman Hall; additional stacks in the library; a new Home Management cottage and equipment; and the refurnishing of some of the dormitory rooms.

The state legislature meets only once every two years and at that time appropriates money for the next biennium.

Joint College Choirs To Present Concert

Music will fill the air when the Longwood College Choir joins the choir of Hampden-Sydney College in the preesntaion of two Spring concerts. The first concert will be given in Johns Auditorium at Hampden-Sydney on April 8. The next evening on April 9 the combined choirs will present a concert in Jarman Auditorium.

The combined choirs under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar professor of music, will sing three numbers jointly after which each choir will individually present four or five selections.

During the second half of the program, the two choirs will present an operetta, Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial By Jury." This is the humorous story a young lady who is sueing a young gentleman for breech of promise and what happens when both reach their goal.

9 Delegates Leave Today For Meetings

Journeying to attend Student Government conventions this week will be nine Longwood girls; five of whom will go all the way to the "Land of Sunshine" in Tallahassee, Florida, and four who will travel north to Mary Baldwin College at Staunton.

Five delegates from Longwood College will attend the 36th annual convention of Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government, March 19-20. The convention will be held at Florida State University at Tallahassee.

Mary Denny Wilson, outgoing president of Government; Dot Vaden, incoming president; Jane Bailey, new vice-president; Barbara Rickman, town girl representative; and Mason Moore, senior representative will drive to Florida this afternoon in Mason Moore's car. They plan to return next Monday afternoon.

Plans for the week end include discussion groups, speakers, a banquet, a picnic, and an informal dance. The girls are also hoping for a preview of the famous Student Circus which is presented by the students of Florida State College.

Going to Mary Baldwin will be Jane Blake, Betty Islin, Carolyn Gray, and Elleanor Koch, along with representatives from other men's and women's colleges throughout this area.

Jane Blake, Longwood sophomore, will take part in a discussion group to be held today.

Students Elect DeAlba, Bailey, Ward, Kent As Vice Presidents

READY FOR WORK, newly appointed staff members of the Rotunda gather around table to discuss plans for the coming year.

Players Plan Record Night

Record night is here! Scheduled to be played tonight and next Wednesday, March 24, is "The Importance of Being Earnest" by Oscar Wilde.

Considered to be Oscar Wilde's best comedy the play is a gay, brilliantly written farce. This version is produced by John Gielgud and stars Dame Ruth Evans, Pamela Brown, John Gielgud, Lelia Johnson, Jean Cadell, Aubrey Mather, and Roland Culver.

The records will be played at 7 p. m. in classroom 1 of Jarman Hall. Everyone is invited to attend.

Gillchrest Replaces Welbon On Staff; Douglas, Warner Assume Co-Position

Joyce Gillchrest, a junior from Arlington, will replace Betsy Welbon as business manager of the Rotunda, Shirley Ward, editor of the Rotunda, announced recently.

Betsy, who was previously appointed to this position, will leave this summer to take up residence in Japan.

Assisting Shirley will be Dot Douglas and Phoebe Warner as co-managing editors. Martha Donaldson will serve as associate editor. Serving as news editor will be Gail Leonard, who will be assisted by Pat Kelly.

The position of feature editor will be filled by Jackie Marshall. Jan Kuyk will serve as desk editor, and Shirey Kemp, as copy editor. Social notes will be written by Margaret Dryden.

Four of the present members of the staff will continue in their present capacity: Lou Wilder, as sports editor; Ann Jones and Loretta Brooking as co-art editors; and Muriel Boswell as circulation manager.

Church news will be written by Pat Johnson; Pat Jones will take over the regular column.

Carolyn Stanley will assume the duties of advertising manager.

Cast, Crew Find Play Hard Work Spiced With Pleasure

By MARTHA DONALDSON

It is a show in itself to watch the formation of a play. It holds its own kind of magic just as does the opening night. It is confusion at its very best.

Working together on a play you will find all types and conditions of men, actors, actresses, costumers, prompters, directors, propmen, painters, carpenters and many Jacks-of-all trades, but all with one thought in mind . . . "The play's the thing." In this case the play is Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" which promises to be the ever given by the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs.

There is a great group of people working on this play. One is impressed with their spirit and enthusiasm for it is not an easy job to work up a play and it is doubly hard when it happens to be one of Shakespeare's plays.

While the hardworking stage crew was creating miracles on stage I managed to catch and talk to six of the actors. They all love the play and each thinks his part is the best.

Nancy Nelson, Longwood junior, who is playing the part of Juliet is playing one of the five most difficult roles in the theater which is quite an accomplisment for a college student. Nancy loves her part. She said it offers a challenge to her and it is a part she never dreamed she would have the opportunity to play. She said, "One of the things that makes the part difficult is that older women have a hard time trying to get the part over because of Juliet's young age but it takes an older woman to be able to interpret the part.

Romeo who to us is "Woody" Rice, junior at Hampden-Sydney, said this part is the biggest and hardest he has ever had and it is a big challenge to him also because he thinks Shakespearean drama is the hardest type of play to do. He said, "I like it betetr than any part I've ever had before because it is more of a challenge. The bigger the challenge the better the part." It is a hard part because of the youth," he said, "and it is very hard to catch the deep tragedy."

Jim Nichols, Hampden-Sydney sophomore, who is playing Mercurio said he thinks 'the play is tremendous and it gives him a chance to do broad acting for Mercurio does a lot of things well He pokes fun at things and I like to do that," Jim said. "He is a hot-head but there is only one man with whom he wishes to fight and that is Tybalt. I have always wanted to do a part like this."

James Parker, Lord Capulet, Juliet's father, very definitely loves his part. "It is different from any part I have ever played," the Longwood sophomore told me is difficult but he still loves it. He said jokingly that his is the most important role in the play for without him there would be no play—in fact there would be no Juliet!

Ben on Tom Masters hammering on the apron I talked with him. He is playing the part of Peter I, servant. "I said at the beginning that I was going to do and if I meet the needs of the part adequately I will be taking great strides in my dramatic techniques." He continued, "It is not so much the reading or saying of the lines but it is the character I am portraying and the development and continuance of this character that is the hard part. Tom is a junior at Longwood.

"This my favorite role and I'll probably never will have another like it," was Nancy Tinsley Masters enthusiastic comment about her part as Juliet's nurse. I love the role, she said. It is an earthy role. The nurse is an old hag. She is all the old hags there have ever been all in one. She is vulgar, cunning and kind and her love for RUNNING THROUGH A SCENE FROM "ROMEO AND JULIET", James Parker, as Lord Capulet, seems to have brought startling news to Ann Brooking, who plays Lady Capulet, and Nancy Masters, the nurse.

Minor Elections Conclude Voting

Remaining officers of the four major organizations were chosen by the student body in elections last Thursday.

Jane Bailey, Joan DeAlba, Beth Kent, and Mary Ann Ward will serve as vice presidents respectively of Student Government Association, Young Women's Christian Association, House Council, and Athletic Association.

Jane, a junior from Lexington, represented her class in student government this past year. She is active in the French Club, and holds membership in Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority, and Cotillion Club.

Now serving as secretary of the Y. W. C. A., Joan DeAlba, from Hilton Village, also is a member of Orchesis and Pi Kappa Sigma.

Beth Kent, a junior, is from Richmond. She serves on the staff of the Virginian, and holds membership in Sigma Sigma Sigma.

A physical education major from Galax, Mary Ann Ward has participated in varsity basketball and hockey games. She had previous experience with the association while serving as treasurer.

Carolyn Gray and Jane Blake were elected respectively to the positions of secretary and treasurer of Student Council. A physical education major from Chester, Carolyn is a member of Orchesis, and Student Government. Jane, a sophomore from Virginia Beach, is a member of Student Government.

Secretary of the "Y" will be Patsy Abernathy, while Mary Ann Wright will serve as treasurer. Chosen to act as Freshman Councilor for next year is Loretta Kuhn.

A history major from Virginia Beach, Patsy is a member of the Y. W. C. A. Council, the Longwood Players, and Alpha Sigma Alpha. Mary Ann, from Richmond, is a music major. She holds membership in the College Choir, Chorus, in physical education Loretta is freshman from Richmond, is chairman of the freshman commission.

A sophomore from Smithfield, Nell Crocker was elected secretary of House Counne l; Helen Warriner from Amelia also a sophomore, was chosen treasurer. Nell is now serving as treasurer of House Council.

An Introduction

Introductions are in order!

We, the Rotunda staff of 1954-55, would like to take time out from writing stories and proof reading, to introduce ourselves and to present our new reading public—the students, faculty, administration, alumnae, and interested subscribers.

You have seen us previously through the medium of our news and feature writing on the "Rotunda" under the old staff but obviously you could not have really known us or our ideas.

Now, we are ready to meet you under different circumstances. We want to introduce you to our policies and plans for the year.

Setting up policies for any newspaper is a contemplative process. Variations in method are inevitable, but the fundamental ideas are the same.

First of all, the "Rotunda" staff will strive to print all things which will be of general interest to our subscribers. We also will strive to uphold the ideals and standards of the college through approved journalistic standards.

We will report the news accurately, in an interesting manner and without bias. We will present feature stories in an informative as well as humorous vein.

Our editorail writing will convey to the reader the general opinion of the entire [illegible] on a given subject.

The staff will work to promote school spirit and show interesting side-glances of college life.

Upholding the policies of past editions of the newspaper, the staff will strive for improvement in make-up, writing, and general outlay. This progress will coincide to the best of our ability, with modern trends and up-to-date methods.

We, as the new staff, welcome your opinion of the "Rotunda." Even more, we want to be told if you have adverse criticism. In this manner, we are assured of delivering to our readers a paper that will be enjoyed.

The paper is for your benefit; will will strive to please our readers in every reasonable way.

A Salute

Hats [illegible] to the Student Standards Committee for materializing an idea conceived in a health education class.

Last fall members of the class voiced a desire for non-carbonated drinks in the dorms. This request was taken to Student Standards and as a result machines for orange and grape drinks as well as Dr. Peppers have been installed in sophomore and [illegible] dormitories.

In addition to this improvement the Committee has also pushed forward plans for a light behind the library which will be installed soon; pointed out much needed repairs around the campus; continued its work on the scheduling of extra-curricular activities and functioning of the college chest fund and offered suggestions to the [illegible] for various improvements in the dining hall, laundry, recreation hall, and dormitories.

Because the work of this committee involves so many facets of campus life all suggestions can not be utilized. Plans, however, are underway for placing into effect [illegible] suggestions before the [illegible].

We would like to commend Student Standards for its diligent effort in dealing with student problems. The administration [illegible] be thanked for its co-operation in the [illegible] of these improvements possible.

Student Standards has done a good job but its members are not able to learn of all the problems of the school without suggestions and recommendation from you!

A Request

This year, 1954, many of our alumnae are coming here to celebrate the seventieth birthday of the college and to renew friendships and memories of their school years.

Although this may not seem important to Longwood girls now, someday it will; just as it is for those who have enthusiastically planned the visit to Longwood this year.

All programs and activities that go on here are for the benefit of us, Longwood students, except this one week-end of March 27 which has been set aside wholly for our alumnae. This Founder's Day celebration is a traditional homecoming for our visitors and they like to see their Alma Mater as it normally is in its daily life. We all should feel an obligation to stay here on this week-end, but it is especially important for the seniors, for they are to serve as hostesses for the occasion. Also, as is traditional, all the seniors will walk in the academic procession in caps and gowns.

We all have pride in our college—especially the seniors since they have been a part of it for almost four years and can easily realize our visitors' interest and love for their Alma Mater. It is because of this that we request them to remain here on Founder's Day and help our alumnae make this celebration the best ever.

Words To Live By

There's a syndicated column and radio event . . . featuring as its title, "Words to Live By." Recently we read some words of John D. Rockefeller, III which seem to us words to live by. Mr. Rockefeller asks us to:

1. Refrain from a tendency to impose our ideas or way of life on other people.

2. Evince as much willingness to learn from them as help them.

3. Acquire a knowledge of their needs, aspirations and accomplishments.

4. Recognize that the success or failure of one person increasingly affects all and is the responsibility of all.

The four fundamentals, Mr. Rockefeller calls them—we don't know of a better foursome. From the Daily Tar Heel.

Special Leprechaun Hearlds 'Wearin of the Green' Today

By MARGARET MILLER

Spe[illegible]y for all good [illegible] to be worn green [illegible] today is announced by [illegible] the [illegible] Leprechaun, Pauer Smith, [illegible] ye [illegible] a [illegible] who [illegible] entered at Longwood College.

I [illegible] the Longwood girls have a lot of spirit but I am worried—a little. My problems? Will [illegible] St. Patrick's Day [illegible]

The clock just struck nine and I hear the dragging of feet in the halls. I'll just hide behind this statue of Joan of Arc and take a peek when they pass.

It's a good thing I've kissed the Blarney Stone. Now having been endowed with the good luck (Irish luck, that is), and powers of persuasion which that kiss brought to me, I should find favorable fortune in this assignment.

Ah! Now for a look! Oh! Sure and begorry I get my promotion in the Royal Orders of Leprechauns! Another four leaf clover on my badge! What did I see? The Sophomores and Seniors are even wearing the green today!

The Roundtable

By PAT JONES

The Republican party is at last getting around to challenging the Senator from Wisconsin, Joseph McCarthy, but it has taken some powerful shocks to make its members aware of his potent antics.

His latest move with the army evidently threw the switch that released the powerful volts. In accusing General Zwicker of being unfit to wear his uniform and through succeeding action, Senator McCarthy may have gone too far. Army Secretary Stevens, claims McCarthy's attitude toward Zwicker has weakened army morale.

The insults and accusations hurled by the Wisconsin Senator which led to compromise conferences with Stevens, have apparently placed him on a precarious ledge so far as his party goes. There seems to be a fear of a break between the Senator and the White House over McCarthy's methods of investigation. Now, the Republican party is looking for protective measures to prevent a breech. Three such measures under consideration are: (1) ending his activities as an official spokesman for the Republican party and subordinating the Red issue to other policies of the administration; (2) making favorable changes in investigative procedures (3) relying on public and congressional opinion to force McCarthy to change his methods.

The Republican devoteers are hopeful that these measures will succeed, for if they do not and it comes to a choice between McCarthy and the Eisenhower authorities, the majority of the Republicans in Washington will join the President. This, of course, would lead to a severe split in the ranks. McCarthy has begun to do the very thing he is proposedly fighting against; he is taking away the sense of freedom which is the essence of American spirit.

The loss of this freedom is to be abhorred no less than the threat of Communism.

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

By noon Saturday, Longwood had emptied itself almost completely of coeds. Only a mere handful of girls were on hand Saturday to entertain the H.-S. men. From what we've heard, all those who left campus for their homes and other colleges (where men could be found) had wonderful times.

Nine girls attended Pan-Hellenic dances at Randolph-Macon. They were Ann Poole, Louise Nelson, Diane Acree, Jerry Lee Haley, Dale Brothers, Mary Elva Robinson, Nellie Lucy, Betty Benton and Sue Upson.

At Duke University were Loretta Kesterson and Adele Donaldson.

Gale Branch, Julie Moncure, Nancy Lenz, Shirley Osbourne, Sarah Glenn, and Frances Bays attended the Theta Chi and SAE parties at the University of Richmond.

U. Va. also opened its doors (and arms) to a few Longwood lassies this week end. Gerry Luck, Beverly Harlowe, Nancy Deaton, Barbara Whitehead, and Judy Harris atended parties there.

Dottie Rector was all aglow this week end 'cause Deane Hillenbrand from Wake Forest in North Carolina came up to see her.

Don't want to forget to mention that Shirley Ward and Joan DeAlba were among the many attending the dances at MCV last week end.

W. & L.

Billie Miller and Martha Donaldson traveled to Lexington where they attended the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity party at Washington and Lee University.

Not only have girls been getting pinned and engaged on our campus but wedding bells have been ringing, too. Brenda Assaid announced last week that she has been married since New Year's Eve to Thomas Duncan. (Note: We think that's a wonderful way to bring in the New Year!- Also Virginia Pohe announced her marriage. Virginia is now Mrs. Thomas Doss. Best wishes ot both of you!

'Music Growing By Leaps and Bounds' Comments Director Howard Mitchell During Intermission Last Mon. Night

By DOT ARMSTRONG

"Music is growing in America by leaps and bounds!" enthusiastically commented Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, during intermission of his concert here last Monday night.

Vigorously mopping his brow after conducting the violent "Don Juan," Dr. Mitchell relaxed for a brief chat, and related some of his views on music in general and American music in particular.

"The symphony orchestra is the greatest musical center in the world today," he explained. "There has been an enormous growth in the last 25 years, and right now there are over 700 symphony orchestras in the United States alone." The conductor commented warmly that American composers are now holding their own in the world of music, and are doing so solely under their own influence.

Listing Aaron Copland as his favorite American composer, Dr. Mitchell added that he had recently recorded an album of Copland's works, including the famous 'Billy the Kid.' Rather evasive about his other favorites he revealed only that his favorite symphony is the one he happens to be conducting at the moment. Although Dr. Mitchell admitted that he did have favorites among other conductors, he refused to express them.

American born and American trained, Howard Mitchell is one of the few artists in musical history to rise from the ranks of a major symphony orchestra to assume its full conductorship.

When questions as to just why he happened to choose his career, the conductor responded with a broad grin that he grew up with music, being one of a family of six musical children, all of whose talents were encouraged by their parents.

It was in 1941 that Mitchell first appeared as conductor of the National Symphony at a series of Summer "Pop" concerts at Washington Riverside Stadium. In 1949 he was appointed full conductor of the Symphony. Only 37 at the time, Dr. Mitchell was one of the youngest conductors of a major symphony in the United States.

Through the presentataion of almost 30 concerts annually for children and young people, Howard Mitchell has expanded the orchestra's important musical education program.

Looking every inch a conductor, Dr. Mitchell is tall, dark, with a touch of grey at his temples, and broad-shouldered with a distinguished bearing and a very friendly manner. Most of his leisure time is spent playing golf. He has kept up his proficiency at the game ever since his boyhood days when, at the age of 15, he won the championship of his home town, Sioux City, Iowa.

Nowadays, the conductor has to work especially hard at his game to keep apace with his oldest son, Glenn, 17, who, this year, won the Vermont junior golf championship while the Mitchells were vacationing at their summer home in the northern state.

Team Closes Season With Win Over W&M

The Longwood girls basketball team ended their 1954 season with a 54-24 win over William and Mary, March 6.

The score remained close for part of the first quarter, however Longwood was leading 12-7 at its conclusion. The lead stayed in Longwood's hands for the rest of the game. Half-time score was 22-11 while the conclusion of the third quarter registered 36 to 21. The number of fouls made were few compared to previous games of the season. Longwood made 4 out of 8 foul shots attempted, while William and Mary made 2 out of 8.

Playing for Longwood were Claar Borum, Patsy Sanford, Virginia Burgess, Mary Ann Ward, Elleanor Koch, and Robert Wiatt.

From the Bleachers

by LOU WILDER

Longwood's basketball season ended with a record of five wins and one loss. The team rallied a 71-49 win over Roanoke, won 53-42 over Madison, topped Bridgewater 58-53, beat Norfolk Division 51-41, tallied up a 54-24 win over William and Mary, and lost 31-37 to Westhampton in the first game of the season.

The team made 40 per cent of attempted foul shots during the season. The three starting forwards averaged 18 points each game.

Five out of the 23 members of the squad will graduate in June. They are forwards Clara Borum, Patsy Sanford, and Else Wente; guards, Eleanor Koch and Roberta Wiatt.

The color cup is at stake! Class volleyball and basketball games began this week. Red and Whites were winning 10-0 before the games started. How will the record stand after class games?

A new plan for class games is being utilized this year. Each class will have two basketball and two volleyball teams instead of the usual one. All basketball games will be played in the afternoons, while volleyball tournaments will be scheduled at 7 p. m.

Several important meetings concerning physical education for women will be held this month. The Tidewater Field Hockey Association will meet at Westhampton College March 23 at 7:15 p. m. The State Field Hockey Association will meet on March 26 at 4 p. m. at the John Marshall Hotel. The varsity and class hockey managers from Longwood will attend at least one of these meetings.

A state physical education meeting will be held in Richmond on March 27. Elliott Snead, from the University of Virginia, who will preside over the meeting, will speak on "Basic Problems Facing Education and Our Profession". The student section will hear a speech by Simon A. McNeely, specialist for health instruction, physical education and athletics, and U. S. Office of Education. Else Wente, Eleanor Koch and Ilia Des DesPortes plan to attend this meeting.

The girls' freshman basketball team won the last game of its season 57-26 over Suffolk High School in the Longwood gymnasium on March 6. Members of the Freshman team this year were Barbara Scott, Nancy Tolley, Barbara Benedict, Barbara Whitehead, Florence King, Fay Evans, Barbara Felthaus, Delores Winder, Patsy Free, Loretta Kuhn and Sara Lou Wendenburg.

See all of you at the class games!

Four Receive Rating On Basketball Tests

Four physical education majors received rating in basketball officiation on Saturday, March 13, in the local gymnasium.

Hilda Hartis received a local rating; Ann Snydre, an associate classification; and Else Wente and Helen Waltman, intramural rankings.

A local rating enables a girl to call games outside the school for a fee. A girl with an associate rating can call games outside the school within the immediate vicinity for a fee. Inter-mural ratings enable girls to call games within the school. Junior ratings and national are the highest ratings given in basketball officiation.

Practical and written tests were given the girls by representatives from the Southwest Virginia basketball Board of Women Officials.

Goats Grimace As Glorious Goat Day Draws Near; Cotilion Club Members Present Ordinances Governing Goats

BAAAA— to all you good goats out there! Are you ready? Well, the big day almost here. Saturday, that is, when all goats will formally "run the mill" of initiation for membership into the Cotilion Club.

The following rule have been issued:

1. Goat must attend all meals.
2. Goats must wear a sign bearing their name preceded by Goat, outside home town.
3. Goat must address all Cotilion Club members as "Mr." and know the full names of all members.
4. All books must be carried in a satchel or green towel. Goats will be expected to carry materials and cigarettes sum for the Cotillion members.
5. Goats must carry pencil and paper to make appointments with Cotillion members. No appointments can be made on initiation day preceding Goat Day.
6. Goats must be dressed to impersonate a comic strip character or a favorite junior or Cotillion Club members.
7. Goats will be expected to write and memorize a poem about the character whom they are impersonating.
8. Goats may not wear make-up or jewelry of any kind.
9. Goats must converge in front of the library after lunch.
10. Goat Court will be held in the Snell auditorium at 7 p. m. on March 22. Goats must wear green and yellow to the Goat Court. No activities may be carried on in the Rotunda.

Addition

... names of Shirley Garst and Anne Wayne Fuller were left out of the alumnae issue in the list edition of the Rotunda. Shirley and Ann were pledged Sigma Sigma Sigma and Pi Kappa Sigma, respectively.

Gov't. Group Hold Chapel

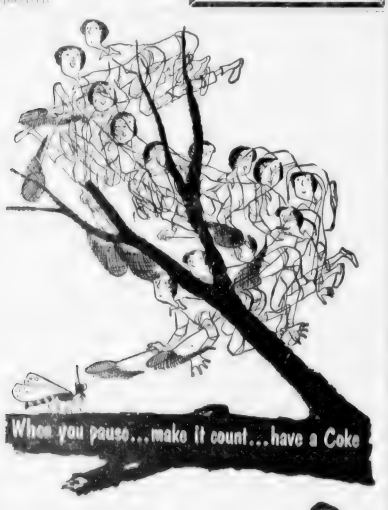
Plans are underway for the installation of student government and house council officers during the regular assembly program next Tuesday.

Mary Lemmy Wilson, the outgoing president of student council, will place in office her predecessor Dot Vaden. After her installation, Dot will, in turn, induct into office Jane Bailey, Carolyn Gray, and Jane Blake as vice-president, secretary and treasurer respectively.

All class representatives to student government will also receive full membership at this time.

As traditional, the heads of the remaining three major organizations will become ex-officio members of the council. The induction of Jackie White, president of house council; Jean Carol Parker, president of the YWCA; and Helen Waitman, president of the Athletic Association will then take place.

Following this installation the induction of house council officers by Jackie White will be held.



Beth Kent ,vice-president; Nell Corcker, secretary; and Helen Warriner, treasurer will be installed.

As part of this program, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the college, will address the new officers and student body.

Hodges Urges Participation

"List of the individual dances to be performed in this year's May Day celebration have been postponed throughout all the dorms," announced Jean Hodges, chairman of the 1954 May Day. "These sheets have been distributed so every student may have the opportunity to sign up for the particular type of dance in which she wishes to take part."

Under Jean Hodges' direction Shirley Roby and Pattie Parker with several other dance students last week demonstrated the various types of dancing which will appear on the May 1 program. The dance styles include the waltz, polka, minuet, Charleston, and modern interpretive dance.

Editor Announces Publication Date

Mary Anne King, editor of the 1954 Virginian, has announced that the annual has gone to press and is expected to return for issuance during the month of May.

For those students who made down-payments on annuals in the fall, but have not yet completed payments, annual representatives will be on various halls during the coming weeks to collect the balance due.

Tune to 870 on your dial for the Longwood Hour, Wednesday at 3:45.

Famous Lovers Will Meet, Wed, Die In Tragedy

Nelson, Rice Holds Title Roles In Bard's 'Romeo and Juliet'

"Romeo and Juliet", the most enduring and endearing love story the theatre has known, will open in Jarman Hall tomorrow night for a three-night engagement.

This Shakespearean tragedy, presented by the Longwood Players-Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs, will continue through Saturday night, March 27. Curtain time is 8 p. m.

Appearing in the roles of the famous lovers will be Nancy Nelson of Newport News and Elwood Rice of Lock Haven, Pennsylvania.

As Juliet, Nancy will be playing her fourth role with the Players. During the summer of 1951, she also appeared in summer stock at the Chamberlain Arena Theatre.

Rice, a student at Hampden-Sydney College, will also be seen in his fourth role with the dramatic group. His other roles were in "Angel Street," "Death Takes a Holiday" and "The Boor."

Mrs. Nancy Tanley Masters, another student from Newport News, will appear in the cast as Juliet's devoted nurse. Nancy's part, supplies the comedy element to the play. This is the fourth role for Nancy with the Longwood Players. In 1950 she danced in the Common Glory in Williamsburg, and appeared during that same season in "Dark of the Moon," a play presented by members of the "Glory" cast.

Dr. Earley Directs

Other important roles in the presentation, which has been directed by Dr. C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English, include Jim Nichols as Romeo's tart-tongued ,witty friend, Mercurtio; Russell Vass as Juliet's hot-tempered cousin Tybalt; and James Parker as Lord Capulet, Juliet's stern father.

Ann Field Brooking will be seen as Lady Capulet, Juliet's mother; and Vernon Austin will have the part of Benvolio. Tom Moore will portray Friar Lawrence.

Sam Chilton will play the role of Paris, the rich suitor for Juliet's hand and Beth Kent and George Osborne will be seen as Lord and Lady Montague, Romeo's parents.

Other key roles include Fred Stables as Escalus, Howard Hanson as Peter, Tom Bass as Abram, Ray Kelly as Gregory, Chas. Cake, as Sampson, Jim Nichols as an apothecary and Russel Vass as the Chief Watch.

Prologue Speaker

Patsy Abernathy will appear as the prologue speaker who announces the time and tragedy of "a pair of star-crossed lovers."

The story encompasses Romeo's first meeting with Juliet at a dance; a second meeting later that same night in the play's memorable balcony scene; their secret marriage the following noon; his deadly duel with the bride's cousin in three hours later; his exile for this and his departure the next morning; and his ill-timed tryst at Juliet's tomb where he takes his life, believing the drugged Juliet to be dead. All this action occurs between one Sunday and the following Saturday.

For the first time in the history of the Players and Jongleurs a souvenir program of the play has been published and will be placed on sale for 25 cents in the lobby of the auditorium before and after the play and during intermission. This 8 page booklet has been printed in dedication to the late Miss Leola Wheeler, who for many years served as drama director at Longwood. The program will feature three pages of cast photographs and will also include among its articles the cast list, a history of the past dramatic events presented here, and a "Who's Who" in the play.

Admission is 75 cents for student and $1 for adults. Tickets may by purchased from mem-

Alumnae To Return For Founders' Day

Reunion Classes Plan Individual Breakfasts

Four hundred alumnae are expected to return to Longwood this week-end for the seventieth Founders Day celebration.

The annual program will officially begin with the registration of the alumnae at 3:30 p. m., on Friday. This registering will continue until 8 p. m., and will begin again Saturday morning at 8:30 and run until 10:30.

A coffee will then be given in the student lounge by the Farmville alumnae chapter for the week-end guests. A highlight of the celebration will be the Annual Founder's Day program to be given at 11 a. m. in Jarman auditorium. Opening this program will be an academic procession of the seniors and faculty. The program will include a small memorial service for the late Miss Leola Wheeler, retired dramatic instructor at Longwood.

The alumnae will then hear three welcoming speeches. The first will be made by Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, professor of history and of the social science department, on behalf of the faculty. Mary Denny Wilson, former president of the student body, will then offer a greeting to the group from the student body. Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the College will give a "Welcome Home" address.

"Preserve the Past, Invest in the Future of Longwood College" will be the topic of the talk to be given by Miss Frances Horton, national president of the alumnae association, at the conclusion of the program.

Before their business meeting at 1:30 p. m. the alumnae will be served lunch in Ruffner Recreation Hall. All alumnae chapters in and out the state have been asked to send representatives to the convention and in turn these delegates will make reports of their activities at the business meeting. Also, Dr. Lancaster will address the alumnae during the meeting. Mrs. Myrtle Dunton Curtis from Richmond, chairman of The Alumnae House committee, will report to the alumnae on the progress of the committee in raising funds.

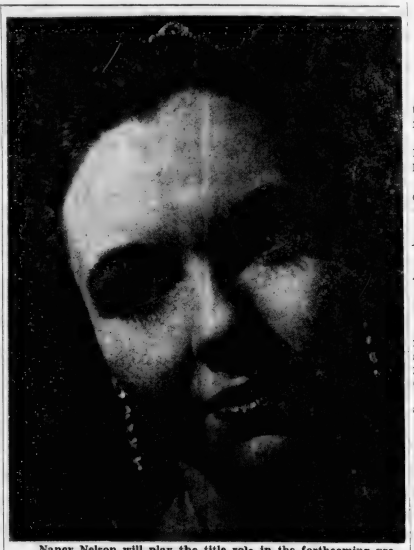
College Group To Complete Redecoration

A new look will soon take possession of the Y parlor, and junior and senior parlor.

Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of Modern languages, has announced the beginning of redecoration of the Y-parlor, junior and senior parlors. Miss Barksdale is chairman of the interior decoration committee for the college.

Decorating of the Y-parlor is expected to be completed by this week end. Decorations for this room include new bright colored draperies, and new lamps. The old furniture will be reupholstered if it is in good condition, otherwise it will be replaced by new furniture. The old rugs will be used, since they are in good condition. The walls will be painted a soft grey-blue.



All new furniture wil be placed in the junior parlor, and the old furniture will be moved to the entrance hall. The walls have been painted a soft shade of green and new woodsy green rugs are to be placed on the floor. New print- draperies will replace the old ones in the parlor and in the entrance hall.

Miss Barksdale said that the new furniture would include comfortable chairs and "love seats for two only, not three".

Miller and Rhoads of Richmond is in charge of the decorations for junior parlor and the Y lounge.

The third room to be redecorated this spring is senior parlor. The decoration plan calls for new lamps, figured draperies, and the reupholstering of certain worn pieces of furniture. Most of the furniture in this room is, however, in good condition since it is fairly new. The walls wil be painted a neutral tone.

Millner's in Lynchburg is in charge of the decorations for senior parlor All the decoration to be completed by May 1.

Nancy Nelson will play the title role in the forthcoming production "Romeo and Juliet."

Students Hold Elections of Officers, Representatives For Various Classes

Betty Davis, from Winchester, was recently elected president of the senior class for next year. Georgia Jackson and Jeanne Saunders have been chosen to serve as presidents of the junior and sophomore classes respectively.

Betty, a home economics major from Winchester, served as secretary of her class this year. Her other activities include home economics club, Cotillion Club, and Kappa Delta social sorority.

Georgia, biology major from Lexington, is a member of the "Y" cabinet, Cotillion Club, and Kappa Delta social sorority. Georgia also served as short story edtior of the Colonnade and will serve as managing editor next year.

Jeanne was re-elected by her classmates to serve as their president. Jeanne is a member of the freshman commission, Cotillion Club, and Kappa Delta social sorority.

Other officers and representatives were selected at the various class meetings. Joyce Quick, elementary major from Winchester, will continue in the office of vice-president of the class of '55. Betty Frances Scarborough, a business education major from Capron, was elected secretary, while Nancy Inge, a business major from Blackstone, was selected treasurer.

Elected to serve on Student Government were Shirley Ward, from Roanoke, and Ann Carter Wendenburg, from Aylett. Ann Carter served this year as president of the junior class.

Joan Conley, a math major from Frederica, Delaware, will serve as senior house president. The senior class will be represented on Student Standards by Joan DeAlba and June Manlove.

Vice-president of the junior class for the coming year will be Gail Leonard, an English major from Richmond.

The position of secretary will be filled by Becky Fizer, an elementary major from Pulaski, while Mary Davis, from Suffolk, will serve as treasurer.

Selected to serve as student government representatives are Helen Warriner, of Amelia, and Lou Wilder, of Williamsburg. Muriel Boswell, of Quantico, will serve as junior house president. Student Standard representatives from the junior class will be Loretta Brooking, of Richmond and Dale Brothers of Suffolk.

Nancy Lea Harris, from Roanoke, has been selected to serve as vice-president of the sophomore class. Serving the class of '57 as secretary will be Barbara Whitehead, of Norfolk. Ann White Thomas will find the position of treasurer.

Fay Evans and Sylvia Overton will represent their class on Student Government. Flo Soghoian, of Richmond, will fill the position of sophomore house president. The sophomore class will be represented on Student Standards by Gale Branch and Ellie Everett, of Norfolk and Arlington, respectively.

Editor for '55 Names Staff Of Magazine

Georgia Jackson, sophiomore from Lexington, will serve as managing editor of the Colonnade next year, according to Barbara Southern, editor-in-chief.

Appointments to other staff positions have also been made. Short story editor will be Eloise Macon, and Dorothy Anne Thomas, Margaret Felton, and Dot Armstrong will compose her staff. Pat McLemore will hold the position of essay editor, Assisting her will be Pat Jones, Judy Billet, and Nan Picnich.

Mary Cowles will assume the position of review editor again next year. Poetry editor will be Mollie Harvey, while Betty Jane Staples and Jeanne Saunders will serve on the poetry staff.

Holding the position of humor editor next year will be Jackie Marshall. Florence Blake will take over the duties of art editor. Barbara Mays, Marlene Lucas, Shirley Osbourne, and Nancy Lenz will assist her.

Betty Scarborough was elected recently to serve as business manager. Circulation manager will be Margaret Beavers, with Joan Harvey assisting her.

Taking over the duties of the head typist will be Phyllis Nurney. Assisting her will be Jane Railey and Bootsie Miller.

The Colonnade has tabulated results of a corrective criticism poll, taken in assembly Tuesday. The poll showed the students' desire for humorous articles and short stories, and for the fewer factual essays and literary criticisms. The students' favorite article in the March edition was Nancy Lenz's "Of Faith Alone."

Devine Announces 1955 Annual Staff

Donnie Devine, recently appointed editor of the 1955 Virginian, has announced her staff for next year.

Helen Warriner, sophomore from Amelia, will assume the position of assistant editor.

The business manager of the annual, Peggy Worthington, will be assisted by Fannie Scott, sophomore from Norton.

Nancy Nelson will act as photographic editor, Margaret Duke and Beth Kent will serve as co-art editors. Literary editor for the publication will be Ann Field Brooking.

The junior class will be represented on the staff by Margaret Franklin, Mary Jo Hutchinson, and Marion Ruffin. Caroline Stoneman, Elsie Meade Webb, Frances Raine, and Gayle Peoples will serve as sophmore representatives to the staff.

Two freshmen will be added to the Virginian staff next year. These two girls are chosen according to their qualifications, from those who express interest in working on the staff. Scholastic averages are considered in selecting staff members.

Floridian Five Describe Gov't. Convention

By SALLY CECIL

"This coconut? Why it's the one Mary Denny climbed the tree for," stated Mason Moore.

The coconut is a souvenir of the Florida trip from which Mary Denny Wilson, Mason Moore, Dot Vaden, Jane Bailey and Barbara Rickman returned Monday.

These girls represented Longwood at the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government in Tallahassee last week, although their dark glasses and scarves gave evidence of a winter tour.

Perhaps the size of the Floridian University accounts for the fact that the majority of the students were unaware of the convention in their midst, but this lack of recognition failed to daunt the spirits of our delighted delegation.

The Florida State University chaplain opened the convention with an introduction of the theme, "Why Student Government?" Panel discussions followed the introduction. One group dealt with a comparative analysis of various penalties employed and the degree of punishment used for different offenses. An evaluation of the effectiveness of the Honor System constituted the second group, and the third group discussed Constructive Projects, and the difficulty encountered in attempting to instill school spirit.

The Floridian five lunched at the South Seminole Club on Saturday (too bad it's only the college dining hall!), and then stepped out for a "big orange" drink. During this interlude they decided to find a beach somewhere along the Gulf of Mexico. They located the Gulf without difficulty but they never found the beach.

The next scheduled meeting involved individual problem discussions of elections, compulsory chapels, and social restrictions. Representatives described "Suppressed Desires Day" during which students pay a set fee for permission to violate certain rules, as ringing the bell, screaming in the library, and smoking in the dining hall.

Mary Washington College will act as hostess to the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government next year. Gail Wood, of Hollins College will assume the presidency of the association for the coming years, and Marian Miner of Mary Washington and Norma Proctor of Madison will act as vice-presidents. Shirley Ralton of Limestone College is secretary, and Patty Carr of Mississippi State College for Women is treasurer. Jane Kester of William and Mary was elected as membership chairman for the 1955 convention.

Although Jane was unable to locate a "cat hat;" and Mary Denny lived in mortal fear of the cows on the roads of Georgia; and Mason and Barbara broke the radio attempting to drown out Dot's singing, the trip was a success and its results beneficial as shown by Dot's statement:

"Through utilizing group discussions to air our problems we have gained a higher degree of understanding which will enable us to maintain the high standards of our student government association, next year."

Someday We'll Understand

When the strains of Longwood's "Alma Mater" fills the auditorium, Saturday, during the Founders Day program, many a twinkling eye will shed a tear or two. When the traditional academic procession files down the aisles, many persons who are witnessing the proceeding will search the past to bring back memories of by-gone years.

Thoughts of State Female Normal School, State Normal School for Women at Farmville, State Teachers College, and Longwood, will dominate the minds of many alumnae who will return this weekend to observe the seventieth Founder's Day.

The alumnae's attendance of meetings, programs, and social functions will be included in the busy schedule, but their attendance at these functions is not the primary purpose for their returning to Longwood. The alumnae, first of all, want to see the college as it normally functions today. They want to see new buildings, and the improvements, and the students who comprise the student body. Not only will they witness the present, but also take inventory of memorable landmarks of the past. Some of them will delve into the corners and cracks of the college to pull out pieces of familiar objects which meant so much to them at one time. The renewal of old friendships and the making of new ones will also be a part of the week-end.

As Longwood students, it is up to us to create an atmosphere of friendliness, warmth and hospitality to our visitors, who, after all, have claimed Longwood many more years than we.

It's our school; it's their alma mater. Someday when we hear the strains of "dear mother to thee" we'll understand what our alumnae will feel this week-end.

Our Next Step

On first viewing the picturesque Jeffersonian architecture of Longwood onlookers are pleased to observe its beauty and gracefulness.

The job of seeing that the premises of Logwood are at their best at all times has been given to a group of interested townspeople and members of the faculty, headed by Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, professor of Biology. This group is known as the Grounds Committee.

The member have fulfilled their mission in the past to the best of their ability; however, all they can do toward carrying out their project for the beautification of the campus is the planning for the care of grass and shubbery. It is up to us to do the rest.

Each spring members of the faculty and administration request students to walk on the paved walks rather than the many pathways they have made through the grass.

It is true that many times we are in a hurry to get from one destination to another and we feel that we can get there more quickly by cutting through one of these paths. If we made a practice of going by way of our designated walks we would probably find them to be just as easy.

Shortcuts are noticeable, especially in the spring when most of the campus grounds begin taking on a new growth of grass. These places are most marked between junior and senior buildings and from the main building over to Jarman auditorium. Also, much damage is done to the lawn in front of the Rotunda each year.

When visitors come to Longwood we want to be proud of our campus. All of us can help to keep it at its best if we will heed the requests of our administration and think twice before we take our next step . . . keep off the grass.

We Have Elected---

Major, minor and class elections have been completed. Whether you or your candidate was an elected Eisenhower or a defeated Stevenson, there is work to be done.

To the winners go the spoils as well as the work and responsibilities. As a winner it will be your duty to carry out the functions of your office with the welfare of the whole group in mind, and with prejudice neither for or against anyone. You will remember that efficiency in any group comes with unification; therefore, you will want to cooperate with other officers and members.

As a winner you will be in the public's eye and therefore open to criticism or praise. Fear of criticism should not dictate your actions, if you know that your actions are best for the group. Likewise, magnified praise should not throw your judgment out of focus. Egotism and dictatorship in office are too nearly synonymous to foster respected leadership or an enthusiastic following.

A good leader must also be able to follow others. You should never inflict your ideas on the group. You will be a good leaders only by making members of your group feel important in the sharing of decisions, work and glories that may come.

If you or your candidate were not victorious, this is not the time to bemoan the fact.

A defeated candidate should recognize the honor connected with a nomination to any office. Your nomination implied that you were capable of office. This recognition alone should give impetus to the acceptance of responsibility in supporting the newly elected officers.

If you were disappointed in the defeat of your candidate, the time for lamenting is over. It is your duty now to ally your sympathies with and to support the winning candidates. After all, this support is what you would have expected from others had your candidate won.

Our best wishes go to all for a successful year.

Shakespeare Gal Saves Day For Lady Nelson In Dismay

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Prologue
Once in the year of 1954
At fair Longwood we lay our scene
A young maiden, so alike many,
Struggles with yon problem—so keen
That all in the House of 3rd floor Jr.
Find their portals—ere so tense
For strive prevails, and women rage
And eyes themselves do fence—
Time moves at a swiftly pace
Yet, beautiful Miss fails to discover,
A cat that will aid her in distress—
And be her stageless lover.

Act I

Enter — Nancy Nelson (moving wierldly up steps from second floor—she carries worn out play book preferably "Romeo and Juliet"—she drags)
Oh. Oh. Sob. Sob! Come hither friend Tanley—friend Tanley come hither. Sob! Sob! Wherefore are thou, Tanley?
Enter—Tanley (to hall) (Nelson retreats to room 48 and flops on bed
Tanley (standing beside her in robe). What lamb? What Nelson babe? How now? Forsooth, my babe, don't be weeping ye!
tears so. (Nelson screams)
Nelson—Tanley, Tanley, my friend of these three forlorn years in fair institution — April third draws nigh—and ne'er a date for dance have I,
Enter—Beth Kent (stately and serene) Aye, Aye, roommate, what troubles thou?
Nelson (pulling hair and sobbing) Beth, thou so dear — Wouldnst thou rub my aching head?
For without date, I shall be dead.
Beth—Drop dead then kid—I don't have a date, either! (cut)
Tanley—(hastens to window, gazes towards North—North Germany)
Alas, never you be weary my sweet
For I shall aid you in distress;
I know the plains of love you bear,
But, I too have shared its sweetness.
Ah, I remember it well—
Many fortnights ago, was then he said—
My love, my love, I'll take thee to dance—
An dsoon we were wed . . . ah, ah, dear Ted.
And soon we were wed . . . ah, to me.
And you shall share my gladness dear—
For date to ball I'll find you, wait and see.

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Longwood girls were spread all over the state this past week-end for fraternity parties and just "at homes."

Our congratulations go to our own, Diane Acree, for being selected as All-State Lambda Chi sweetheart at the fraternity's annual Ball in Richmond this week end. And our congratulations to the Lambda Chi's too—they couldn't have picked a cuter girl. Diane looked like a "queen" in a purple satin and net gown.

Also atended the Lambda Chi parties were Mary Alice Ellington, Betty Pat Rogers, Barbara Blackman, Doris Underwood, Joy Simmons, and, of course, the sweetheart, Diane Acree.

Kappa Sigma parties held by the University of Richmond also attracted several Longwood coeds. Attending were Jo Ann McLelland, Betty Jean Jenkins, Connie Coiner, ad Frances Williams. One of our former students, LeReve Mallory, of Ashland, now enrolled in the school of nursing of Johnston-Willis Hospital, Richmond, reigned as the fraternity's sweetheart. Many congratulations to a girl who's been missed lots!

Attending the Sigma Chi convention at Natural Bridge were Patty Derring, Lois Ann Childers, and Charlotte Fitts. "Fittsie" almost didn't make it when someone ran off with her luggage by mistake.

Audrey Owen ventured up to VMI this week-end. Audrey said that there weren't any parties there but that she had a fine time.

At the Theta Chi convention which was held at U. V. was Elizabeth Pancake with her Theta Chi from H-S.

This last bit of news has just about driven me crazy because I have a natural tendency to tell things I shouldn't tell. Anyway, at last, I can. Garland Webster, the calm and quiet one this time, is now wearing a diamond which was given to her by Jack Collins, of VPI. Our best to both of you.

Quiet, Then a Bell; We Say "Oh Well"

By MARTHA DONALDSON
And DOT DOUGLAS

The golden sun rises on a glorious spring day at historic, or is it hysterical, Longwood. Little droplets of dew adorn the bright new grass and dainty flowers like diamonds. Bright spring blossoms unfold their petals after their refreshing nap and smile at the world. The birds chirp sweetly and the frisky squirrels and little downy-winged insects scurry about gathering morsels of sweetness for their breakfasts.

Inside the dorms are sleeping maidens who are lost in their world of dreams. Upon their dear faces are sweet smiles of contentment as they languish upon their soft beds of down—down? downright hard lumps or cotton.

There is a bright rosy glow over the scene and then to touch it off a beautiful tinking bell sounds—seven times. This is followed by another bell which rings sweetly, but perhaps a trifle bit more impatiently.

Outside, nature pauses for a moment to listen to the beautiful tollings, then it goes back to its happy sunrise occupations.

Inside at the sound of the bell, the peacefuly sleeping maidens cover their heads with soft, fluffy pillows for a split second until again another bell sounds.

This bell is shrill and not so friendly. There is no getting away from it, it is the faithful alarm clock. The once peacefully sleeping maidens are now awake, after a fashion, and with a moan they gently hurl their friendly cloaks through the misty morning and roll out of their beds onto the hard floor. With a cry of utter desperation and a moan of realizations, the maidens pull themselves to their feet to face another day.

With a splash of cold water their faces come to muddy-yellow aliveness and narrow slits appear for eyes.

Then they join the long gray line of mortals on their way to breakfast. As they walk thoughts of tests, study and work swim in their little block heads.

At this appalling visage, the flowers wilt, the dew evaporates and the sweet birds scurry away in fright.

It is not that Longwood girls mind getting up, but why do they have to disturb sweet nature so early?

(Dedicated to our Deah High School English Teacher — Mr. John H. Snapp).

Greenland Writes Colorful Letter Describing First Views Of Mexico

(Editors Note: This letter is a condensed copy of two letters written by Fay Greenland, a Longwood student who is now studying under a scholarship in Mexico. The recipient of the letters is Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of modern language, who has pased them on to the Rotunda for publication.)

"Dear Miss Barksdale,

"This has been quite an interesting day. It started out with the great occasion of having breakfast in bed, which seems is quite common here at the house—all you have to do is tell Lydia, who tells the maid, Panchita (short for Francisca), who brings you a breakfast that's out of this world. (Lydia is the wife of the man who met me at the airport last night.) They sort of run the house as Mrs. Iturbe doesn't live here. They've been so nice and most helpful. Osterveen is their name—he's a student at Mexico City College. He and an elderly man met me last night, helped me send a telegram, and lent me 50 pesos until I could get some money changed, which I did today.

Just realized I didn't tell you about customs. The view of Mexico City from the plane was really breath-taking: first a puddle of light, then a mass of sparkling diamonds dotted with rubies and emeralds. From the ground, however, it was not so romantic. The room in the airport where we waited to go thru customs was tiny and it seemed that three planes had arrived at the same time, including a plane full of athletes coming for the events this week-end. So we were held up for over an hour. Finally we got through the paper inspection part—they kept all my papers and told me to come back manana to get them. Then we went to claim our baggage, but it hadn't been taken off the plane, so another long wait.

Baggage Room

It was after 10:00 (plane landed about 8:30) before I got through. As I walked out the door from the baggage room a man (Mr. O.) asked me if I was Fay Greenland, and we were both glad I was. They had been waiting quite a while for me, and were afraid they had missed me. So on to the telegraph office we went. (I sent a wire home) and then home. The house, what I saw of it last night was beautiful—tile, patios, and cactus plants. And today I really "o-hed and a-hed." I can't begin to describe it— I'll have to let the pictures do that for me. But I will say it has two patios, a large two story one which all the rooms overlook, which is bordered with cactus along the second floor and has one whole wall covered with ivy, and another smaller one on the second floor.

I haven't seen much of the city yet, except on my taxi trips this morning. But it's perfectly fascinating. My first view of the mountains brought a gasp, and I guess the driver thought it was because of his driving, which is may well have been—they really give you a hair-raising ride. By the way, the taxi driver from the Embassy to the house complimented me on my Spanish, and all I said was "Lerma setenta y seis!" He asked me how long I had been in Mexico and I told him I just arrived last night. He was amazed. I just tell you because I am pleased that I can understand and be understood.

Beautiful Walk

Mr. Osterveen and I set out this morning for the band, so I could open my account. It's near here, a few blocks down the Paseo de la Reforma, and is that ever a beautiful walk. There is a gorgeous stone monument with an is a gorgeous monument with an angel on top—really a beautiful sight. There is a large parkway down the center, and at intersections where there is a statue or something, the street is sort of circular around it. The bank was thing is open, but bank robberies a beautiful modern building. Mexico banks don't have cages. Everything i sopen, but bank robberies

It seems as though there is not a straight stretch of road in Mexico; all you can see around you is mountains. But occasionally you come to a valley and drive a ways down a tree-bordered road, past fields of golden-green sugar cane, glistening banana groves, papaya trees, and of course, so many things that none of us could identify. From time to time you come to a quaint little town on the side of the road, consisting of a few huts with cactus - fenced yards. That cactus is tall and straight, just like posts; along the road we passed mountainsides full of multi - branched cadelabra-shaped cacti. Occasionally we'd stop, all pile out with our cameras, and snap one of the thousands of break-taking scenes that make up Mexico. From time to time, we'd stop in the Indian villages (wish I could remember the names —Atlixco and Matamores are the only ones I recall for gas and for water to cool the engine, which was not much hotter than we were! All the Indians would flock around the car, some trying to see our things, others peering curiously. We bought straw hats, and it was a good thing, because this Mexican sun is HOT on a bare head.

Friday morning we set out for Octolan ,an Indian town about 20 miles away. It was market day—first time I had been to market in Mexico. All the Indians come from miles around and set up booths and stalls, or spread their wares on the ground. They string woven sun shades across the open spaces in the streets, and the overall view is a somewhat chaotic conglomeration of sun shades, Indians, burros, clothing, food and trinkets—colorful and interesting. We didn't buy much — just mostly looked.

After lunch, we set out for Mitla, about 30 miles further south, to see the ruins of the Zapoteca temple. On the way we stopped at the famous Tule tree—supposedly 200 years old 150 feet around the trunk, and about 126 feet high. Mitla is a good-sized Indian village—that is, as Indian villages go. To us is was very small, but compared to some of the Indian towns we've seen, Mitla is a metropolis. It has blocks of streets lined with cactus fences concealing the huts behind. It also has something of a downtown section —a row of stores, a museum, and a playground—park sort of thing. The people are Zapotecan, also speak Spanish. After a few wrong turns and a bumpy ride, we found our way to the ruins.

The Temple

The temple, dating from the Tenth Century, was invaded and plundered by the Spaniards during the 15th century and even used as a stable. Much of it was destroyed as the Spaniards tore it down to provide stones for their own church. Our guide was excellent; but I was so busy looking, taking pictures, and making notes, that I didn't hear much of what he was saying. I remember his explaining that the low doors (and how!) were so built to obligate a bow before the high priest upon entering. He pointed out the remains of heiroglyphics, which were perfectly fascinating, and explained their meanings. I tried to take a picture of one—don't know how it will turn out. He took us into the underground tombs of the Zapoteca kings. The walls were covered with carvings in the rock or mosiac. The designs were very similar to those found in Greece. I got an idea of what the catacombs must be like—it was quite damp and darker than dark, but for the guide's lantern. The construction was amazing—tremendous slabs of rock piled up—you really wonder how they ever got lifted up so high. And everything fitted together—no mortar or anything. And in the tombs, the ceiling rocks did not touch the walls—they seemed to be floating. There was a small space between them so that vibrations would not cause the rock to crumble. We also saw the Zapoteca calendar carved on the entrance. It is similar to the Aztec calendar, I think. We also went to the priests tombs—similar to the others. Inside the entrance was a scooped out rock, which you sat on—in—three times, and you would be married within a year. I tried it but it probably won't work, since I'm not a Zapotec!

Miss everyone—wish you were all here sharing these wonderful days with me.

Fay"

Earthy Tom Severs Space For Mars Gal

By JACKIE MARSHALL

My name is Tom "atomic kid" Corbett and I'm talking to you by way of super-super radio from my space ship five million miles from the planet earth. I'm on my way to Mars where I've got a date with a good-looking moleswoman.

I thought I'd tune you in on one of my daily excursions through space. I blasted rockets from Pulaski about two hours ago and now I'm halfway to Mars.

This is a great life! I own my own space ship and have been pulled in by the Space Patrol only once when I did a triple somersault flip and curdled the Milky Way. They grounded me for a couple of weeks and took the squirrel tails off my exhaust pipe but otherwise I got off easy.

We're passing Venus now. Usually, I stop here to have my atom tank refilled but the prices have become outrageous. One atom costs a fortune there! They must think I'm made of uranium.

Well, by my jets. Jupiter seems to be really rocking tonight. Oh yes! They're having mid-winters up there and I hear the Sky Delta Thetas are throwing the brawl of the universe.

Over there you can see Saturn. I've had my day on Saturn too. Those Saturnese are real gone hep-cats! Every Saturday night they step over to one of those rings that revolve around the planet, and have a mad whirl.

We're almost on the outskirts of Mars now. It's 8 p. m., and I wish you could see these full moons. You know, Mars has two moons and my gal Schniggle Fritz and I just go crazy on nights like this.

Here I am right over dear "Schnicky's Cave. The wealthy live in craters up here ,while the middle class live in caves, and the peasants train ants to build their domains. What? There's another space ship in her driveway. Well, I'll be a flying saucer! It's Flash Gordon's ship. Just wait 'til I blast my jets at that universal casanova. 'Scuse me, folks! That's all. Roger, over and out!

Class volleyball and basketball games which ended last week, gave the green and whites a 20-10 lead in the race for the color cup. Look out red and whites! There's only softball, archery, tennis, ping-pong and swimming left for competition. What colors are going to be flying on that color cup in the Home Office next year? Will they be green and white again or will red and white regain the lead? It's everybody's job to help their respective color team in every way. Get in your practices and participate in the events; or come out and give the team the moral support they need.

All the class games seemed more exciting than ever this year. Everyone seemed to be trying their best. The volleyball tournament got off to an exciting start when the juniors defeated the seniors 12-11 and tied the other game 12-12. The juniors added another win to their record when they downed the sophomores 22-8. The sophomores were able to tie them 13-13 in the second game. The seniors won two games for the red and whites when they beat the freshmen 16-6 and 23-5. The freshmen held the lead in both games against the sophomores by scores of 16-6 and 14-4.

In basketball each class had two teams. The senior white team tied the junior green team 23-23 and beat the freshmen white 27-18. The senior red team lost to the frosh green team 18-15 and to the junior white team 21-20. The sophomore whites tallied a win over the junior whites 12-10 and the freshmen whites 34-7.

Carolyn Gray and Fay Evans, recently chosen varsity and class hockey managers, respectively for next year, attended a meeting of the Tidewater Field Hockey Association at Westhampton College. Miss Olive Iler and Miss Rebecca Brockenborough journeyed with them to the meet.

Miss Iler and Miss Brockenborough will also attend the State Field Hockey Association meeting at John Marshall Hotel, Friday.

Wisket and softball will start as soon as the weather is favorable. Wisket is a new game for the Longwood girls this year. It was unknown to the girls until a sports day held at Mary Baldwin College last year. The equipment which consists of wisket baskets and balls arrived last fall. The game is similar to softball. It consists of nine players. Each player has three tries to hit the ball. Having hit the ball, the batter runs four bases just as in softball. In order to tag the runner "out", the fielders must catch a fly ball or throw the ball to all bases. If it arrives at home base before the runner gets there, the runner it "out". Come on out and try your hand at it. We'll all learn together.

Cotillion Club Engages Hudson's Dance Band

Members To See Concert Program

Featuring "America's New Look in dance music," Dean Hudson and his orchestra will furnish the music for Cotillion dance and afternoon concert on April 3. The band's regular vocalist, Ann Lorain, will give her version of old and new popular songs at the dance.

Hudson's band has been requested for dance engagements all along the Eastern coast for the past several years. Some of his typical engagements have been at such hotels as the Statler in New York City, the Shamrock in Houston, Texas, and the Cavalier Beach Hotel at Virginia Beach. He has also made movie shorts for MGM and Universal-International. Hudson includes radio commercials over CBS, MBS, and NBC in his repertorie of experience.

A handsome trumpeter himself, Hudson has a musical heritage. His father has directed the Norwood Ohio Symphony Orchestra and his mother is known as a fine pianist in musical circles. In high school he was also interested in the Boy Scouts, attaining the high honor of becoming an Eagle Scout, he won a trip to England for outstanding achievements in the Boy Scouts. Hudson graduated from the University of Florida with a degree in business administration.

Ann Lorain began her career when she won a talent contest on n Horace Heidt Show. Soon afterwards she appeared on TV and in the famous Neptune Room at Miami Beach, Florida. Her fame even spread to South America, where she sang in such places as the Tropicana in Havana and the Capri Room of the St. Regis in Mexico City.

Among the first recordings of the Hudson band were "Holly Hop," a college tune in swing-time, and "Moon Over Miami," an all time favorite. Many popular tunes, old and new, will be played in Jarman Hall at the afternoon concert and in the gym on the night of the dance.

Dean Hudson will furnish melodies for the "Cotillion Ball" scheduled for Saturday night, April 3.

Director Announces High School Concert

Farmville High School's band and glee club will present a combined concert program for the Longwood student body on March 30 during the regularly scheduled Tuesday assembly hour", announced Mr. Russell C. Hoier of the high school music department.

The 25 member band, composed of 14 first year musicians will open its program with the "Semper Paratus March". Their other selections will include "Overture from the Pastic Grandieu"; "Ode to Music" which is an adaptation of a Chopin etude; "Overture to Rosinet" a rumba; "La Cucharacha" and a swing number, "Teen Time Topic". A march, "Bless Them All," will bring their portion of the program to be close.

Opening with the "Halls of Ivy" Pageant, a 40 voice glee club will also sing Dr. Lasso's "Oh Lord of Heaven", "Cherubim Song No 7" "Bless the Lord Oh My Soul", a World War I song, "Madame Jenette" and "Oh Vreneli".

Founder's Day

convention will be an open house given by Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster at their home.

At 6:30 p. m. the guests will attend dinner in the college dining hall. Founder's Day week-end will then close with the Shakespearean travesty, "Romeo and Juliet" to be given by the Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs at 8 p. m. in Jarman Auditorium.

Special emphasis will be placed this year on the reunion classes ending in four and nine. These classes run from the years 1889 to 1949 and they meet every five years. These groups are planning individual breakfasts which will take place at Hotel Weyanoke and at Longwood House.

Girls Exhibit Art Displays

By SHIRLEY WILBOURNE

Now on display in the college library is a beautiful and unusual collection of belts which were made by students of art class 201, under the direction of Miss Annie Lee Ross, assistant profesor of art.

Made by card weaving, a process developed centuries ago by the Egyptians, these belts exemplify the beautiful patterns which may be created by this ancient method. The only materials necessary are cards, looms, thread, and "ingenuity."

Another student display consists of drawings of characters from "Romeo and Juliet" sketched by members of Dr. C. L. S. Earley's play production class and members of the Longwood Players. Their drawings were originated to help guide in the selection of costumes for various characters in the Shakespearean tragedy. Characters and scenes from other Shakespearean plays are also on display.

In the Browsing Room is a display representing the development of modern art in France. It is one of a series of exhibits by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond.

President To Report

A report of Longwood's activities last semester and plans for the coming year will be presented by President Dabney S. Lancaster, at a meeting of the Virginia State Board of Education, tomorrow.

This is one of three annual meetings held to receive reports of all state colleges concerning programs and prospective plans.

Tanley—(shouting and making like prize-fighter)

Forsooth, among our subjects —one, fair Nancy, hath thou not date for dance. Wilt thou help me?

Hallspeople—No.

Tanley—Aye, Aye, I take thou the task upon thyself — farewell.

Hallspeople — (shouting out window as Tanley crosses field to Jarman Hall) If ye find men.

Tanley (returns breathless)—What a jaunce!

Nelson (still sobbing) now, sweet friend—what news?

Tanley—I find thee date with fair young man—ah, a handsome one—A director of the theatre is he—and it is said around these parts his name is known—for his direction in a quiet zone.

So dress thee up, my lady
Make thy hair ever so curly—
For thou shall, in a fortnight,
Be waltzing with 'cat'' Earley.

Nelson (all lit up, rushes to window and gazes to yonder auditorium)

Oh! can it be true? Can it be true?

Tanley—'Tis true, 'tis true.

College Announces Fall Acceptances To Present Date

To date, 92 students have been accepted to enter Longwood for the 1954 fall semester, according to Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary. Ninety-one of these are dorm students, and one is from Farmville.

This number exceeds last March's accepted applications by 35. Three from South Carolina have applied for admission and one each from North Carolina, New Jersey, and Massachusetts. Richmond tops the list from Virginia with 28 applicants. Applications have been received from one-half of the counties and cities in the state.

There are 85 applications pending as of March 19, and more are continually coming in. Some of the girls have been advised to attend summer school at Longwood to raise their averages to the approved level.

"The freshman class of 1954-55 is expected to be larger than this year's class. The size of the freshman class will be determined somewhat on dormitory facilities available. Old students who wish to register for the 1954-55 session will be reomed first, and the remaining rooms will be used for new students," explained Mrs. Watkins.

W & M Committee Views Auditorium

Serving on a committee to study plans for the construction of a new auditorium, three faculty members of the College of William and Mary visited Longwood last Saturday to inspect the layout of Jarman Hall, its music department, and its equipment.

This visit was made in an effort to establish data from which to draw plans for the replacement of the old Phi Beta Kappa Hall which burned last December on the Williamsburg campus.

Mr. Roger D. Sherman, Mr. Howard M. Scammon, and Mr. Carl A. Fehr, instructors in the fine arts department, arranged the visitation through Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood. He received a letter, which requested the inspection, last week. The letter stated:

"We understand that the new auditorium is an excellently planned one with up-to-date equipment, and feel that there would be great value to us if we could see it, since we are now in the process of planning for a new auditorium to replace Phi Beta Kappa Hall which burned to the ground last December."

Duo-Pianists To Play Here

A duo-piano concert by husband and wife team, Kathryn and Paul Schwartz, professors of music at Kenyon College, Kenyon, Ohio, will be presented in Jarman Hall on Monday, April 5, at 8 p. m.

The varied program, which is an extra attraction in the Lyceum Series, will be free for students and townspeople with season tickets. The admission price for the general public will be fifty cents.

Tuesday, April 6, at 4 p. m., the couple will hold a discussion on "Music, Modern Dance, and the Theater." They will demonstrate how music may be utilized as a background for dance and drama. The meeting will be held in classroom one, Jarman Hall. All students who are interested are invited to attend.

The pianists will be available in the music department all day April 5 and 6. Several students are working on a two-piano arrangement so that they might receive constructive criticism from the artists.

Mama Announces Birth of Bunnies

Mrs. Bunny Rabbitt, assistant rabbit of research at Longwood College, gave birth to ten sons last Thursday, four of them dead at birth.

Mrs. Rabbit named her sons, Georgia, Bobbie, Bob M., Don, Willie and just plain "Butch." Mary Ann King, senior chemistry major, was chosen for boys' nurse.

Saturday, little Bob M. died in the arms of Barbara Mitchell, junior biology major.

The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon in the Cunningham Hall side yard. It was attended by close members of the family, who wore black.

Beth Kent, elementary major, said a few words and placed carrot and lettuce markers on the grave. The mourners sang "You'll Never Hop Alone," and the funeral was completed.

The other fine little boy rabbits are growing well and Miss King, the nurse, expects them to be learning to walk and talk soon.

Longwood, Hampden-Sydney Choirs Join To Present Gilbert And Sullivan Operetta

Disorder in the courtroom will signal the entrance of musical barristers and singing bridesmaids in the famous light operetta, "Trial by July," where the Longwood and Hampden-Sydney choirs join voices in presentation of two spring concerts.

The choirs will present the satirical operetta as first of a series of masterpieces by the world renowned Gilbert and Sullivan, as second half of their annual concert program. On April 8, the groups will stage the operetta at 8 p. m. in John's Auditorium at Hampden-Sydney College. On the next evening, April 9 ,the concert will be given at Longwood College at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall.

Dorothy Morris, a Longwood junior, will sing the part of the fair Angelina who is sueing her one-time suitor Edwin, played by Tom Thorne, of Hampden-Sydney, for a breach of promise of marriage. An English court of the Ex-Chequer is scene of the trial where the plaintiff, her bridesmaids and counsel present the "tragic" case before judge, jury, and a gallery of spectators.

Joe White, of Hampden-Sydney, will sing the roll of the judge. Singing out "Silence in the Court" is the duty of the usher played by Jim White. George Pillow will portray the defendants counsel and Larry Hoover will be foreman of the jury.

Twelve bridesmaids and 12 jurymen will support the bride-that-should-have-been in her suit against Edwin who melts nothing but the fury of judge and jury for his part in the inexcusable neglect of Angelina.

Joyce Hunt, Betty Bailey, Nan Bland, Jane Branch, and Mary Ann Wright will sing the bridesmaids chorus. Also, Dolly Horne, Carolyn Overbey, Mary Cowles, Nancy McLawhorne, Wilma Salmon, Betty Jane Staples, and Joyce Clingenpeel have been selected.

The operetta is a satire on English courts, English judges, and English love affairs. The opening scene finds the usher admonishing the jury that the trial must be perfectly fair and bias free, but adds that they may pay no attention to what the defendant says. The judge, after telling the candid story of how he became a judge, is seated upon the bench and prepares to hear the case. After an eloquent scene by the counsel and flirting with the jurymen, the bride gains the sympathy of the entire court.

To solve the case, the defendant's offer to marry both the rejected friend and his present object of affection. Bedlam breaks loose as the plaintiff endeavors to influence the jury concerning the damages Edwin breaks, and tiring of entire affair, the Judge pronounces the verdict and settles the case.

Under the direction of Dr. John W. Molnar, director and head of Longwood's music department, the first part of the concert will consist of several songs sung jointly by the combined groups, followed by several selections sung by the choirs individually.

These include "He Is Watching Over Israel" from Mendelssohn's Elijah; "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place" by Brahms; and a group of dance songs from the Borodin opera, Prince Igor. The Longwood Choir will sing "At Times My Thoughts Come Drifting" by Brahms; "Turn Ye To Me" a Scottish folk song arranged by Scott; "Donkey Serenade," by Frime-Stothart; and "Open Thy Heart" by Bizet. Concluding the program's first part, the Hampden-Sydney Chorus will present, "Odramus Te, Christe, Palestrina"; a group of three Liebesleiden Waltzes by Brahms; a spiritual, "Wade In De Water", arranged by Hall, and Richard Rodgers, "If I Loved You" from "Carousel."

Accompanists for the concert are pianists Lura Beavers and Howard Hansen. Mary Ellen Hawthorne will play the organ.

Other committee heads selected to stage the operetta are Joyce Clingenpeel, scenery; Nancy Jane Jones, dance; Audrey Powell, properies; Gloria Kratzsch, make-up; Virginia Sutherland, costumes; Ann Thomas, publicity; Jane Branch, promotion; Joyce Hunt, tickets; and Betty Bailey, program.

Cotillion Makes Weekend Plans For Festivities

Dean Hudson will furnish melodies for Cotillion members and escorts, Saturday.

Regular vocalist for the orchestra, Ann Lorain, will be on hand for popular-song selections.

Club Sets Theme, Midnight in White

"Midnight in White," a theme created in abstract amid modernistic design will penetrate throughout the gym, Saturday night at 8 p. m., when the Cotillion Club dance comes alive under the musical influence of Dean Hudson and his orchestra.

The day of Cotillion Club festivities will begin Saturday afternoon when the Hudson Orchestra will present a concert in Jarman Hall from 4 to 5:30 p. m. This concert will be open to the public. The price of the tickets for non-club members will be 50 cents. This charge is included in the dues paid by members of Cotillion Club.

Following the main attraction of the day which is the dance, "Midnight in White," will be a party for members and their guests in the main recreation hall. The late party goers will be served coffee and donuts.

Anne Foster, a senior member of Cotillion, was selected as figure leader by last years group. She will lead the figure which will consist of senior members, and also junior and sophomore members who wish to participate in this activity. The figure will be a design formed to resemble sprays from a fountain, which will serve as the main piece of decoration.

In addition to the fountain which will be bathed in alternating colored lights from a spotlight above, black and white crepe paper will festoon the sides and ceiling of the gym. All designs for the dance will be abstract and modernistic. Patty Derring who is serving a decoration chairman is being assisted by Margaret Duke and Jane Blake, sophomores.

Along with Dean Hudson and his orchestra which features "America's new look in dance music," will be vocalist, Ann Lorain. Miss Lorain ,regular vocalist with the Hudson Orchestra will give her renditions of old and new popular songs.

Hudson's band has been request for dance engagements all along the Eastern coast for the past several years. Some of his recent engagements have been at such hotels as the Statler in New York City, the Shamrock in Houston, Texas, and the Cavalier Beach Hotel at Virginia Beach. He has also made movie shorts for MGM and Universal-International. Hudson includes radio commercials over CBS, MBS, and NBC in his repertoire of experience.

Longwood Celebrates Founders' Day Reunion

Class of 1894 Claims Cup For Attendance

The class of 1894, called the "Twenty-Wonders," once more claimed the Jarman Cup for having the largest percentage of attendance at last week-end's Founders' Day celebration.

On the sixtieth anniversary of their graduation in 1894, ten years after the founding of the college in 1884, seven of the eight living class members were present at the time of their graduation and Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, president at that time often called them the Twenty Wonders.

More than 400 graduates of Longwood College converged upon Farmville last week-end in celebration of the seventieth Founders' Day. With reunions in the class of four's and nine's the alumnae met to take part in a week-end of activities including class meetings, teas, the annual business meeting, and banquet and the spring play.

Using the topic, "Preserve the Past, Invest In the Future of Longwood College," National president of the Alumnae Association gave the annual address at the Founders' Day program at 11 a. m. Saturday. Reviewing the past of Longwood College, she recognized the many achievements of its graduates, its service to the profession of teaching, its inspiration to many students, and its emphasis on the individual. She then cited the projects and plans for the future of the Alumnae Association.

Prior to her speech, Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss led a memorial service for Miss Leola Wheeler, former faculty member of the college who died January 30, 1954. Mr. Boyd Coyner and Mrs. Lucy Hade Overbey Webster gave commemorative talks. President Dabney S. Lancaster and Mary Denny Wilson, student body president then greeted the alumnae.

After luncheon Saturday at noon, Miss Horton presided over the annual business meeting.

County Schedules Next Celebration

In commemoration of Lee's Retreat, Prince Edward County will hold its second Bicentennial celebration in Jarman Auditorium, on April 7, at 8 p. m.

The program for the night is composed of three distinct parts. The first part will consist of the singing of old favorite southern songs. After the song renditions, Mr. R. L. Scribbner, Associate Director of Virginia History, will make a speech entitled "Seven Fateful Days." A movie in technicolor will then be shown on the surrender at Appomattox. The The program for this occasion is focused around the period of the Battle of Sayler's Creek in the county.

Tickets will be available to the students in President Dabney S. Lancaster's office and there will be no admission charge

The first in the series of Bicentennial celebrations took place on March 8, when the National Symphony Orchestra from Washington, D. C., presented a program of concert music.

LC Faculty Attends Langauge Arts Meet

Five members of the Longwood faculty attended the Fourth Conference of Teachers of Language Arts at the Univeristy of Virginia last Thursday.

Miss Irving Armstrong, Mrs. Mildred Davis, Mrs. Marian H. LeStourgeon, Mrs. Marvin Schlegel, and Mr. Richard Meeker, traveled to Charlottesville to attend discussions, conferences, and programs focused on the topic of literature.

Highlighting the conference was a talk by Dr. Richard Walser, associate professor of English at North Carolina State College, on the subject, "What Literature Can Do for Young People."

School Librarian Will Convene Here AT District Meet

For the fifth consecutive year, delegates representing District D of the Libraries and Teaching Materials Section of the Virginia Education Association, will convene Saturday, at Longwood College to take part in the School Library Conference.

Delegates from Norfolk, Richmond ,Martinsville, Arlington, Petersburg and surrounding counties are expected to attend the convention this week-end.

Highlighting the morning business session will be an address on the topic "School Library—Public Library Cooperation" by Mrs. Mildred G. Blattner, librarian in the Arlington County Library. She received library experience at the Wisconsin University Library School, where she was graduated.

The morning session will also feature a talk by Dr. Francis B. Simkins, associate professor of history, on the subject "On the Making of a Seventh Grade Textbook in Virginia History". In connection with his speech, the library is exhibiting a collection of the various publications written over a span of years by Dr. Simkins.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood, will deliver an official welcome to the delegates at this meeting, and Miss Mary Grace Hawkins, librarian, Bolling Junior High School, Petersburg, will preside.

Registration is scheduled from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m. The morning session will begin at 10:30. Lunch will be served in the College tea room at 1 p. m., and will be followed by a coffee hour in the lounge of the library. At 2:15 p. m., a film showing of "Julius Caesar" will take place in the library auditorium.

The joint committee on the School Library Conference is Dr. Beverly Ruffin, head of the library science department at Longwood, and Miss Kate O'Brien, librarian at the Farmville High School.

The steering committee is made up of members of the Longwood library staff, and the Farmville school system.

LC Receives Acclamation For Publicity

Praised for its "fresh and talented approach to college relations" Longwood was recently cited by the Richmond Public Relations Association for its successful program of publicity during last year.

Honorable mention was awarded the college public relations department at the sixth annual conference sponsored by the Richmond association and the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Announcing the award at the alumnae business meeting on Saturday, President Dabney S. Lancaster gave recognition to Mrs. Meade L. Shackleford, director of Longwood's bureau of public relations. Her efficient work, he commented, has been wholly responsible for the success in the Longwood program, which was initiated in the fall of 1952. Dr. Lancaster added that he was doubly pleased since the honor is usually awarded only to Richmond groups.

In presenting the award, William Corwin commented that Longwood's program is distinguished in that it seeks to win friends and freshmen for the college rather than funds. Mr. Corwin is chairman of the committee which annually presents citations to organizations carrying the most effective public relations program during the year.

First place in this year's awards was given to the A. H. Robins Pharmaceutical Co., of Richmond. Honorable mention was also awarded the Medical College of Virginia.

Recitals Continue

Under supervision of the music department, a program of voice recitals will be presented on April 25 at 4 p. m. in Jarman Hall.

All recitals given consist entirely of music majors. These students have private voice lessons under the training of Mrs. Charles Attix, instructor in the music department.

All members of the student body are invited to attend these programs. No admission will be charged.

Piano Duo To Play In Artists Series

As a bonus concert presentation for Longwood students who have artists series tickets and townspeople who possess season tickets, Kathryn and Paul Schwartz, a husband and wife team, will present a program of piano duets on April 5 at 8 p. m., in Jarman Hall. Those without season tickets may purchase a ticket for this single performance for fifty cents.

This concert is being jointly sponsored by the music department and the assembly committee.

Included in the concert will be three sonatas for two pianos by Bach, Mozart, and Ttravinsky; Schumann's "Andante and Variation"; suite by Milhaud; "Allegro Brilliant" by Mendelssohn; and "Variataions of an Ohio Folk Tune" by Paul Schwartz, himself.

The performers will also appear in the regular assembly program on Tuesday, April 6.

A composer as well as a performer, Paul Schwartz has had many of his chamber orchestral and vocal work presented. He studied music first at the Vienna Music Academy in Vienna, Austria, and later received his Ph.D. degree in musicology from Vienna University. At present, he is director of music at Kenyon College in Kenyon, Ohio, and lecturer in church music at Bexley Hall, the Divinity School of Kenyon College. Under his direction the Kenyon College Choir and Kenyon Singers present concerts in many cities each year.

Kathryn Schwartz a native of Ashville, North Carolina, received a bachelors degree from Bard College, where she studied piano under Dr Schwartz. She was married the two artists have performed in many colleges while on tours arranged through the Arts Program of the Association of American Colleges.

Board Renews Policy To Allow Men at LC

The State Board of Education has renewed the policy of allowing men to attend Longwood College, reports President Dabney S. Lancaster.

This continuation in policy was upholded by a provision which states that men may attend Longwood provided they enter professional education field after a two year period. That is, they must enter the field or have definite plans to enter the teaching profession in the future.

The policy to allow men at Longwood was formulated after World War II when it was found necessary to relieve the congestion of men's colleges where a definite strain was imposed by enrolling veterans. The L. C. policy would have expired by July 1, if the Board had not voted to renew it.

Dr. Lancaster attended the meeting of the Board last Thursday when he reported to the group concerning last semester's program and future plans.

I Speak For Democracy

(Editor's Note: The following article is the prize-winning essay of the "I Speak for Democracy" contest which was nationally sponsored by the Firestone Corporation. Over 1,000,000 school students throughout the United States participated in the competition. Elizabeth Ellen Barns, from Akron, Ohio, was winner of the contest).

"I am an American
Listen to my words, Facists, Communists.
Listen well, for my country is a strong country, and my message is a strong message.
I am an American, and I speak for democracy.
My ancestors have left their blood on the green at Lexington and the snow at Valley Forge
. . . on the walls of Fort Sumter and the fields at Gettysburg
. . . on the water of the River Marne and in the shadows of the Argonne Forest
. . . on the beachheads of Salerno and Normandy and the sands of Okinawa
. . . on the bare, bleak hills called Pork Chop and Old Baldy and Heartbreak Ridge.
A million and more of my countrymen have died for freedom.
My country is their eternal monument.
They live on in the laughter of a small boy as he watches a circus clowns' antics
. . . and in the sweet, delicious coldness of the first bite of peppermint ice cream on the Fourth of July
. . . in the tenseness of a baseball crowd as the umpire calls "Batter up!"
. . . and in the high school band's rendition of "Stars and Stripes Forever" in the Memorial Day parade
. . . in the clear, sharp ring of a school bell on a fall morning
. . . and in the triumph of a six-year-old as he reads aloud for the first time.
They live on in the eyes of an Ohio farmer surveying his acres of corn and potatoes and pasture.
. . . and in the brilliant gold of hundreds of acres of wheat stretching across the flat miles of Kansas
. . . in the milling of cattle in the stockyards of Chicago
. . . the precision of an assembly line in an automobile factory in Detroit
. . . and the perpetual red glow of the nocturnal skylines of Pittsburgh and Birmingham and Gary.
They live on in the voice of a young Jewish boy saying the sacred words from the Torah: "Hear O Israel: the Lord our God, the Lord is One. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy might."
. . . and in the voice of a Catholic girl praying: "Hail, Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with thee . . ."
. . . and in the voice of a Protestant boy singing: "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God, A Bulwark Never Failing . . ."

An American named Carl Sandburg wrote these words:

"I know a Jew fishcrier down on Maxwell Street with a voice like a north wind blowing over corn stubbles in January.
He dangles herring before prospective customers evincing a joy indentical with that of Pavlova dancing."
His face is that of a man terrribly glad to be selling fish, terribly glad that God made fish, and customers to whom he may call his wares from a pushcart."

There is a voice in the soul of every human being that cries out to be free. America has answered that voice.

America has offered freedom and opportunity such as no land before her has ever known, to a Jew fishcrier down on Maxwell Street with the face of a man terribly glad to be selling fish. She has given him the right to own his pushcart, to sell his herring on Maxwell Street,

. . . she has given him an education for his children, and a tremendous faith in the nation that has made these things life.

Multiply that fishcrier by 160,000,000—160,000,000 mechanics and farmers and housewives and coal miners and truck drivers and chemists and lawyers and plumbers and priests — all glad, terribly glad to be what they are, terribly glad to be free to work and eat and sleep and speak and love and pray and live as they desire, as they believe!

And those 160,000,000 Americans — those 160,000,000 free Americans — have more roast beef and mashed potatoes,
. . . the yield of American labor and land;
. . . more automobiles and telephones,
. . . more safety razors and bath tubs,
. . . more Orlon sweaters and aureomycin, the fruits of American initiative and enterprise;
. . . more public schools and life insurance policies, the symbols of American security and faith in the future;
. . . more laughter and song— than any other people on earth!

This is my answer, Fascist, Communist! Show me a country greater than our country, show me a people more energetic creative, progressive— bigger-hearted and happier than our people, not until then will I consider your way of life. For I am an American, and I speak for democracy.

Lose Overweight Worries; Reduce With 'Rin Thin Tin'

By PAT KELLY and JACKIE MARSHALL

Are You Overweight? Hmmm? Do you suffer from "Broad Bottom"? Whale tail? If so, what in the world does the future hold for you? Absolutely, positively—nothing. Don't carry excess baggage (and we don't mean your genuine cowhide set of luggage, either!) with you wherever you go.

Start now! Use the "Get Thin with Rin Thin Tin Methods." "Rin Thin Tin" is a slenderizing plan which curbs those spare tires and puts you on the highway to happiness with no pains, no brain, no rhyming refrain.

Rin Thin Tin is specially prepared formula concocted in the modern laboratories of Witch Hazel, D. W. (Doctor of Witchery, Salem Institute, Class of 1692). This brew consists of pityrnosaforomavalley, pcborrhea, alopecia and Raleigh, 903. Take a bottle (large size, of course) every five minutes and we guarantee you'll either explode, thus shedding your excess poundage or shrink to a minute molecule. If neither of these result, squish down to your drugstore and try our preparation —"R.n Thin Tin for Stubborn Cases."

Rin Thin Tin smells like dew drops on freshly cut grass: tastes like fermented nectar of the gods; and looks like rotten cabbage-colored slime!

Don't hesitate, our supply is dwindling fast. Send in five Whitman's five pound candy box tops to Rin Thin Tin products, 13 Wart Street, Dissipation, Illinois.

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

So far as parties go, this week end has been dead. Seems like all the fraternities and colleges had their parties either week-end before last and we got all those last week) or else are having them later this month. Anyway, we did manage to scrape (believe me, no other word could express it) up a few items.

Probably the biggest fanfare that we heard about was the Pi-KA party at Hampden-Sydney this week-end. Quite a few girls attended including Doris Harcum, Loretta Brooking, Lou Kitts, Cookie Cook, Jane Branch, Betty Crawford, Elba Flynn, and Ann Foster.

Georgia Edmonds received a diamond this week-end from Donald Shoop. Forgot to mention last week that Sara Glenn had received a Theta Chi pin from Richard Whitmore of the University of Richmond. Congratulations to both of you!

Have you seen the beautiful diamond ring that our Mrs. Masters received from her husband, Ted, who is in Germany! Nancy can now boast of having the most diamonds of any girl on campus. Ted sent the ring plus a dozen red roses for Nancy's appearance in "Romeo and Juliet."

Youth Leader Will Address College Girls

A world traveler and Baptist youth leader, and a University of Richmond student, will lead a series of student services at the Baptist Church in Farmville, April 1, 2, and 4.

Jean Windley, chairman of the Baptist Student Union youth revival committee, has announced plans for the week-end which include four services led by Robert S. Denny, internationally known Baptist leader; coffee hours; and a party Saturday night.

"Let Go and Let God," emphasizing the challenge of religion for students, is the theme of the informal services to be held at 8 p. m., Thursday and Friday nights, and the sermons Sunday at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. An informal coffee hour will be held for all students after the evening services at the Baptist Student Center. The party at the Center Saturday at 8 p. m., is open to all.

Jim Brinkley, a junior from the University of Richmond, will direct the music for the revival and will also present special solos at the services and at "Y" prayers on Friday night. Mr. Denny will speak at prayers in the Episcopal Church that night. The B. S. U. Choir under the direction of Dolly Horne, will sing each night and present the Sunday morning anthem, "The Heavens Are Telling" by Beethoven.

Mr. Denny, at present an associate in the Southern Baptist Student Department, is widely known for his work among youth throughout the countries of the world. He has traveled and talked in nearly every European country, most of the United Kingdom and South America. At present he is chairman of the Youth Committee of Baptist World Alliance.

A native of Kentucky, Mr. Denny is a graduate of the University of Kentucky, and holder of both B. S. and bachelor of law degrees. He is a member of the Kentucky Bar Association. Areas of special study and work, other than various church positions, are business, law, counseling, public speaking, psychology, and salesmanship.

Now living in Nashville, Mr. Denny is married and has three children. When not traveling or working with young people, his special interest is golf. Much in demand as a youth leader, it has taken the Baptist Church two years to procure him for this week end in Farmville.

Church News

By PAT JOHNSON

Westminster Fellowship

Election of West-Fel officers for 1954-55 was held at the church on March 28. Roger Elliott, a sophomore from Hampden-Sydney, will preside as president; Carolyn Stanley, assistant president; Dick Newkirk, vice-president; Elizabeth Wilson, secretary; and Bruce Robertson, treasurer. A commission chairman is to be appointed some time this week.

The Reverend W. B. Rogers of Hampden-Sydney, will lead a discussion on the subject, "What Presbyterians Believe." There will be an installation service for the new officers following the discussion.

Wesley Foundation

The student banquet will be held this Friday evening, April 2, at 5 p. m., in the Fellowship Room of the church. The theme of the banquet is "April Showers." The Rev. K. Utsler of South Roanoke Methodist Church will give the address.

A group of students from Randolph-Macon Academy will present a program at the regular meeting at 7 p. m. in the Fellowship Room on April 4.

This week be sure to set your radio dial to WFLO at 9:15 a. m. for the devotionals led by members of the Wesley Foundation.

Dame Fashion's Selections Specify Brief Hats, Shoes For Signs of Sunny Spring

By PAT KELLY

Orange, navy, pink, and beige will appear in the spring spotlight according to many leading fashion designers and stylists. These colors are being featured by department stores and in magazines throughout the country.

Princess line dresses are heading the list of latest styles created and revived this spring. They are shown in fabrics ranging from cotton for the classroom to silk shantung for those big evenings.

In the line of suits the new softer look is being stressed. They are rounded, molded, and often have the fashionable high waistline. The box suit, popular last season ,is again very much in vogue.

White is the leading color for coats. The short boxy style and the long flaring coat rival each other in popularity.

In the blouse realm the mantailored shirt continues to remain the rage. The colors range from classic white to bring stripes and flower garden prints. The favorite fabrics are cotton, nylon, and the wonder textile, dacron.

The most popular color for the coming year will be orange and its variations, tangerine and nasturtium. Navy blue, pink, and beige will also be very much in demand. Orange is featured as the color for dresses, suits and coats as well as accessories.

Making new in the field of accessories are custom belts, short-short or very long gloves, open look shoes, and small hats.

The 1954 contour belts are narrower than ever before and rise upward in keeping with this year's waistlines. These belts are especially attractive in the bright new shades of leather.

The new short-short or very long look in gloves is carried out in a variety of colors ranging from classic black or white to bright hues such as orange and turquoise. Leather is an especially popular glove fabric this year in addition to cotton and nylon.

The majority of hats will be small this spring and will sit forward on the head. Both the pillbox and beret are making the headlines in fashion magazines this month.

The latest trend in shoe design is the open look. These delicate shoes have nothing in back and only the minimum number of straps over the foot. This new design in footwear gives the wearer the illusion of barefootedness! For more casual wear, Capezio's of all colors, shapes, and descriptions will remain the favorites for all occasions. Patent leather will hold the limelight in material closely followed by natural shades of leather.

The most important thing this spring will be the natural look in regard to hair style, skin, and makeup as well as attractive and fashionable clothing to state "Mademoiselle," "Glamour," and "Charm."

In a "State of the College" Message, Dr. Lancaster reviewed the college's achievements during the year. He discussed plans for the new Alumnae House. He announced that recently, the old Duval House, located between the Library and Jarman Hall, was approved by the state as suitable for the Alumnae House. Remodeling and redecoration will be completed by September 1955. The House will not only provide for offices, living room, reception hall, bedroms, and kitchen and will not only be headquarters for the association, but also be available as a guest home for visitors and alumnae. This project has been under consideration by the alumnae association and college for several years and Dr. Lancaster commented that he felt the house would be an asset to the college.

A slate of new officers was accepted by the Alumnae Association to serve during the next two years. Those selected were Miss Susie V. Floyd of Warwick, first vice-president; Mrs. Maragaret Ferguson Mottley of Danville, second vice-president; and Mrs. Nan Seward Brown of Petersburg, director. Chosen to serve on next year's nominating committee are Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Richardson and Mrs. Elizabeth Crute Goode, of Farmville, and Miss Alice E. Carter of Warrenton.

Miss Horton announced that plans are now being made to provide a full-time association field direction to serve the alumnae chapters and aid in establishing new ones.

The Roundtable

By PAT JONES

The pathway to man's destruction has finally been uncovered, and the H-bomb is the door. The titanic power in the bomb has surpassed even the scientists' wildest dreams. When the first test bomb was dropped on March 1, the explosion proved four times more powerful than the scienists expected. It was reported to have obliterated the test island of Bikini and to have shot a nuclear cloud 17 or more miles into the air. Complete damage was done in an area of about 20 square miles and diminishing damage in over 300 square miles.

The Atomic Energy Commission began preparations for the H-bomb test in January when they took over the Eniwetok proving grounds. They set up a tower, along with measuring and testing devices. Planes warned people to keep out of the waters within an 80 mile radius of the island.

When the AEC set off the first bomb, military bases 176 miles away were badly shaken, and many of the testing devices were knocked out by the force of the explosion. In addition to this, the wind shifted and carried radioactive ash toward the direction of people within the 80-mile limits. Many people received doses of the ash; all were heavier doses than the AEC considered safe. Natives and Americans who were exposed to the radioactive dust were rushed to Kwajalein for medical treatment. Meanwhile a Japanese fishing vessel, approximately 90 miles from the testing grounds, was showered by ash. Upon receiving the "hot coals", the boat, with a badly burned crew, headed for Japan.

In Washington, D. C., when the news of the accident arrived, it became the major topic of the day. The AEC admitted that natives and Americans had been over exposed but were not burned, and all reported well. Later in the week the commission extended the danger area from 80 miles to 450 miles around the testing grounds.

As stated by chairman Dewey Short of the House Armed Services Committee, "H-weapons are getting so big that if they get much bigger, we won't be able to test them."

Council To Attend Annual AA Dinner

The Longwood Athletic Association Council will attend a banquet in the tea room at 6 p. m., tonight.

Dr. Harold K. Jack, state supervisor of health, physical education, safety and recreation, and Miss Frances Mays, from the state physical education department in Richmond, will be special guests for the evening. Dr. Jack will appear to the group as guest speaker for the evening.

Miss Olive Iler, associate professor of physical education; Miss Rebecca Brockenborough, assistant professor of physical education; President and Mrs. Dabney Lancaster; Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women; Miss Nancy Chambers, assistant dean of women; and Dr. and Mrs. Merle Landrum have been invited to attend the banquet on this occasion.

The A. A. Council will also have its annual picnic at the cabin at Longwood Estate, Monday afternoon, April 5. Installation of new officers, managers, and committees will be held following the picnic supper.

Mays To Assist Kent

Barbara Mays, a sophomore from Richmond, has been appointed assistant art editor of the Virginian according to Donnie Devine, newly appointed editor.

Barbara is replacing the staff position left vacant by Margaret Duke, who will not return to school next year. She will work under the direction of Beth Kent, art editor of the publication.

Secretaries Group To Hold Convention at LC on April 9

The Virginia Association of Educational Secretaries will hold a three day convention at Longwood on the week end of April 9, 10, and 11.

The program, as announced by Mrs. Virginia F. Harper, chairman of the committee on arrangemetns, will open on Friday afternoon with registration in Student Building. The delegates will dine in the college dining room Friday evening and will meet later that night in the Student Lounge for a "get-together." This informal party will include entertainment by Karen Spencer, Nancy Tanley Masters, and Jeanne Lynch Hobbs.

Scheduled for Saturday is a geenral session meeting at 9 a. m., which will include a welcome address by Dr. M. L. Landrum, head of the department of business education.

Classes, which will follow the general session meeting at 9 a. noon when the members will adjourn for lunch. A third class period will begin at 1:30 p. m. At 6:30 Saturday night, a dinner will be held at Longwood House. Mr. T. J. McIlwaine, superintendent of Prince Edward and Cumberland County Schools, will deliver the invocation. Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College, will be the guest speaker.

Sunday morning, the delegates will attend services at the local churches, and tour the Longwood College campus.

Virginia Berry and Mary Elva Robinson were the presidents of Delta Sigma Epsilon and Kappa Delta, respectively. Pi Kappa Sigma was led by Peggy Hood.

Theta Sigma Upsilon's president wsa Mary Carlyle; Sigma Sigma Sigma, June Johns; Zeta Tau Alpha, Mason Moore.

Nurse Adopts Baby Bunnies

The remaining six white sons of Mrs. Bunny Rabbit, assistant rabbit of research at Longwood College, have quietly passed away according to their nurse, Mary Ann King. These six babies were buried like their four other brothers in the side yard of Cunningham Hall.

However, two new rabbits have been given to the biology department by Herb Goodman. Herb explained that he had rescued the two small wild rabbits from his dog who had attacked them. Deciding to make another warm-hearted attempt, Mary Ann has volunteered to care for them. She has named them "Herb" and "Jimmy". The newly adopted little rabbits are reported healthy and are expected to live!

Students To Sign For 1954-55 Rooms

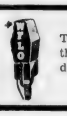
Miss Nancy Chambers, assistant dean of women, has announced that room assignment blanks for the 1954-55 session will be available soon.

When the students sign for rooms, they may select preferred groups for their respective halls. Rotation of halls will be taken into consideration except in cases where one's physical condition may not permit it.

Juniors who wish to obtain room assignment blanks may secure them from Mrs. Eastham's office in Cunningham Hall. Blanks will be available for the freshmen and sophomores in Miss Ruth Gleaves' office.

All blanks must be filled out and returned to Miss Gleaves' office on the following dates: freshmen, April 12; sophomores, April 14; juniors, April 15.

YWCA To Hold Installation



Jean Carol Parker, newly elected president of the "Y", will be installed tonight during the regular prayer services in the Episcopal Church. She will, in turn, induct her cabinet for the coming year.

Serving as treasurer of the organiation this year, Jean Carrol has gained experience in "Y" work at Longwood.

Joan DeAlba will be installed as vice-president of "Y" this year. Patsy Abernathy will assume the duties of secretary. Mary Ann Wright will serve as treasurer. Loretta Kuhn, freshman counselor will be installed.

Other committee chairmen to be installed at this time will be church cooperaive, Georgia Jackson; library, Margaret Beavers; membership, Muriel Boswell; music, Dorothy Morris; and prayers, Bobbie Mays.

Also, chairman of public affairs, Betty Jean Jenkins; publicity, Carolyn Stanley; service, Nancy Lenz; social, Loretta Brooking; and Sing, Jeanne Saunders will repeat the oaths.

Tune to 870 on your dial for the Longwood Hour, Wednesday at 3:45.

Gleaves Resigns Position

Dean to Command

Miss Ruth Gleaves announced today that she will resign her post as Dean of Women at Longwood College after 63 years of devoted service to accept the position offered her as commander of the thirty-second battalion at Fork Union Military Institute. Miss Gleaves said, "I feel that my work is completed here and that duty calls me to even greater heights."

Miss Gleaves, born in Bilgewater, Tennessee in 1859, attended public schools there for eighteen years. Feeling a wild restlessness to escape the dull routine of life, she stowed away in a cattle boat going to Russia.

In Russia, she completed the remainder of her education and graduated from R. I. T. (Russian Institute of Technology) in 1889. Her college years showed a very remarkable record of achievement. In 1886, she won the Soviet Union Dog Tag for her record breaking high jump and in 1887, she astounded the country by racking up eighty points in a basketball tournament victory over the University of Bleedingrad. In 1888, her senior year at R. I. T., she served as czar of student government, dictator of athletics, and chairman of dormitory executions.

Miss Gleaves came to this Normal School for Female Women in 1891. It was then that she endeared herself to the hearts of the students. There was a discussion being held around the bar down in the "Rec" concerning the "new faculty member." When the doors suddenly swung open and a figure of authority and strength towered over their midst, the girls shuddered inwardly and slouched over their root beers. The tension was broken with the never-to-be forgotten command when Miss Gleaves grinned and said, "It's okay, girls! Set 'em up, Alfrieda!

Then, too, there was the huge, impressive bonfire in the Rotunda when Miss Nancy Chambers was sacrificed into the fire by Miss Gleaves as a token of esteem to Joan of Arc.

"Now, when we pass that empty desk in the home office and see that empty chair in the dining hall, we'll wipe a tear, shake our heads sadly and acknowledge the fact that—Ruth is gone," commented Dot Douglas.

Club Engages MWC Group; Hudson Out

The Cotillion Club learned today, by phone, that Dean Hudson's orchestra has cancelled its engagement to play for the dance and concert here Saturday.

Instead of calling off the dance and concert, the officers of Cotillion Club contacted the Orchestra of Mary Washington College and they have consented to play for the dance and concer.

"We are terribly disappointed about Hudson's cancellation," commented Jane Branch, president of Cotillion Club, "but it can't be helped." Mr. Hudson called Jane early this morning to tell her that the majority of the band members had been striken with a virus similar to the epidemic which hit Longwood not so long ago.

The Mary Washington musical group is well known throughout this section of the country for their fine music. They have recently had engagements at Randolph-Macon Military Academy, Lynchburg College, Madison College, E. C. Glass High School, and many other schools and clubs.

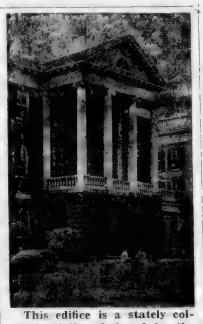
Max Culver, leader of the Mary Washington Orchestra, received his training at Shenandoah Conservatory and later received his Master's degree in music from the New York School of Music Division of New York University. He has been leader of the Mary Washington Orchestra for five years. He came to Mary Washington from Middlebury School of Music in Bloomington, New York.

Arloa Stevens a senior voice major at Mary Washington, will be the featured vocalist with the orchestra. Arloa is a winner of the Horace Heidt Talent Show.

The orchestra consists of 18 Mary Washington music majors. The girls are noted for their orinal arrangements and have had several record releases on the Bell label. Their most famous recording is "Stardust" with features the orchestra along with Miss Stevens. The orchestra is now planning an album release of collegiate songs .

Board Announces LC To Construct New Men's Dorm

Longwood College's Board of Supervisors announced today that it was decided to proceed as fast as possible with its $3,000,000 new men's dormitory plans for which have been virtually finished and approved. About the only matter remaining is the technical approval of the accousitical treatment of the parlors according to Mr. C. D. Snead, chairman of the Board of Supervisors.



Construction of the three story red brick colonial building will be the realization of a dream which begin when Longwood girls decided to provide their own co-eds. The dormitory itself will provide living quarters for 400 men of which 399 have already registered, transferring records from such places as Tech, V. M. I., W. and L., and U. Va. and Y. M. C. A.

Architect Pierre Dejarnac of Paris and Genoa, designed the plans. 7 by 34 ft. balcony will overlook a plot of timothy hay and a diamond-shaped ultra-modern swimming pool.

Florescent lights will add beauty and atmosphere to the love-seat furnished patio. Each suite for two men will consist of a bath, lounge and bunk room equipped with phonograph, radio, telephone, walkie-talkie and coffee percolator. The recreational basement designed for comfort affords many of the right-at-home facilities such as a twelve Cadillac garage.

The new change will effect the academic order of the college. To overcome this situation there will be no Saturday classes and only classes in the afternoon on Mondays.

Dr. Dabney Lancaster, president of Longwood, recently appointed Mr. Richard Meeker, House-Daddy and Mrs. Kathleen Cover, coed observer.

This edifice is a stately colonial building designed for the new men's dormitory. This is an architect's dream in reality.

College Announces Holidays

Members of an underground investigating committee have been undermining the administration by lobbying for extra holidays for the remainder of the year.

Officially, April 4 has already been set aside for "release day" when all students will have the opportunity to visit other dorms for the day, but other holidays have been requested.

The committee reported that the L. C. (Lost Chord) administration has also compromised on two other dates. April 27 will be set aside in honor of Ulysses S. Grant, who in 1822, was born in Chattanooga, Tennessee, to parents of southern standing but who migrated to the north to assume positions in civil service activities.

For the celebration of Harry S. Truman's birthday, on May 8, students will be allowed to take off one day, provided they spend the time taking voice lessons. This request is being made by London critics who have recently banned together to stimulate interest in voice recitations as rendered by students not—Margaret.

The announcement of other dates, will be made on August 2, when the underground investigating committee completes investigations of sewers.

"Musical Americana" will be featured in Jarman Hall next Monday night.

paa Gamma, honorary fraternity in leadership, will travel to Pawleys Island, South Carolina, on April 23, to atend a spring planning convention.

Betty Islin, president of AKG, Mason Moore, Ann Carter Wendenburg, and Eloise Macon will serve as delegates to this meeting.

The purpose of this session is to lay plans for the annual fall convention. The date, place, theme, and discussion groups will be discussed and decided upon during this period.

The four delegates will convene with other members from South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia at a cabin located on the shore of the island. During the two day stay, delegates "will also take time out from work to swim, hike and eat," commented "Boop" concerning social functions of the week-end.

Delegates will return to school next Sunday night, April 25.

del Rio and Pedro Armendariz, prominent Mexican actors. The setting is the picturesque floating gardens of Xochimilico, Mexico.

The film was awarded the grand prize for photography at the international exposition of Cannes, France. "Maria Candelaria" is generally conceded to be the best picture ever made in Mexico at present.

The director of the film is Emilio Ferrández, who is internationally known.

This simple story of Indian life features Senorita Rio as a girl brought to her ruin by the gossip of the villagers. Senor Armendariz is the peasant boy who tries to save her from this ruin.

The motto of the Spanish Club is "Lazos mas estrechos entres las Americas," translated "Closer bonds between the Americas." It is through projects such as the presentation of this movie that the club hopes to carry out its motto .

Priest To Reign Over Celebration

Pat Altwegg, a blonde, blue-eyed senior from Warwick, has been chosen by a faculty committee and President Dabney S. Lancaster to represent Longwood College at the 27th Annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival to be held in Winchester, April 29 and 30.

Pat is one of the 36 princesses who have been chosen from colleges in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland to serve on the court of the Apple Blossom Queen, Patricia Priest, who is the daughter of Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, Treasurer of the United States, and a senior at Washington and Lee High School in Arlington.

The festival is a mammoth two-day celebration which includes the Coronation of the Queen, the Pageant of Springtime, luncheons, parades, concerts and dances. Also, the princesses will attend an informal party Wednesday night, a tea dance Thursday afternoon, and a ball both Thursday and Friday nights.

The colorful Coronation will take place Thursday morning on the steps of Handley High School amid the splendor of the pageant which draws spectators from all over the United Sattes. The festival is held each year at the time when the apple trees are in full blossom.

Excited and happy about having been chosen Longwood's representative to the festival, Pat is looking forward to her four-day stay in Winchester where she will stay at the George Washington Hotel which is the princesses' headquarters.

The dress Pat will wear for the Coronation is an azalea colored nylon dress with a tulle skirt. The dress is garnished with tiny blossoms on the bodice. The other color which will be used for court is light green. These two colors represent the colors of the pink apple blossoms against the light green of the leaves.

Pat adds this honor to many others she has received while at Longwood. She was chosen for Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities, served as business manager of the 1954 Virginian, vice - president of Alpha Kappa Gamma and also a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, Kappa Delta Pi, Kappa Delta social sorority and Cotillion Club. Pat has also served as secretary and treasurer of Pan Hellenic Association, president of Granddaughters Club, and is a member of H2O and A. C. E.

Pat plans to teach in Fairfax next fall but plans to loaf this summer. Although she says she is not very athletic, she loves water sports, of course, since she lives on the shore. She is interested

Uniformity of Uniforms

The Editorial Staff of the Rotunda wants to go on record in support of the recent announcemement made by the Dean of the Women concerning the new attire for Longwood Ladies. In case you avid readers of the Rotunda missed, accidentally of course, an article describing the new attire please allow us to enlighten you.

For casual campus activities the well-dressed Longwood lady will be found wearing a chic Nile green Capri blouse with high neckline terminating somewhere! The lower appendages will be clad in Medditerranean blue tights. Here we have means of covering the body more completely. (This was suggested by Home Department). Editor's Note: Due to the exhausting efforts by the Dean of Women the Sunday attire has been designed by Heathen Window. competitor of Christian Dior. This is a stunning little one piece print embroidered with famous battle scenes of Joan of Arc. For special traditional holidays students may have their choice of green and white or red and white striped cottons. Decisions of course, will depend upon their loyalty.

We hope that this announcement on fall fashions of 1954 will be greeted by the student body with great enthusiasm since our students always strive to be Longwood Ladies in both taste and appearance.

In sympathy with the additional financial strain now placed upon the students having to make a complete wardrobe change, may we make it clear that these fashions are not compulsory; however, it would not be advisable for students to be found in the Rotunda, main halls, classrooms, snack bar, downtown, the infirmary, or campus unless properly attired.

Let's Cut It Out

Dating at this college has developed into an appalling situation. According to a recent survey Longwood girls date four or five times weekly. Obviously this does not leave much time for becoming acquainted with the other girls in the college, nor does it allow much time for our intellectual development.

Our health is also endangered by dating so much. We do not leave the night spots in Burkeville or the theaters in Farmville in time to get enough sleep on date nights. If we could get in by 12 this situation could be corrected.

Of course the administration is glad that boys from all of the colleges in Virginia want to flock to Longwood every night. However, they feel that the students would be better off if they confined dating to week-ends. Therfore they hope to induce a plan to prohibit week-night dating.

In order to win the girl's approval of this plan, the administration hopes to engage The Dorsey Brothers and Eddie Fisher for week-end entertainment.

In connection with the banning of week-night dating, the love seats will be removed from the stacks in the libary and the light will be turned on in front of the Rotunda.

Dr. C. G. G. Moss and Dr. George W. Jeffers have condescended to give lectures in the dating parlors, on week-nights, until the ban goes into effect. We hope that Dr. Moss and Dr. Jeffers will continue to lecture in the parlors on week-ends after the proposed ban is adopted.

We feel that this plan will improve the students' morale, since they will have week nights free to enjoy the intellectual facilities offered by the college.

Unfortunately the plan for banning week-night dating will not go into effect until next year. Until then we have some suggestons for improving the dating situation as it now stands. They are:

1.—Date less

2—Get in by 12 p. m.

3.—For diversion try different sorts of amusement such as watching television in the "Rec", or just walking down to one of the local movies.

Each of us should weigh her dating situation carefully, and take steps to prevent her dating from consuming so much time.

Sneak Day

The Senior class will fly by Victorian Airlines to the Hawaiian Islands June 7 for Sneak Day. After a day of sipping pineapple juice and basking in the sun, the seniors will return to school on June 8 to attend classes in grass skirts. Lawn mowers will be locked up that day.

Engaged (or half-way hooked)

It gives us great pleasure to announce that at present Anne Carter Wendbag is now engaged in mixing paste in Mrs. Buck's sixth grade.

Jemima Cobb, part-time owner of the Goodie Shop on High Street is now engaged to the Billing and Charging Department.

Marion Ruffin became engaged Tuesday night to the idea that her roommate became engaged late Saturday night. Naturalizations to you all!

Unpinned:

Mrs. Nancy Masters, with tears streaming from her eyes, unpinned 10,000 safety catchers that held her on the stage three nights last week.

Big Blow-Outs

The Dangerous Danville girls, including "Whip" Wilson, "Viper" Vaden, "Jip" Jefferson and Bump" Bankhead, to mention a few, journeyed to the ole hometown last week-end for the celebration of the re-opening of Sneakie Fete's Place, Everyone seemed to have had a grand time—as 'Whip' would say—"the joint was jiving!"

Last week Carolyn "Moloch" Stoneman attended the IBC (I Buma Cig) fraternity hop that was held at the Marijuana Manufacturers Institute at Tobaccoville.

Sally Cecil, Mary Hundley, Shirley Wilhide, Helen Marie Wood and yours truly attended the annual convention of the Southern Collegiate Hot Tempered Womens Union, held in Steam, Africa. Miss Paterson, Longwood's official delegate, was elected as the "Redhead most likely to Succeed."

People and Places of Interest:

Moneda Key was seen dancing around the pinta's last Saturday night with her senior at the Midsummer's held at the University of Mexico. (No, she didn't see Fay).

Pat McLemore and Georgia Jackson flew to Paris to do some last minute shopping and visit with Tene Tanner nearby at the University of Lyon.

Of Nothing

By PAT KELLY

According to a recent issue of "Last Month" magazine an alarming situation has come about on the windswept plains of Siberia. The price of eggs in Siberia has reached an astounding height—4,000,000,000 rubles per egg white and an additional 3,000,000,000 marks per yolk. (The shells included gratis.)

This increase in price has occurred since the death of Stalin last year. In fact the inflation is due to his death. The former head of Russia's government, was fond of hens and their products and had issued a decree protecing the fowl many years ago.

A certain number of Siberian hens' eggs were shipped to Stalin's palace where they were used in the preparation of his favorite dish — "Eggs Sunny-Side Up, American style." The shells were saved, ground up, and served as a special delicacy to the palace servants.

Malinkov does not share his predecessor's fondness of the dish. He stated to an American correspondent at one of the many press conferences, "I am tired of eating eggs for breakfast, lunch, tea, and dinner. They taste especially loathsome when cooked in a samovar."

Malinkov has banned eggs in Russian and Siberia.

In the regions of the lower Antarctic a serious governmental problem has arisen. Since the impeachment of the president, Ima Penguin for installing a heater in his igloo, there has been much trouble.

The electoral college has tried to select a new leader for their democracy, but they have reached a deadlock between the Vertebrate Candidate, Dinah Soar and the Inveterbrate's choice, A. Moeba.

The Prime Minister stated in a cable to the Farmville Trumpet that the deadlock would soon be broken and the democracy would have a new leader.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor

In connection with your recent appointment to the position of editor-in-chief of the Rotunda, I, for one, would like to congratulate you and your staff on your new posts.

Your editions of the Rotunda have been marvelous, "stupid" endous, colossal, wonderful, and magnificant—that is to say—fair! Further more your papers have displayed much ingenuity, originality, vivaciousness, and freshness.

I feel, that by reading the newspaper, which you edit, I am brought closer to the real, intelligent you.

Keep up the good work!

Dr. Earley, Miss Blake Repeat Nuptial Vows In Night Service

Anderson, Guilgud Attend Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Preston Blake, of Virginia Beach, announce the marriage of their daughter, Florence, to Dr. C. L. S. Earley. The wedding took place in room 28, Cunningham, on Tuesday, March 22 at 8 p. m.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white taffeta and net made with a yolk outlined in seeds. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a circlet of gold leaves, given to her by the cast of "Romeo and Juliet." She carried no flowers, since Dr. Earley had forgotten to buy any. "I was so excited that I completely overlooked it," explained the nervous bridegroom.

Miss Jane Blake was her sister's maid-of-honor, and Mr. Charles Patterson served as best man. The honor attendant wore a dress of orange velvet, which was strapless with long sleeves.

Bridesmaids were the Misses Betsy Welbon, Sally Wilson, and Ruth Gleaves. They were dressed in pink organdy and carried yellow forsythia.

Mr. Romeo Rice, Dr. Francis Butler Simkins, and Count Alamond of Geneva, Switzerland, served as ushers.

Miss "Tippy" Tabb, flower girl, wore a miniature copy of the bride's dress, while Master Dick Meeker, ringbearer, was dressed in a black suit which was designed in the Little Lord Fauntleroy style.

Preceding the ceremony Mr. Roy Jesson played one of the couple's favorite songs, "Too Young" and accompanied Mr. Attix on another, "I Want to Be Evil."

In addition to the guests from in and around Farmville, King Farouk, Queen Elizabeth II, Katherine Grayson, John Guilgud, and Judith Anderson, special friends of Dr. Earley, attended the ceremony.

A small reception was held in room 29 Cunninghaam immediately after the wedding. The couple then left on a two day honeymoon to Burkeville.

'Lirpa Loof' You All Or—What's in a Name

Lirpa Loof!

Have you noticed this name appearing after various articles in the newspaper today? What does it mean?

Simply speaking, the title is to confuse the reading public. It is also a title which imposes upon the intellect of its readers.

In this issue, moreover, it has another meaning. Spell "Lirpa Loof" backward—and by the way, Merry Christmas.

Bride and Bridegroom

Dr. and Mrs. Earley, who before the marriage ceremony, were Dr. Earley and Miss Blake. Blushing demurely, when the picture was taken, Miss Blake commented that she was a happy bride.

Famous Actress Recounts Story Of Climb To Stardom

Strange Tale Unfolds to Roving Reporter

By SNOOP

"To be, or not to be."

These famous words echoed through Jarman Hall as this writer waited to talk to the noted actress, Nancy Nelson.

When she had finished the tiring rehearsal, Nancy came over and began unwinding one of the strangest tales ever told. The beautiful brunette poured two glasses of pink lemonade and after giving one to me she leaned back against her tiger-skin couch and began the story of why she was the only woman in history to do the part of Hamlet.

"One day," she related, "I was walking down the street in old Italy with my hat pulled down to keep people from recognizing me, for I was wanted by the police for stealing a pencil. All of a sudden I saw a cop and I immediately took off down the nearest alley, only to find that I was trapped, the alley being blocked by cops at both ends.

"In desperation, I ran into a door and through long, dark corridors. All the while I was wondering how the cops had managed to recognize me in my disguise, which was one of a medieval Danish lord.

"All of a sudden I popped out on a large floor with thousands of people sitting to one side. Several people were on this floor, dressed in outfits similar to my disguise. One of them turned to me, and said, "Speak your lines, Hamlet."

"Hamlet!" I had heard that name before. Then I remembered who he was for I had studied him in high school. So, I blurted out some lines I had memorized and when I had finished, to my amazement, the house roared with applause. I was an immediate success and have been doing this part for 17 years since."

When Miss Nelson finished, I stepped outside and called in my friend Thursday. He quietly took Miss Nelson away and put her on the boat for Italy. You see, my friend Thursday was a cop and Miss Nelson had really stolen a fountain pen!

Construction Of New Pool Begins Today

Construction of an outdoor swimming pool in the area behind the library will begin today according to Malcom Graham, professor of mathematics. Money for the pool was appropriated at the recent meeting of the State Legislature.

The new "swimming hole" which which will be one hundred yards by fifty yards will be constructed of black and white tile. A ten foot tile area will extend around the edge of the pool. Three diving boards of different heights will be built at the shallow end of the pool.

The new pool will be used for advanced swimming classes on days the weather permits. Beginning classes will continue lessons in the old pool. In the winter, the water will be frozen over for ice skating. The men plan to begin an ice hockey team at a later date.

During the summer session of classes, times will bet set aside for use of the pool for pleasure. Lounge chairs and glass-top tables will be placed around the lawn.

The state hopes to appropriate money for motor boats for use in water skiing. However, skiing will be allowed only on Fridays at midnight since Mr. Merritt expects to be fishing for trout the rest of the week.

Children of Farmville will be invited to use the pool on Saturdays and Sundays. Life savers will be furnished by the Longwood T20 Club.

Contractors have requested that no one enter the roped off area when construction begins.

Farmville Pool Room To Serve Longwood

The committee for the promotion of wholesome recreation for Longwood announced today that Student Standards has accepted their proposal doncerning student use of the local pool hall.

Wednesday nights have been set aside for the Longwood pool class, which Mrs. Emily Landrum, will instruct. Next week, she will register all girls who are interested in becoming more proficient in this aspect of physical education.

Due to Virginia State Laws, which prohibit gambling, all money involved in bets on game results, must be kept under the table. Dot Vaden, president of Student Government, has been appointed official stake holder for bets.

Because of her efficiency and past experience, Miss Virgilia Bugg has been appointed head bookie. She will tabulate the bets and her mob, the Bugg Mugs, will be posted on each dorm hall.

If students demonstrate enthusiastic support of the sport, competitive games between the red and white and green and white teams will be scheduled this spring.

"Musical Americana" will be featured in Jarman Hall next Monday night.

paa Gamma, honorary fraternity in leadership, will travel to Pawleys Island, South Carolina, on April 23, to atend a spring planning convention.

Betty Isln, president of AKG, Mason Moore, Ann Carter Wendenburg, and Eloise Macon will serve as delegates to this meeting.

The purpose of this session is to lay plans for the annual fall convention. The date, place, theme, and discussion groups will be discussed and decided upon during this period.

The four delegates will convene with other members from South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia at a cabin located on the shore of the island. During the two day stay, delegates "will also take time out from work to swim, hike and eat," commented "Boop" concerning social functions of the week-end.

Delegates will return to school next Sunday night, April 25.

Priest To Reign Over Celebration

Pat Altwegg, a blonde, blue-eyed senior from Warwick, has been chosen by a faculty committee and President Dabney S. Lancaster to represent Longwood College at the 27th Annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival to be held in Winchester, April 29 and 30.

Pat is one of the 36 princesses who have been chosen from colleges in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland to serve on the court of the Apple Blossom Queen, Patricia Priest, who is the daughter of Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, Treasurer of the United States, and a senior at Washington and Lee High School in Arlington.

The festival is a mammoth two-day celebration which includes the Coronation of the Queen, the Pageant of Springtime, luncheons, parades, concerts and dances. Also, the princesses will attend an informal party Wednesday night, a tea dance Thursday afternoon, and a ball both Thursday and Friday nights.

The colorful Coronation will take place Thursday morning on the steps of Handley High School amid the splendor of the pageant which draws spectators from all over the United Sattes. The festival is held each year at the time when the apple trees are in full blossom.

Excited and happy about having been chosen Longwood's representative to the festival, Pat is looking forward to her four-day stay in Winchester where she will stay at the George Washington Hotel which is the princesses' headquarters.

The dress Pat will wear for the Coronation is an azalea colored nylon dress with a tulle skirt. The dress is garnished with tiny blossoms on the bodice. The other color which will be used for court is light green. These two colors represent the colors of the pink apple blossoms against the light green of the leaves.

Pat adds this honor to many others she has received while at Longwood. She was chosen for Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities, served as business manager of the 1954 Virginian, vice - president of Alpha Kappa Gamma and also a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, Kappa Delta Pi, Kappa Delta social sorority and Cotillion Club. Pat has also served as secretary and treasurer of Pan Hellenic Association, president of Granddaughters Club, and is a member of H2O and A C E.

Pat plans to teach in Fairfax next fall but plans to loaf this summer. Although she says she is not very athletic, she loves water sports, of course since she lives on the shore. She is interested

Student Body President States Plan; Hampden Sydney Men Make Reforms In Relationships With Longwood Girls

Men State Opinions On Longwood Dating

by FLOSSIE LOU DOE

Jim Stokes, President of Hampden-Sydney's Student Government Association, has given full backing to the recent plan brought before him by the "Better Relations With Longwood Committee."

Jim states, "These suggestions which our boys have given me are great. I, myself, have dated many, many, Longwood girls and have not even gotten around to the freshmen!"

Also, one of the reformers and true leaders in this revolution is Bill Trapnell, who is known by all Longwood girls for his witticisms at all times. Bill is heading this group because he, in particular, has "always longed to date the Farmville girls for every Hampden-Sydney activity."

Bill has announced that the following boys, due to their outstanding enthusiasm, will aid him on his committee. These boys are Jimmy Slaydon, Dick Haislip, Lee Finks, Sonny Tucker, Stokley Fulton, Petie Cheek and Jim White. Others active in the group are Bill Reed, Bobby Rosenbaum, Phillip Key, and "Tigmo".

Upon interviewing some members of the student body, the staff was amazed with the various answers. Gordon Lucey, that little lad from the country, remarked, "Well ah tell yo, they're kind of fast for me, but ah'm all for em!"

As Mr. Lucey finished his statement a melodic tune found its way down the hall and informed us that the music was coming from Joe White's mezo soprano voice as he sung (in dedication to Longwood girls) "Satisfaction Guaranteed."

A few other boys were against the idea of dating Longwood girls, reasons offered were that they didn't want to make the trip or settle down to one girl. Some of these were Tom Sewart, Sid Settle, Bobby Gold, Bobby Brumfield and Ames Drummund. The ring leader of this group is Howard Winn.

After talking with many, many, more reformers, we left the men planning the new activities to take place in honor of their neighboring school.

The Rotunda Staff, on behalf of all the girls, extend their thanks to the boys!

Foard Buys Car Lot

Don Foard, has resigned to open a Chevrolet dealers business.

Foard purchased a display lot behind the College tennis courts. He purchase the lot from Jake Wamsley, who said "I hate to sell my lot."

LC To Offer New Courses

For the benefit of the more intelligent and industrious members of our student body, the administration wishes to announce the addition of a number of new courses for the 1954-55 session.

As announced previously by the education department, an observation class will meet in the College Shoppe to study the effects of glaring waitresses and the psychologicala aspects of patrons; also in the College Shoppe will be a class in home economics to observe the methods of making drinks and greasy foods.

The English department has added an intensive survey into the medium of the "comic book." This new literature course has two semester credits and is a one semester course.

A new class in dramatics has been added also. It deals with the study of the techniques of Bette Davis's acting to see why "she should have been drowned at birth!" This is also a two credit course, and as Dr. C. L. S. Earley stated, it is a class that has long been needed at Longwood.

An entire new department will be introduced next year. It will offer courses in contract bridge, honeymoon bridge, and auction bridge. The new finesse department has received Moneda Key and Pat Altwegg, as head and assistant professors, respectively.

Senior Girls Elect Carter President

Elections for 1954-55's senior class officers were concluded last night. Mary Fleming Carter was elected president while Ellen Porter was made vice-president.

Fifi has had a leading role in Longwood acivities. This year she held the office of vice-president of the Athletic Association. Majoring in science, she has served as a lab assistant for the past three years. Also, Fifi served as secretary of the choir in her sophomore year.

Ellen Porter, a major in music, has held several offices in the preceding year. She served as treasurer of choir, feature editor of the Rotunda, and house president in her freshman year. Ellen minored in math and she won a scholarship in that course this year.

Finishing class elections, Elleanor Koch was selected secretary; Mary Denny Wilson, treasurer; Jackie Marshall and Nell Copley, Student Standards; and Mary Lou Burnette and Virginia Sutherland, representataives for Student Government.

Black Reveals Council Rules

Jackie Black, newly elected President of the House Council, has announced the adoption of new rules. These rules were recommended by Barbara Alkali, gone out president of house council. They are as follows:

Poker playing will no longer be allowed in the dormitories, the Rotunda is reserved for this purpose.

2. Beds must be made by 6:30 a. m.

3. Study hour is to be observed between 11:55 p. m. and 1:05 a. m., only.

4. House mothers must sign out before going downtown in the daylight.

5. Ash trays must be emptied every three days.

6. Dormitory rooms must not be used for sleeping between meals.

Jackie will have these new rules inserted in the "Foot Book" for next year. Anyone violating these house council rules will be sentenced to drinks on the house.

Dr. Less To Aid Dr. Moore

"With the increasing numbers of cases of Spring fever and Sunburnitus pouring into the infirmary, the need for another physician has become obvious, stated Miss Amy Felton.

To meet this need Rah Less has been appointed to assist Dr. Ray Moore in his practice.

Now that the girls have two college physicians from which to choose they are in a state of confusion. Out of pure curiosity more girls will flock to see Dr. Less while less will want to see Dr. Moore, but more girls have more confidence in Dr. Moore while they are less acquainted with Dr. Less. However, Dr. Moore has more work than Dr. Less, and Dr. Less can assume Dr. Moore's work as he will have less.

This states the situation—more or less!

Group To Give Music Novelty

Show To Feature American Legends

"Musical Americana," a concert novelty, will be presented by a company of 20 noted dancers, singers, and musicians in Jarman auditorium, at 8 p. m., Monday, April 26. This is the last of six programs in the College Artist Series for 1953-54.

The concert which is based on native folk songs and dances is produced by Mary Hunter who has collaborated with such artists as Jerome Robbins, choreographer of "The King and I"; Paul Green, author of "The Common Glory" and "The Lost Colony"; and Baldwin Bergerson, composer and arranger. Miss Hunter, a noted Broadway director, is an outstanding authority on American legends. She has staged both dramas and musical productions, and won acclaim several years ago for her presentation of "Ballet Ballades" at the Music Box Theater in New York. Last season she produced, "An Evening with Will Shakespeare" for the Theater Guild with a cast including Claude Rains and Margaret Webster.

The company includes such outstanding performers as Ray Harrison, Margaret Cuddy, John Reardon, Francella Kennedy, Norris Greer, James Tarbutton, Joan Skinner and Keith Chalmers.

The opening scene transports the audience to a New England village just before the Revolutionary War where a stern musicmaster, with tuning fork and short patience, attempts to teach a group of nice young people the proper way to sing a hymn.

In its performances, the concert recalls music the Americans have loved and sung and danced to since colonial days set to stories that have been handed down from one generation to another. The program ranges from pre-Revolutionary days to the 1920's.

Another number reveals the contents of a letter written by Benjamin Franklin from Paris to his children in Philadelphia, appraising his homeland as he sees it from the distance.

Next, "Musical Americana" shifts its scene to the New Bedford waterfront from which the jaunty music of nautical dances, and rounds of sea chanties evolve. One of the most colorful works in the production is "Westward Ho," a ballet with songs, set in the days of American Gold Rush.

Especially for this concert, Paul Green has written an Appalachian folk operetta entitled, "Saturday Night." It is a romantic story of a mountain courtship successfully culminating in a rousing square dance.

Robert Celman in the Daily Mirror reported: "an inventive arrangement of song, dance and drama native to America . . . in a joyous sprightly mood."

"Musical Americana" will be featured in Jarman Hall next Monday night.

Music Group Will Sponsor Voice Recital

On Sunday, April 25 at 4 p .m., ten voice students of the Longwood Music Department will give a recital in Jarman Hall. "This program will be open to the public," announced Mr. C. E. Attix, instructor of music.

Karen Spencer will open the recital with "Pur Diceste, O Bocca Beiba" by Lotti and Horn's "I've Been Roaming."

"Ah Quanto E Verdo" by Cesti and "Preach Not Me Your Musty Rules" by Dr. Arne will be sung by Nancy McLawhorn.

Mary Ann Wright will appear as the third member of the program, singing Scarlotti's "Sento Nel Core" and "He Was Despised" from Handel's "Messiah."

Nan Bland will sing "Il Bacio" by Arditi and "Come to the Fair" by Martin.

As the only male member of the concert, Herbert Goodman will sing "Tu lo sai" by Torelli and "Lonesome Road."

Naomi Farthing will sing "Tanto Suspicero" by Bencini and Penn's "Carrissisima."

Schubert's "der Fod und dus Madchen" and Campbell-Tipton's "Crying of Water" will be sung by Carolyn Clark.

Doris Horne will sing "Il Pleure dans Mon Coeur" by Debussy and Calbreath's "My Love Rode By."

"Jeune Fillettes," composer unknown, and Strickland's "My Lover Is a Fisherman" will be presented by Betty Jane Staples.

Dottie Morris will bring the recital to a close by singing Handel's "Air-Selve" and Malloy's "Kerry Dance."

Marshall To Assume Duties of Fire Chief; Manlove Will Assist

Jackie Marshall, a sophomore from Suffolk, has been chosen to serve as fire chief for the coming year, according to June Manlove, retiring chief.

As chief Jackie will be in charge of arranging fire drills with Mr. Raymond French, professor of chemistry, and is in charge of fire regulations, conducting monthly drills, and appointing hall wardens. She will assume her duties this month.

June will automatically become assistant chief and aid Jackie with these responsibilities.

Jackie was chosen for her post by a committee composed of June Manlove, this year's chief; Jean Hodges, assistant chief; and Mr. French, advisor.

Jackie is a member of the Cotillion, Granddaughters Club, and Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority. She is also active on college publications.

Pat Altwegg will serve as Apple Blossom Princess in Winchester next month.

May Day Pageant To Open With Sounding of Trumpet

With the sound of the trumpet at the Longwood Dell on May 1, the May Day pageant, "Past and Present, in the Heart of Old Virginia," will come alive for presentation.

The May Day program for the first time is being presented entirely under the direction of students and is composed of a general chairman, committee chairmen, and participants.

The sound of the trumpet on this first day of May will herald the entrance of the Queen, Ann Foster, and May Court members who will assemble on the platform to witness the pageant proceedings. At this time the queen will be crowned and her reign for the day will officially begin.

The program consists of narration and dances which carry out the historical theme of Prince Edward County which is celebrating its bicentennial this year. The program is divided into two distinct divisions—the settling and establishment of the County, and the founding of Longwood College, or State Female Normal School, as it was known then.

Briefly, the first part of the program consists of the Indian era with Indian dances; the pioneer era with folk and square dances; and the Colonial period with the minuet as an illustrative dance.

The next era includes the trend toward education at Hampden-Sydney College, and displays caps and gowns for the academic flavor. The development of agriculture in the County is brought out by narration and Negro spirituals. The Civil War era is portrayed by the dancing of the quadrille.

The second portion of the pageant consists of the founding of the SFNS in Farmville. The modern dance group will render dance selections. The turn of the century period will be illustrated by the "Gay Nineties" theme while the flapper era will usher in the Charleston age. Depression follows this age and again the modern dance group will perform. To illustrate the present day, the traditional May Pole ritual will be followed.

Jean Hodges is chairman for the May Day pageant.

Four AKG Delegates Will Attend Session

Four members of Alpha Kappaa Gamma, honorary fraternity in leadership, will travel to Pawleys Island, South Carolina, on April 23, to atend a spring planning convention.

Betty Isl.n, president of AKG, Mason Moore, Ann Carter Wendenburg, and Eloise Macon will serve as delegates to this meeting.

The purpose of this session is to lay plans for the annual fall convention. The date, place, theme, and discussion groups will be discussed and decided upon during this period.

Delegates will return to school next Sunday night, April 25.

Longwood Students To See Spanish Film

"Maria Candelaria" is the title of the Mexican film to be presented in Jarman Hall Thursday at 8 p. m.

This movie, which is sponsored by the Spanish Club, will be in Spanish with English sub-titles.

Starring in the film are Dolores del Rio and Pedro Armendariz, prominent Mexican actors. The setting is the picturesque floating gardens of Xochimilico, Mexico.

The film was awarded the grand prize for photography at the international exposition of Cannes, France. "Maria Candelaria" is generally conceded to be the best picture ever made in Mexico at present.

State Offers Scholarships

Applications for a state teaching scholarship for 1954-55 are now available in the executive office according to an announcement by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president. July 1 has been set as the deadline for scholarship applications.

A $400 scholarship is open to freshmen and sophomores who major in elementary education. Juniors and seniors who are elementary majors or majors in art, business education, distributive education, English, foreign language, home economics, library science, mathematics, music, natural sciences, physical and health education, and speech, are also qualified.

For the first time, juniors and seniors in the social studies and history fields will be allowed to apply for this scholarship.

To be eligible for a scholarship, a student must be a resident of Virginia who is preparing to teach in Virginal schools; must possess scholastic ability and personal characteristics desirable for effective teaching; be a student classified as a freshman, sophomore, junior, or a senior in a state or private college in Virginia under the scholarship plan.

The recipient of a scholarship must agree to teach in a Virginia public school for the same number of years as the duration of the scholarship.

Briefly, application procedures for scohlarships will follow.

1. The President of the college or his authorized representative will recommend candidates, who are preparing for teaching in accordance with specified regulations. Freshman candidates will be recomemnded in accordance with special regulations which appears on the application.

2. The prescribed application form must be used and submitted to the State Board of Education. If the applicant is approved by the Board, he will be notified through the college.

Class Gives Program Of 2 One-Act Plays

The Longwood Play Production class presented two one-act plays in assembly last Tuesday. "The Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden" by Thornton Wilder and "The Physician in Spite of Himself" by Mollere.

George Obbourne directed The Happy Journey" and also played the part of stage manager.

Playing the part of Mr Kirby was Marian Webb. Her husband Pa Kirby was played by Fred Stables. The children Arthur and Caroline were played by Nancy McLawhorne and Joanne McClelland, respectively.

Lucas, Jacqueline's husband, Russell Vance. Leandre, Lucinde's lover, Rex Daye.

Priest To Reign Over Celebration

Pat Altwegg, a blonde, blue-eyed senior from Warwick, has been chosen by a faculty committee and President Dabney S. Lancaster to represent Longwood College at the 27th Annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival to be held in Winchester, April 29 and 30.

Pat is one of the 36 princesses who have been chosen from colleges in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland to serve on the court of the Apple Blossom Queen, Patricia Priest, who is the daughter of Mrs. Ivy Baker Priest, Treasurer of the United States, and a senior at Washington and Lee High School in Arlington.

The festival is a mammoth two-day celebration which includes the Coronation of the Queen, the Pageant of Springtime, luncheons, parades, concerts and dances. Also, the princesses will attend an informal party Wednesday night, a tea dance Thursday afternoon, and a ball both Thursday and Friday nights.

The colorful Coronation will take place Thursday morning on the steps of Handley High School amid the splendor of the pageant which draws spectators from all over the United Sattes. The festival is held each year at the time when the apple trees are in full blossom.

Excited and happy about having been chosen Longwood's representative to the festival, Pat is looking forward to her four-day stay in Winchester where she will stay at the George Washington Hotel which is the princesses' headquarters.

The dress Pat will wear for the Coronation is an azalea colored nylon dress with a tulle skirt. The dress is garnished with tiny blossoms on the bodice. The other color which will be used for court is light green. These two colors represent the colors of the pink apple blossoms against the light green of the leaves.

Pat adds this honor to many others she has received while at Longwood. She was chosen for Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities, served as business manager of the 1954 Virginian, vice - president of Alpha Kappa Gamma and also a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, Kappa Delta Pi, Kappa Delta social sorority and Cotillion Club. Pat has also served as secretary and treasurer of Pan Hellenic Association, president of Granddaughters Club, and is a member of H2O and A. C. E.

Pat plans to teach in Fairfax next fall but plans to loaf this summer. Although she says she is not very athletic, she loves water sports of course since she lives on the shore. She is interested

Longwood To Install Air Cooling System

A contract for the installation of an air cooling system in Jarman Hall has been signed, according to a recent announcement by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president.

This installation is being done by the Virginia Air Conditioning Company of Lynchburg, which has agreed to complete the job within 56 days by commencement exercises.

The total installation costs have been estimated at $12,220.

Rules

Now is definitely the time.

There are students at Longwood who seem to make it a common practice to complain about various rules governing their actions here and away from school! These complaints students make, in a great number of cases, are justifiable, but only when they are directed to some constructive end.

The purpose of this editorial is to clear up many misconceptions students have concerning Student Government; and to serve as an appeal for students to offer helpful suggestions to the Council.

First of all, every student in the college is a member of the Student Government Association. This organization manages the affairs of the student body in cooperaiton with the administrative officers of the college. It is governed by the Student Council, whose officers are elected by students.

Since everyone is a member of Student Government, it seems only natural that she should have a part in the formulation and changing of rules.

At present, the Council is in the progress of reorganizing the Student Handbook which includes the condensation of all rules into simpler forms and meanings. The present handbook is so full of over-lapping rules and miscellaneous regulations that many students find them difficult to understand or even follow correctly. With this condensation, a "weeding-out" process of old, outdated rules, it is hoped, will take place.

The Student Council is definitely doing its part to fulfill the needs of the students but it can only do those things of which it is aware. This is where the student body comes in, so to speak. Now is the time for students to make suggestions for changes in rules or any other lay-out variations.

We, the Rotunda staff, would like to start the "ball rolling" by suggesting seven rule changes, which, at present, seem superfluous to us.

1.—Students should be allowed to date during dinner hour.

2.—Seniors should be allowed to stay out on week-nights until 10:30 or 11 p. m.

3.—All students should be allowed to have a date during church hour on Sunday night without attending church.

4.—Cedarbrook and Boxwood should be included in the approved places to eat.

5.—Juniors and Seniors should be allowed to attend the drive-in movie until 11 p. m.

6.—All students should be allowed to sit on benches with dates until 10 p. m., during the entire year.

7.—Juniors and seniors should be allowed to ride with dates within the radius until 10 p. m.

Of course it is understood that these suggestions have to pass both the Student Council and the administration.

These are our suggestions. We know you have them too! It is the student body's responsibility to make constructive suggestions. So make them or stop complaining! Now is your chance!

Will it Fail?

No so long ago, the student body of Longwood College went to the polls with enthsiasm and zeal and elected girls to head May Day. This same student body eagerly accepted the responsibility of presenting May Day this year and was full of plans to work with the committee chairmen.

Today, this same student body seems to have forgotten one thing—that their job was not finished there.

Fortunately, there are those who have not forgotten about their responsibility, and those few have put into May Day many, many hours of their precious time. Our hats go off to those few; however, the indifference of the rest of the student body is more than a little disgusting.

May Day, after all, is one of the traditions that makes Longwood what it is. People from far and wide know of the beautiful sight of the May Day pageant in the Dell at Longwood Estate, and come from miles around to witness it each year. One wonders how Longwood's own student body can ignore such a compliment and challenge.

People who signed up to be in the dances should respect their own signatures enough to show up for rehearsals. It is discouraging for the girls who worked out the dances to have only three or four girls present for rehearsals. It is not only discouraging, it is frightening when one considers the fact that May Day is two and a half weeks away.

We like to brag about May Day and its beauty, but are we willing to work to make it a success?

The time has come to push up our sleeves and put forth some effort on this year book for next year. This reorganization

It Should Fly

The observant person must have noticed something missing over the Rotunda—the American flag.

This observation may seem like a minor detail and, offhand, one might have justification for this belief; however, it is definitely worthy of notice. The flag at present rarely flies at all, but when it is flying, it is for no specific purpose. The inconsistency in flying "Old Glory" causes the flag to lose its significance.

It has been suggested that the flag be raised and lowered on National holidays and special school occasions such as Circus, Founders' Day, and May Day. If this were accomplished, the flag could serve as a visible message to the student body and townspeople that the day was a "special" one at Longwood.

Let's fly our flag!

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

News is a bit better this week with a few more girls going to parties, a few engagements, and the like.

First off, a few words about Cotillion. Everyone seemed to have a swell time. Dean Hudson did a wonderful job and, of course, there is nothing we like better than to have a plentiful supply of men on campus (even if it is just for one week-end!) Nancy Siriplin, Sally Cecil, and Dot Douglas attended Cotillion and the KA party at H-S the same night—can anyone top that?

At U. of Va. the same week-end were our own Carolyn Smith, Judy Knight, and Jean Gibson.

Congratulations are on hand for Mary Elva Robinson who was recently elected as "Phi Kappa Sigma Girl" of Randolph-Macon. Mary Elva and Betty Jean Jenkins were among the many who attended the Phi Kap Ball held at the University of Richmond this week-end.

Dottie Rector found her way to Wake Forest and Deane Hillenbrand this week-end where she attended the Sigma Chi Sweetheart Ball. Dottie says she had a great time.

Also down Carolina way this week-end was Doris Harcum, "Deadeye" Harcum attended the KA parties at Duke University.

A few of our coeds managed to venture off the roof long enough this week-end to show off their beautiful tans (and red!) Having wonderful times at Virginia Tech were Ann Wayne Fuller, Sis Brown, Jean Carole Parker, Judy Harris, Liz de Haven, Garland Webster, Fannie Scott, Jeanne Saunders, Ann Carter Wendenburg, Becky Fizer, Gail Peoples, Patsy Free, Judy Knight, Carolyn Smith, Jean Hayden, Margaret Duke, Ann Moore, Flo Pollard Frankie Williams, Glenna Kesterson, Suzanne Garner, and Betty Schaffer.

Engaged—a bit belated but nevertheless, congratulations to Betty Davis who is now engaged to Bob Edwards of Winchester, and Betty Jean Oakes, who received a diamond. Also our campus photographer, "Peanuts" Winder, who received a diamond.

From the looks of things it seems that many young men's fancies are turning to thoughts of love. Now, more than during any other season, men from many campuses have come to Longwood courting. Resulting from the spring fever and romantic nights they seem to be drawing out their little black books and calling the gals. If you're one of them and the call brings exciting results let me know—Good Luck!

The Roundtable

By PAT JONES

I have something to tell you that is so good that I long for an advertisement starting out "Hey Kids" and offering a beanie cap or bubble gum to people who would follow its instructions. Since this is college, however, and not junior high school, I must appeal to the cultural and artistic aspect of your souls. This thing I want to tell you offers an opportunity our college community has never had before, although the French and Spanish departments have approached it individually. It is the idea of bringing in the better films, the great films that we would otherwise miss in Farmville. "The Red Shoes," "Limelight," "Henry V," "The Bicycle Thief"—these are some of the great films of all times. They can be brought to Farmville, to the Lee Theatre, if you as students, and the townspeople are sufficiently interested. Let me elaborate and tell you how the idea got started.

A number of people on our campus followed the film projects on other college campuses (yours truly saw the "Snows of Kilimanjaro" at Randolph-Macon Woman's College last aSturday), and becoming interested in starting a similar program here at Longwood, they began discussing it. After a number of false starts a group of L. C. students met, and under the sponsorship of members of the faculty, formed the organization that they call the Better Films Committee. It is composed of representatives of Besore Eh Thorn, Orchesis, Choir, Spanish club, French club, submitted its choice of a movie, and the committee, working with the management of the local theaters, proposes to book these six suggested films for the school year. Beginning next semester, one film would be shown during each of the months of October, November, January, February, March and April. The films would play on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Now, you see what an asset such a program would be for our school and town. Farmville can be small in size but big in ideas. These films are for your benefit and enjoyment, and your support is essential. In its next issue, the Rotunda is going to ask for your reactions. Make them favorable. In the meantime talk it over. The committee feels it is a worthwhile project and would like to make it a permanent fixture in Farmville.

Study or Snack -- It All Fights Back

By NANCY LENZ

Peaceful, quiet—quiet, it is 8:15 and the sophomores and freshmen have scurried to their respective halls. Quiet descends throughout the campus as study hour arrives. I gather together my pen, my pencils ,papers, books, and prepare to burn the midnight oil. But do I have cooperation? Ha! Do monkeys study? Well, do they? For example, strains of "In the Mood" echo down the water pipes as a trumpet tickles its tonsils throughout the air waves of Farmville and mingle with the staccatto tapping of next door's typewriter; or the crunch, crunch of the roommate's peanut brittle and jelly crackers; or the bidding of hearts, spades, or diamonds in the corner.

Suddenly, the door bursts open—telephone call for the Roomie, who rises, hands me her bridge band and her peanut butter sandwich; rambles through the drawers-desk drawers, chest of drawers, any drawers for nickels, dimes or quarters, the call is probably collect.

Then, once again the jelly jar is opened and the bridge bids are heard. The hands of the clock advance—8:30; 9 p. m.; 9:30—a mumble is heard. Alas, alack! The peanut jar is empty! What is in order Ah, yes, it seems to be my turn to venture to that din of iniquity, that hole of Calcutta—the snack bar. I am handed a note, a coca-cola bottle filled with nickels; am kissed on both cheeks, scratched between the ears, wished bon voyage, fair you well, and a hurry back we're starving to death. Friendship, friendship, just the perfect friendship. I don my raincoat, which is otherwise known as my Sunday attire, and venture forth.

I trip gently down the steps, trying to keep from tripping over my pajama pants leg which have just unrolled, take a deep breath and sail headlong into the snack. No sooner have I pulled my elbow out of someone's ribs, placed both hands on the counter and pulled myself to my feet—than do I find myself fact to face with a phys. ed. major who begins bidding for a place in line.

At long last I hear the welcomed "What'll you have?" I place the order, dump my bottle of nickels on counter and prepare to leave. I line both arms with candy, peanuts, cigarettes ,milk shakes, balance a pepsi on my head and pick up that last bag of potato chips with my teeth and leave. Quite naturally I ascend the stairs only to step on the heel of my slipper with the toe of the other. Slat—oh, well, the maid will be along tomorrow.

I reach the room and collapse in the bed with the words of "It is a far, far better thing than I have ever done . . ." on my lips.

P. S.—I saw Romeo and Juliet last week!

Wesley Group Elects Next Year's Officers

Joanne Dyer was installed on April 11 as president of the Wesley Foundation for 1954-55. Other officers for the group are: Loretta Brooking and Frances Northern, co-vice-presidents; Jo Hillsman, secretary; Margaret Beavers, treasurer; Virginia Ayers, town representative; and Dottie Morris choir director.

Union Vespers will be held next Sunday night, with the Wesley Foundation in charge of the program. Mr. Harold Ehrensperger from Boston University will be the speaker.

Tomorrow a group from Wesley Foundation will present a program of worship and recreation at Powhatan for the Powhatan Subdistrict group.

Fish, Frogs, Eager Smiles Welcome Student Teacher

By CAROLYN STANLEY

The young girl stood gazing around the room, noticing the gaily decorated bulletin board, the goldfish dancing in a bowl, a puppet or two on the table, a frog, rocks, and a few dried up leaves. There were thirty tiny desks all lined in rows of five, and books on the shelves with mysterious titles such as "The Choo Choo that Wouldn't Say 'No.'"

Strange little folks scampered into the room, laughing and jibbering to themselves. There were pretty petite girls with long blond curls, and freckled face boys that wore overalls and tennis shoes. She tried to see them one by one but they were too fast for one set of eyes. She noticed their smiles as they looked the "New Teacher" over, they were the whole-hearted smiles that only a child can give, glad that she was there.

For three years she had attended a teachers college, trained, studied and worked to prepare herself to teach. She had looked forward to that first day of student teaching and here it was! The next three months would determine a lot. Today was not the first time the thought had occurred: "What is this teaching business all about? Yet, sixteen years of school, and here I am back in the second grade."

Such thoughts may have passed through the minds of many girls in the same situation. At a State Teachers College, many plan to teach school, others stay very much on the border line. What does the teaching field have to offer? Just what personal satisfaction could I gain if it were my chosen field?

Everyone is interested in the pursuit of happiness. Teaching serves this quest in two ways. First ,it explores the possibilities for happines which exist in every individual through creative expression and appreciation at his appropriate level. Second, it provides techniques for doing better many things that one wishes to do, increasing others satisfaction and sense of achievement.

It is much concerned with the values of living. It is a challenge at all times to develop and mold young people into better adjusted individuals, better citizens better Americans.

The young child, so untouched, lives life to its fullest and enjoys the simplest things that it has to offer. To hear the squeals of excitement, to share in their tragic moments, witness the thrill of learning something new, whether it be the first day Johnny wrote his own name or learning the significance of X in algebra class, and a host of other activities. All can provide the teacher with enriching experiences every day.

Giving a mother's love and understanding, playing doctor to the skinned knee, teaching the fundamentals in the learning process, and preaching through life the Christian ideals, and the American way, all blend together for the teacher from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. five days a week.

This may be the sentimental issue; it may appear to be hard work, but the fact remains that this is the most important factor in the teaching profession for "Unless you love 'em, you can't teach 'em."

Gladness, Dread? 'Tis What's Ahead

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Dear Diary,

It's an extremely beautiful day today. I jumped happily to my feet at the crack of dawn, sang good-morning to my dear little roommate and dashed into the hall where all my neighbors were jitterbugging to the tune of "Good Loving." We all wished each a good day, then with beaming smiles, we disappeared back into our rooms, to dress, comb our hair and look beautiful for breakfast.

At 7:10 a. m., we all went laughing merrily to the dining hall. After greeting the rest of our good buddies, we sat down to enjoy oatmeal and fishroe. Then, bursting with good health, we skipped out of the dining hall and back to our rooms I joyfully mopped the floor, made the bed and dusted the furniture.

At last it was time to go to my beloved science class where I madly took notes on a terribly interesting chemistry formula. My next class was phychology which I also thoroughly enjoyed.

Now, Dearest Diary, I must go bid my sweet friends a Happy Vacation because today—I go home.

Love,

Sally Student

Diary,

Got up at seven to go to breakfast. Couldn't open my eyes at first and stepped on my roommate who had fallen out of bed. We haven't spoken all day.

Miss Chambers gave me a calldown for rolled-up hair and partially concealed pajamas. Got furious when the girl next to me wouldn't stir my coffee. How does she expect me to do that at 7 a. m.?

Dragged back to my room, threw on skirt and shirt, went to science ten minutes late—fell asleep—no notes!

Went to psychology—fell asleep. Got call down for unmade bed. That makes five. Got to go before government tonight.

Might just kill myself.

Unhappily,

Me

Western Conclave Of Phychologists Shows Hate Drives

(Editors note: This article was condensed from an article in a recent issue of the Reader's Digest.(

Why do we sometimes take a strong dislike to a stranger on first meeting? Somebody who has never injured us in any way may arouse a sharp antagonism: a new face appears in school pressure begins to mount. Why? What produces this irrational, even embarrassing response?

On the West Coast recently, a group of psychologists held a series of conferences to try to answer this question.

Every case laid on the table fell into one of three classes.

He, or she, reminds you forcibly of someone you dislike or have disliked; or he shows a quality which you dislike in yourself; or he represents a threat to your security.

1. He reminds you of someone you dislike.

The newcomer in the office is a tall man with red hair and green eyes. Years ago you bought some worthless stock from a tall man with red hair and green eyes. The association switchboard in your mind identifies the new man with the old: You hate anyone who looks like the man who made a sucker out of you.

All of us have been hurt by the actions of other people—or think we have. We may remember vividly certain characteristics of the one who administered the hurt—the set mouth, the tone of voice, the nervous walk—and the associative process ring a bell.

2. He reminds you of something you dislike in yourself.

The newcomer in the shop is always trying to please the boss. You are not above buttering up the boss yourself, but you hate yourself for doing it. So you hate the new man for reminding you of something you would rather not think about.

Perhaps the newcomer is a woman who talks too much, or smokes too much, or indulges in malicious gossip—things which you have been known to do.

3.He threatens your security:

A newcomer appears in the office, a very competent performer. Will he get that promotion you were hoping for? Will he make your job less important? You feel that just by being there he threatens you.

perhaps a new soprano joins the local chorus. She has a good voice; yes, her manners are all right. But why should she get all the solo parts?

We tend to dislike anyone who, unwittingly or not, makes us feel smaller, weaker, more foolish than we thought we were. They spoil our picture of ourselves.

When you experience blind hate, check against the list. How to reduce your blood pressure then becomes an interesting adventure. You will not always be able to get it down—especially in the case of a potential threat to your security. But I predict that you can do it in enough cases to improve your human relations.

Spring is here, and with it, practice for spring sports. Softball and wisket practice will be on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays at 4 p. m. and archery practice will begin at 3 p. m. on Tuesday and Thursday. The usual eight practices are required for class and varsity participation.

Spring is the time for tennis too. Singles are now being played and girls are asked to sign up right away on the AA bulletin board for doubles.

Carolyn Gray is the girl to see if you're interested in going to Hockey Camp this summer.

The hockey and lacross camp which is held at Camp Tegawitha near Tobyhanna, Pennsylvania, is designated to benefit coaches, club and college players.

Camp Tobyhanna will hold three weekly sessions, under the direction of Miss Constance M. K. Applebee, founder of hockey in the United States. This will be the thirty-third session of hockey camp there.

Those attending the camp will participate in practices and match games, and will be coached in strokes and tactics Discussion groups will be held on coaching, playing umpiring and organizing of teams.

According to the girls who went last year, hockey camp means sore muscles, and a few pounds gained from eating too much food. It also means dips in a mountain lake, games at night, and just gallons of good Poconono Mountain air to breathe.

Most of all though, going to hockey camp will mean learning a lot about hockey and having a wonderful, wonderful time. See you there!

LC Athletic Group Holds Installation

Clad in white, the members of the 1954-55 Athletic Association were installed into the council on April 5.

Helen Waitman, president, was installed by Else Wente, outgoing president. Vice-president Mary Ann Ward, secretary, Jane Lohr, and treasuresr, Ann Snyder, were installed by Helen Waitman.

Other new members of the council were also inducted. They include Carolyn Gray, varsity hockey manager; Fay Evans, class manager; Lou Wilder, varsity basketball manager; Nancy Tolley, class basketball manager; Loretta Kuhn, volleyball manager; Hilda Hartis, swimming manager; and Cy Quarles, tennis manager; and Joan Ward, softball and wisket manager.

The publicity committee, includes Mary Davis, Dolores Winder, and Barbara Mitchell; and members of the recreational committee are Patsy Hamner, Sara Lou Wendenburg and Barbara Whitehead. Joan Dyer, Audrey Owen, Lucy Thwing, Jeannett Puckett, and Becky Hines have been chosen to make up the social committee.

Lib. Features Japanese Art

"Prints by Hiroshige" are now on exhibition in the browsing room of the library. These Japanese prints are from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

According to the criticisms sent by the Virginia Museum, the Japanese began making prints in the eighth century, but the art was not perfected until Hiroshige's day (1797-1858).

For subject matter, Hiroshige, preferred the intimate episodes of life, and he excelled in depicting the nuances of atmosphere and the seasonal phenomena. He achieved the illusion of twilight, mist and rain by a sensitive graduation of colors. The prints in the library show his color preference to be blue, green and shades of the two.

Japanese prints are not solely the product of the artist, but they are a cooperative project of artist, engraver and painter.

The design, drawn by the artist on paper, is posted face down on a flat block of wood. The engraver then scraps away the paper until the design shows through. The design is then colored by a special process and imprinted on paper. The finest qualities of paper, wood and ink are used in this intricately skilled phase of art.

Monogram Elects Hartis, President

Election of officers for next year and an initiation service formed the proceedings of the Monogram Club last Monday evening.

New officers for next year are Hilda Hartis, who will serve as president of the group; Dottie Morris, who will assume duties as secretary; and Ann Carter Wendenburg, who will take over the treasurer's position.

New members are Virginia Burgess, Betty Frances Scarborough, Barbara Mitchell, Anne Carter Wendenburg, Dottie Morris, Joan Ward, Beckie Hines, and Lucy Thwing.

Athletic ability is not necessarily a prerequisite for membership into the organization. Interest and support of athletic events also recommends a girl for membership

County Offers Prize For History Essays

Prince Edward County, as a parts of its Bicentennial celebration, is sponsoring a research paper contest for college students.

The subject of this paper is to be on any phase of Prince Edward County's history, including persons, places, institutions and events in its development. This contest is open to all students enrolled in the colleges situated within Prince Edward County.

The awards will consist of first prize, $150.00; second prize, $100; and third prize, $50.00.

Students writing the essays are required to have a minimum of five thousand words. The paper must be typewritten and include a bibliography, in any standard form. Any quotaations should be footnoted to mark the reference from which it was taken.

The deadline for the essays is November 1, 1954. All studenis are invited to enter this contest and try their luck with writing a research history.

Secretary Reports On Job Placements

Nearly all seniors who wish to teach next year have obtained positions, according to Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary. The jobs range over the entire state of Virginia and a few girls are planning to teach in other states.

Fairfax county will claim Pat Altwegg, Johanna Biddiecomb, Betty Frances Gillette, and Mary Eva Robinson. Diane Kreyenbuhm plans to teach in Arlington. Betty Benton, Mary Carter, Patty Derring, and Jean Hodges have decided upon Martinsville. Windsor will claim Mrs. Elsie Cox, while Nelse Ivey has decided upon South Hill. Jean Pearce will teach in Amelia County.

Richmond and surrounding counties will employ Lynell Bradshaw, Henrico County; Mary Ann Evans, Richmond; Marilyn Thompson, Highland Springs; and Billie Tomlinson, Richmond. Sylvia Reames plans to teach in Petersburg.

About one-half of the seniors who are planning to teach have chosen places in the Tidewater section of Virginia. Virginia Berry, Nancy Lou Gilbert, and Patsy Sanford have accepted positions at Churchland High School. Princess Anne High School will claim Elizabeth Boswell, Ann Foster, and Elizabeth Kitts. Peggy Hood, Moneda Key, Ann Mallory, Ann Thomas, Mary Anne King, and Else Wente plan to teach in Newport News. Pat Donnelly and Betsy Jean Robertson have decided upon Hampton.

Nell Copley and Joanne Utley will teach in Virginia Beach, while Oceana will employ Jane Branch. Nellie Culpeper and Mary Page Wade will teach in Norfolk County. Betty Islin plans to teach in Warwick, and Lucy Mann in Smithfield.

Nan Ellen Bland will teach in Holland; Ellen Porter at Deep Creek; Shirley Roby in York County; and Dorothy Strinefield in Ivor. Virginia Sutherland has decided on Dinwiddie County; Doris Underwood on Henry County; and Virginia Wentz on Winchester. Gail Dickson plans to teach in Pennsylvania.

Mary Denny Wilson has not yet signed a contract but she has been notified by the Norfolk School Board that her application has been accepted. Dolly Horne, Elizabeth Gillikan and Wanda Doll will also teach at Virginia Beach.

Drama Club Initiates 27

Tonight at 7 p. m., the Longwood Players will initiate 27 new members into their organization.

The requirement for membership in the dramatic group is that a student must participate in one year's apprenticeship in either acting, staging, lighting, publicity, or costuming.

Those receiving bids to join the Players are Patsy Abernathy, Frances Bailey, Barbara Burnside, Hazel Hart, Pat Jones, Paty Kelly, Nancy Quarles, and Dorothy Rector.

Marilyn Thompson, Roberta Wiatt, Peggy Ilyus, Sarah Leatherman, Catherine Dessaix, Patty Parker, A. Brooking and Margart Dryden are also included among the new members.

Others invited are Pat Johnson, Mary Mayo, Virginia Morgan, Betty Jane Shackelford, Becky Fizer, Gail Leonard, Rex Daye, Herb Goodman, and Fred Stables.

Journalism Society Elects New Officers

Dot Douglas and Betty Scarborough were recently elected president an vice-president, respectively, of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary fraternity in journalism.

Phoebe Warner was elected to hold the position of treasurer, and Peggy Worthington will act as secretary next year. Plans for a student directory are also under consideration.

Four Initiates Join Orchesis

Four student apprentices to Orchesis, a modern dance group, were initiated on April 12, after completing the requirements for initiation.

Mary Cowles, Beth Kent, Trianne Lampkin, and Jean Carol Parker were taken into membership.

The requirement for initiation is that the apprentice must have served in two dance presentations by Orchesis.

Plans are now underway for an informal spring program to be held in the gym on May 20.

held in the gym on Thursday, May 20, at 1 p. m. Members of Orchesis, and students of the modern dance classes are working on the dances for the program, under the direction of Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, instructor in physical education.

Standards Group Selects Chairman

Eloise Macon, a junior from Lynchburg, has been selected as chairman of the Student Standards Committee for the 1954-55 session.

Other officers were also chosen by the present Committee. June Manlove was elected secretary of the group; Marguerite Franklin, chairman of the calendar; and Flo Soghoian, chairman of regulations and the point system.

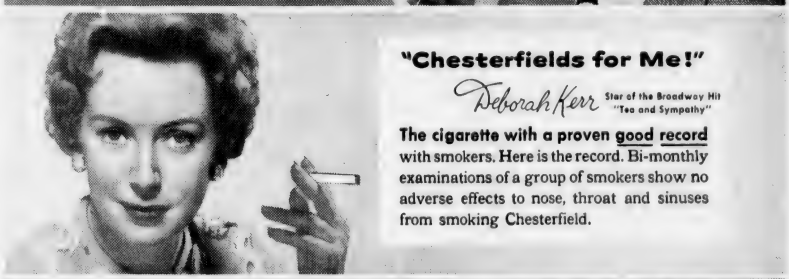
Plans are underway for a joint meeting of the old council with the new members next month to acquaint the new staff with committee proceedings.

Lou Kitts, outgoing chairman, expressed her gratitude to the old Committee for its work on past projects which were accomplished throughout the year.

'Y' Will Hold Union Vespers

In cooperaion with the Methodist Student Union, the YWCA will hold Union Vespers at the Methodist Church next Sunday night, with Mr. Harold Ehrensperger of Boston University as guest speaker for the evening.

Mr. Ehrensperger is an internationally known speaker who was editor of the Methodist magazine before traveling to India to aid the illiterate children of the country.



The old and new "Y" cabinet held its annual spring retreat at Longwood Estate last Monday night. The purpose of the meeting was to explain the duties to incoming cabinet members. Jean Carol Parker, president, appointed a committee to work with her on investigating possible changes in the Constitution. Themes for next year were also discussed at the retreat.

Previous to the retreat, Jean Carol met with her cabinet to disregard to YWCA policy, plans, and cuss suggestions for next year, in organization.

VOLUME XXXIII | Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia, April 28, 1954 | NO. 17

1954 May Festival Set For Saturday

Springtime, Music Set Theme for May Dance

A land of spring flowers and music will greet those present this Saturday night at the annual May Dance which will conclude a day of tradtional May Day activities. "May Melodies," the theme of this year's dance is to be carried out both in decor and music.

June Johns, general chairman of the dance has announced that Joyce Quick, music chairman, has obtained Gean Mitchell and his R. P. I. Orchestra to provide the music for the dance. The R. P. I. group is a newly formed orchestra which has been playing at night clubs in Richmond.

To carry out the theme, "May Melodies," Beth Kent and Margaret Duke, decoration co-chairmen, are using flowers, musical notes and colored crepe paper to lend an atmosphere of spring. The main attraction will be a huge bird cage suspended from the ceiling in the middle of the gym with two paper mache birds inside.

The figure which will be led by May Queen, Anne Foster, will consist of Bobbie Assaid, maid of honor, and the court members, Mary Anne King, Betty Islin, Sylvia Reames, Beth Kent, Joan DeAlba, Nancy Tanley Masters, Peggy Layman, Patsy Abernathy, Jane Lohr, Loretta Kesterson, Amy Riggins and Iris Arne. The figure to be presented is a musical eigth note after which the court members and their escorts will dance to the strains of "While We're Young." Libby McClung is in charge of the figure.

Those to chaperone for the dance are President and Mrs. Lancaster; Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women; Miss Nancy Chambers, assistant dean of women; Dr. and Mrs. Jeffers, Dr. and Mrs. Brumfield, Miss Patterson, Dr. and Mrs. Landrum and Mr. and Mrs. Merritt.

Those serving as committee heads for the dance are figure, Libby McClung; orchestra, Joyce Quick; invitations, Gale Branch.

Tickets for the dance are priced at $2.40 for a couple

Dr. Schlegel to Study At Harvard for Year On Ford Scholarship

Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, professor of history and economics at Longwood was recently notified that he has been awarded a Ford scholarship, and plans to begin his advanced studies in these fields at Harvard University, Boston, Mass., this July.

He and Mrs. Schlegel, who is now instructing in the English department, will reside there for the duration of the scholarship which is one year. Mrs. Schlegel plans to take classes there also.

The Ford Foundation reserves a fund for the advancement of education and each year a certain number of scholarships are given to high school teachers and college professors whose applications have been accepted. The professors who apply must plan to teach for at least twenty years and must state what studying he wishes to do and how he thinks the year provided for under the terms of scholarship, will benefit him in his future teaching.

Dr. Schlegel stated that he and Mrs. Schlegel plan to leave the United States for a trip abroad on June 9 before beginning their courses of study.

MBC Contest To Offer Trip To Hollywood

Sylvia Reames ,a senior from Petersburg, has been chosen by the Rotunda staff for representation in the College Queen of America contest sponsored by the Mutual Broadcasting System's "Queen for a Day" program.

Colleges throughout the United States select a representative girl for entrance into the contest. The selection of Longwood's entry was made by members of the Rotunda staff who did the selecting through the auspices of the Public Relations Department and the administration. Staff members voted upon a list of suggestions offered by administration members. Sylvia was chosen at this voting.

The selected girls from each college will be judged by a committee of Hollywood judges. The judges will in turn select five winners who will appear on the May 12 "Queen for a Day" program for final eliminations. The winner of the contest will be announced on the program, May 21.

In preparation for the contest, Sylvia submitted to the committee two photographs — one head shot and one full length view. Girls will be judged according to personality, beauty, and charm as revealed in the photographs.

A trip to Hollywood will be among the rewards for the five finalists. When they arrive in Hollywood, a "whirl of activities" will be awaiting them. Each contestant will receive a complete hair styling treatment. Shopping tours and outstanding nightclubs will be attended by these finalists. They will be escorted by boys attending colleges and universities on the west coast.

Last year the queen was chosen by Jeff Chandler and the Westmore Brothers. The queen last year won gifts including a car, typewriter, luggage, and jewelry.

The only comment Sylvia has been able to say concerning the activities of the contest is "I was overwhelmed at being selected."

Va. Assembly Grants Longwood $1,642,960

The General Assembly appropriated $1,642,960 for the operation and maitenance of Longwood College for the next biennium Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster officially announced today.

Dr. Lancaster said that this amount was almost as much as he had asked for, but that funds appropriated for capital outlay fell far short of the actual needs. He added that he realized none of the state institutions received what they wanted for capital outlay.

Longwood will receive $103,000 for improvements and additional equipment for the biennium.

Of the total amount appropriated for operation and maintenance, $869,100, more than half, will come from tuition and other revenues to the college and not out of the taxpayer's pocketbook. Longwood will receive $812,900 for the first year of the biennium and $830,060 for the second year.

RUNNING THROUGH LAST MINUTE REHEARSALS for the pioneer dance in the 1954 May Day celebration are Patsy Sanford and Virginia Berry.

College Announces Summer Courses

Longwood College will offer two, three, four, five and eight-week courses in the 1954 summer session which will open June 21 and end August 14.

The program of the summer session will offer courses for students who want to finish college in three years; those who want to take business classes in the summer; those who need to repeat courses or raise their quality point average; teachers who want to renew their certificates; and holders of liberal arts degrees who want to obtain collegiate professional teaching certificates.

In addition three workshops will be offered for teachers who wish to work on special problems: a dance workshop, June 21-July 9, an education workshop, June 21-July 9, and a library workshop on cooperation among school officials, teachers, and librarians, July 5-23.

During the summer session classes are scheduled from Monday through Friday. Living quarters will be provided for men students as well as women.

Classes will be offered in the departments of art, biology, business, chemistry, and general science, education, psychology, and philosophy; English, history and social sciences, home economics, library science, mathematics, music, and physical health education.

Music Major Plans Recital

Miss Lura Beavers, of Indian, a senior at Longwood College, will present a piano recital in Jarman Auditorium at 4 p. m., Sunday, May 9.

She has appeared both as a solo performer and as an accompanist for other soloists and for the Longwood College Choir. She is also an organist, and is known for her activities as a member of the Methodist Church in Farmville and of Student Christian organizations.

Her program has been selected to represent a wide variety of piano styles, from the delicate music of Scarlatti to the modern sonorities of John Ireland and Albeniz. It will include, as major works, a Sonata by Beethoven and one of the Ballades of Chopin.

Third in the Spring series of recitals by Longwood music students will be a program of piano music to be presented by Nancy Jane Jones, Joyce Clingenpeel, both of Roanoke, Ann White Thomas, of Blackstone, and Sally Wilson, of Hopewell, Saturday, May 8, in Jarman Auditorium at 8 p. m.

The first half of the program will consist of selections by Mozart, Brahms, Hindlemith, and also a well known Chopin Nocturne and Dubussy's Arabesque No. 1. The second half of the program will include selections by Mozart, Shubert, and Bach's Chorale, a Mozart Sonata and Chopin's first Polonnaise.

Altwegg Begins Court Duties Tonight

Today, Pat Altwegg, apple blossom princess from Longwood, arrived at the "Apple Capitol," Winchester, where the twenty-seventh annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festivities have officially begun.

This afternoon the queen and her court had a rehearsal of the coronation, and tonight they will be escorted to an informal party.

The two-day celebration will begin at 11 a. m. when the queen, Pat Priest, will be crowned. Following the coronation the Pageant of Springtime will begin at 11:30 a. m. Tomorrow, Pat will also attend a luncheon for distinguished guests at 1 p. m.; a Pageant of Springtime at 3:15 p. m.; a firemen's parade at 6:30 p. m., and a fireworks display at 8 p. m.

On Friday, April 30, at 10:30 a. m., the queen and her court will give a repeat performance of the Pageant of Springtime, and at 12 p. m., there will be a luncheon for visiting mayors. At 1 p. m. the festivities will continue with an area beauty contest. Also on Friday will be the Grand Feature Parade at 2 p. m.

Pageant To Illustrate County's Past History

"Past and Present In the Heart of Old Virginia," Longwood College's 1954 May Day celebration under the direction of Jean Hodges, general chairman, will open its festivities in the Dell of Longwood Estate at 3 p. .m., this Saturday.

The pageant in narration and dance, which includes the historical development of Prince Edward County, the settling and establishment of the county, and the founding of Longwood College as the State Female Normal School, is being presented in connection with the Prince Edward County Bicentennial and the college's annual commemoration of the first day of May.

A prelude to the program will include the entrance of the Court and the crowning of the Queen of May, Ann Foster, of Farmville.

Barbara Assaid of Waynesboro, will serve as Ann's Maid of Honor and her court attendants are Patsy Abernathy, Iris Arnn, Joan DeAlba, Betty Islin, Beth Kent, Loretta Kesterson, Mary Ann King, Peggy Layman, Jane Lohr, Nancy Tanley Masters, Sylvia Reames, and Amy Riggins.

Crown Bearer

Johnny Leonard of Richmond, will serve as the Queen's Crown Bearer. He is the five-year-old brother of Gail Leonard, a sophomore here at Longwood. Johnny will be attired in a traditional all white outfit.

Georgia Jackson, as narrator, will open the first part of the presentation with a historical background introduction, and will then announce the interpretive dances which will illustrate the periods from 1754 through the Civil War.

Dances of the Weyanoke Indians around 1606, the folk dances performed by the pioneers during thir movement westward, and the social balls that began during the time when Prince Edward County was named, will advance the program through the Colonial Period.

The educational trend and agricultural development will be introduced also and will be followed by the effect of the Civil War on the Prince Edward area of Virginia.

With the beginning of the second part of the program, the founding of Longwood College will enter into the history of the county and the remaining eras will be represented through their effect upon students at the normal school. These times include the Restoration period when a training school for women teachers was founded, the waltz period, the "Gay Nineties," the Flapper era, and the depression days.

May Pole

The final interpretive dance will represent the present day and will feature the traditional May Pole Dance in the heart of old Virginia.

May Day is being directed this year for the first time by an all student committee under sponsorship of the Student Council. Committee chairmen are court, Libby McClung; costumes, Lou Seibel; dance, Shirley Roby; May Day Dance, June Johns; music, Karen Spencer and Betty aBiley; programs, Anne Brooking; properties, Florence Blake; script, Mary Jean Carlyle; transportation, Lou Wilder; and Publicity, Gail Leonard.

Mary 'Lou Barlow is business manager for the presentation.

Thomas Plans Jamaica Trip This Summer

A Longwood College senior has been chosen as one of four Baptist students in Virginia colleges to represent the Virginia Baptist Student Union in Jamaica for ten weeks this summer.

Ann Thomas of Newport News was honored by this selection at the students' spring retreat held in South Boston on April 23, 14, and 25. Others who will be attending from the State are Helen Siner of Roanoke, representing Bluefield College; Rudy Wood of Chase City, representing the University of Virginia; and Margaret Garland of Village, representing Mary Washington College.

Students were selected by a screening committee consisting of the state student secretary, church student secretaries, and representatives from colleges in the state.

Leaving from Miami, Fla., on June 10 by plane, the Virginia students will be among 32 other students from the Southern Baptist Conference attending. On their arrival they will have one week of orientation to procedures, plans, and new evironment. Then they will begin their work with the Southern Baptist Foreign Board in a new mission field that was recently begun in Jamaica. Their primary duty will be working with the Jamaican children in Bible schools.

Ann's activities and honors in her four years at Longwood have included Editor-in-Chief of the "Rotunda," 1953-54; Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalism fraternity; Kappa Delta Pi; national honorary fraternity for teachers; Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary fraternity for leadership; Future Teachers of America; ACE, and the Longwood Choir; and "Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities."

Her Baptist work here has also been outstanding. She served as social vice-president for the State BSU in 1952-53 and as first vice-president of the local BSU in 1953-54.

Members of Faculty Meet for Workshop

Three members of Longwood faculty will return to college today after attending a two-day Citizens Workshop educational project at the University of Virginia.

Dr. C. G. G. Moss, professor of social studies and history, Miss Kate Trent, assistant professor of education and Dr. Edgar Johnson professor of duication attended the conference.

This workshop is a national enterprize which is sponsored by the Teachers College of Columbia University. For the past two or three years, th project has daith with experimenal work in the teaching of social studies in high schools, but recently it has extended its studies to college areas.

It is hoped that information concerning the planning of future program in history and sociology can be gained so that the college itself, will be able to better prepare students in this field

Dream or Reality?

Did you ever feel that you were born too late? For instance, to late to see the great John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, and Charlie Chaplin in some of the early and successful films of the American movie industry.

There is some illusive fascination in the great names for us who have only heard about them, read about them, wondered about them—Jean Harlowe, the Barrymores, or the foreign films — "Bicycle Thief," "Open City," "Hamlet," "Caesar and Cleopatra" and "Red Shoes" and on and on. These are the ones in history books or that our parents admired or that are acclaimed in the capitals of the world.

Several months ago an idea began to take shape in the minds and dreams of several Longwood girls. These students wanted to make available these movies as a medium of entertainment, art, and education to the entire college. The ultimate goal was to project these films right here in Jarman Hall, using movies as an addition to our cultural growth and our entertainment opportunities on the campus. This is still the main objective, but to achieve the utmost in success you must start at the bottom like climbing a ladder from the lowest rung!

The Better Films Committee as the girls call their new organization began to investigate; they appealed to the faculty and various campus organizations for encouragement and advice; found it and made a plan. Now they present it to you for your consideration.

Discovering that it was impossible at this time to present a regular film program in Jarman Auditorium using similiar films to those established at many other Virginia colleges, the Committee turned to Mr. Howard Simmons, manager of Farmville's two theaters. His plan offers a solution and a starting point. — During each of six months of the next school year, Mr. Simmons will show one of the great film classics or finest foreign movies for two days at the State Theatre. He has designated a Wednesday and Thursday of each month and will present films selected by the Longwood Committee. Season tickets to all of the six movies will be sold to Longwood students at a reduced price of $2.00. The subscription tickets are both a service and advantage for students and a guarantee for the management of the theaters.

Essentially, the project is strictly Longwood—we're supporting it, planning it, presenting it—but the showing will be open to H.-S. C. and the townspeople—for they too, have already shown enthusiasm for it—it isn't a new thing, but has just been waiting for some action.

The Committee consists of its Chairman Pat Jones, several faculty members, and representatives of several campus groups, Beorc Eh Thorn, Choir, Orchesis, Longwood Players, and the French and Spanish Clubs. Their duty is to select worthwhile films, sell the tickets, and see that you know about it. We would commend these students for their foresight, effort and interest in providing greater entertainment and educational opportunity for Longwood students, but right now they need some preliminary reassurance from you! Do you like the idea and its purpose? Think it's worthwhile? Will you support it?

On another page of this paper you'll find a ballot which will be used as a survey, just to get a general idea—you won't commit yourself to unconditional terms but you would help the committee know whether it's worthwhile to keep on meeting, discussing, choosing, and planning. Sign your name, check yes or no, and drop the slip on the head table or put it in the Rotunda box.

Yet Alive

There are some buildings overlooking the East River in New York which house an organization that is yet alive, despite the curse put upon it by some people, and despite the fact that peace does not exist throughout the world.

This organization has six organs through which it operates; five of them are located in these magnificent buildings on the East River.

The main organ and the nearest equivalent to a Parliament of Man is a General Assembly. Each member nation, now numbering 60 nations, has a vote in this assembly.

Next in importance is the Security Council. It has five permanent members — China, France, U. S. S. R., the United Kingdom and the United States. Six others are elected for two year terms, making the total 11.

Its primary responsibility is to maintain peace and security. When an act of aggression or a breach of peace is made, all member states are pledged to make available "armed forces, facilities, and assistance necessary to maintain peace and security." It has the right to investigate any disrepute and to recommend ways and means of peaceful settlement, and in certain circumstances, the actual terms of settlement. Such has been the case with Indonesia, the Israel-Iran dispute, and Korea.

Another important organ is the economic and Social Council which seeks "to build a world of greater prosperity, stability and justice."

The trusteeship council seeks to develop self-government in colonies which have requested independence from the Colonial Power.

Over-seeing all the other organs in a vast administrative function is the Secretariat. At its head is a Secretary-General appointed by the General Assembly and recommended by the Security Council. On April 7, 1953 Dag H. A. Hammerskjold of Sweden was named to this position for a five-year term.

The sixth principal organ and the one which is not located in New York is the International Court of Justice. It has its headquarters at the Hague in the Netherlands. It is composed of 15 judges. It serves to judge legal disputes which are submitted to it and as an important advisory board.

These six organizations are comprised into what we know as the United Nations, and act as the arm which is seeking to engulf the world into a complete circle instead of a ball that has been sliced into many pieces.

It is interesting to note that the United Nations is maintained by contributions from its members. It is even more interesting to note that the contribution per citizen in the United States was 62 cents for the past year, and in contrast, the cost per citizen for military developments in the United States for the past year was $400.

A little more concern, a little more knowledge of this amazing experiment that the world has made, and a little less criticism would be made with a great deal more understanding.—Ellen Porter.

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Hampden-Sydney opened its doors a little wider to admit quite a few of the Longwood girls. The Chi Phi's at H-S. C. were host to what we think was one of the best parties we've ever seen.

The Friday night parties, which were closed to everyone but the Chi Phi Fraternity and their dates, found Doris Harcum, Beth Kent, Flip Blake, Betty Cory, Martha Francisco, Norma Croft, Bettye Maas, Ann Bankhead, Pat Cantrell, Glenna Kesterson, Suzanne Prillaman, Sara Lou Wendenburg, and yours truly present.

For the Saturday afternoon "Ship-Wreck" party, there were Ann Bankhead, Flip Blake, Barbara Blackman, Pat Bodkins, Sis Brown, Pat Cantrell, Betty Cory, Bettie Crawford, Norma Jeanne Croft, Nancy Deaton, Ellie Everett, Ann Foster, Martha Francisco, Marguerite Franklin, Sue Garber, Shirley Garst, and Jerry Lee Haley.

Also attending were Doris Harcum, Bev Harlow, Judy Harris, Molly Ann Harvey, Kitty Nelson, Suzanne Prillaman, Shirley Rocha, Frances Stubbs, Sarah Lou Wendenburg, Suzanne Carter, Julie Moncure, Rheta Russell, and yours truly.

At the dance Saturday night were Pat Altwegg, Ann Bankhead, Stephanie Bauder, Florence Blake, Pat Bodkin, Sis Brown, Alice Calloway, Pat Cantrell, Lois Ann Childers, Betty Cory, Bettie Crawford, Norma Jeanee Croft, Juanita Dayberry, Nancy Deaton, Adele Donaldson, Sandy Dyer, Ellie Everett, Becky Fizer, Ann Foster, Martha Francisco, Marguerite Franklin, and Ann Wayne Fuller.

Sue Garber, Suzanne Garner, Shirley Garst, Jerry Haley, Evelyn Hall, Doris Harcum, Bev. Harlow, Judy Harris, Molly Harvey, Dolly Horne, Martha Joyner, Beth Kent, Peggy Layman, Irene Looney, Bettye Maas, Shirley Mallory, Julie Moncure, Bonnie Moore, Pat Morgan, Kitty Nelson, Phyllis Nurney, Sally O'Malley, Elizabeth Pancake, Suzanne Prillaman, Shirley Rocha, Rheta Russell, Carolyn Smith, Frances Stubbs, Sue Upson, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Jo Ann Wilson, Flo Pollard, Gale Branch, and your reporter were also present.

At the Kappa Sigma combo party Saturday night were Shirley Garst, Judy Harris, and Molly Harvey.

Those attending Easters at VMI were Donnie Devine, Shirley Ward, Sally Cecil, Phoebe Warner, Doris Kvasnicka, Shirley Kemp, Nancy Hartman and Jeanne Lynch Hobbs.

Attending Kappa Alpha parties at Roanoke College was Betty Copenhaver.

Our congratulations to Jo Debnam, who is now engaged to Johnny Miller of Corry, Pa.; Peggy Ilyus who received a diamond from Jack Bowyer of the University of Virginia; and (this one is a little belated Sarah Corr is now engaged to Lawson Smith of Crewe.

Pinned—Betty Jane Staples received a Theta Chi pin from Sam Glascock of the University of Virginia. Nancy McLawhorn is now wearing a Sigma Chi pin of Bill Rheu, also of U. of Va.

Prediction of Nostradamus Causes General Complexity

A few days ago, a rumor which aroused much attention, was circulated throughout Longwood College. Upon hearing this rumor, some students laughed and actually "chalked" it up as some silly and absurd joke! On the other hand, some students reacted in a very emotional manner in that they actually believed the rumor. Still others, however, listened to the story with interest, alacrity, and amazement—but for the sake of curiosity only!

What was the rumor, one may ask at this point? Simply, the rumor held that a supposedly ancient philosopher predicited that the world is coming to an end TODAY.

It seems that specifically, the prediction is related somewhat in this manner: Nostradamus, an alleged Greek philosopher, predicted that the world would end on the second Wednesday after Easter if it rained generally in every section of the world on the Saturday preceding Easter. Since this occurrence in weather actually took place this year, people have taken notice of this prophecy, and have related it to the proposed H-Bomb Test, today, the power of which is said to be three times more powerful than any other bomb tested.

This is the rumor which has set people of the country and students here and at other schools thinking, but, for the moment, let's take a look at fact—no rumor

First of all, Notradamus was not an ancient Greek philosopher. He was born in St. Remi of Provence in France, in the year 1503. Nostradamus is the Latinized name of Michel de Notredame. He is listed not as a philosopher, but as a French doctor and astrologer.

In 1555, he published a book of prophecies in verse under the title "Centuries." The prophecies are phrased in such an obscure manner that they are open to many interpretations. Many people have thought that they predicted events that later have occurred. Interest in Nostradamus was revived in the 1930's when many persons thought his writings prophesied the rise of Hitler and the events of World War II.

Other predictions which have supposedly been listed as coming into reality are prophecies of World War I, reign of Napoleon, and the events of the French Revolution. Of course, an objective way to look at the whole matter is to cosider that his book "Centuries" is so full of predictions that any event in modern life could be coincided with any of his prophecies. If this occurred, people would constantly be in a state of confusion.

Regardless of fact, however, people throughout the United States have written President Eisenhower to postpone the H-Bomb test because of this prophecy.

Fact or fiction—this reporter asks that this prediction be looked up more carefully some time in the far, far future.

Church News

Canterbury Club

A candlelight service will be held in the Episcopal Church at 7 p. m., Sunday night, May 2. Following this service a film, "Builders for Christ" will be shown to the Canterbury Club in the Parish House.

Westminster Foundation

A reminder—don't forget the picnic on Willis Mountain this Sunday afternoon, May 2. Those planning to attend will meet behind the library at 4:30 p. m. for rides. Picnic clothes will be the attire for the afternoon. There will be a Sunset Worship Service at 5:45 p. m.

Wesley Foundation

Twenty-one delegates from the Wesley Foundation attended a State Wesley Foundation Council Convention last week end at Natural Bridge.

Three of these were elected to positions on the State Council. They were Joanne Dyer, scretary; Rose Frost, treasurer, and Ellen Porter, alumnae secretary.

Spring retreat for the old and new members will be held at Sydnor's Lake on May 15-16.

Story Tells Dismay Chick Fades Away

By JACKIE MARSHALL

The slightly off-key "Taps" floated through the living room window on the sunny spring afternoon before I came back to Longwood after a brief vacation at my home.

My mother and I exchanged puzzled glances and went to the window and looked out. Amidst tears and reverent silence, there was a funeral in the making. Standing in a circle, heads bowed except for one struggling, red-faced figure blowing the bugle, were a group of little boys—two of whom were my brothers.

I had known all along that the patient, a little Easter chicken, called "Little Trouble" had only a small chance of survival. He had always been so full of life that it had been a real shock to wake up one morning and find his yellow-feathered body lying too weak to move in the corner of his box. His companion, a purple-dyed bully named "More Trouble," was busily complaining in another corner, in a high-pitched chirp.

I tried to rouse him with all sensible methods but the little fellow seemed intent on giving up the ghost. At last, I knew what I had to do. I got the bottle and an eye dropper and piled that chicken full of whiskey. He shook his head wildly, hiccoughed and after a spell—died.

There were sobs and laments from my brothers but finally they bravely grabbed their little shovels and left the house.

Later, I went out to look the situation over myself. There, at the corner of the house, covered with buttercups, was the grave. At the head stood a handmade cross and at the foot was a stone which read—

IN MEMRY OF LITTLE TRUBLE who died April 20, 1954

Dr. Brumfield, Assistant Foard Carry on Atomic Research, Kite Flying At College

By DOT ARMSTRONG

For the past five summers, Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, professor of biology, at Longwood, has been carrying on intensive atomic research at the United States Atomic research center at Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

This research program, however, is not limited to the confines of Oak Ridge. During recent winters, Dr. Brumfield has extended his experimentations with effects of atomic radiation to Longwood College boundaries where he engages in instruction of undergraduate biology students.

In connection with atomic research program, the Atomic Energy Commission released to Dr. Brumfield a grant for a research assistant—a position which was recently filled by Don Foard, who has been working for his masters degree at the University of Virginia.

Dr. Brumfield began this type of research at Yale University, where he received his doctor's degree in 1942.

Dr. Brumfield radiates the root tips with ultra violet which is not unlike atomic radiations. The radiations reach only a few cells thick, but they cause a marked difference in cell division, growth and elongation. After radiation the roots are placed in glass chambers and are photographed at half hour intervals for about twelve hours.

These photographs act as a permanent record of the experiments. Dr. Brumfield and Foard measure the cells and make growth charts.

Knowledge of the effects of ultra violet on plants can be helpful in knowing the effects of atomic radiations on plants and animals.

Dr. Brumfield and Foard have also run experiments to determine a substance to counteract the effects of ultraviolet, although this is still in its early stages, some progress is being made.

Even though Dr. Brumfield is intensely interested in his research work, it does not occupy all of his time.

At present he is much more concerned about the construction of a new house, which he hopes to have completed in a few weeks—if his thirteen year old son, Southard, will stop sliding off the roof long enough for it to be completed.

DR. ROBERT T. BRUMFIELD AND DON FOARD are shown working a constant temperature appratus which is being used in their atomic research program.

The item which amazes Dr. Brumfield most about his house is the tiny furnace. He says, "I just do not believe anything that small can keep a house warm."

If one looked in the corner of Dr. Brumfield's and Foard's research room, he would not believe that the intricate gold kite in the corner could have anything to do with research. He would be right! Dr. Brumfield gave Foard the kite, and on a windy day one can see two avid kite flyers behind the biology building—but Ben Franklin flew a kite, too!

Besides atomic research and kite flying, Dr. Brumfield is an enthusiastic boxwood collector, wood carver, and moulder of clay as any of his students know from lecture classes.

A graduate of the University, Foard has just completed his thesis for his masters degree which he forwarded to the University last week. Don is especially interested in the chromosomes of Tradascantia, but now his attention is drawn to atomic reaserch. He plans to accompany Dr. Brumfield to Oak Ridge this summer.

Seminar Journeys To Fisheries Lab For Marine Study

By DOT DOUGLAS

"We've never seen so many oysters and crabs," commented members of the Longwood biology seminar after returning from thier week-end at the Virginia Fisheries Laboratary at Gloucester Point.

Dr. George W. Jeffers, Dr. Robert T. Brumfield and Mr. Robert E. Merritt of the Longwood biology department took the group down to Gloucester Friday afternoon to study biological specimens of the area. Dr. Brumfield traveled by way of Charlottesville, where he gave an address on "The Effects of Ultra Violet Radiations on Timothy Roots," to the biology seminar at the University of Virginia.

The Longwood group spent the week-end studying marine plant and animal life. However, the week-end was not all spent in study. The group found time to get in some bridge, boating, and even swimming for Eleanor Koch, Nancy Tanley Masters and Dr. Brumfield.

Marian Parish, Virginia Berry and yours truly acted as cooks for the week end and Ester Acosta, Barbara Mitchell and Ann Mallory were elected dishwashers.

The group came back to Farmville Sunday afternoon when Don Foard official row-boatman for the week-end adjourned the meeting.

French Club Chooses Officers for 1954-55

Florence Blake, a junior from Virginia Beach, has been elected president of Le Cercle du Francaise for the coming year. She previously held the office of secretary of the French Club.

Serving as vice-president will be Nancy Nelson, while Pat McLemore will hold the office of secretary. Treasurer for next year will be Anne Field Brooking, and Jan Kuyk will serve as reporter.

Georgia Jackson will represent the French Club on the newly formed movie committee. Shirley Osborne and Virginia Cowles were elected co-chairmen of the project committee. Plans are underway to write a songbook which will consist of a collection of all French songs used by the club. An attractive redecoration of foreign students' rooms is also listed in next year's plans.

The delegates and alternate delegates who will not hold office next year were also inducted into the Pan Hellenic Council. .

Jackie White was installed as Theta Sigma Upsilon's delegate; Delores Winder will serve as alternate.

Representatives from Sigma Sigma Sigma are Beth Kent and Jane Blake, delegate and alternate, respectively.

Dot Douglas and Gail Leonard will serve as Zeta Tau Alpha's delegate and alternate.

The following will also serve as alternates: Ann Carter Wendenburg, Alpha Sigma Alpha; Nancy Lea Harris, Alpha Sigma Tau; and Martha Gobel, Delta Sigma Epsilon. Kappa Delta's alternate will be Marion Ruffin, and Pi Kappa Sigma's alternate will be Loretta Kesterson.

Grade Schools Stage Dance Program

A dance demonstrated by 1000 children from the Farmville, Rice, and John Randolph Elementary Schools was held in the Longwood gymnasium last Friday, at 1 p. m.

All children in the respective classes performed, beginning with the kindergarten classes dancing to "Looby Loo" and ending with the seventh graders' rendition of "Waves of Tory."

Other dances included in the program were "How D'ye Do, My Partner" by the first graders, "Dance of Greeting" by the second graders, 'Children's' Polka" by the third graders, "Klappdors" by the fourth graders, "Turn Around Me" by the fifth graders and "Sicilian Circle" by the sixth graders.

The dances were under the direction of classroom and student teachers, and Miss Rebecca Brockenborough, supervisor of elementary physical education.

Members of the faculty and administration, parents and students were invited to attend the demonstration.

The dances performed by the various grades were taught to them by their elementary and physical education teachers. These dances were a part of the children's daily physical education program for presentation at this time. Miss Brockenborough in her methods classes, has taught the elementary majors these similiar dances to be included in physical education programs.

Parents and students attended the demonstration to observe the classes and see what they have done and what progress they have made in physical education.

W. & M. Defeats LC

The Longwood girls tennis team bowed to the William and Mary team at each of the five matches played April 24 on the Longwood courts.

In the first match Clara Borum won five games in succession, but lost 5-7 to her opponent.

Else Wente won the first set in the second match 6-2 but lost the other two matches 2-6 and 2-6.

Nancy Quarles lost 1-6 and 2-6 in the third match. Patsy Sanford and Ann Snyder yielded 4-6 and 3-6 in two sets and each won the other set 6-0.

The team's second match will be with Madison on May 15 at the Madison courts.

Nelson Gains Role in 'Common Glory' Cast; Veterans, Newcomers Receive Contracts

Nancy Nelson, a junior from Newport News, has been selected to appear in the cast of Paul Green's "Common Glory," which is presented each summer in Williamsburg. She will appear in the role of Martha Carr, sister of Thomas Jefferson.

Nancy attended the final tryout at Williamsburg on April 10 and 11. She commented that tryouts began Saturday morning and continued through the evening when a few people were eliminated. Many more were eliminated the following day. Nancy received her contract for the dramatization on April 14.

Rehearsals for the Common Glory will begin on June 14 and continue until the opening performance on June 30. The "Common Glory" will be presented every night with the exception of Monday, until its close on September 5. For the first time in its history an orchestra will accompany the production.

Nancy has previously appeared here in "Death Takes a Holiday," "Ladies in Retirement," "The Long Christmas Dinner," and the most recent "Romeo and Juliet."

Other cast members from the eastern section of the county have also been selected and re-selected for parts.

Layton Zimmer, veteran featured actor in "The Common Glory" will play the role of Thomas Jefferson for the second consecutive year announced Director Howard Scammon.

The selection of Zimmer, during the winter months, a ministerial student at Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Massachusetts, comprised one of the few instances in which major roles of the 1954 production will be portrayed by the same persons who enacted the parts last year.

Peter Doyle, of Lexington, will return in the role of the juvenile romantic lead. Hugh Taylor; James Bray, a member of the faculty of the Fork Union Military Academy, Fork Union, will portray the Tory leader. Robert Gordon; Morris Law, of Rocky Mount, again will play the part of Benjamin Franklin; Anne Helms, of New York City, will be the Widow Huzzitt; Bristow Hardin will play Lord Dunmore, the colonial governor.

Veterans of earlier productions will return to "The Common Glory" in roles in which they were featured prior to 1953. David Friedman, of New York City, who has just completed a nationwide road engagement in "Mister Roberts," will return as the comedian of the silent movie days, again will play Peter Pelham after an absence from the drama of one year.

Gray Bromleigh, of Williamsburg, a student at the College of William and Mary who portrayed Patrick Henry in 1953, has been awarded the major role of the Narrator; William Moss, of Williamsburg, last year's Captain Fory, will play the part of Dr. Camm, and the following other members of last year's cast will have new roles: Ben Bray, of Fork Union, as Robert Livingston; Barry Wilson, of Ithaca, N. Y., Jeremy Cluiow, of Williamsburg, and Jess Miller ,of Charlottesville, as Virginia Delegates; William Thomas, of Williamsburg, as Peyton Randolph, and David Daugherty, of Williamsburg, a dancer in 1953, as George Wythe. Howard Web, a member of the 1952 cast, will be John Adams this year, and Diane Eckel, last year's feminine romantic lead, Eileen Gordon, will change to the role of Thomas Jefferson's wife, Patty.

Newcomers ot the cast will include George Dail, of Williamsburg, as Mr. Wormley; Shirley Alger, of Ithaca, N. Y., as Captain Fory; Edgar Noel, of the University of Virginia, as Francis Corbin; Robert Penny, Spartanburg, S. C., as the Town Crier; Edward J. Riley, of Washington, Sergeant Jack; Morris Pruett, of Richmond, Patrick Henry; Hugh Murray, of Washington, Roger Sherman; Michael Hanft, of Williamsburg, Samuel Adams; Norman Dobyns, of Lexington, a Virginia Delegate.

Along with Nancy's interpretation of Martha Carr, Howell Hardie ,a student at Hollins College, will be Eileen Gordon; and Jean Shepard, of Williamsburg, will enact the role of Cousin Charlotte Gordon.

Sociology Majors Will Attend Meet

Old Point Comfort has been designated as the location for the annual meeting of the Virginia State Conference for Social Workers, which is being held today through Friday in Hotel Chamberlin.

Miss Florence Stubbs, professor of sociology at Longwood, announced that three sociology majors, Jane Bailey, Anne Field Brooking, and Sally Cecil will arrive at this conference tonight and attend the evening session, which deals generally with social work being done in the State.

Tomorrow, the girls will attend the Student Day program where sociology students from Virginia colleges will participate in discussions pertaining to social welfare work.

Fellowship Allows Dr. Schlegel, Year For Advancement

Professor Hopes To Study Abroad

(from Farmville Herald)

Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, professor of history and economics at Longwood College, has been awarded a Faculty Fellowship for the academic year 1954-55 from the Ford Fund for the Advancement of Education.

The Fellowship is designed for residence at Harvard University. Dr. Schlegel's original choice as he had hoped to use the extensive library at Harvard for the beginnings of a new economic history of the United States.

However, since he and Mrs. Schlegel have decided to spend the summer in Europe, sailing from the U. S. early in June, he believes "it might do us more good to stay over there instead of returning to Harvard." He has therefore requested the Ford Foundation to grant the fellowship for Germany, and now awaits reply to the suggestion.

He also learned that the Fellowships are not designed for research, thereby ending his plan to begin work on the new book, and travelling expenses, not underwritten by Ford, will be lessened if he stays in Europe for the entire year.

Approximately 250 Faculty Fellowships have been awarded this year "to able young teachers throughout the country who show exceptional promise and who wish to broaden their qualifications for teaching their respective fields as part of a program of liberal education . . . The Fund expects, as a result of these fellowships, to strengthen college teaching in the United States."

Dr. Schlegel is granted the year's absence from Longwood College to spend the time "devoted to study, observation, or experiment (that) will renew and enrich the intellectual lives of the recipients of these awards."

Men Elect Magnusson Head of Government

By HARRY LANCASTER

The installation of new officers of the Men's Student Government Association was held in the Browsing Room of the Library, Wednesday, April 28. The new officers are: president, Harold Magnusson; vice-president, Fred Stables; secretary, George Ogburn; and treasurer, Herbert Goodman.

The meeting was called to order by Herbert Goodman, outgoing president. There was a discussion of the picnic to be held May 15 at Crystal Lake for the members of the Student Government and their guests. Herbert Goodman then administered the oath of office to Mr. Magnusson who installed the officers. The election of these men took place on April 12. After unanimously passing a resolution requesting the reappointment of Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, professor of history, as faculty advisor, the meeting was adjourned by President Magnusson.

Because of his intensive travels while serving with the United States Navy, Mr. Magnusson became interested in geography. This interest led him to major in geography here at Longwood. He plans to teach when all requirements in the education field are met.

Class Of '56 Plans Banquet To Honor Seniors on May 13

On May 13 the annual senior banquet will be held in honor of the graduating class.

This year, in contrast to the usual dinner in honor of the seniors, there will be a separate banquet for the class and their guests after other students have dined. One particular section will be arranged and decorated for the group.

The sophomore class with Molly Ann Harvey, as chairman, is in charge of the decorations while the seniors themselves planned the menu.

Molly Ann said she hopes to have the menu printed on miniature parchments resembling diplomas. The tables are to be decorated with small academic caps and items suggesting graduation.

The menu will consist of fresh pineapple cubes, cube steak, parsley potatoes, green peas, tossed salad, and peach pickle. There will also be rose raddishes, hot rolls and butter, and iced tea. For dessert they will have ice cream blocks with angel food cake, salted nuts, and mints.

The invited guests are President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Miss Nancy Chambers, Mrs. Caroline Eastham, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Dr. C. L. S. Earley, Mr. Ramond H. French, Miss Bessie Jeter, Miss Florence Stubbs, Miss Katherine Tupper, and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas A. McCorkle. The class expects a total of 125 people at the banquet.

President to Speak

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College, will give the annual Fred M. Alexander Memorial Address at the conference of school principals to be held at the University of Virginia, at 8 p. m., June 17.

Dr. Alexander was State supervisor of secondary education. Five years ago the Negro and white Secondary School Principals Associations jointly set up a plan whereby an annual address would be delivered in Dr. Alexander's memory at the summer conferences over a period of ten years.

LC Administration Announces Wilson To Receive Honor

As its annual selection, the administration of Longwood has chosen Mary Denny Wilson of Danville as the "most representative" member of this year's graduating class. Activities, honors, scholarship, and personality are the qualities judged in making this choice.

With the receiving of this honor, Mary Denny will appear in a Richmond News Leader feature sheet to be published soon. This special page will be devoted entirely to photographs and short articles concerning representative seniors from Virginia colleges.

Janet Wiggins of Arlington was the recipient of this honor last year.

Mary Denny will be married this summer to Wilton Parr of Roanoke and she plans to teach next year in Norfolk where they will make their home.

Throughout her college career Mary Denny has served as president of the Student Government Association, secretary of Alpha Kappa Gamma, president of her freshman, sophomore, and junior classes, treasurer of Kappa Delta, social sorority, assistant business manager of the Virginian, and ringmaster of the 1952 College Circus.

Among other activities she has been a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, FTA., ACE, House Council, College Choir, Cotillion Club, and Freshman Commission.

U. Va. To Hold Thirty-Second Science Meet

The University of Virginia will play host to the Virginia Academy of Science which will meet May 5 through May 8.

Those attending the thirty-second meeting of the Academy from Longwood are Dr. George Jeffers, Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, and Mr. Robert E. Merritt of the biology department. Dr. Charles Lane, associate professor of geography, Mr. Raymond French, associate professor of chemistry, Mr. T. A. McCorkle, professor of chemistry and physics, and Don Foard, research assistant, will also attend the meeting.

On May 5 and 6 the Junior Academy of Science will hold conclaves.

Dr. Jeffers has been selected as a judge for the junior science talent search on May 6, and Dr. Brumfield will judge the exhibits by the junior members on that day. Their judging will be based on a point system. Creative ability, scientific thought, thoroughness, skill, clarity, and dramatic value will be points for consideration.

The Senior Academy of Science will officially begin its meetings on May 6 and will close May 8. On these days, the sections of astronomy, mathematics and physics, agricultural sciences, and bacteriology will hold conclaves. Also the sections of biology, engineering, chemistry, geology, medical sciences, psychology, science teachers and the section of statstics will hold meetings.

National Program To Offer Foreign Study for Juniors

Programs for junior year and graduate study abroad are listed in "Group Study Abroad 1954-55" pamphlet recently published by the Institute of International Education.

The study opportunities for American college students are in Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Mexico, Peru, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland.

General purpose of the Junior Year Programs is to give the American student an opportunity to live in another country, to acquire fluency in another language, to understand the culture of another people, and at the same time, to earn credit toward a bachelor's degree from his own college in the U. S. All Junior Year Programs listed in "Group Study Abroad" are under the supervision of an American faculty member who supplements the regular university courses with lectures, reports, and examinations.

Presently, many colleges offer this study abroad program. Smith College offers this program in Paris, Geneva, Florence, and Madrid. Both men and women may apply for the Italian and Spanish programs. In Paris, Florence, and Madrid the students will live with local families.

Sweetbriar College offers a junior year in France. The Rosary College Foreign Study Plan offers work for junior year women at the Institut de Hautes Etudes in Fribourg, Switzerland. Reid Hall in Paris will take a group of junior college graduates who wish to spend an academic year in Paris to gain further knowledge of French civilization.

Wayne University arranges a junior year in Munich.

Mexico City College offers a junior year program for Americans as well as four-year college work and graduate courses. Mexico City College was founded in 1940 to provide an opportunity for American students to study in Mexico under American college methods and standards, and obtain credit toward a degree at their home college.

Middlebury College offers graduate courses in Paris and Madrid. Graduate women may study music and art at the Pius XII Institute, Villa Schifanoia, Florence. The University of San Marcos in Peru gives graduate work in Peruvian literature, economy, history, geography, archaelogy, and

LC Announces '54 Graduation Speakers, Plan

Seventieth Graduation At Longwood To Feature Talk By Dr. Brownell

President Dabney S. Lancaster has announced the two chief speakers for the seventieth Commencement Exercises in which the 1954 senior class will take part June 6.

The main address will be given by Dr. Samuel M. Brownell, United States Commissioner of Education, at Commencement Exercises in Jarman Hall Sunday afternoon.

Dr. Warner Earle Fusselle, pastor of the Rivermont Avenue Baptist Church in Lynchburg, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning. The Longwood Choir will furnish the religious music for the occasion.

Graduation for the 141 candidates for degrees will be a two-day affair beginning at 4 p. m. Saturday, June 5, with class day exercises. The graduates will attend a reception to be given by Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster in the president's home at 8:30 p. m., Saturday night. The traditional lantern parade will be held that night at 10:30 p. m.

Baccalaureate service will be Sunday at 11 a. m. and Commencement will be at 3:30 p. m. Sunday. Both exercises will take place in Jarman Hall.

An academic procession made up of faculty members and seniors, will form at Student Building and march to Jarman Hall for the Commencement exercises. The Rev. Mr. Benjamin Bruner of the First Baptist Church of Farmville will give the invocation. Dr. Brownell will then deliver his address after which Dr. Lancaster will confer the degrees and announce the honor graduates.

Dr. Brownell has been Professor of Educational Administration at Yale University from 1938 up to the present time. He was appointed by President Dwight D. Eisenhower to fill the position of the United States Commissioner of Education.

Dr Brownell served as principal of the demonstration high schools at Punrune, Nebraska, in 1932. He has been head of the New Haven State Teacher's College from 1947 to the present. He holds membership in Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary fraternity, and he is also a member of Phi Delta Kappa, national education fraternity. He was also a member of the Executive Committee of Higher Education of the National Education Association.

Dr. Warner E. Fusselle, has served as minister of the Rivermonth Avenue Baptist Church in Lynchburg for six years. Dr Fusselle came to Virginia from Kentucky. He attended Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky, where he earned his doctorate as Doctor of Theology.

L C Dance Classes To Give Program

Modern dance students will present the second program of dance for the student body May 20 at 1 p. m., in the college gymnasium.

Following the premises as set forth in the previous semester's program at the student assembly in January, in which dance was viewed in its many forms, this second lecture-demonstration led by Mrs. Emily K. Landrum, Associate Professor of Physical Education, will show the interrelationship of the arts, their dependence and interdependence upon one another.

American contemporary dance as a space time are akin to music, drama, painting, sculpture and architecture will be developed as both studio or classroom studies and as theatre dance in which the audience will have opportunities to participate in a question and answer session following the program.

Starting with the colse relacionship of music and the dance, he Joan and Pocahontas figures will be developed from the supposition that music colors dance, yet, in this case, it only further enhances or accentuates the movement impulse, which is the crux and core of all creative dance, or modern dance, as it is best known to the lay audience or public.

From this easily understood beginning, a group number, "Primitive Ritual" will follow,, using both percussion (drums) and piano to further include or stimulate the audience to a feeling of oneness with the dancers as basic body rhythms are developed.

Dance as a theatre art in which the dancer projects or creates an atmosphere for action, in the same manner as the actor on the stage will predominate in several of the works which will follow. "Prairie Suite" a two part invention in movement of an American perspective of the plains is a land study or one of focus, in which the audience feels the vastness of space surrounding them. Both dance classes, the first year and the advance-

LU BEAVERS will present an afternoon of piano music Sunday afternoon, May 9. This music recital is being sponsored by the music department and is part of a series of spring recitals given by music majors.

Pi Gamma Mu Holds Business Meet Here

Delegates from Randolph-Macon Men's College, Mary Washington College, Radford College and Emory and Henry will meet here Saturday for a business session of Pi Gamma Mu, honorary history society.

The meeting of the social science fraternity is being held to plan for the statewide program for next year. After the business meeting the delegates will have an informal supper in the recreation hall.

Tomorrow, Pi Gamma Mu will have a picnic at Goodwin's Lake. Sophomore social science majors have been invited.

Virginia Sutherland, president of the group, announced that Doris Garbaro and Roberta Wiatt were initiated into membership at a recent meeting.

Rule Changes

We, the Rotunda Staff, would like to take this opportunity to praise the Student Government Council and the Administration for constituting and solidifying many constructive rules changes, improvements, and simplifications to be listed in the 1954-55 Student Handbook.

The Rotunda Staff would also like to thank the student body for their cooperation in making constructive suggestions which aided in the formulation of these changes in rules.

An appeal was made to the student body in the April 14 issue of the Rotunda to give suggestions and criticisms, or to stop complaining about the rules.

In answer to the student body's requests and suggestions, the Student Government and Administration have come to an agreement on the following rule changes:

1. Freshmen and sophomores will be allowed to eat at Cedar Brook and Maudes.

2. Freshmen will be allowed to stay out on a picnic until 9 a. m. on week nights and sophomores until 9 p. m. any night. As few as two couples may compose a picnic party.

3. Juniors and seniors will be allowed to stay out until 10:30 p. m. on week nights and 11:30 p. m. on week ends.

4. Seniors will be allowed to eat at the Boxwood.

Juniors and seniors will be allowed to attend the Drive-In Movie until 10:30 p. m., on week nights and 11:30 p. m. Saturday and Sunday nights.

6. All students will be allowed to eat downtown until 7:45 p. m. on any day.

7. All students will be allowed to ride to and from games at the Farmville High School.

8. Students with dates will not be required to attend Sunday evening church service.

9. All students will be allowed to sign out for the day or part of the day by 4 p. m.

10. All students will be allowed to sit on benches without dates until 10 p. m. for the entire year.

Uniformity in the time of departures and arrivals seems to be the main simplification in the rules, in general.

Again we would like to express our gratitude for these changes which will go into effect next September.

Congratulations

Now that the first all-student directed May Day celebration has been presented we feel that a constructive critical editorial is in line in regard to the program.

And first in order are our congratulations. Hats off to Jean Hodges and the 1954 May Day Committee! Yours was definitely a difficult job worthy of acclaim.

As to individual points we would like to praise your choice of theme, length of performance, public address system, and the appearance of and honor paid to the Queen and her court.

Th subject, "Past and Present in the Heart of Old Virginia," by all means attracted the interest of not only the student body but also all those connected with Prince Edward County.

In length of time, May Day was somewhat shorter than it has been in recent years and from students' comments we find this was appreciated by them as well as by the older guests.

The public address system was outstanding and the narration by Georgia Jackson excelled in its clarity and effectiveness.

What seems to be the most favorable criticism is the entrance at the beginning of the program of the Queen and her court who reigned over the entire festivities.

Based on other student comments, we would like to offer the following suggestions to future May Day committees and participants.

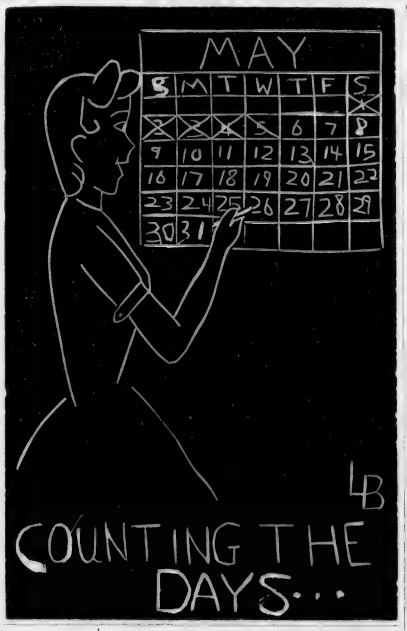
Many feel that some form of music, such as group singing, would have been a welcome accompaniment to the piano since the piano music alone did not seem to carry through the mood continuously.

Too, it has been suggested that the participants try a little harder to convince the audience that they are enjoying their dancing.

Other than the above, we have heard no further remarks by the students except those of praise.

Again, we wish to extend our congratulations and add that we hope this successful performance will serve as a guiding influence to student-directed May Days for many years to follow.

'Dear Mother To Thee'



"All hail Alma Mater, dear Mother to thee . . ."

This musical composition is familiar to all of us; in fact, it is a part of us here at Longwood. Today we sing it at the happiest and most important celebrations of our college life; tomorrow, however, we will think back upon its familiar strains with wistful memories.

As freshmen, we all learned our school song and many of us captured the meaning of its beautiful lyrics. Since this time, however, the song has apparently lost its true significance for some students. This fact may be due to our singing it so often in school programs. In assembly, particularly, it is quite noticeable that we are merely singing words containing no feeling or interest. Even if a student is not in a singing mood, she should have respect enough for what the "Alma Mater" means, to rise while it is being played!

The issue discussed here is not so serious that students should be reprimanded for their conduct, but this is merely a reminder.

Surely the song depicts the spirit of the college and it deserves more acclaim!

Spirit of Parade Entwines Hearts of Young and Old

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Circus Day at home was a hot, sticky one and there was not even the hint of a breeze in the air. From the drugstore where I sat, I could see the glaring brightness of the sun as it beat unmercifully down upon the few shoppers who were hurriedly dodging from one shady area of the street to the other.

There was one little boy leaning against mailbox at the curb who caught my eye. He was a little fellow, not much over eight years old, dressed in patched dungarees and a faded shirt. The solemn look on his brown face made the whites of his eyes appear to be enormous. He was waiting for the parade which preceded the Big Show to march through town in about an hour.

So, here he stood in that broiling sun, patiently waiting on the "front-row bleachers."

Gradually, the rest of the town, defiant of the heat due to their circus spirit, began to gather on the curbs. I lost sight of the boy for awhile and then I saw him again, determinedly holding his own amongst the jostling elbows and sea of faces.

A cheer arose as the first cymbal clashes were heard and the colorful array of costumes and colors appeared. Here came the band! The excitement of the mob caught me and as I joined the people of the sidewalks, I found myself pushed right up to the front.

Now, the parade was almost directly in front of me and as I laughed and shouted with the crowd—I felt someone fall against me. I looked down—directly into a little brown face whose eyes were tear-filled and whose chin quivered threateningly. In that moment—for me, the glory of the first sight of the parade passed; the cheers began to fade away; the music lost its exciting rhythm; and I felt every ounce of circus spirit drained from me.

In one moment of careless excitement I had pushed this little boy from his place of longstanding at the very moment the parade passed.

Academic Apparel Connotes Degree

Editor's Note:

We think this article taken from the "Hollins Columns" is appropriate since graduation time is drawing near with it, an academic procession.

In previous processions such as the one witnessed on Founder's Day questions have asked about the significance of gold tassels on some of the caps, velvet stripes on a number of the gown sleeves, and the hoods. Perhaps this article will help to explain the situation.)

The hood is the article of apparel that shows the color, trimming and lining the degree received. The hoods are lined with silk showing the official colors of the institution that conferred the degree or with which the wearer is connected and are trimmed with velvet distinctive of the degrees as follows: Arts and Letters, white; Theology and Divinity, scarlet; Philosophy, blue; Science, gold yellow; Fine Arts, brown; Music, pink; Physical Education, sage green; Humanities, crimson, and Education, light blue.

All caps are alike. Although doctors are entitled to a gold tassel and a velvet cap, most choose caps of black broadcloth with a black tassel. Doctors also have black velvet stripes on their gown sleeves.

Let's put the dress together for an imaginary faculty member. Let's say, he received a Ph. D. in philosophy at Columbia. He has a light blue silk and true blue vel-

The Roundtable

By PAT JONES

Are you going to be a teacher? Here are what some education experts consider the characteristics of a good teacher:

1.) Interest in children, 2) participation in community activities, 3) the capacity to enjoy study so that he can continually learn, 4) originality, so that he can make his subjects interesting to his students rather than follow the textbook blindly, 5) an objective attitude minus emotion, 6) a sense of humor, 7) vigorous health, 8) pleasing personal appearance, 9) pleasant voice, 10) a code of ethics, for the teacher is a moral as well as an intellectual leader. As you can see the profession asks for better than average intelligence and the ability to become a leader.

Teaching is a challenge and a satisfying experience. You may teach at whatever level best suits your individual interests or you may teach whatever subject in which you are particularly interested.

A teaching position is one of influence and power that carries great prestige. A teacher holds a strategic place in influencing world opinion. Every great advance in world thinking has been initiated by a teacher. It is the constant job of the teacher to wage war against prejudices, greed, and ignorance. The future of our civilization is at stake, and teachers can help save it by instilling into minds of school-age children humanitarianism, democracy, and leadership. Teachers have the opportunity to mold the minds and morals of all who pass through their classes. They are in a position to wield terrific power.

Advantages of teaching are numerous. One of the most important considerations is that teaching provides an adequate standard of living. $2,400 to $3,600 in eight years is listed as a minimum salary paid to teachers in Virginia but schools in various districts pay more or less according to conditions. Between 1939 and 1947, teaching salaries climbed 65.5 per cent in the United States. Since 1945 the rise has been 20 to 30%. Included in the financial aspect of the education field are pensions and sick leaves which are afforded teachers. Other advantages are stability of teaching positions, choice of teaching locations, improvement in working conditions, and opportunities for further study, travel and jobs in the summer.

Teaching is a public service as well as a profession. Today there are nearly twenty-one million children in the elementary schools of the United States and in ten years this school enrollment is reasonably expected to double. It has been estimated that one-half of all college graduates will have to become teachers if these children are to be educated. This is the picture. A tremendous amount of construction of new schools has been done in Virginia. The education profession needs qualified teachers.

You, as potential instrutors, can do much to influence those who have not yet decided upon a career.

Student Government Writes Open Letter

To the Committee and Participants in the 1954 May Day Program:

We, the Student Government Council, would like to personally shake the hands of each and everyone of you who aided in the successful carrying out of the May Day Program this year.

We truly feel that a precedent has been set for future May Day festivals under student direction.

Special thanks go to Jean Hodges who carried out the duties of this difficult taks with diligence and patience.

We are looking forward to next year's program.

Sincerely,

The Student Government Council

Seniors Gaze in Crystal Cube; See Brilliant, Exciting Futures

By JACKIE MARSHALL and PAT KELLY

Aha! Since you have stumbled upon our secret domain, come—come into the black depths of our gloomy and dismal cave. This is the home of Nostroshombre protege of Nostradamus. Over there in the corner, seated beneath the damp, musty ceiling of the underworld sits our beloved Nostroshombre already gazing into his crystal cube. Let us listen to his prophecies concerning that female group known as the Class of '54.

"Mist, mist, go away
Come again another day

Nostroshombre has not time for play.

Aha! Things are clearing up, now. I see a girl but that's all you ever see at Longwood. Aha! She's a blonde, she's tall, she uses Bi-llo! The year is 2004 and the National Cabbage Leaf Festival being held at Barf, Louisiana, has just crowned a little old lady, Miss Pat Altwegg, queen of their festivities. And there's that Marker girl still making good on Broadway after twenty straight seasons of playing the part of Pluto in that all time great—Porky and Petunia.

Oh! This is one scene I hate to look at. For years now, Ellen Porter and Tallulah Bankhead have been fighting tooth and nail to take out patents an "dahling." The only thing holding them up seems to be the fact that though Tallulah had it first, Ellen, being younger, as more oomph to it.

Mary Denny Wilson, more fondly called stringbean by her public, is now running for president of "The Old Presidents" club. She's like an old soldier—she'll never die—just fade away.

Mary Ann Evans has a tugboat line and takes tourists abroad at reduced rates. Says Mary Ann, "I'm proud to be an American but when I gaze across that deep, blue sea, I have to struggle with myself. 'To sea or not to sea' that is the question."

There, I see a national figure of importance. It is that greatest athletic leader, Mason Moore. She has been named National Lightweight Champion of Lady Wrestlers.! Reporters ask her, "Are you going to continue wrestling?" She modestly answers, "Yep." "Will you be able to keep the crown?" She grins crookedly and says, "Yep!" "Will you please answer a few well chosen words for the press?" She takes a deep breath and answers, "Nope!"

Moneda Key is now commuting back and forth between Spain and the U. S. This is the bullfighting season and she really does get a large charge out of all that bull.

Claire Kreinbaum is now managing the old Congress Club in Hong Kong, China. Claire is really enjoying life of a real gone coolie but she'll never change. Says Claire, "Why am I modest? I'm modest because . . .!"

Patsy Sanford is still writing novels after having written five successful books. Her latest is "How to Win Friends and Influence Freshmen!"

Barbara Assaid Mills is living on a farm in Virginia. Yes, Barbara wants all her little Mills to grow up free and easy in the country, and besides, she was so impressed with her childhood literature that she wants her "Bobsey Twins" to be able to say, "We loved on Grandma's farm!"

1985! Sylvia Reames in on her way to Europe dressed incognito to escape the press. Sylvia, "the Gleam Girl of Richmond" is so tired of those hounding repotrers who keep asking "are they your real teeth?"

The mist clears once more and Nostroshombre focuses his bloodshot eyes on the crystal cube to see what the future holds for Jane Branch . . . the year is 1974 and I see Jane teaching music in Hicks Corners, Virginia.

Another member of the Class of 1954, Fifi Carter, of Martinsville and Cannes, France, is a prominent social leader in both of these exotic metropolisses.

Oh, this is a sight for sore eyes! Jean Hodges, who is now managing the New York Midgets, not only managing the team but also is the mother of the nine members of the squad.

Nosotroshombres reaches down to wipe off the slimy crystal square and another picture slides ito sight. It is Boop Isiin, the star of the Saucy Seventies Siren Show, now in its fifth year on Broadway. Says Boop—"Tap dancing is sooo much fun!"

In the May Day celebration presented by "Annie's Abode for Ancient Ageds" Miss Anne Foster continued to reign as queen of the May. In her demure white dress, can in hand, Anne continued to smile as she did forty years ago when she served Longwood College as May Queen.

A background of sea and sky comes into sight—in the foreground is Eleanor Koch who is swimming the Atlantic Ocean. Eleanor commented—"Blub, Blub."

A scene dear to everyone's heart comes into focus—it is the starlight roof of the Weyanoke Hotel and Patty Derring and her crew are about the decorate it for the big dance of the year—"The Daughters of the Mogolian Battle of 1642's annual Kangaroo Hop."

A picture in the Courtland newspaper comes into view. It is the wedding announcement of Miss Betty Frances Gillette and Thomas Jefferson Schick, the razor King. We understand that Betty Frances has succumbed to modern size and is now usnig an electric razor.

Ah! a tropic isle and we see Ann Thomas, notorious Rum-Runner of Jamaica. Then we see Ann in her spare time under a palm tree rolling Havana Cigars.

This is 1994. The scene is Longwood, advanced school of recreation. Dean Nell Coply is welcoming back all her classmates of '54. The old girls notice a few changes. The colonnade has been replaced by a diesel track in commuting between buildings. Joan of Arc has been repaced by a statue of Ruth Gleaves. The Rotunda has been replaced by a swimming pool equipped with motorboats to get to the receiving station which replaces the Home Office. Long ago, "Charlie Hop" hopped away in search of green and white B. V. D.'s and Miss Lou Kitts now sits in the old deck chair by the pool yelling "Howdy Do, girlies!"

Nancy Gilbert can be seen driving her husband's busses after eaching hours. And her first passenger aboard is always June Wilmonth, with her butetrfly nets. June is now a noted entomologist and has written many books on the birds and bees and butterflies.

Peggy Hood is now a famous designer of window boxes for sail boats. She designs the boxes and olants in them shrubbery she rooted in Botany class, before she sells them.

(Marian Parish is, unfortunately, in an institution. It seems that catching geese in a butterfly net, was more than the public could understand.

Barbara Caskey is now in the girley show at—oops! Nosotroshombre, wrong class! We think it's time you turned to tea leaves.

Nostroshombre has used his last ounce of strength. He now slumps studily over the crystal cube. If we listen carefully we can hear his last prophecy for the year. Listen — — !!

"My great teacher taught me about the universe and even caused a mild uproar in that blue and white institution of Longwood with his last prophecy. Therefore, I predict (musical fanfare)—the outermost ring of Saturn shall cause to spin on the fifth day of the twenty-fifth month and shall beat a wild rhythm in the opposite direction—and Mary Ann King will take over duties as veterinarian of the Bouncing Bunny Company, Lettuce, Finish!

Dance Classes

ed groups, will collaborate here. Noon makes up the first section of this two part work with "Nocturnal Ambulations" making up the second part. Here, American dance is the living exponent of dance as a space art, which has no parallel in Europe is stressed. In fact, this feeling for space, as an American exemplification is stressed throughout.

A sea study, temporararily called "Sea Watch," a group work by the advanced classes to a sea chanty by Bloch follow.

With the most dramatic work somewhere within the middle section of a dance program just as it is in a symphony or any other concert, the "Lament for a Lost One" to music by Ravel, also by the advanced class follows. Here, a dance of death motif, which is predominant in all dance from the most primitive to the most contemporary, is developed. As an outgrowth from the first year class, through a study of sculptural representations, this moving study of the pathos and empathy evinced by the onlooker projects a feeling of maternal beauty even in death. In both of these works, "Sea Watch" and "Lament or the Lost One," one will see the close relationship between drama and dance.

Dance, as it leans or uses architectural form for its feeling of mass in space, is the basis for creative approach to a theme of "City Awe," a group and soloist work, which is rather a abestract through its monumental movement themes, yet touching as one glimpses a first look at any city. This study is the second of a large group work, which could be classfied as theatre dance on the concert level. It is the long term project of the first year class.

Following this prelude to city life, the advance class will dance "City Street," a group and duo work in the jazz idiom. Here, one sees life, not at its best, but in its sophisticated crudity, teeming with erubescent satire.

The final number, "After You" consists of three short studies using the bow or a stylized curtsy as the idea for projecting typical American ebullience.

The program is part of the total dance program in modern dance with students from both classes taking part as did students in last semester's program with apprentices from the modern dance club, Orchesis, participating of their own volition entirely as partial fulfillment of their apprenticeship. Orchesis will furnish costumes for the event.

Students, faculty, and administrative personnel are invited to attend the final program of dance for the year 1953-54 as originally planned to bring dance in its forms and its interrelationships before the student body, free of charge, as a means of better understanding of dance, which is the basis for many campus events or productions.

Noted Orater To Talk Here

Described as "one of the South's finest public speakers," Mr. John Temple Graves II of Birmingham, Ala., will make his initial appearance at Longwood College on May 11 to speak in assembly.

As a columnist on "The Birmingham News" and also as a widely syndicated columnist, Mr. Graves has been speaking a favor of free enterprise and as an anti-socialist to educational groups, social clubs, political organizations, business corporations, and colleges for many years.

Some of his more notable appearances have included America's Town Meeting of the Air; National Small Businessmen's Association; Town Hall, New York; American Form Bureau Federation; National Safety Souncil, National Cotton Council; Virginia Jackson Day Dinner; Atlanta Dental Association; Southern Surgical Association: State Education Association; Washington and Lee University's Lee Day; Council of State Governments Midcontinental Gas and Oil Association; Tuskegee Institute Founder's Day; and National Men's Garden Club Convention.

Mr. Graves was educated as a lawyer, trained as a historian, and now stands as one of the nation's foremost writers in the field of journalism. He besides being a famed columnist, has written several books including "The Fighting South," which is considered by many as one of the greatest books ever written about the South. He comes form a long line of writers and orators, his father having been one o America's greatest in the field.

Indiana State Teachers College has this to say of Mr. Graves, "His commencement address will stand first of all delivered here in the past 25 years."

Additional data concerning Mr Graves has been posted on the main bulletin board.

vet colored hood because light blue is Columbia's color and true blue signified a degree in philosophy. He would also have a white stripe on his hood because those of Columbia University graduates are white. Of course the colors of the stripes vary with universities. This faculty member will have black velvet stripes on his sleeves and he could never wear a black velvet cap with a gold tassel if he so wished.

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Before we go on with the usual order of gab, our congratulations to Jean Hodges and her committee for the wonderful job they did on May Day. It just goes to show what can be done with a little cooperation.

Quite a few of the girls attended the dance Saturday night. Ann Foster made a beautiful picture leading the figure and the May Court was the prettiest ever! In the middle of everything, Billie Tomlinson received a diamond from Ames Drumondm of H.-S C. Our congratulations to them both!

The "barefoot gang" had a little party following intermission. (The bareoot gang" consists of everybody that had their shoes off after intermission.) Anyway, several of the members were entertained by two of last year's graduates, Betsy Hankins and "Jose" Cox who told us stories of their life outside L. C. "Jose's" social work has some interesting moments. Also back for the weekend were Ann Cress, Betty Abbitt, Ann "Jonsie" Jones, Betsy Berry, Jackie Lackey, Lee Wingfield, Betty "Termite" Tyler, B B. Hacock, Helen Castros, Donna Kunkler, Jeannie Jinnett, and Margaret Taylor Barlow.

Pat Altwegg, Longwood's princess for Apple Blossom Festival, says she really had a great time this week end in Winchester. From what we hear, Pat was the belle of the ball. Pat was escorted to the Queen's Ball Friday night by Tommy Cooper and on Thursday night her escort for the Princess's Ball was "Bo" Brown. Both men are from Winchester. She also attended the Gold Cup races in Warrenton on Saturday with her escort, "Bo." Attending the festivities from here were Betty Davis, Carolyn Stanley, Mary Hundley, June Manlove, Betty Frances Gillette, Sarah Leatherman, Ginny Wentz, Ann Weatherholts, Janice Haines, Joyce Pommoy, Naomi Reed, and Georgia Edmonds.

Carole Ogden, a freshman, is now engaged to Tegler Grier of Atlanta, Ga.

Attending parties this week end was Connie Coiner who attended dances at Duke University.

Shirley Ward and Flip Blake were in Richmond this weekend for the Theta Kappa Psi picnic at M. C. V.

A little advance news—The big week-end is only two days away. Yes, this coming week-end brings Ring dances at V. P. I. Our own Liz DeHaven will be in the spotlight as she will be leading the figure with Tom Blair, president of the junior class. Others who are planning to attend the dances are Malin Johnson, Margaret Duke, Sally O'Malley, Ellen Thomas, Anne Thaxton, Virginia Anderson, Bobbie Assaid, Jean Carol Parker and Glenna Kesterson. We know you'll have a wonderful time.

Going to Charlottesville for parties at Virginia this coming week-end will be Frances Stubbs and Pat Ashby. Frances will be attending the Theta Chi parties with Colan Steele and Pat is the guest of Jay Race for the Delta Upsilon parties.

Betty Crawford will attend the May Day dance at Lynchburg College this week-end as the guest of Sonny Freeborn.

Flash!! The Rotunda Staff is flying to Bermuda this week-end with Shirley Ward, the editor, who will meet former King Farouk of Egypt there for a little supning and swimming. Reports say Shirley may succeed Princess Narriman as Farouk's wife. Farouk is also considering this staff as a possible harem for his new princess.

Hope we haven't missed anybody, keep me posted on the parties, etc., will you?

Golden Selects Books For Re-Reading; Selections Feature Questions Of Life

Critic's Selections Show Wide Range

(An Editorial from the Greensboro, N. C. Daily News)

"But the greatest value of books," says Harry Golden, editor of the Carolina Israelite, "is that there is tremendous amount of innate knowledge in all of us, and only through boks can we bring out this innate knowledge for the betterment of our civilization."

Mr. Golden here is talking about what we call "the great books." They are the books which bring our minds to bear on the elemental questions of life, set before us truth in terms of beauty, and so make us wise while thep make us happy, enlightening our minds while they left our hearts. What are they? Let us make a list of a couple of dozen of them.

(1) The Four Gospels.

(2) The Book of Genesis.

(3) The Book of Job, which asks the great questions.

(4) The Katha Upanishad, which makes the attempt to answer them and which can be found in the Hindu scriptures. It can be read in half an hour, but should be re-read throughout a lifetime.

(5) Chinese poetry; any good collection will contain a marvelous mixture of depth and lightness, wisdom and charm.

(6) St. Augustine's Confessions, the work of a great writer, thinker and psychologist.

These six books reflect the thought of the Orient. The next three represent the Creek civilization.

(7) Plato's Dialogues, especially those dealing with the trial and execution of Socrates.

(8) Aeschylus' House of Atreus trilogy

(9) Thucydides's Peloponnesian War, which throws more light on modern war and history than any modern book.

The next three are from the Roman civilization.

(10) Lucretius's The Nature of Things, a supreme combination of science, philosophy and poetry.

(11) Plutarch's Lives, the most education in the least space.

(12) Tacitus's Annals, the most said in the fewest words, worth reading for the style alone—and pretty hot stuff, too.

* * *

The next two are from the Middle Ages.

(13) Dante's Divine Comedy, rich reward for all the trouble it takes.

(14) The Arabian Nights, that everlasting well of delights.

Now three works from the Renaissance

(15) Shakespeare's King Lear, perhaps the greatest of plays.

16) Cervante's Don Quixote; those who don't bog down in the first 50 pages will have the experience of seeing the poles of human nature, the idealist and the realist, the gentleman and the clown, coniesce.

(17) Bacon's Novum Organum, the blueprint of our modern scientific civilization.

And finally seven works of modern times.

(18) Gibbon's Rome, as deep as a well as wide as an ocean, and as witty as Voltaire.

(19) Whitman's Leaves of Grass, the voice of democracy.

(20) Dostoyevscky's The Brothers Karamazov, probably the greatest novel of them all.

(21) Goethe's Faust, especially the second part which nobody reads.

(22) The Federalist Papers, together with Madison's Notes, for their insight into how and why democracy works as well as it does.

(23) Hugo's Les Miserables.

(24) Toynbee's A Study of History, or what makes civilization rise and fall.

All are to be read and marked again. Whoever makes friends of these books is well educated.

Twenty Girls Recieve Bids

Twenty students have received bids to Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity, and will be initiated tomorrow night.

The girls accepting bids are: Nancy Nelson, Peggy Worthington, Dot Vaden, Fannie Scott, Helen Warriner, Eloise Macon, Barbara Southern, Pat McLemore, Georgia Jackson, Florence Blake, Marlene Lucas and Mary Cowles. Also accepting bids are Gail Leonard, Betsy Welbon, Martha Donaldson, Pat Cantrell, Carolyn Stanley, Margaret Dryden, Gloria Anderton and Joyce Gillchrest.

To be eligible for membership, the student either must have served outstandingly on a publication for three semesters, or must have held the position of editor or business manager of a publication.

Newly elected officers for 1954-'55 are Dot Douglas, president; Betty Frances Scarborough, vice-president; Phoebe Warner, treasurer and Peggy Worthington, secretary.

Before the initiation of new members, the girls who had accepted bids last fall will receive the official gold key of Pi Delta Epsilon

After the initiation the group will have a business meeting to discuss ideas for a calendar-date book to be published next year.

KD Pi Fraternity Elects McLemore

Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternity, recently elected officers for next year, and selected a new sponsor for the group.

New officers are Pat McLemore, president; Nancy Nelson, vice-president; Carolyn Stanley, secretary; Betty Frances Scarborough, treasurer; and Peggy Worthington, historian. Miss Lucy Adams, who is the principal of the Farmville Elementary School, will serve as advisor to the Longwood chapter.

The annual Kappa Delta Pi tea will be held on Thursday, May 6, in the Student Lounge from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. Those invited to the tea are the freshmen and sophomores majoring in education who are on Dean's List, faculty members, and the administration.

New members who were initiated into the fraternity this spring are Barbara Southern, Nell Crocker, Joan Conley, Janie Scott, Betty Zoe Bailey, Ellen Porter, Mary Ann Evans, Dorothy Morris, and Mary Alice Ellington.

Annual Payment Due

Mary Anne King, editor of the 1954 Virginian, has announced that all students must pay the remaining $7.50 due on this year's annual.

She requested that all payments be made to members of the staff.

Kent To Lead Cotillion Club

Beth Kent, a junior from Richmond, was elected president of the Cotillion Club for 1954-55 according to an announcement by Jane Branch, out-going president.

Mrs. Nancy Tanley Masters will serve is figure leader, while Martha Donaldson will serve in the position of secretary-treasurer.

Assuming the duties of dance chairman will be Carolyn Stanley. Joyce Quick was selected as business manager for the dance club.

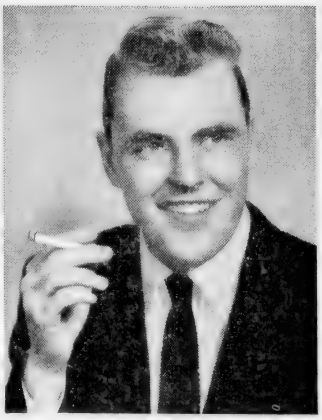
Beth is a member of the Longwood Players, Kappa Delta Pi, and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. From Richmond, Beth is a junior majoring in elementary education here at Longwood.

Drama Fraternity Initiates Members

Alpha Psi Omega, honorary dramatic fraternity, initiated seven new members here at Longwood on April 20. These initiates met qualifications for membership by working in all fields of dramatic presenttations.

They are Sarah Leatherman, Patsy Abernathy, James Parker, Virginia Sutherland, Flip Blake, Nancy Tanley Masters and Isabelle Karnes.

Officers for next year have not yet been elected. Those assuming leadership positions this year are Nancy Nelson, president, and Tom Moore, vice-president.



Ellen Porter served as secretary and Sally Wilson assumed the treasurer's position.

VOLUME XXXIII | Longwood College, Farmville, Virginia, May 26, 1954 | NO. 19

10 Members Of LC Staff, Faculty Leave Posts in June

Ten administration and faculty members will not return to Longwood in September, according to an announcement by Dabney S. Lancaster, President. Four former members who have had a year's leave of absence will again assume positions in the fall.

Miss Florence Stubbs, who teaches the social sciences, Miss Katherine Tupper and Miss Bessie Jeter, who are both members of the home economics department will retire at the end of this year.

Mrs. Coline Hudson, college hostess, and Mr. Charles B. Attix, who was substituting for Mr. Joel Ebersole in the music department, are resigning positions. The foreign language informants, Catherine Dessaix and Sylvia Bascour, will resume their studies in France and Chile, respectively.

Dr. and Mrs. Marvin W. Schlegel, of the history and English departments, respectively, will be away on a year's leave of absence, as Dr. Schlegel received a Ford Fellowship to study in Germany. Dr. Francis B. Simkins, also of the history department, will be at Princeton University to lecture for the first semester of next year, but he will return to Longwood for the second term.

Four former faculty members are returning in the fall after a year's absence. Dr. R. C. Simonini, who studied on a Fulbright Fellowship this year in Italy, will return as chairman of the English department. Miss Elizabeth Burger will return after a year's leave of absence to do graduate work at Columbia University in the field of natural science. Mr. Ebersole studied this year in the music school of Indiana University, and Miss Janice A. Lemon studied in New York to complete work for a professional certificate. They will return in September.

Prof. To Get Ed. D Degree

Mr. Malcolm Graham, assistant professor of mathematics, will attend the commencement exercises at Columbia University, Tuesday, June 1, when he will receive an Ed. D. degree from the Teachers College. .

Many events during graduation week at Columbia are keyed to "Man's Right to Knowledge and the Free Use Thereof," the theme of the Columbia Bicentennial which the university is celebrating this year. Highlight of the occasion will be a speech by President Dwight D. Eisenhower at the national bicentennial dinner, Monday, May 31.

Conley, Mathematics Major, To Take Oral Examination in Honors Course

Joan Conley, a major in mathematics from Frederica, Del., will take an oral examination on the math honors course she has been taking at Longwood College, in the Honors Room at 5 p. m., tomorrow.

The subject of her paper which she will defend is "Graphic Techniques Appropriate to the Development of the Function Concepts for Prospective Secondary School Mathematics Teachers."

Joan will be examined by Dr. Francis Lankford, professor of education at the University of Virginia; Dr. Ladley Husted, chairman of the department of biology at the University of Virginia; and Chapman L. Ramsey, chairman of the department of mathematics at E. C. Glass High School, Lynchburg.

Mr. Malcolm Graham, assistant professor of mathematics, directed Joan's study and research in the honors course. Longwood was the first among state colleges in Virginia to inaugurate an honors course, and today honors courses are open to superior students in any academic department of the college.

Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, professor of biology is the chairman of the honors committee, and the other members are: Miss Helen Draper, professor of modern languages, Dr. Beverly Ruffin, librarian and professor of library science, and Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, associate professor of history.

LC Art Exhibit Reveals Student Talents

BY DOT DOUGLAS

Comments at the recent college art exhibit ranged from "It's terrible, why did she do it?" to "how perfectly lovely."

Where but at an art exhibition could we find a greater variety of tastes, both in the artist and critic-observer?

The exhibition was held May 17-24 and a sale of various works was held on May 21.

The college art department endeavors to let students have an idea in all mediums of the allied arts, including painting, drawing, and applied design. The exhibition which featured all student art work tried to point out this phase of its purpose by showing a variety of work from each class.

MR. RICHARD MEEKER, INSTRUCTOR OF ENGLISH, is shown inspecting his recent purchase at the annual art sale last week. The artist, Jeanne Saunders, is also on hand to complete final details of the sale.

The crafts class exhibited leather work, wood work, metal work and textile work. Those who showed high achievement in this class were Joan Conley, Joyce Wilkerson, Betty Benton, Claire Krienbaum, Helen Waitman, Mary Anne Ward and Margaret Duke.

June Johns, Johanna Biddlecomb, Audrey Powell, Nan Picinich and Virginia Obenchain from the creamics class exhibits unusually good works in clay.

Those who did outstanding work in art education were Beth Kent, Jane Blake, Claudett Cross, and Katherine Miller. This class featured the handling of all mediums of art which would be interesting and usable by children of all ages. This class chose crayons, finger paint, cut paper and clay as good mediums for child art work.

The oil painting class showed a wide range in taste and techniques, ranging from meticulously painted blades of grass by Joanna Biddlecomb, to a decaying green head painted by yours truly. Beth Kent's and Shirley Roby's works were, generally speaking, realistic. Beth's paintings always contain a human element while Shirley's oils, usually depict some phase of

Porter, Moore, Gain 'Little Oscar' Award

Ellen Porter of Portsmouth has been selected as the best actress in the current season of the Longwood Players. She received a "Little Oscar" trophy for her role as Mrs. Manninghum in "Angel Street" and her name will be inscribed on a plaque which will soon be placed in the lobby of Jarman Auditorium under the sponsorship of the Players.

Tom Moore, a senior from Farmville, was acclaimed best actor for 1953-54 for his part as the Friar in "Romeo and Juliet."

This plaque and trophy award is a new project of the drama group. Members of the Players voted to make the election to this honor retroactive to 1951, the year that the new auditorium was completed and opened for the students use.

Mrs. Cleo Holladay Partington of Suffolk and Ed Stanfield, a former Hampden-Sydney student, were named as best actress and actor respectively, for the 1951-'52 season.

Ed Stanfield was chosen again for 1952-53 for his part in "The Glass Menagerie" with honors going to Sally Wilson of Hopewell, for her role in the same play.

June 5 Marks Opening Date Of Graduation

Brownell To Give Academic Address; Seniors To Receive Varied Degrees

Class Day exercises Saturday afternoon, June 5, at 4 p. m., will mark the opening of a series of graduation exercises for the 109 seniors who will be graduated June 6. In addition to this number, 33 seniors will receive their degrees in summer school making a total of 141 seniors to be graduated this year.

At the graduation exercises Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president, will confer forty-six bachelor of science degrees in elementary education, sixteen bachelor of arts in secondary education degrees, two degrees in bachelor of science in home economics, five degrees of bachelor of science in home economics education, sixteen bachelor of science in business education degrees, five bachelor of science in music education degrees, one degree of bachelor of arts and one bachelor of science degree.

The traditional class day exercises and the daisy chain will be followed Saturday night by a reception for the members of the senior class given by Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster at the president's home. That same night the seniors and their little sisters will take part in the annual lantern parade which will form at student building and march to the Rotunda at 10 p. m.

Baccalaureate

Baccalaureate sermon will be delivered to the seniors by Dr. Warner Earle Fusselle, pastor of the Rivermont Avenue Baptist Church in Lynchburg, on Sunday morning at 11 a. m. The Longwood Choir will furnish the music for the service.

Dr. Samuel M. Brownell, United State Commissioner of Education will deliver the main address at Commencement exercises in Jarman Hall Sunday afternoon.

An academic procession consisting of the faculty and seniors will form at the Student Building and march to the auditorium. The Rev. Mr. Benjamin Bruner of the First Baptist Church in Farmville will give the invocation. After Dr. Brownell's address Dr. Lancaster will confer the degrees and announce the honors.

Class Names Islin To Honor Position

Betty Islin of Warwick was named honorary classman by the Junior Class in assembly yesterday in Jarman Hall.

The Senior Class presented the traditional Senior Assembly under the direction of Betty Bailey. The group presented a review of their productions, circus skits and songs from the song contests during their four year stay at Longwood College.

Preceding the program, the Rev. C. O. Kidd of the Farmville Methodist Church delivered the invocation, after which the presentation of the Color Cup was made to the red and whites. Following the presentation of the Senior Class gifts, Nell Copley, president of the class, bid farewell for her classmates to the college and the student body; and Betty Davis, president of the new Senior Class, gave the response. The juniors then sang to the seniors.

Ellen Porter narrated the program. Subjects of the photographs representing the class programs were Marilyn Thompson, Edith Frame, Mary Page Wade, Else Wente, Ann Wagner, Barbara Blackman, Mason Moore, Paula Dovel, Betsy Robinson and Peggy Hood.

Among the well remembered songs were, "I'm An American" from their Junior Circus Skit, "Television Time" from Sophomore Production, and "A Trip to the Moon" from Sophomore Circus Skit.

The group closed the program with traditional Longwood songs.

The Senior Class of 1954 then lined the aisles and formed an arch with their caps in recognition of the Seniors of 1955 who marched through the arch to the strains of the Alma Mater.

Wendenburg to Head Alpha Kappa Gamma

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, has recently tapped four juniors into membership. Also at a meeting of the fraternity, officers for next year were chosen. .

Ann Carter Wendenburg, a junior from Aylett, was chosen president of the group. Other officers include Eloise Macon, vice-president; Dot Vaden, secretary; and Helen Waitman, treasurer.

Ann Carter has received her leadership experience by serving as president of the junior class this year, and treasurer of the Student Government Association. She was also art editor for the 1954 Virginian and is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority.

Recently, the fraternity tapped four juniors into membership on the basis of their outstanding leadership, spirit, and service on campus. Those tapped were Jane Bailey, Nancy Nelson, Jean Carol Parker, and Helen Waitman.

Jane, a junior from Lexington represented her class on student government this past year and now serves as vice-president of the organization.

Nancy, a junior from Newport News, has been particularly outstanding in dramatic presentations.

New "Y" president, Jean Carol is a junior from Emporia. This year she has been treasurer of the "Y" and a member of the Virginian staff.

Helen, from Charles City, is the new president of the Athletic Association.

Farewell Toast

In less than two weeks, the Senior Class will take its final step and, in all ceremony, will end its college career.

On behalf of the student body, the Rotunda staff wishes to pay tribute, in a special message, to the Class of 1954!

When you came in your freshman year, you were new, lost, and yet an ambitious class. You have followed through and have achieved many of your goals. Not only were you concerned with your own affairs, but also, without realizing it, you were spreading your influence over the classes which followed you.

Your sophomore year, you were the haughty but understanding class, with your own special significance to freshmen! When you changed residence to Cunningham Hall, you stood for something else to the newly entering freshmen—that something being sisterhood to the class bearing your own colors—"red and white." You are seniors now and all classes have turned their eyes to you. As seniors, you have led student groups and activities, proving yourselves very worthy of leadership.

Even though you now say good-bye to these classmates, your spirit, friendship, and enthusiasm will remain. For everyone of you who leaves, there will be an empty place around the school—in the "rec," the lounge, the tea room, the class parties, and the halls.

Many students, families, friends, and faculty members will be present when you receive your degrees. You will then probably realize that you are leaving Longwood and embarking on a new career.

Though you are graduating, the doors will always remain open to you and a huge sign of welcome will be hanging on it. So until you return, "good-luck and be seein' you soon!"

Backward Glance

At a glance!

The school year, 1953-54, is coming to a rapid conclusion, and with it, the close of a series of programs, events, honors and improvements which have dominated the college scene.

Let's reminisce a little and look back at the highlights of the year.

We started off the year with registration, orientation leaders, and confused freshmen, who were anticipating, with dread the famous "Rat Day." Barbara Whitehead was chosen "Best Rat" of the event.

"Halloween Capers," Circus 1953, then took the spotlight for four full weeks of hard work. The freshmen walked away with first place honors for their skit, "Old McDonald's Farm."

The Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs scored its first success with "Angel Street" in the fall. "Romeo and Juliet," presented this spring, marked a new high peak in presentations by this group. Tom Moore, senior from Farmville, was awarded a "little oscar" for his portrayal of the Friar in this play. This "oscar" award was inaugurated this spring. The Players and Jongleurs also presented various one-act plays during the year. The Barter Players presented their interpretation of "Ah, Wilderness!" last fall. .

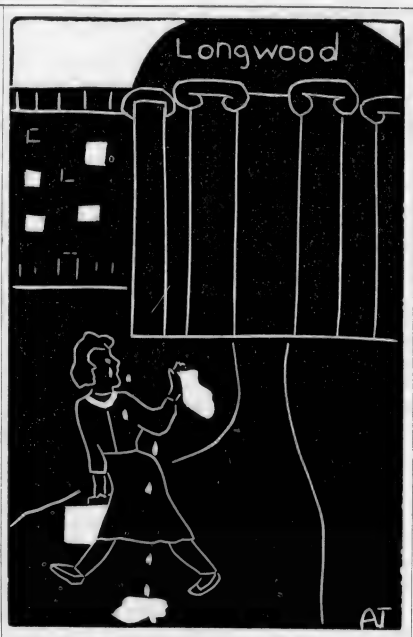
Outstanding Artist Series programs with outstanding personalities appeared at Longwood throughout the year. First in the series, was Jerome Hines, noted Metropolitan opera star. A well-known lecturer, Sir Hubert Wilkins, spoke on his Alaskan trips, as the second program. Mr. Roy Jesson, of the Longwood music department, presented an evening of concert music, as the third program. The Columbus Boy's Choir, indeed won the hearts of the people who were in the audience that night. "Musical Americana" ended the series on a high note.

Honors have not been scarce this year among Longwood students and faculty members. Dr. M. W. Schlegel received a Ford Scholarship to study in Germany next year. Dr. Francis B. Simkins will be guest lecturer at Princeton University for the first semester next year. Fay Greenland received a scholarship to study in Mexico this year. Ann Thomas was the recipient of a scholarship to carry on mission work in Jamaica this summer. Mary Denny Wilson was chosen the most representative senior while Pat Altwegg served on the Queen's Court at the Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester. Longwood College was admitted into the American Association of University Women last fall.

The Choir enjoyed an eventful year. The Christmas and Spring Concerts were hightlights of the year. "Trial by Jury," as part of the spring concert, proved to be a very successful and amusing program.

The sophomores and freshmen scored two hits when they presented "L'Esprit" and "Tom-Tom," respectively.

In the social realm, three dances marked the successful rounding out of the year. "Midnight Magic," senior dance; "Snowball," junior dance; and the Cotillion Club dance with Dean Hudson and his orchestra, were included.



At the annual Founders' Day program in March, the alumnae learned that the Alumnae Board had secured the house next to Jarman Hall to carry out alumnae business in future years to come.

The death of Miss Leola Wheeler, former instructor in dramatics and speech at Longwood and beloved member of the Framville community, saddened the many, many people who knew and loved her.

The "Y" sponsored a very inspirational Religious Emphasis Week, "Contagious Christianity" with Dr. J. P. Allen officiating.

In connection with the Prince Edward Bicentennial program this year, The May Day Committee selected "Past and Present in the Heart of Old Virginia" as the pageant's theme. For the first time in the history of the College, has this program been completely organized and directed by students. Jean Hodges and her committee diligently worked to present an outstanding program. Ann Foster reigned over the festival as queen. Also in connection with the Prince Edward County celebration, the National Symphony Orchestra appeared in Jarman Hall this spring.

As the year closes, only examinations, baccalaureate and commencement face us. Next fall another eventful year will begin to unfold.

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Another school year is just about over! We've had some good times and, of course, a few that weren't so good; we've met some wonderful people (the freshmen were among the best ever); and a few have met that one-man-of-a lifetime and caught him, too!

Let's take a back look at some of the highpoints of our social life for the year.

Remember back in September when a few of the girls came back as "Mrs." There were Gail Dixon Dickson, Nancy Tanley Masters, and Ann Parkinson Wagner.

And then the H. S. C. men decided to get better acquainted with Longwood girls. After the ban was lifted, about 50 of the girls went out to our neighboring school for Homecomings.

Tech Openings and Thanksgiving holidays were next. Longwood girls were in the majority at almost every Virginian college over the holidays.

The Seniors gave their dance, "Midnight Magic" next and "Hankins" was her loveliest as figure leader. After Christmas holidays, 27 pins and rings were added to our lore of jewelry.

Once again, H. S. C. realized the charm of our females and entertained 65 of us at their Midwinters.

"Snow Ball" sponsored by the juniors was our next big event. And then a change came—Spring hit! Not only did we switch social editors, but also another switch occurred! Lake parties, cabin parties, sunning on the roof and of course, thoughts of the opposite sex were primary in our minds while studies were neglected.

"Round about the end of March, Diane Acree was elected as All-State Lambda Chi Sweetheart. Pat Altwegg spent a wonderful week end in Winchester as Longwood's Princess for the Apple Blossom festival. Almost forgot that memorable night of Cotillon. Mary Elva Robinson was elected as "Phi Kappa Sigma Girl" at Randolph-Macon.

All in all, around 51 girls received diamonds, 36 girls became pinned, and seven girls were married this year.

And now for recent news. Ring dances at Tech found Malin Johnson, Margaret Duke, Sally O'Malley, Ellen Thomas, Anne Thaxton, Virginia Anderson, Bobbie Assaid, Jean Carol Parker, Glenna Kesterson, Becky Hines, and Eloise Macon on hand. Liz Dehaven was in the Longwood spotlight when Tom Blair gave her a diamond. And Eloise Macon receved a minature from Melvin Smith.

Easters at Virginia were next. Among those attending were Beverly Harlow, Betty Jane Staples, Nancy McLawhorn, and Frances Stubbs.

Sigma Chi parties at H. S. received a big turnout. On hand were Ann Foster, Joanne Farless, Sue Upson, Loretta Brooking, Connie Coiner, Margaret Dryden, Charlotte Fitts, Doris Harcum, Judy Harris, Mary Anne Jennings, Loretta Kesterson, Janie Scott, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Helen Marie Wood, Joanne Andrews, and Barbara Whitehead.

A few of the girls attended the Lambda Chi and Independent parties at H. S. the same night. Attending were Yvonne Mewborn Betty Pat Rogers, Leslie Smith, and Doris Underwood. Guests of the Independents were Anne Thomas, Jean Windley, Liz Wilson, Barbara Williams, and Elba Flynn.

This past week end the Pikas and Chi Phis at H. S. were hosts to another fine party at H. S. Charlotte Fitts, Marguerite Franklin, Doris Harcum, Nita Dayberry, Adele Donaldson, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Bettie Crawford, Dolly Horne, Suzanne Garner, Joan Jones, Jane Branch, Rheta Russell, Molly Ann Harvey, Margaret Duke, Ann Bankhead, Carolyn Stanley, Beth Kent, Ann Watkins, Norma Jean Croft, Bettye Maas, Gale Branch, Kitty Nelson, Alice Callaway, Mary Alice Powell, Jeanne Lynch Hobbs, Phoebe Warner, Dot Douglas, Ann Wayne Fuller, Flo Pollard, Margaret Dryden, Mary Ann Jennings, Liz DeHaven, Fannie Scott, Betty Jean Jenkins, Charlotte Pudge, Patty Parker, and Betty Ramsey attended.

Attending the Sophomore parties at Tech this week end were Nancy Quarles, Judy Harris, and Carolyn Smith.

Week end before, Betty Cory, Betty Jean Jenkins, and Suzanne Garner attended the Kappa Sigma South Sea Island parties at the University of Richmond.

Engaged: Eric Robinson, a senior here, is engaged to Audrey Sanderson of Madison College. George Ogborn and Butch Goble are now pinned.

So ends another year at L. C. Finals at H. S. are yet to come and for our seniors, graduation, marriage, and careers. Our best luck to those of you who won't be with us come September, it's really been a great year, and in closing, see ya' at the beach..

Historian, Writer Discusses Recent Segregation Issue

by Dr. Francis B. Simkins

Have you ever heard of a judge who imposed a death sentence and then invited the condemned person to call on the judge and be kind enough to help tie the knots in the rope by which the unfortunate person will be executed? You may not have heard of such an extraordinary procedure; but a few days ago you heard of an event strikingly similar.

The United States Supreme Court convicted the Southern states of the "crime" of school segregation along racial lines and imposed a sentence of death upon this practice. Then the court invited the attorney generals of the offending states to come to Washington and be kind enough to help apply the noose to the school arrangement which these officers of the law had defended successfully for eight decades.

Such action merely repeats another famous incident in the history of the South. In the late 1860's Congress passed the Fourteenth Amendment which called for the abolition of traditional restrictions on the social and civil privileges of the Negroes. The Southern states were then asked to ratify this proposal for a radical alteration in their customs.

All but one Southern state refused to ratify the Fourteenth Amendment. These states were willing to accept many changes which were forced down their throats with bayonets because they had just been defeated in the greatest war in history up to that time. But they were indignant at the tactless suggestion that they, of their own free choice, admit that they had been morally and legally wrong in their attitude toward colored people. They may have been sinners, but, like the Germans in 1919, they were too proud to confess "war guilt."

The attorney general of Georgia says he will not go to Washington to help the Supreme Court in its difficult task of actually abolishing segregation in the Southern schools. It will be interesting to know what the other Southern attorney generals will do.

The Fourteenth Amendment became a part of the law of the land without the cooperation of the representatives of the white people of the South. The anti-segregation decree of the Supreme Court will become a part of the law of the land regardless of what the Southern whites do or think. But without Southern cooperation the courts and lawmakers of the United States have had grave difficulties in applying the Fourteenth Amendment. Without this cooperation they will also have grave difficulties in enforcing the anti-segregation decree of the Supreme Court.

Church News

Wesley Foundation

Editor's Note: This letter was submitted to the Rotunda by Miss Malinda Ayers, director of the Wesley Foundation.

"Well, another milestone has passed in your school year. Some of you will be leaving us for good; others will be going home for the summer. Many and varied things will take your time this summer. I truly hope that each of you will have a wonderful time—whether you are working, vacationing, touring this country or abroad, or just loafing and resting. Make your time count for something of value and don't loaf too much.

To all the Seniors I want to wish you the best best of everything that this world has to offer. You will have some fine experiences in your new life that is ahead of you."

Westminster Fellowship

The West-Fel will hold its final worship service of the year on Sunday night, May 30, at 7 p. m., in the church. Following this service, all West-Fellers are invited to attend a picnic to be held at the home of Mrs. Toney DeMuth, member of the women's auxiliary.

Red And Whites Gain Coveted Color Cup; Softball Game Decides Athletic Contest

Waitman Discloses 30-25 Trophy Score

The Color Cup for 1953-54 was awarded to the Red and Whites by Helen Waitman, president of the Athletic Association, in assembly yesterday. The Red and Whites and Green and Whites have been alternate winners of the Color Cup since 1945-46.

Monday's softball game determined the winner of the Cup for this year. The game was tied 0-0 for the first three innings. With Evelyn Rowe pitching, the Green and Whites took the first lead, 3-0. With Clara Borum on the mound for the Red and Whites, they rose to win 8-3.

The first 10 points toward the award went to the Red and Whites at the end of the hockey season. The games between the freshmen and sophomores and juniors and seniors were close, but Red and Whites triumphed as final victors.

The race for points was tied 10-10 at the end of the class basketball season when Green and White took the majority of wins.

This tie was broken at the end of class volleyball games, by the Green and Whites who gained 10 more points when the freshmen and juniors won the majority of games.

The Red and Whites gained 5 points by an overwhelming win in the swimming contests but the Green and Whites still held the lead 20-15.

The race was tied again 20-20 when the Reds and Whites won the tennis doubles by forfeit. However, the Green and Whites took the lead soon afterwards with five points gained from archery. Mary Davis, Jeanette Puckett, Ann Snyder, Hilda Hartis, Charlotte Pitts, Joan Ward, Nancy Gilbert, Fay Evans, and Helen Waitman participated in archery. Evans and Waitman were the winners.

Ten points were awarded for the recent decisive softball victory giving the Red and Whites a final lead of 30-25 to win the coveted cup for 1953-54.

HELEN WAITMAN, PRESIDENT OF THE AA, entrusts to Georgia Jackson, president of next year's junior class, the coveted Color Cup, which will reside in the safe-keeping of the Red and Whites!

Visiting Instructors Join Summer Staff

The Longwood College summer session will open June 21, with three visiting instructors, two in the library science department and one in the physical education department.

Miss Harriet Baker, supervisor of physical education for the Portsmouth public schools, will teach social and folk dance and a class in games and rhythms for elementary schools in the physical education department. She has a B. S. degree from Florida State College for Women and M. S. from Teachers College, Columbia University.

In the library science department Miss Marguerite Smith will teach three classes. A graduate of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, Miss Smith has a B. S. degree in library science from Western Reserve University and M .S. in library science from Columbia University. She has served with the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore as a consultant in work with the public schools.

Mrs. Jane Baker Hobson, state consultant for school and young peoples libraries for the New Jersey Department of Education, will conduct the library science workshop to be held July 5-23. She has an A. B. degree from Mt. Holyoke College and B. S. degree in library science from Columbia University.

FTA Elects Officers

Lou Siebel was chosen as presiding officer for Future Teachers of America at a recent meeting. Phyllis Powell will hold the position of vice-president and Anne Thaxton will serve as secretary. The group selected Bonnie Owen to hold the position of treasurer.

Dr. J. P. Wynne, professor of education, spoke to the group after the election of officers. He discussed the VEA and the NEA as independent and associate organizations.

From the Bleachers

BY LOU WILDER

A successful year of sports has come to an end. The hockey team celebrated an undefeated season. At the state hockey tournament in November, Shirley Mallory was chosen all-state goalie and Clara Borum, reserve center forward. The basketball team also enjoyed a successful season with 5 out of 6 wins.

Then the green 'n whites and red 'n whites went into action. Class games were held in hockey, basketball and volleyball, followed by swimming, archery and tennis.

White blazers, which signify the highest athletic achievement, were awarded to Patsy Sanford and Else Wente, while Eleanor Koch and Roberta Wiatt received blue blazers, which also stand for outstanding work accomplished in athletics.

Miss Olive Iler and Miss Rebecca Brockenbrough, instructors in physical education, have been appointed to the Research and Publicity Committees respectively of the Virginia Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation. Miss Harriett Baker, who teaches physical and health education at Longwood in the summer, is president of the association.

Longwood and Westhampton joined in an archery meet at Westhampton College on May 14. Westhampton won the meet. Helen Waitman, Jeannette Puckett, Anne Synder, Fay Evans and Joan Ward represented Longwood.

Best wishes to everyone for a good summer. See you in September when a new race for Color Cup will start.

H2O Names Ward To Head Position

Joan Ward, a junior from South Carolina, was elected president of the H2O Club at a recent meeting. The group also initiated its new members on Tuesday night, May 11, in the pool.

Other officers chosen to lead the group were Dottie Morris, secretary and Patsy Hamner, treasurer.

Those honored with membership into the group were Dale Brothers, Betty Copenhaver, Loretta Kuhn, Jane Lohr, and Joanne McLelland.

Other new members include Audrey Owen, Elizabeth Pancake, Cary Price, Nancy Quarles, and Rheta Russell. Also Wilma Salman, Sara Lou Wendenburg, and Delores Winder were initiated.

This week the club entertained its new members with a waffle supper at Longwood Estate.

Lois Crutchfield, a senior from Hickory, presided over the group this year. Under her leadership, the H2O Club sponsored the traditional Christmas water pageant.

ballet dancing. Ann Wendenburg used landscape for her subject matter.

From the water color class came work by Carolyn Stanley, Jeanne Saunders, Gale Branch and Dorothy Ann Thomas. The work in this class again depicted a wide range in taste. Jeanne's best work "The Market" is a red, blue and grey study of a flower vender. Ann's paintings were often pastel works of children or toys—Gale and Carolyn did works usually in blue, green and grey and used studies of trees or buildings as subjects.

Some outstanding work was exhibited by beginning students; these works show a large variety in the use of subject matter and medium. Nancy Striplin, Mary Mayb, Ellen Hamlet, Dorothy Ann Thomas, Connie Coiner and Bell Fitzgerald exhibited outstanding work for beginning students.

Others to show talent were Sandra Dyer, Norma Reamy, Robinette Ballard, Shirley Hardy, Virginia Pohe Doss and Flo Soghoian. Also Jean Saunders, Joanne Webb, Mary Ann Jennings, Mary Ann Thomas, Audrey Rice and yours truly exhibited a variety of beginning art works.

F H A Conference To Convene Here

Between 400 and 500 high school girls will attend a Future Homemakers of America Conference here in June. A training group will come to the college June 7, and on June 8 the convention will officially open for a three-day session.

The general theme of the conference is the provision of ways to enrich home life. The following ways have been enumerated for discussion.

1. Sharing responsibilities and living democratically in the home and community.

2. Developing spiritual values.

3. Becoming healthy and happy individuals.

4. Developing personal and family resources.

5. Becoming leaders for better homes and community.

Aside from the discussion groups which will elate on problems and phases of the enumerated topics, there will be recognition services for outstanding FHA chapters and for outstanding chapter members.

Mrs. Nell Griffin, assistant professor of home economics is responsible for the local planning for the discussion.

Mr. Raymond French, assistant professor of chemistry is in charge of recreation for the group.

Elizabeth Elliott, Ellen Dize, Dot Edwards, Betty Jane Griffin and Nancy Tolley will serve as student guides and assistants.

Tanner's Fulbright Year in France Combines Studies, 'Parlez', Travels

By PAT JOHNSON and PAT MCLEMORE

"Si vous ne reunissez pas a votre examen, je vous ferai une veste." (If you don't succeed on your exam, I'll make you a coat.) It is the reply of a French friend to Helen Tanner, a Longwood alumna, who is worrying in France about her exams, while we at Longwood worry about our own.

"I have warned Madame Fulchiron that she will have a jacket to make, but I continue to hope that by some miracle I will get through," writes Helen Tanner in a recent letter to Miss Draper. (We happen to know that Helen made a marvelous grade on her mid-term exam.)

Helen Tanner, who graduated from Longwood in June 1953, was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship for one year's study in France. She sailed from New York on the Queen Mary September 23, 1953, and from the very first her letters have been bubbling with enthusiasm and happiness.

Of her first glimpses of the country of her dreams, she wrote: "How I'd love to live in an old stone house on a little farm in Normandy. What a country." The "frantic stages of fright" she had suffered during the previous summer were quickly forgotten as Helen plunged herself wholeheartedly into the business of speaking the language. She chatted with children in the lovely Paris parks; she struck up acquaintance with fishermen along the Seine, and she took every opportunity to "parlez, parlez, parlez." Sometimes, of course, she slipped up on a word, and sometimes the results were embarrassing.

Orientation in Paris for the Fulbrighters consists of three hours of classes each day at the Sorbonne. The time is divided between informal conversation in small groups with professors from the institute for the training of foreign teachers, lectures on the French educational system and other subjects of general interest, lyceums presented by nationally recognized cultural groups such as the Comedie Francaise, and excursions to places of interest in and around Paris. The Institute professors conduct tours around the city, invite the students to their homes for meals and tea parties, and advise them on the ways of profiting from their month's stay in France's capital.

The month of October slipped away with Helen bewailing every passing day and waxing each week more eloquent in her praise of the "magic city." "What is it about Paris that makes one feel so happy, gay, and alive? Maybe it's partly because everything is so different and that each day brings new interests. I believe, though, that there is an unexplainable sort of spirit about the city that gets in your blood . . . How I hate to leave its narrow streets, its sidewalk cafes . . . the magnificent museums, the beautiful gardens! . . . However I realize that Lyon will be so much better for me because I speak French so little here, and I realize that I shall like Lyon, too, when I get settled there."

And soon after her arrival in Lyon on November 1, a letter from Helen read: "I love Lyon as much as I did Paris . . . "She quickly made a place for herself in the family of a prominent Lyonnaise lawyer—Monsieur Fulchiron, his mother, wife, and three children.

Of her classes in the foreign students' school at the University of Lyon, Helen writes: "I love all my classes, and I'm even beginning to understand them! . . . . The foreign students here are the nicest group of people in the world. There is a German girl . . . who is a darling. Yaffa, who came from Israle, always sits beside me. She loves to 'mother' me. On my other side sits Pepito, the nicest, funniest, most gallant Spaniard alive. He works in a hospital, and relates all the operations to us in conversation class. We have all nationalities . . . "

A recent letter tells of her Christmas trip through the old southern province of Provence. One of the highlights of the journey was a heartwarming welcome given to her and her companion by a simple family in Marseilles, whom they met while asking directions on the street. "We were asked to lunch," she wrote, "and the daughter, who speaks a little English, told us shyly that she sang a few English songs. We gathered around the piano, and sang God Save the Queen and Auld Lang Syne. I suddenly felt quite close to this simple, good, hardworking family who were so interested in us, and who had been so generous and hospitable. It is little contacts like these which can help bring about a feeling of brotherhood between peoples of different nations. There we were far away from home, sharing the holidays with an unknown French family in Marseilles. I don't think I shall ever forget them as long as I live. It was they who made Christmas for us."

Recently she wrote: "My recent trips were wonderful, to Switzerland at Mardi Gras and Italy at Easter. I loved all the scenic beauty of Switzerland. I went with the Centre Latin of Paris and no tour could have been better organized. We didn't lose a moment and my traveling companions were lovely. The group was made up of mostly French students and that gave me an opportunity to speak French most of the time. I did lapse into English occasionally with an American couple who were charming and wonderful to me. We visited almost all the interesting cities and I especially liked Florence. I have so many things to tell you about the trip that it would take days. So I will wait until I see you to give you an account.

"You have said that you hoped any disappointments had been minor. I can honestly say that I have had no disappointments of any nature.

"Quel sejour heurex!" (What a happy sojourn!)

"Y" Elects Draper For Chairmanship

Miss Helen Draper, head of the foreign language department, will serve as chairman of the advisory board for the YWCA next year. Mrs. Louise Dugger, Miss Virginia Bedford, and Mr. Robert E. Merritt have been chosen to compose the board.

While attending Longwood College, Miss Draper was elected national student representative for the Y. This is not an office in the present Y, but at that time it entailed keeping in contact with the national YWCA and advising the school as to its activities. In her senior year she held the position of historian for her class and was also a member of Pi Kappa Omega, the forerunner of Kappa Delta Pi. This honor society was formed mainly for the students with a high scholastic average.

The YWCA has also chosen a town student to serve on the Y cabinet. Nancy Striplin will fill this office next year. In reworking the present constitution and revising in according to past ones, the cabinet found that a town student was included in the list of members. The present cabinet has decided to continue this practice.

In chapel exercises yesterday Jean Carol Parker, president of the Y, presented the school a check for the purchase of a pulpit-Bible.

L C Collection Holds Historic Letters

A collection of nineteenth century letters, including letters from Henry Clay, General Robert E. Lee, General Fitzhugh Lee, General Stonewall Jackson, and General Joseph E. Johnston, has been given to Longwood College, according to President Dabney S. Lancaster.

The letters, to be known as the Katherine Courtenay Johnston Collection, were given to Longwood by Miss Nancy Burell Johnston, of Atlanta, Ga., because the college owns Longwood Estate, the ancestral home of the Johnstons. It was at Longwood Estate that General Johnston was born.

The late Katherine Courtenay Johnston was a second cousin of Dr. John Atkinson Cunningham, who became the second president of Longwood College in 1887.

Two copies in the collection follow:

Nelson Reveals Circus Theme, Plans, Stunts

Bailey Will Assist General Chairman: A K G Presents 'Sawdust Shavings'

"Sawdust Shavings" has been chosen for the theme for the 1955 Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus, according to Nancy Nelson general Circus chairman.

Amid all the excitement and color of the "Big Top" and the "Midway," Circus will arrive on the Longwood campus with its clowns and animals parade and stunts, Saturday, October 30.

Nancy a senior from Newport News who has been active in dramatics at Longwood for four years will be aided by Jane Bailey a senior from Lexington who will serve as assistant general Circus chairman. The two girls will work on the formation of this event which is a traditional one at Longwood and which will for the first time carry out the theme of a circus throughout the entire program.

The annual fete which consists of a parade of clowns, floats and animals, a stunt contest between the four classes and a midway of concessions booths and side shows in the main recreation hall will take place the afternoon and night of Saturday, October 30. The main feature which is the stunt contest will be held in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m.

Jean Carol Parker and Jane Bailey are stunt chairmen for Circus and Helen Waltman is in charge of animals. Dot Vaden and Eloise Macon are co-chairmen for the parade which will move through the main streets of Farmville Saturday afternoon.

Publicity chairman for Circus is Shirley Ward; and Anne Carter Wendenburg is booth chairman.

The four stunts are in their developmental stages at the present headed by co-chairmen in each of the classes.

Sally Wilson of Hopewell and Nancy T. Masters of Newport News are stunt chairmen for the senior class. Stunt Chairmen for the junior class are Jackie Marshall of Suffolk and Jane Blake of Virginia Beach. Nancy Lenz of Warwick and Caroline Stoneman of Richmond are the sophomore stunt chairmen; and Carolyn Waggerman and Anne DeAlba of Warwick will head the freshmen stunt.

One of the features of the program Saturday night will be the presentation of Circus Court. Court is composed of a queen who is the senior representative and her three princesses who are representatives of the junior, sophomore and freshmen classes. Each individual class elects its representative prior to the start of circus and the identity of these representatives will be kept secret until the time of presentation of court.

Longwood Faculty Adds New Members

Former Instructors Return to Longwood

With the opening of Longwood College for the 1954-55 session, seven new members were added to the college faculty and four former members returned to take up their various duties. The departments in which the newly arrived faculty are serving include: home economics, English, physical education, music, and history.

Miss Betty Lois Price, who is teaching in the department of home economics, came to Longwood from Newport News, Virginia, where she was teaching in the high school. Miss Price received her B.S. degree from VPI and has begun working on her Masters there. For a while Miss Price was supervisor of government cafeterias in Washington, D. C.

Also a new arrival to the home economics department is Miss Lora Bernard, instructor in textiles and clothing. Miss Bernard attended the State Teachers College in Johnston City, Tenn. After receiving her B. S. degree from Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City, Tenn., Miss Bernard studied at the University of Tennessee, where she obtained her Masters. She has recently been doing post-graduate work at VPI.

Mr. Foster B. Gresham has come to Longwood as an instructor in English after teaching for 15 years at Lane High School in Charlottesville. Mr. Gresham received his Masters degree from the University of Virginia. He is

Club To Give Presentation Of 'Earnest'

"The Importance of Being Earnest," a satirical comedy by Oscar Wilde, will be the first dramatic offering of the fall season at Longwood College by the Longwood Players at 8 p. m., Friday night in Jarman Hall.

Having remained a perennial favorite since it was first presented in London in 1895, "Earnest" satirizes the foibles and weaknesses of the British upperclass society and mocks the manners and morals of the late Victorians. Today, this masterpiece of comedy is probably the most famous of all modern artificial comedies.

The chief plot element is that of a mythical character invented by a young man who wishes to put off on someone else his own shortcomings. The play revolves gaily and wittily around an ingenious case of "manufactured mistaken identity."

This play was first presented here during the past summer school session and is being staged again as a result of student requests. Two members of the cast graduated in the summer school and are returning to appear in their roles. Tom Moore will return to be seen as Algernon Moncrieff, one of the best characters created for the modern theatre. James

Longwood Deans To Attend Regional Meeting At Hollins

Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women of Longwood College, and her assistant Miss Nancy Chambers, are planning to attend a meeting of the Regional Association of Dean of Women on Saturday, October 9 at Hollins College.

A coffee at 9:30 a. m. will open the program after which a business meeting has been scheduled. Speakers for this meeting will be Dr. John Everett, President of Hollins College and Dr. R. Florence Brinkley, Dean at Duke University.

Delegates will then be entertained with a luncheon and tour of the college.

Fri. Program To Terminate Long Festival

After a series of events in a year-long celebration, Prince Edward County will hold its final program of its 200th anniversary Friday, October 15.

Visiting dignitaries for the occasion will be Mr. H. C. Bradshaw, historian, and assistant morning editor of the Durham Morning Herald; the honarable Attorney General J. Lindsey Almond, Jr.; Mr. Willis A. Robertson, junior senator from Virginia and Mayor W. C. Fitzpatrick.

Mr. J. B. Wall, Jr., is chairman of the Bicentennial celebration program and Mr. Vernon C. Womack will serve as chairman of the final program.

The festivities will open with a parade at 2:30 p. m. Civic and fraternal organizations of Prince Edward County will march in the parade; other features will include floats, under the auspices of the magisterial district of the county; decorated cars, and several bands.

The march will pass through the main district of Farmville and up High Street before a reviewing stand of the distinguished guests. This stand will be located in front of the Longwood College library.

Following the parade Mr. Bradshaw will deliver an address, entitled "Prince Edward—Her Past and Future", at Jarman Hall. A banquet will be held at 7:30 p. m. at which Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, President of Longwood College, will preside. Attorney General Almond will speak on "States Rights—What Next?"

Following the banquet a ball which will conclude the year long celebration will be held in the college gymnasium. The Southern Colonels of V. P. I. will provide the music for the occasion. Mr. W. F. Watkins is chairman of the planning committee for the ball.

Wynne Will Address Educational Society

Dr. John P. Wynne, head of the education department at Longwood College and president of the South Atlantic Philosophy of Education Society, will give the main address at the meeting of the society to be held at the University of Virginia, October 18.

The subject of the address Dr. Wynne will give at 7:30 p. m. will be "The Idea of Qualities of Experience as a Challenge to Philosophy of Education." He has been named chairman of the professional relations committee of the national Philosophy of Education Society which has been asked to work with a sub-committee of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education in outlining a study of the qualities of experience desirable for prospective teachers.

This projected study will be critically examined for five educators at the opening session of the meeting of the South Atlantic Philosophy of Education Society to be held at 10 a. m. The educators are Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood College; William F. Bruce, Lindley J. Stiles, both of the University of Virginia; D. R. Reveley, Shepherd College; and Davis Y. Paschall, Virginia State Department of Education.

Informants To Aid Language Students

Two foreign students at Longwood have entered Longwood to serve as language informants to their respective tongues. They are Michelle Jacqueline Bodo, of France and Consuelo Bess Duarte of Mexico.

While at Longwood Miss Bodo of the entire French department will take courses to further their own study of the French language and will assist in teaching French classes.

Miss Duarte of Mexico City will work with Miss Helen Draper, [illegible] of modern languages.

Miss Duarte, 18 of Mexico City, Mexico will also be an assistant Spanish instructor. Miss Duarte is majoring in secretarial science at Longwood. Her work will be guided by Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of modern languages.

Picturing Humanistic Aspect of Lancaster's Family Life, Student Relates Inside Story of President, First Lady

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Oh, we'd rather have Dr. Lancaster than anyone else we know" has certainly been one of the most familiar songs that each of us will long remember past college days! For we at Longwood have grown to love that tall, slender gentleman with the firm handshake and warm smile who we call our "President."

Equally as important to us, and certainly the greatest part of his life, is the charming lady we see by his side so often, the one he loves to tell jokes on, in his own whimsical manner, the one that has made our President's house into a lovely, elegant home where we are welcome—yes, the lady Dickie Moss calls "Dr. Lancaster's Mother"—his wife.

Whether greeting them in a receiving line or waving a cheery "hello" as they pass by the college, many girls have commented afterwards "I'd love to know them better!" Now, we would like to unfold the story of Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster in a "friendly sort of way," the only style appropriate for them, the one you already know so well!

The pony is an important resident at the Lancaster home confirms Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster's two grandsons David and Rob. They are shown here preparing to take a ride while the Lancasters approvingly look on.

Birth

To take "first things first," Dabney Lancaster was born in Richmond, the son of a prominent investment banker and the youngest of seventeen children. Their home was on Twelfth and Clay Streets, directly across from the White House of the Confederacy where he has a "distinctive view" of the large yard in front where he played as a young boy.

Just two blocks down the street, where the Medical College of Virginia is now located, lived Judge Benjamin Crump and his family, who were close friends of the Lancasters. Little did "Dabney" know then that their daughter Mary was to play a large role in his life.

One of Dr. Lancaster's most memorable events of these younger days centered around the family summer home in Bath County. He recalls how his father bought this 500 acre farm so that he might take his large family away from the heat of the city to a cooler climate. It must have been quite an event! Several weeks before the family would leave, Mr. Lancaster would engage a special freight car to carry all the summer supplies, food, equipment, plus dogs, cats and servants. Later the whole family would board the Chesapeake Railway car and journey to the country where the family carriages would meet them. Here was where he would help his father on the farm and absorbed a keen interest in agriculture. He recalls, "Fishing was superb in those days because the roads were poor and few people went fishing." This has always been a favorite pastime with him, along with hunting, and boating. The farm, where Dr. Lancaster vividly recalls many enjoyable times has been an integral part of his entire life.

E. H. S.

Dr. Lancaster attended Episcopal High School in Alexandria before he entered the University of Virginia. Many times we have heard him speak of "helping myself through college," such part time jobs as helping in the fraternity house, selling life insurance and serving as an agent for men's clothing did not seem to interfere with his academic work. Dr. Lancaster says "I didn't run around with girls till college" and even then he didn't date college girls for there were very few in college in those days. It explains that this is probably the reason that he can appreciate them so much now!

During college days one of his buddies was a rather stout boy—Fredrick Webb. The two were seen constantly together until they were rightly dubbed "Fats and Slats"—the nickname seemed to stick!

Fraternity

Aside from track an other activities Dr. Lancaster took interest in his fraternity Delta Tau Delta. As chairman of the build ng committee then, he help a great deal in the erection of their fraternity house which is located right behind the Art Museum on Ranny Road.

It was at one of the fraternity parties at the house that he met Mary Crump, who was dating one of his friends — (evidently they

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1954

A Warm Hello

Four weeks ago, Longwood College was a dead place as far as students were concerned. Administrative staff, custodians, and painters were busily working toward the opening of a new semester, but the various halls of the dorms were quiet and the rooms bare.

On September 19, however, the echo of the first freshman was heard on a hall, silenced only a week before. This arrival officially marked the opening of a brand new year for freshmen and another school year for returning upperclassmen.

In reference to the school year, upperclassmen already have some idea as to what Longwood expects from them and, in turn, what to expect from Longwood. Freshmen, on the other hand, still have to discover for themselves the secret of college life. This editorial is duly dedicated to the Class of '58.

One sentence from the Proscript of the Richmond Professional Institute gives an idea of what a college freshman is. "A new fall skirt, an honest desire to learn, a keen sense of anticipaton, a new hair-cut, a driving ambition to better the world, an old worn-out book from home, an unfaltering sense of honesty, a touch of homesickness, the excitement of the first party, and the uplifting joy of a letter from home; all constitute a college freshman."

Entering college is a major step in anyone's life. This one step measures the distance between high school fun and college joys. This one step measures growth intellectually, socially, and spiritually.

When you first considered going to college, the word opportunity no doubt entered your thinking. Opportunity to do what? In answer, opportunity to study for a chosen career; opportunity to prepare for homes; opportunity to develop socially, and opportunity to meet new associates who will develop into lasting friends.

Also when you first considered college, you no doubt thought of fun and enjoyment. This thought was a very natural one. Class parties and competition, productions, Circus, dances, picnics, plays, programs, and fellowships play a very important role here at Longwood. We think you will find also the friendliness of the girls an outstanding factor. Longwood girls are particularly noted for this.

Tradition and custom are a part of college life—traditions which will endure and be remembered for a long time after graduation. The recognition of Joan of Arc, our patron saint, will not be easily forgotten.

Serving along with studies and pleasure, spiritual insight and education seek to develop in the individual a richer understanding in the works of the church. Farmville offers five churches as media for this growth.

With these few thoughts constantly in front of you, it is hoped that success will pursue your every endeavor. On behalf of the Rotunda staff, we wish to extend a warm, friendly handshake of greeting to the members of this years' freshman class.

Another Step

At this time it seems most fitting to commend the dining room committee, the waitresses, the student hostess, her two assistants and table hostesses, and the student body for the great improvement shown in the organization of our dining hall.

Since this cooperation has been displayed, the dining hall is becoming a place of relaxation and conversation without the tension of hurried meals. Also in connection with this noticeable improvement, hotter and more varied meals are being served.

The waitresses especially are to be congratulated on how well they have become accustomed to the change for they have compromised with the committee to make the new organization successful and beneficial to the college. This new plan involves the serving of waitresses before scheduled mealtimes so that they are at complete liberty to wait upon students. In turn waitresses are now able to dine without being disturbed by duties.

Another step in this program for improvement is the purchasing of new silver and napkins. It is hoped that in the near future the committee on interior improvements will be able to afford new draperies at the windows.

These changes have developed through the planning of individuals; but it takes all of us to make them successful. By continuing to work side by side and by continuing to show satisfaction in these new developments, it is hoped that further progress will be made.

Greetings

The opportunity to say a word of welcome to our Longwood students is always a pleasure.

We have missed all of our "old girls" during the summer and it is good to have you at home again.

It has been a privilege to welcome personally our new girls on a number of occasions these past two weeks and I am happy to renew that welcome in writing. I trust that all of you now feel at home too and that the year will bring you that greatest happiness that comes from work well done and from new friendships that will mean much to you throughout all the years ahead. You have my good wishes now and always.

Sincerely,
Dabney S. Lancaster, President

I wish to extend a very hearty welcome to both our students and faculty members who are with us for the first time and hope that you now feel that you are a part of the college.

It is always a pleasure to welcome back to the campus our former students and I commend you for the wonderful part that you have taken in helping our new students to feel at home here at Longwood.

My very best wishes to each of you for a happy and profitable year.

Very sincerely,

Ladies Spend Summer Days In Varied But Exciting Ways

By JACKIE MARSHALL

Well, hello all you good people! Here we are back at the grind after an all too short summer of healthy loafing. I did a happy welcome to the freshmen who are reading this great news information for the first time, and to some of us who have covered the broader horizons, I'd like to interview a few of our summer adventures.

First of all, Florence (Flip) Blake told me of her fabulous trip to Boston with her sister Jane to visit brother Ben. Among the many interests of their trip were the eating of snails and bovillaboise (whale, lobster, clam, fish, shrimp) in a French restaurant and seeing "Les Trois Soulers," a Harvard Production. Flip enjoyed the hurricane they encountered but Jane was caught short in the cold weather and had to make a quick shopping spree for woolens.

Oh yeah! Dig Flip's new hairdo by Henri Caruso!

Among the working class were Sally Wilson, Carolyn Stanley and Barbara Southern who worked as waitresses in College Park, Md. They saw plays, concerts and got chilblanes on the feet. There was only one major difficulty during the entire summer-Sally was nearsighted and couldn't see the tray.

Southern's hair-do is by Pierre-Henri's second child by his fourth marriage.

On a more serious note Ann Watkins took a job at Eastern State in Williamsburg and worked as dining hall supervisor at the new mental hospital at Dunbar. Ann thoroughly enjoyed her work and found it most interesting. One comment which caught my ears was her statement that nearly all the women patients there were murderesses. EGAD!

Barbara Mitchell went to Savannah, Georgia, where she saw for the first time in her little life, palm trees and Spanish Moss. That's all I could get out of her.

Euphan (Baby) Carter took a quick jaunt down Alabammy-way! She was visiting Craig Air Force Base- (her sister's residence, girls) While there she knocked her nephew's teeth out-that wasn't her main objective, it jus happened that way. On the train back to Leesville, Va., Baby met a girl from London, England "I've always wanted to talk to an Englander and I enjoyed a spot of tea and crumpets with the old girl", says Baby.

Adele Donaldson really flew the coop-as far as Venezuela! This is an authentic fact but seeing as how I didn't get a chance to interview her, go ask her how she enjoyed it.

Jean Parker and Jackie White along with two other students from rival colleges went by car on a three and a half week trip to California. They went by Yellowstone National Park, Grand Canyon, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and New Orleans. It was a most enjoyable trip. Jean Carol said "We decided Nevada could be given back to the Indians 'cause there warn't nothing thar". One educational fact gained that they wish to unselfishly pass on to anyone else planning the same trip is to please ask them at which holes not to eat because they hit them all.

'Up thar' in the Catskill Mountains at Roscoe, New York, were Phylss Powell, Becky Hines, and Joyce Pully who worked at the Huff House. While there, Miss Pulley made a slam-bang television debut whereupon she won $500 pocket money!

Well, these are but a few of our summer tourists but they were downright interesting. Don't you think?

If you can carry a tune, we have a Wesley Foundation choir. We need you! Remember practices are on Friday afternoon at the Student Center.

SOCIAL NOTES

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Spring fever has hit our campus early this year (or is it just a holdover from last spring?). Let's get on with the notes and we just what is happening. First though, our apologies to the Freshmen—since we don't know as many of you we don't have as much social news about 'ya, so let us know what happening, okay.

Over the summer some of our beds became Mrs. and some became Mrs.-to-be. It's now Beverly Taylor Newcomb, Geridine Lucy Doyle, and Barbara Moore Darling our best wishes to all of you for many years of married bliss.

Among those wearing diamonds is Ann Watkins who is now engaged to Linlow White of Washington and Lee University.

Now pinned is Dot Douglas who has received a KA pin from Bill Daughtrey of H. S. C. Shirley Garst is now wearing Joe Maupin's Kappa Sigma pin. Charlotte Fitts, is pinned to John Maragon, a Pi Kappa Alpha at H. S. C. Barbara Mays received an Alpha Delta pin from Bond Harris of the University of Richmand over the summer. This past week end June Manlove became pinned to a Pi Kappa Alpha at the University of Virginia.

Attending U. of Va. football game and fraternity parties this weekend were Jane Lohr, Stephanie Bauder, Joyce Gillchrest, Lucy Twing, Helen Smith, Leslie Smith, Joanne Wilson, Virginia Anderson, Sylvia Overton and June Manlove.

Once again Hampden-Sydney played host to some wonderful combo parties for their annual Homecoming. This year the parties were split and the regular dances will be held on November 12 and 13. Many of our girls attended and a fine time appeared to be had by all.

In the spotlight was our own Lois Ann Childers who reigned as Sigma Chi Sweetheart. Lois attended the parties with Bob Clold. Another sweetheart, Mrs. Guy (Jan) Farley, was honored as Theta Chi Sweetheart. Congratulations to both of you!

Attending the Chi Phi party on Friday night were Martha Alexander Dale Brothers, Betty Cory, Margaret Dryden, Charlotte Fitts, Betty Mass, Rheta Russell, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Betty Jean Jenkins, Donna Benn, Ann Miller and Carolyn Stanley.

Following Saturday's game, several of the fraternities held buffet dinners in their respective houses. Saturday night, several of the fraternities were opened to us for combo parties.

Those attending the Saturday night parties were Shirley Alcott, Martha Alexander, Judith Alexander, Sue Amory, Betsy Barefoot, Nan Brimmer, Dale Brothers, Pat Cantrell, Jane Carson, Lois Ann Childers, Betty Cory, Annette Crain, Norma Jean Croft, Margaret Dryden, and Joanne Farless.

Others attending were Charlotte Fitts, Dottie Franklin, Charlotte Fudge, Suzanne, Sara Gayhart, Anne Griffith, Pearson Grymes, Diane Hanson, Ann Hart, Carol Hepler, Betty Jean Jenkins Majorie Lucas, Pat McLemore, Mary Parke Macfarlane, Ann Miller Moore, Bonnie Moore, Kitty Nelson, Carolyn Oakey, Virginia Obenchain, Sally O'Malley, Elizabeth Pancake, Barbara Parkinson, and Mary Beth Picinich.

Also Suzanne Prillaman, Jane Riley, Nancy Richardson, Marica Robins, Betty Rogers, Rheta Russell Betty Frances Scarborough Jane Scot, Jeannette Stinson, Sue Taylor, Ann Thomas, Dorothy Wallace, Marion Webb, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Shirley Willhide, and Mary Ann Wright attended.

Let us know what you've been doing so you won't get left out next time huh?

Congratulations

Congratulations are definitely in order for the Robert Merritts. The latest little Merritt, Robin Ann, arrived via stork, October 12 weighting 7 pounds, 4½ ounces.

Congratulations, happy parents, we think it's great! One question, Mr. Merritt, where are the cigars?

Devoted Couple Meet at University To Begin Interesting Life Together Full of Planning, Thinking, Loving believed in "changing partners" then too, for she later became Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster).

The gracious first lady of Longwood attended "Mrs. Jennie's" school for girls, now St. Catherines, in Richmond. She was presented as a debutante to Richmond society in 1912, and after graduation, engaged in charity work and went to Bermuda for the winter—such a charming lady whose father was then on the Supreme Court of Appeals, must have enjoyed many social functions. She explains that although she didn't attend college or work after "Mrs. Jennie's," "that was in a different era."

Mrs. Lancaster, Rob, and Dr. Lancaster take time out to pose for a family snapshot.

Masters Degree

During their three year engagement Dr. Lancaster did graduate work at Virginia and received his Masters Degree at V. P. I. Although, he majored in languages at the University of Virginia, the yearning for farm life crept up again, and he changed to the Biological Sciences. Dr. Lancaster says he had every intention of going back to his father's place on the farm to live, but somewhere "I got sidetracked." Later, he continued studying at Missouri and then taught at St. Christophers.

Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster were married June 12, 1915. On their honeymoon they went up to the camp for a week and drove all over the countryside in a horse and buggy, and then moved to Charlottesville where Dr. Lancaster was teaching.

One of Mrs. Lancaster's closest friends, Beverly Tucker, was living in Charlottesville with her husband also, so since they had never attempted to cook a meal before, it was decided that they would go to cooking school at the University. The two entered class one morning, sat on the back row, and became quite perplexed at all the intelligent cooks surrounding them. Later they learned it was an class in advanced cooking education, or "teaching others to cook." Mrs. Lancaster smiles at her accomplishment, "I learned to make the best omelette." She says she loves to cook, but never reads a recipe—just puts in "a dash of this and that".

Blacksburg

The two then moved to Blacksburg where Dr. Lancaster taught for ten years, and began raising four little girls, which they both will never cease to be proud of. It is interesting to note how the children were named—Mary Tabb (after his mother), Carrington, better known as "Cennie," (after her mother, Elizabeth Taylor (for Mrs. Lancaster's aunt), and Alice Dabney—(Dr. Lancaster says "I gave up on having any boys"). On one occasion, Mrs. Lancaster remembers Dr. Lancaster attempting to teach his eldest daughter to read—after four nights of earnest study he gave her up as a complete moron; however, the young lady graduated Phi Beta Kappa!

While in Blacksburg, Dr. Lancaster and a Mr. Sutton, athletic director at V. P. I. decided to start a boys camp on the old farm of the Lancasters. Camp Wallawatoola (winding waters) is still functioning on the land that has now been sold to Mr. Sutton.

From Blacksburg, it was on to Richmond for the Lancasters, where Dr. Lancaster became State Supervisor and Secretary of the Board of Education. While there they lived in Ginter Park where they owned their first home for six years.

Dean of Men

Dr. Lancaster then accepted the position as Dean of Men at the University of Alabama. This, he recalls, was a 24-hour day job—everything from talking to honor societies to bailing boys out of jail in the wee hours of the morning.

With one of their girls as a senior at Alabama and the other entering a freshman, Mrs. Lancaster remembers that the life in Alabama was mostly social. Both of them love to entertain in a small way, but nothing seems so nice as having the whole family together! It was after the Lancasters had moved back to Richmond and Dr. Lancaster headed the State Department of Education, that he accepted the Presidency of our fair College.

Many of us know the acomplishments that they have both made for our college and for us, not only in raising academic standards and improving the appearance of our college, but others too numerous to mention.

Mrs. Lancaster

Mrs. Lancaster, in her own quiet way, has made the President's home into a warm welcome place for us. She, too, has initiated many "new" things such as orientation teas for the freshmen and a Founders Day reception which was never done before and has proven to be good publicity for our college. Her chief interest is in her flowers and her garden, which is one of the loveliest in Farmville.

The two have lived a devoted life to each other and their family. Despite all honors and praise for academic achievement or social engagements, they both have a certain twinkle in their eyes when they speak of the "children" which now includes four daughters, four sons-in-law (of whom they are quite proud) and 13 grandchildren. Dr. Lancaster figures that he is entitled to 16, though, since he had four children.

"I Turn to Animals"

He says, "When I get peeved with people—I turn to animals." This is quite evident to us who have been greeted at the door by "Briar" the old English sheep dog, or have seen the pony in the backyard. The pony was bought for his small grandson that lives in Richmond after hearing him say "My grandfather promised me a pony for four years and that's all I want for Christmas." So, grandfather was obligated!

On the other hand, Mrs. Lancaster says she is always on the defensive side with animals for Briar roots in her garden and the pony loves to chew on the top of her rose bushes!

Active In Community

Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster have enjoyed their six years in Farmville and both have been active in community affairs, although Mrs Lancasters says she is not a "club woman." They like to travel and usually go together. This year they are looking forward to visiting in Alabama with one of the girls and her family.

They consider themselves very fortunate people and have certainly lived a full and interesting life; however, they both have been formulating ideas for their retirement years that lie in the near future. This summer they have completed "a curious house which started as a little cabin and has been added to," located on the 40 acres of the old farm in Bath County where they have spent a great deal of their lives. They are looking forward to the time when they can call this "home," "for traveling from one place to another has always mean "renting' our house."

Retirement Plans

Dr. Lancaster plans to "operate on a small scale" some experimental farming, to make studies which he hopes will benefit Education, and perhaps do a little writing. His wife will probably spend much of her time gardening and landscaping the grounds. Mrs. Lancaster says she has always loved "pretty things." We know their home will be a "garden spot," and a lovely place in which to live.

It is not hard to imagine that there will be many "little visitors" who will enjoy fishing, and boating on the river and helping their granddaddy on the farm that has meant so much to him.

In talking to Mrs. Lancaster she had one complaint—when she laughingly said—"he talks about me too much in his speeches—always has a joke on me!" With that, Dr. Lancaster, who had just finished feeding the pony, entered the room and handed her the feed bag. "There's some material for a new dress." Which all goes to show that Mr. President, Educator as he is, always has time for a joke.

College Professor Releases Review

An article written by Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., head of the English Department at Longwood College, appears in the current number of "Il Giordale dell' Universita," the official journal of the universities of Italy.

The article, written in Italian, reviews the status of humanistic scholarship in the United States in an attempt to correct the prevalent Italian misconception that private colleges and universities in this country are academically superior to state-supported institutions.

Dr. Simonini, who spent last year in Italy on leave-of-absence, pointed out in the article that economic factors have weighed heavily against private institutions today in thier attempt to compete with state colleges and universities in physical resources.

LC Men Plan Year's Events

By HARRY LANCASTER

The men of Longwood will sponsor a juke box dance in the recreation hall Saturday night, October 16, according to Charles Winfree, chairman of the activities of the mens Student Government Association.

The first meeting of the Association was held Wednesday, September 29. President Harold K. Magnusson conducted the meeting and explained the aims and activities of the organization to the new men students. Plans for the coming year include a production to be held sometime in February. The production is a variety show with the emphasis on comedy and presented annually by the men of the College. The men also plan to have a booth at the College circus.

It has been decided to have their regular meetings during the coming year on the last Wednesday of each month at 12 noon. Mr. Magnusson appointed Mr. Winfree chairman of the activities committee and placed Harry Lancaster in charge of publicity.

The other officers of the Gen's Student Government Association are Fred Stables, vice-president; Judge Ogburn, secretary; and Herbert Goodman, treasurer. Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, professor of History, is the faculty advisor. The association and the Tau Theta Pi social fraternity are the only two organization exclusively for men on the campus.

The Association welcomed seven new members this fall. They are Henry W. Birdsong, of Farmville Robert W. Buckman of Blackstone; William G. Hawkins of Keysville; Clifton D. Kilmon from Coles Point; the Rev. Mr. Sidney A. Loggins of Crewe; Robert M. Mason of Keysville; and Eugene Noel of Altavista. Messers. Birdsong, Kilsong, Kilmon, and Noel entered Longwood during the 1954 Summer Session.

Annual Staff Begins Sale of '55 Virginian

The Virginian staff is now collecting money for the 1955 annual acording to Donnie Devine, editor.

A photographer will be here to take individual pictures on October 18, 19, 20, and 21. Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors are requested to wear white sweaters with white collars. Seniors will be photographed in drapes.

The price of plain annuals this year is $8.00; plain with name, $8.45; padded, $8.55; and padded with name $9.00. November 15 has been set as deadline. Students are requested to pay staff members who will be on the halls until that time.

"Earnest"

Parker will appear as his butler, Lane.

Miss Judith Corson, a high school teacher who attended the summer session to further her study, will be back to play her role of Miss Prism.

Other cast members include the following six students who are presently enrolled at Longwood. They are Karen Spencer, Nancy Jane Jones, Mary Cowles, Mildred Sutherland, George Ogburn, and Freddie Staples.

"The Importance of Being Earnest" is being presented under the direction of Dr. C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English.

Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit" has been scheduled for the next play of this fall's dramatic season. Tryouts were held this week in Jarman Auditorium.

Listen to Old Ben and Me -- We've Wise Words for Thee

By DOT DOUGLAS

My old friend Ben, remember he founded the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and I got together and came up with some little pearls of wisdom.

We hope they'll enlighten and brighten all Longwood lilies.

1. Eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow you may not.
2. He who throws stones Shouldn't have glass eyes.
3. A penny saved isn't worth much
4. Still water runs
5. Birds of a feather Probably want mink coats
6. A rotten apple spoileth the Wednesday breakfast or an egg today is better than fish roe tomorrow.
7. A man in the hand is worth two on the string.
8. He who laughed last has a poor sense of humor
9. Big hangovers from Little binges grow
10. The way to a man's heart is hard to find
11. Never swap horses
12. Open confession isn't good for the reputation
13. Among the blind the one-eyed man is a freak
14. All's fair in love and at Burkeville
15. There are many pebbles at the beach but where is the beach?
16. Fools rush in where night watchmen always tread
17. The grass is always greener in the Springtime
18. Genius is 1 per cent inspiration and 99 per cent imitation
19. Two hands are better than one
20. Where there's Life, there's Time.
21. Stolen kisses are— the only kind at LC.
22. 'Tis better to have loved and lost, When nobody finds out about it.
23. Ignorance is bliss, till grades come out
24. Advice to persons about to study—don't!
25. She who loves not men and drink, remains a fool, we think.

P. S.—Roses are red, but that's not new
So goodbye from me and Ben Franklin too!

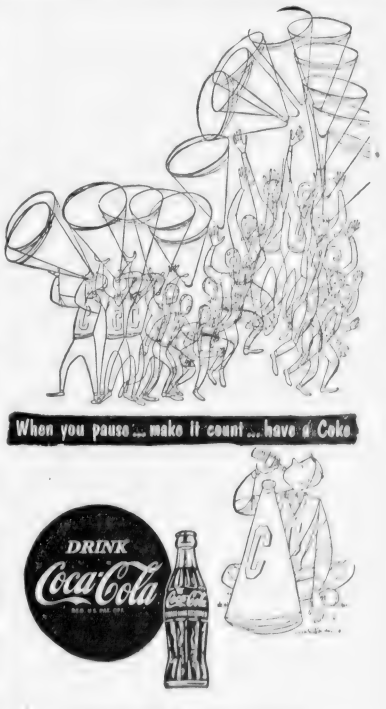
Dance Club Chooses Sponsor for 1954-55



Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, Professor of Biology was chosen as the new sponsor of the Cotillion Club during the recent meeting held on September 29.

It was also decided that the dues of the club be kept the same as the previous years; six dollars for new members and five dollars for the old members.

Beth Kent, president, has stated that plans are being made to increase the membership of the club. This has not been voted on by the members, but will be in the coming meeting. The enrollment of the college has increased and the officers feel that the club membership should be increased too.

Plans are also being made for a spring dance. The date has been set for April 2.

Perplexed Frosh View College With Wide Eyes During Beginning Week

Rats Recall Capping, Singing Sophomores

By VIOLET MARSHALL And ELLA CARTER

We, the Freshmen Class of 1958, approached, with widened eyes, our chosen college. We couldn't help but feel that these buildings with their many windows were looking at us as we were looking at them. Longwood College! There it was, directly in front of us. It surely was hard for us to believe the day had come. We were all so glad. But, when time came for our parents to go home——home? Would we ever see home again?

After being led through a series of halls and up countless steps we each were shown our little room—bare but nice. Believe it or not, but we have our rooms looking almost like home.

Many of us met our roommates for the first time. Girls? We had never seen so many! After we had gotten settled in our rooms we went out to meet the girls across the hall. We were so busy with our new surroundings and new friends that we were quite unaware of the word Sophomore, but that is to come later—

During the process of registering, a schedule was given to us with the meetings and so forth that we were to attend. In the process of following it we felt as if we were getting up with the roosters and working in a mill all day. When at last we finished with the schedules we had a small ritual of burning them.

We especially enjoyed the singing in the Rounda. At first we didn't know whether to let our homesick faces join in the singing, or to run to our rooms and hide. One cannot know what those songs meant to us. They were so much fun. But we didn't realize there were mean "ole" sophomores looking at us.

Wednesday night came and we all marched down to the Rotunda. We dressed in white, and our big sisters led us. Now what were they going to do to us? We soon found out! With a nice little ceremony we received pretty white caps. Suddenly horrible loud voices were yelling at us, "RUN, RAT! RUN!" We got to our rooms as fast as we could. This was just the beginning. Who dared to think ahead?

Classes began. Most of our time has since been spent learning just how much we've never heard of. Everything was going along nicely. That was until those Sophomores heard our steps in the hall. They rushed out, and it isn't too hard to guess what they said! "Rats, YOU RATS!" or "ON YOUR KNEES RATS!" Yes, we've hailed 1957 quite a bit. Ah, but more of that story remains yet to be told. If any of us are still around after it's over, we'll tell someone about it.

Speaking seriously though, we freshmen feel very welcome here and just love Longwood. Thanks for the time parties and all the help everyone's been to us.

LC Players To Give Weekly Record Night

Beginning October 14, at 7 P. M., the Longwood Players will begin a series of weekly nights at the theatre on records in dressing room 2 of Jarman Hall.

This year's record night will be on Thursday. The first drama to be presented will be "Hedda Gabler" by Henrick Ibsen. The remainder program for the rest of the season will be Marlowe's "Dr. Faustus" on October 28; Shakespeare's "Othello" on November 4 and 11; and 18. "Death of a Salesman" by Arthur Miller on December 2 and 9. "Uncle Vanya" by Anton Chekov on December 16.

"The Ladys Not for Burning" by Christopher Fry will be presented on January 6 and 13. "Lady Windmere's Fan" will be played on January 20.

Anyone who is interested in hearing drama is invited to attend the Thursday night Recorded Drama Club.

'Y' Announces Year's Theme

The "Y" Cabinet had its first meeting with the president, Jean Carol Parker, on September 29. In regards to the new freshmen class, the installation service of the girls to the YWCA will be held in the Episcopal Church October 12.

Plans are under way for Longwood's annual Religious Emphasis Week, which will be in February. The theme which was chosen for this year is "Strength Through Faith". The speaker will be the Rev. Mr. W. Holt Souder, assistant rector from St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Richmond.

Instead of having a fall speaker for an assembly this year, the "Y" plans a program whose purpose is to better inform the students of the work and objective of the Christian association. Betty Jean Jenkins has charge of this program.

The cabinet made tentative plans for their fall retreat which is planned for November 20. There was also discussion of ways in which they can better aid the college.

Jean Carrol would like to remind everyone about prayers held in the Episcopal Church each week day evening following the evening meal.

New Faculty

currently occupied with freshman English.

Miss Eleanor N. Weddle, who graduated from Longwood in 1952, is instructing swimming and physical education classes. She is working on her Masters at the University of Tennessee.

The history department has three new professors, Mr. James M. Helms, Mr. George G. Callcott, and Mr. M. H. Bittinger. Mr. Helms, who is from Rock Hill, S. C., attended Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., and Clemson College in South Carolina. He is working on his Ph. D. at the University of Virginia and should complete the requirements this fall. Mr. Helms is teaching this fall for Dr. Francis B. Simkins.

Mr. George G. Callcott is a graduate of the University of South Carolina and received his Masters from Columbia University. Mr. Callcott has completed resident requirements at the University of North Carolina for a Ph. D. At present Mr. Callcott is teaching for Dr. Marvin Schlegel who is away on leave of absence.

Mr. M. H. Bittinger came to Longwood from Hampden-Sydney where he was head of the social science department. Mr. Bittinger is a graduate of Hampden-Sydney and has returned to that college from time to time during the course of his career as a history professor. He taught at Greenbrier Military School in West Virginia. In the late 30's Mr. Bittinger was professor of history and social science at Blake Country Day School in Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Bittinger received his Masters from UVA in 1930 and has completed most of the work for a Ph. D.

Miss Elizabeth Burger returned to Longwood after a year's leave of absence. The first semester she went on tour with the international hockey team as the United States' representative, and the second semester she studied at Columbia University. During the summer preceding her leave, Miss Burger studied at the University of Virginia and will continue her studies there this year. Miss Burger received her Masters degree from William and Mary

Mr. Joel K. Ebersole has returned to Longwood and the music department after a year's leave of absence to complete resident requirements at Indiana University for a Doctor of Music degree. During his stay there, Mr. Ebersole taught voice as a graduate assistant and sang with the Lafayette Symphony Orchestra. He also sang leading roles in "Showboat" and "Brigadoon." Mr. Ebersole received his B. S. from the University of Cincinnati and his Masters of Music from the Indiana University.

Dr. Rinaldo C. Simonini, head of the English department, went to Italy during his leave of absence last year to study methods of teaching English in Italian Universities. A graduate of Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Simonini obtained his M. A. and Ph. D. from the University of North Carolina.

Returning to the art department, Mrs. Janice Speer Lemen has been doing graduate work on the study of the history of art and painting. She attended Columbia University in New York for this research during the past year. She graduated from South Eastern Missouri State Teachers College and received her masters degree from Peabody. She began teaching duties here in 1944.

LC Group Confer With HS To Plan Better Relations

September 29 representatives of the four classes at Longwood, two officers of the Student Council, and two members of the administration met with representatives of the Hampden-Sydney student body and fraternities to coordinate the year's calendars for the two schools. This meeting was held in order to avoid overlapping of events to be held at Longwood and Hampden-Sydney. Dr. Francis Ghigo, a professor at the men's college, and James A. Kinard, Dean of Hampden-Sydney students also attended the discussion.

It was suggested at this meeting that organizations having like or similar chapters on both campuses make plans to hold joint meetings including all members. The presidents of these groups were notified of this plan and met this afternoon to further arrangements for joint activities. The organizations were grouped together in the following manner. Alpha Kappa Gamma here will meet with Hampden - Sydney's Omicron Delta Kappa; Pi Delta Epsilon, the national journalism fraternity, has chapters at both schools and they plan to exchange suggestions at joint meetings; also Alpha Psi Omega, which has chapters on both campuses, has already met jointly many times and plans to continue following this plan. The Longwood Y. W. C. A. will meet with Hampden-Sydney's Student Christian Association. Sigma Epsilon, a literary society at Hampden-Sydney, will join with Longwood's Beorc Eh Thorn. Pan-Hellenic Council at Longwood plans to coordinate activities with the men's Inter-Fraternity Council.

These plans were made in order to draw the two school closer together both scholastically and socially.

Frosh Find Fabulous Facts False Fables Lazy Longwood Lassies Live and Learn

By CAROLYN STANLEY

It seems like such a long time ago when you were a perspective freshman, sitting in your living room gazing through the catalogue that just arrived, while visions of this "new life" roamed through your head. Gay curtains, easy chairs, soft beds, nice thick rugs, beautiful maple furniture—peace and quiet—would all be there! Of course you could bring your phonograph and new album of Bach and Shubert String Quartets, and there would be weekend trips to U. Va., Princeton, etc., etc. Oh! this is really going to be the Life!

So September 19 rolled around—you climbed three flights of steps to find four bare walls, two hard beds, desk and bureau—curtainless, window, rugless floor and one light bulb dangling from the ceiling. You have to make the supreme choice—to laugh or cry. With one look at your roommate, you decide to laugh!

The first week will certainly be one of relaxing (you tell yourself) so you can prepare for when the classes begin and get your room all fixed up—sleep late—and get yourself adjusted. So you take tests in the morning, go to orientation classes, hear this person speak—that person—take a tour of the campus—sing "Red and White" until you have a sore throat—and call Dr. Lancaster "Charlie Hop" at the formal Reception!

First Meal: Gracious Living.

This I will not go into, because Longwood, in many ways, tends to follow John Dewey's theory "learning comes from experience" (and thus you must find you own way to the tearoom).

Classes:

What we assume you came here for, started at 8:05 a. m., Thursday morning (of that first glorious week). If you have read any of the propaganda around, you're in for a shock—professors are tweedless, pipeless, and do not fall over when you sit on the front row and bat your eyelashes. A few words to the wise . . . take a notebook of notes for Dr. Moss everyday (but you'll have to know them in Feb.) Try-out for "Dark of the Moon" and laugh at Dr. Earley's jokes—and if you have "Hoot" for orientation, act interested—she'll love you!

Finances:

Now, when you are broke, allowance runs out, and your parents don't seem to care whether your bill at Baldwin's is paid or not—there are always job possibilities. So you can baby-sit . . . this is an ideal way to make money. Put the little jokers to bed at seven and you have all evening to do your homework, eat their food, play the vic and watch TV . . . at least, until you have to give Barnie his bottle, change Billie, rock Henry to sleep, read them all a story, carry them all two glasses of water and then wrestle with them till they're worn out and fall alsleep, and you do too!

Athletic Requirements:

Whether or not you think you're the athletic type or not, you have to pass a swimming test to graduate . . . and take two years of phys. ed. Now the swimming is really a pleasure. You have darling little garments for swimming, "tank suits" (so-called because you will look like a tank in one!) You march through the cold shower, jump in the pool, swim 100 yards, float, tread, etc., and it's all very simple if you know how. Then you will have to take a short course in "Fundies," fundamentals of stair-climbing, suitcase lifting, moving furniture, walking, running, praising '57 and all sorts of things that every young rat should know!

Typical Collegiate Conversation: (so you won't talk about the wrong things) Longwood girl love to talk—they talk about clothes, men, football, men, weekends, men, religion, marriage, bridge and men . . . around February, they will begin discussing Plato's eternal question "Is Education Possible?"

Cutting: Something we don't do (or talk about).

Cramming:

Every September you will vow it will never, over your dead body, happen . . . but February and June will soon find you in distress. The exam schedule has been up for months, but the notes you thought were so complete, don't look that way anymore. You try "No Doze" maybe. You begin to outline—by 8 p. m. You have just reached Thanksgiving's outline (and you're not so thankful . . . courage fails—the clock strikes midnight, the light goes out . . . "Well, if I don't know it now, I'll never know it" . . . and so to bed.

It's happened to the very best of us, cheer up, it's a great life! (if you don't weaken).

JEAN PARROTT

Parrott Attends Harvest Festival

A smiling girl left Longwood last Thursday to attend the fifth annual Apple Harvest Festival in Charlottesville.

Jean Parrott, a sophomore from Standardsville, was selected 'Miss Green County' for the occasion and will serve as one of eight princesses surrounding Chatham's Ellen Whitehead, "Miss Virginia of 1954."

A business education major, Jean plans to teach upon graduation. She likes swimming, tennis, and dancing. Her hobby, however, is collecting miniature pitchers.

As to her future plans, she says "I am not thinking of marriage right now. I have got to finish school first. That's what my mother is always telling me, anyway!"

Athletic Group Awards Four Coveted Blazers

Seniors Gain Praise For Achievements

Blazers were awarded to four seniors following a demonstration by the Athletic Association last Thursday, September 30.

Recipients of white blazers were Hilda Hartis, Helen Waitman and Mary Ann Ward. Virginia Burgess received a blue blazer.

Blazers are awarded to seniors who have been outstanding in athletics during their college years. These persons are selected on the basis of sportsmanship, variety of participation, scholarship, and their contribution to college athletics.

Points are awarded to girls who are on class squads, class teams, varsity squads, and varsity teams. Points are also given for participating as contestants, runners-up, and winners in individual contests. Seniors with 30 points receive white blazers. Blue blazers are awarded to those persons obtaining 20 points.

Hilda, Helen and Mary Ann are physical education majors from Martinsville, Charles City and Galax, respectively. Virginia is an elementary major from Eagle Rock.

Dr. Lancaster Talks About History of LC

The regular assembly yesterday afternoon was opened by the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" followed by a scripture reading by Georgia Jackson. Nancy McLawhorn sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Jean Carol Parker, president of the YWCA, then turned the meeting over to Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president, who spoke to the assembly informally about the interesting facts concerning the history of Longwood. He emphasized that since this month we would be celebrating the 70th anniversary of the college, it was important to know its historical background.

Miss Rebecca Brockenbrough, faculty chairman for the assembly committee announced the assignment of assembly numbers for students and the entrance dors for each class.

Alumnae Schedule Council Meetings

The Longwood College Alumnae Council will meet here October 22-23, according to Mrs. Ruth G. Coyner, Alumnae Secretary.

The council is composed of the officers of the Alumnae Association and the chapter presidents. At this meeting plans will be made for the alumnae house. The chapter president will plan the individual chapter's work for the coming year.

Mrs. Coyner said that she expects good attendance at the meeting.

It is the hope of the Association that the remodeling and redecoration of the house will soon be under way. The house next to Jarman Hall will be used by visiting alumnae who return to the campus on various week-ends.

Circus

Judges for the stunt contest will be townspeople of Farmville who are active in civic and social affairs and impartial to anyone of the classes. The judging of the contest will be based on presentation, originality, participation, suitability, appropriateness, and good taste.

The class winning first place in the stunt contest will receive $10 and the runner-up will receive $5. Rehearsals for stunts will begin October 11 and will run Monday through Friday.

There will also be a float contest between classes. The class that wins will receive a $5 prize.

Nancy, as a representative of Alpha Kappa Gamma, urges everyone to participate in Circus, keeping in mind that Circus, above the fact that it is a competetion between the classes, is also team work and spirit, gained from working with and for a group instead of for oneself.

Alpha Kappa Gamma plans to use the proceeds from Circus for the dining hall china fund.

Time out at the Pocano Mountains! Ten Longwood students attended the annual hockey summer camp in Pennsylvania. A representative of the United States hockey team is shown at the extreme right.

From the Bleachers

By LOU WILDER

Welcome back to all green and whites and red and whites. A special "hello" to the new red and whites. Here's hoping your spirit keeps growing. You can get rid of those rat hats in Thanksgiving if you defeat the sophomores in hockey. Losing that game means wearing them until Christmas.

All students who are interested in horseback riding are asked to sign up with Miss Olive Iler, director of physical education, by Friday. Those who are unable to see her may leave their name in her mail box. The fee will be $45 for one semester and $60 for the entire session. This is a golden opportunity for everyone.

The Athletic Association demonstration last Thursday was especially for new students. For those who were unable to attend, dance, volleyball, basketball, swimming, tennis, archery, and wisket were demonstrated. Wisket is a game introduced at Longwood last year. Positions are like the ones in softball. The ball is caught and thrown with a net-like racket called a wisket. The team in the field makes the points according to how many runners are put out.

The varsity hockey squad has been posted; however, the list is subject to change. Other names may be added. Practices are held on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 4 p. m. Those girls on the list at present are Shirley Blankenship, Barbara Benedict, Mary Davis, Fay Evans, Barbara Felthouse, Ann Wyane Fuller, Linda Garrison, Carolyn Gray, Pearson Grymes, Patsy Hamner, Buzzy Hartis, Nancy Hartmann, Becky Hines, Loretta Kuhn, Jane Lohr, Evelyn Rowe, Barbara Ann Scott, Ann Snyder, Lucy Thwing, Helen Waitman, Joan Ward, Mary Ann Ward, Louise Wilder, and Joan Willard.

The varsity hockey schedule includes a William and Mary game played on their field on October 16; Westhampton there on October 23; Roanoke here on October 28; tournament at Westhampton, October 29-30; and Madison here November 5. Some of you may be interested in attending the game between the Irish team and a mixed Virginia team in Washington, D. C., November 6.

Hockey is the first sport in competition for the color cup. Anyone who would like to learn to play hockey as a beginner may do so in the afternoon seasonal sports classes. Come on out and give it a try. You'll like it. See you there!

AKG Delegates To Meet In Conclave

Anne Carter Wendenberg, Jane Bailey, Nancy Nelson, and Jean Carol Parker will attend an Alpha Kappa Gamma, national leadership fraternity convention at the College of Charleston in Charleston, South Carolina on October 15, 16, and 17.

Miss Nancy Chambers, Assistant Dean of Women, will drive and chaperone the group during the trip.

The girls will be entertained with a banquet Friday night and will attend business meetings of the fraternity Saturday morning. Following these meetings the group will be taken on a tour of the city of Charleston.

Training House Host To Home Ec. Majors

Four senior home economics majors are now living in the Home Management House under the supervision of Miss Betty Lois Price, the new foods instructor.

These seniors are Lou Seibel, Connie Owen, Ellen Brent Dize, and Edna Trader Cain.

When asked how they enjoyed living in the Management House all stated they were having a wonderful time and were especially enjoying the delicious meals, which incidentally were prepared by them.

L. C. Group Travels To Annual Session Of Hockey Camp

Miss Oliver Iler and Miss Rebecca Brocenbrough, directors of physical education, and ten girls attended the annual summer hockey camp in the Pocano Mountains near Tobyhanna, Penn., September 1 through 8.

The camp is in its thirty-third session is for coaches, club and college players. The camp functions under the direction of Miss Constance M. K. Applebee who was responsible for starting hockey in America. Miss Applebee formerly taught at Bryn Mawr and at the present travels to different parts of the United States to coach school and club hockey teams.

Coaching at the camp includes practice and match games, strokes, tactics and discussion groups on coaching, playing umpiring and organizing teams. The same coaching is offered for lacrosse players.

Other Virginia players present at the camp this week were from Mary Baldwin College, and Westhampton. High school players attended from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New Jersey.

Those girls attending from Longwood were Mary Davis, Helen Waitman, Anne Snyder, Lucy Thwing, Mary Ann Ward, Jane Lohr, Carolyn Gray, Patsy Hamner, Barbara Benedict, and Louise Wilder.

678 Enroll for 1954-55; College Total Includes 29 Transfer Students

Transfer Students Represent 7 States

The total number of students enrolled at Longwood College for the 1954-55 session is 678; 276 of whom are new students, according to Miss Virgilia Bugg, registrar. This number shows an increase over last year's enrollment of 636 students.

The total sophomore number is 172; juniors, 104; and seniors, 105 this year. There are 11 special students who are taking specific classes but not working toward a degree.

Longwood opened its doors this year to 29 transfer students from colleges in Virginia, Tennessee, Arkansas, Florida, West Virginia, South Carolina and Georgia. This number is included in the 276 total of new students.

Those transfer students living in Cunningham are Shirley Anne Blankenship, Ann Marie Carter, Betty Rose Davis, Mrs. Nancy Wartman Hundley, Frances Carole Hutson, and Mary Lula James. Also Emily Henrietta Moore, Nancy Lee Riddle, Davis Louise Louise Tompson, Dorothy Anne Wallace, Jean Evelyn Ward, Ellen Joan Willard. Mrs. Naomi Cumbia King, and Nancy Holland Cousins reside there.

New students living in Tabb are Rita Yvonne Hite, Margaret Carter Howell, Maybelle Anne Miller, Shirley Ann Paxson, Joan Carol Payne, and Ann Tucker Woodhouse.

Robert Walker Bucknam, Sidney Alexander Loggins, and William Gray Hawkins are new men transfers at Longwood this year.

All transfer students who were interviewed commented on the friendly attitudes of the girls and expressed admiration for the Longwood spirit.

Shirley Blankenship, a junior from Stratford College finds the rules here quite lenient and says, "The girls are great." Shirley is a physical education major. While at Stratford she was a member of the Blazer Club, the choral club, and the Triple Trio.

Another junior transfer, Nancy Cousins from Stratford, is a resident of Danville and is majoring in history. She enjoys the feeling of being trusted which is allotted to each student. Nancy was the editor of the annual last year at Stratford.

Ann Griffith, a sophomore from Knoxville, Tenn., attended the University of Tennessee as a day student. She is now thoroughly enjoying the experience of dormitory life. She said, "It's as wonderful as I'd hope it would be." She was a member of the modern dance club at Tennessee and is a member of Alpha Delta Pi social sorority.

Ann Woodhouse comes from Brenau College in Georgia. She enjoys the congenial atmosphere which prevails at Longwood. She was active in YWCA functions at Brenau.

63 Students Make Dean's Honor List In 1953-54 Session

Sixty-three Longwood students were recognized on the Dean's List for their superior scholarship during the second semester of the 1953-54 session.

This group includes Nancy Elvira Anderson, Camille Ann Atwood, Frances Snead Bailey, Judith Carol Billett, and Emily Jane Blake. Also Florence Rabon Blake, Anne Field Brooking, Loretta Bell Brooking, Sara Monroe Cecil, Joan Marie Conley and Mary Ruffin Cowles were recognized. Virginia Powell Cowles, Nell Elizabeth Crocker, Barbara Moore Curling, Elizabeth Lee DeHaven, Donnetta Elizabeth Devine, and Dorothy Anita Douglas appeared on the list.

Also outstanding are Sandra Dyer, Mary Alice Ellington, Fay Letcher Evans, Betty Jane Eggert, Joyce Mae Gillchrest, Herbert Hindle Goodman and Mary Laurin Gravely. Also Betty Jane Griffin, Mattie Joan Harvey, Nancy Virginia Ingram, Betty Lou Jefferson and Virginia Lee Johnston were listed. Others are Lenora Ann Jones, Sara Elizabeth Kent, Gella Jean Kesterson, Florence Dora King, Janet Cowling Kuyk, Harry Venable Lancaster, Jr., Patricia Walker McLemore, Evelyn Eloise Macon, and Harold King Magnusson. Dorothy Jean Morris, Katherine Lucille Naugle, Nancy Nelson, Beverly Taylor Newcomb, Sylvia Lovelace Overton, James Walter Parker, Jean Carol Parker and Betty Jean Persinger were recognized.

Also achieving outstanding grades are Audrey Nolen Powell, Susanne Prillaman, Naomi Jane Railey, Francis Blunt Raine, Dorothy Louise Rector, Betty Francis Scarborough, and Fannie Hawthorne Scott. Janie Scott, Margaret Christine Sheppard, Caroline Duvall Stoneman, Dorothy Christene Vaden, Mary Ann Ward, Jacqueline Ann Weatherholtz, Shirley Mae Wilbourne, Barbara Lee Williams, Elizabeth Anne Wilson, and Charles Lorraine Winfree were included on the list.

Cover Announces Sorority Rankings

Fall, spring and yearly 1953-54 scholastic averages among the eight national sororities located on the campus have been announced by Mrs. Kathleen Cover, Pan-Hellenic Council adviser.

The annual award given to the sorority holding the highest yearly standing will be presented to Kappa Delta.

These yearly averages read according to rank Kappa Delta, 2.055; Zeta Tau Alpha, 1.86; Sigma Sigma Sigma, 1.83; Alpha Sigma Alpha, 1.76; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.76; Delta Sigma Epsilon, 1.71; Theta Sigma Upsilon, 1.645; and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.63.

Mrs. Cover has also announced the separate ratings for both the fall and spring semesters.

At the close of last year's fall semester Kappa Delta led with a 2.05 average. Following in order were Sigma Sigma Sigma, 1.94; Alpha Sigma Alpha, 1.8508; Zeta Tau Alpha, 1.8505; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.84; Delta Sigma Epsilon, 1.74; Theta Sigma Upsilon, 1.688; and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.685.

Spring averages were listed as Kappa Delta, 2.06; Zeta Tau Alpha, 1.87; Sigma Sigma Sigma, 1.72; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.687; Delta Sigma Epsilon, 1.686; Alpha Sigma Alpha, 1.67; Theta Sigma Upsilon, 1.61; and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.58.

Dr. Simkins Gets Position

Dr. Francis B. Simkins, associate professor of history at Longwood College, has been appointed senior visiting fellow on the Council of Humanities at Princeton University, where he is filling a visiting lectureship for the American Civilization Program this semester. He is at present on leave of absence from Longwood College.

The Council of Humanities was set up this fall to strengthen the humanistic aspects of education and has been underwritten for the first five years by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The program of the twelve-man council calls for renewed stress on the teacher-scholar concept in advanced education, extension of integrated plans of study, and expansion of graduate fellowship and research resources.

A noted authority on the South, Dr. Simkins was asked to conduct a conference on "The Changing South" with emphasis on the economic, political and cultural aspects for the American Civilization Program. He will return to Longwood in February.

While at Longwood Dr. Simkins wrote books concerning the history of Virginia and The Old South. He is not only an author, but also a lecturer of renown on subjects of this nature, and has been requested to speak at numerous meetings of historical societies.

Mighty Sophs List Vicious Rat Rules

By JAN KUYK

Lowly freshmen, beware! Rat Day will be Saturday, October 9, beginning at 6:30 a. m., and ending at 4 p. m.

Rats must know the following rules and obey them carefully!

Dressed as squares, the frosh must wear a green crepe paper skirt with blue jeans underneath. Fifty-seven squares measuring one inch by one inch must be cut out of green paper, and the names of 57 sophomores must be written in white ink, one on each square. These will be attached to an old white shirt. (Each rat must be able to find various sophomores' names when asked to do so.) A name plate is to be fastened on the back of the shirt telling the rat's name and where she is from. This name plate will be made out of a piece of square green paper.

On her head the rat will wear a small square box with a piece of hair pulled through a hole in the top. A large green ribbon must be tied on the piece of hair. Either green socks or green crepe paper tied around the cuffs of white socks and tennis shoes will complete the costume, except for a square box resembling a pocketbook which must be carried at all times. The tennis shoes may be changed to other shoes after breakfast, if necessary.

1. Rats must not spend more than fifty cents for their costumes.

2. Each rat must know the sign-off and be able to repeat it whenever a sophomore requests it.

I (name of rat) from (home town) am a seditious, scialistic freshman and seem to sense that the sensationally sagacious sophomores surpass us scholastically and socially, for standard statistics state sophomores stand stable, steadfast, and staunch since stratosphere started. Such singular stamina surely speaks splendid success. Sophomores should really sever all connections with silly, shallow freshmen, since they are scaping in a sciamach. PRAISE '57.

3. Rats must have at least five appointments. Every rat will be checked for appointments the night before Rat Day.

4. Appointments will be made the day before Rat Day.

5. Rats will clean sophomore rooms, entertain, sing "Green and White" to the tune of "Shake, Rattle, and Roll," give the sign-off, and shine shoes.

6. All rats must obey the Sophs and call them by "Miss."

7. Rats notified must go to "Little Rat Court." All rats will attend "Big Rat Court" wearing green and white.

8. Meals must be attended. Rating is confined to campus.

9. All rats must report to the gym at 6:30 a. m. No appointments can be made until after breakfast.

10. Rats must know the sign in front of the college concerning the founding of the school.

Lenz To Act as Animal Trainer In Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus; 'Big Top' To Unfurl October 30

Circus Clowns, Animals, Class Floats To Appear in Annual Parade Saturday

Cracking her whip to begin the action of the 1954 Alpha Kappa Gamma Circus, Nancy Lenz, junior from Warwick will be featured under the big top as Animal Trainer of "Sawdust Shavings". Nancy has been recently elected to her place of honor by the members of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Nancy has been active in school affairs serving as co-chairman of the sophomore Circus skit this year and as script writer for Freshman Production last year. She is a member of the Colonnade staff, "Y" Cabinet, the Cotillion Club and Kappa Delta social sorority.

As her two outstanding duties, Nancy will be in charge of the clowns and animals in the parade which will start at 2:30 p. m., Saturday afternoon, and she will open the Circus presentation that night at 8 p. m., October 30, in Jarman Hall.

The Circus parade will form behind the various dorms Saturday afternoon. There, the floats, clowns, animals, class members in the parade and the cars will gather. The parade will move down Pine Street to Route 460 where it will turn and proceed along Main Street. The parade will then march up High Street and back to the college campus. All those who can obtain a car are urged to join the parade; however, only those cars which have been decorated will be allowed in the parade.

The floats will represent each of the four classes and each will be decorated in the motif representing the skit to be presented by that particular class Saturday night. The floats will be judged and the winner announced Saturday night at the auditorium program.

The identity of the Ring Master, Circus Queen and princesses will be revealed at the opening of the program in Jarman Hall Saturday night. The Queen will be the Senior representative and her princesses, one from each class, will be in costumes of a tightrope walker, trapeze artist and bare back rider to further carry out the theme of "Sawdust Shavings" and the Circus theme idea.

The court will be seated on stage throughout the program. At the end of the skits and after the judges have reached their decision the Ring Master will announce the winners. This will end the auditorium program and each Circus court representative will then lead her class to the main recreation hall, the "Midway" of the AKG Circus. The audience will follow this procession to the "Midway".

A preview of the class stunts will be presented in Chapel October 26, at 1 p. m. Each skit will be five minutes in duration being preceded by an introduction. This "sneak preview" will be an effort to hint but not give away the theme of the stunts.

Mass rehearsals for Circus will take place on the nights of October 28 and 29. They will begin at 7 p. m. Costumes will not be necessary on the night of the 28th. All characters in skits must wear costumes and have props Friday night, October 29.

The price of Circus tickets is 25 cents for adults and children.

'51 Graduate Of Longwood Writes Essay

A magazine article written by Ned Orange, a former student at Longwood and now an instructor in the Department of Business Education and Secretarial Administration at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, has received publication in the feature section of the October issue of the UBEA Forum.

Mr. Orange's article is entitled "A Plan for Shorthand Motivation and Measurement."

The UBEA Forum is a magazine of national circulation and is a professional publication of the United Business Education Association, a Department of the National Education Association of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Orange was graduated with highest honors from the department of business education, Longwood College, receiving the Bachelor of Science Degree in 1951. Mr. Orange has taught at Louisburg College, Greensboro Evening College, and has been instructing in the department of business education of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina since 1952. He received his Master of Education Degree from the University of North Carolina in 1953.

Alumnae Group Plans Convention

Plans have been completed for the Longwood Aulmnae Association meeting to be held this week end, according to Mrs. Ruth Coyner, alumnae secretary.

The executive board of the Association will meet Friday night for dinner in the Snack Bar at 6:45 p. m. A business session of all alumnae will then take place in the Virginia Room. Miss Frances Horton, alumnae president from Roanoke, will preside over this session. Following the business meeting, a social hour will be given by President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster at their home.

The Alumnae Chapter Workshop has been scheduled for Saturday morning at 8:30 a. m. Dr. Lancaster will address the group at that time. The luncheon Dec ceremony will be presided by Dr. C. G. Mass, professor of history at Longwood. Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology, will acquaint the alumnae with the summer study now being offered at the College.

Drama Club Will Present 'Blithe Spirit'

"Blithe Spirit" will be presented on November 19 and 20 as the Longwood Players and Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs' annual fall play.

This "improbable farce," as Noel Coward terms it, is another version of the eternal triangle, except this time one-third is the ghost who comes back to haunt her husband.

James Parker is cast as the husband, Charles Condomine; his wife Ruth is Nancy Tanley Masters; while Florence Blake plays Elvira who returns from the dead.

One of Coward's greatest comedy roles, Madame Arcati, will be portrayed by Dorothy Rector. Jim Nichols has been chosen as Dr. Bradman and Gaynelle Edwards as his wife. Edith is Anita Heflin and the four guests are Russell Vass, Ann Brooking, David Maleney and Barbara Burnside.

Barbara Burnside will also handle the stage managing. Pat Jones is in charge of music and sound, and Fred Stables is managing the lights. Properties and sets are being readied by the Play Production 101 class, while Florence Blake and Dr. C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English, are designing the sets. Dr. Earley is also directing the play.

Richard Daiger is handling programs. B. J. Staples and Dot Morris are supervising advertising and publicity. Nancy Ingram is house manager.

Library Features Folk Dance Exhibit

"Dance Around the World" is the theme of the present exhibit table in the Longwood Library.

The exhibit features folk dancing in many lands, with books showing the native dance, costumes, the music, and descriptions of various festivities. The bulletin board displays costumed couples dancing around the globe. Any group wishing to sponsor an exhibit in its field may do so by contacting Miss Irving Armstrong, of the library staff.

Another item of interest is the University of Virginia News Letter which is posted on the pilaster. News Letter is a semi-monthly publication and this issue concerns "Virginia State Police and the State Police System."

The library assistants for the 1954-55 session include four seniors, four sophomores, and six freshmen. The seniors are Virginia Phelps, Naomi Reed, Mary Cowles and Joyce Pomery.

Martha Foote, Charlotte Phillips and Mildred Sutherland are the sophomore assistants; and the freshmen are Sarah Beale, Harriet Klohr, Shelva Lee, Ivy Christine Rhodes, Grace Smoot, and Sara Gayhart.

Ward Names New Manager

Winnie Louhoff, a junior from Warwick, has been recently selected by Shirley Ward, circulation manager of the Rotunda to replace Muriel Boswell.

Margie Lucas, a freshman, has also been selected to serve as assistant advertising manager to Carolyn Stanley.

Rotunda tryouts for the selection of staff members are now underway. The tryouts for the editorial and business staffs will last a short period of time. Those writers and workers qualifying for staff membership after this period will be selected.

President To Give Report To Board

President Dabney S. Lancaster will meet with the State Board of Education in Richmond next Thursday, October 29, to give the fall report of Longwood College.

This report is one of three annual reports given to the State Board. The fall report includes enrollment data and plans of the college for the coming year. The spring report consists of progress accounts of plans presented to the Board in the fall.

The third report is delivered to the Board in the fall. Again plans for the year are discussed.

64 Longwood Students Begin Teaching Session

Ed. Majors Practice In Assigned Schools

Thirty-five secondary majors and 29 elementary majors are now engaged in student teaching for the school session 1954-55.

Dr. Edgar Johnson, professor of education, and Dr. J. P. Wynne, professor of education, reported that students were teaching at Farmville High School, Worsham High School, Farmville Elementary School, John Randolph Elementary School and Rice Elementary School.

Douglas, Goodman, Martin Do Work on Honors Program

By SALLY CECIL

Three Longwood students who are engaged in honors work this year are Dot Douglas and Herb Goodman, biology majors, and Polyanna Martin, whose major field of study is English.

The honors program, inagurated by the College in 1930, has been revised recently, enabling a student to do work in any field in which lies his or her major interest.

The program is devised to encourage capable students to pursue an intensive study of the subject of their choice and provides credits toward graduation. This system familiarizes the student with methods of research, organization of materials, and the presentation of results in a scholarly fashion.

Students desiring to participate in honors work must first present to the Honors Committee a paper stating their proposed plans. Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., professor of English, heads this committee on which Miss Helen Draper, professor of modern languages, Dr. Ethel Sutherland, professor of mathematics, Dr. M. Ruffin, head librarian, and Dr. F. F. Swertfeger, professor of education serve. Upon receiving the approval of this committee, the students begin their research, with only necessary guidance from their chosen sponsors. When the research is completed, the students compose a formal paper from which a visiting committee of professors takes questions for an oral test.

In previous years, no more than two students have participated.

Dot Douglas is making a study of cell-lineage by means of chromosome abberations, and is sponsored by Dr. R. T. Brumfield, professor of biology. At present, Dot is experimenting with fern prothallium which she grows in moist chambers in various concentrations of plant hormones and anti-hormones. She photographs the prothallium at various stages of development.

An ecological study of a farm pond is the subject of Herb Goodman's research. Under the supervision of Mr. Robert Merritt, assistant professor of biology, he is examining the size, kind, and age of fish in the pond on his farm. Dr. L. N. Dickerson of the soil conservation service is aiding him in removing some of the fish, majoritively bream and bass for more intensive study. Herb is also examining the temperature and chemical composition of the water and the food supply for the fish. The purpose of this study is to produce a better environment for the fish in order to increase their size and quantity.

Pollyanna Martin is doing a biographical, bibliological, and critical study of Wallace Gould, a Farmville poet. Dr. Simonini is her sponsor. Mr. Gould is somewhat of a legendary character, as revealed by his eccentricity, and his poetry is highly subjective, often deriving its source from classical mythology. Pollyanna's literary biography includes a study of his works in view of his life.

These students will be examined by a yet to committee of professors next semester.

Support Circus

Circus is exactly ten days away; but from the appearances of practices, no one seems to realize it.

The amount of participation from all classes—the freshman, junior and senior classes in particular—is far below what it should be. Circus chairmen with a few faithful participants in an empty room is the only way to describe these past few rehearsals! Frankly, the poor cooperation of students in this matter is conspicuous. Time is growing too short for that. What's the answer?

Lack of interest could possibly explain a little of the situation. Also, lack of enthusiasm seems to be an obvious factor.

On the other hand, people are far too busy to come to practices one hour a day in most cases. Circus chairmen, however, have been working diligently for an incalculable amount of time. Hours upon hours have been spent in writing, re-writing, typing, revising, rehearsing and practicing. In view of this fact, no member of any class should feel she is losing too much time if she attended the regular circus practice—for one hour!

It is disheartening to the chairmen and the few faithful followers to show up at practice with only a handful of people with whom to work. Yes, the chairmen can fill in for the moment by taking the various character parts, but who is going to fill in these spots on the night of Circus!

What is the idea behind Circuses anyway, one may ask. Why must any one event take up so much time? Perhaps a historical review of the event will help clarify matters.

Circus in 1923 was only a miniature of our Circus today; but even so, the excitement, college spirit, and willing cooperation were present.

First of all, the alumnae of the State Female Normal School sponsored the circus in the Armory on a Saturday night in April. This "gala event" was given for the benefit of the Student Building fund. Various organizations and classes were in charge of both stunts and circus booths.

Opening with a blast of music, splash of color and a shower of confetti, Circus 1923 began with various performances in the main ring. Such acts were entitled "Klever Klass Performances," "Timid Totters on Tight Ropes," "Modern Aesop's Fables," "Tin Pan Tappers," "Brilliant Ball Fighters," "Ben Hur Buggy Races," and "Klever Klowns."

For the next eight years, Circuses of this nature were held under different sponsors. It wasn't, however, until November 4, 1931, that Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, officially took over the Circus festivities.

AKG began emphasizing class stunts of different natures. Organizations were permitted to compete for prizes but their importance was de-emphasized. A girl from each class was nominated for queen of the day.

The place for Circus was changed to the gymnasium upon the construction of Student Building. The wild animals, balloons, popcorn, and stunts all appeared under a large tent in the gym which was made into an arena. A ringmaster was in charge there.

For years now rapid changes have been made in the style of Circus. This year a parade is scheduled, four distinct class stunts have been planned, and concession stands have been set up in the "rec."

A queen is selected now from the senior class while classes elect individual representatives to the queen's court. A ring master is still a tradition, but an animal trainer has been added for flavor. The idea of animals and clowns is still in use. Jarman Hall has become the center of Circus.

It can be easily seen that Circus has become an endeared tradition at Longwood. Again the excitement, college spirit, and willing cooperation will undoubtedly be shown, but more cooperation is needed now!

Class participation is one of the criteria on which a Circus skit is judged. A percentage number below 100 per cent participation decreases the rating scale.

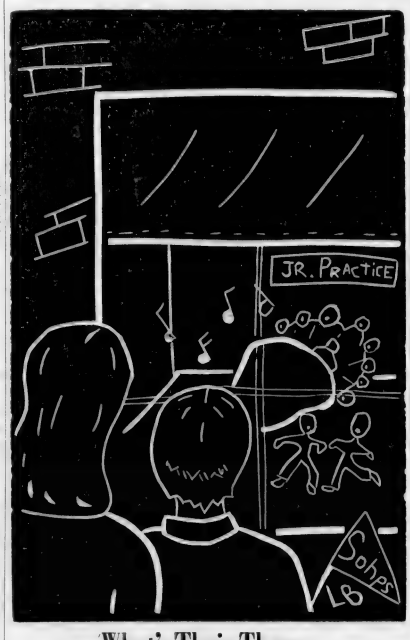
Circus 1954 has every possibility of ranking "Best ever." Previously Longwood students have had the spirit of the event. This same spirit can be recaptured. Attend practices and support your class.

May Circus be crowned with the same success it has enjoyed in past years.

Cooperation

Recently representatives from both Longwood College and Hampden-Sydney met to discuss better relations between the two institutions. This is the meager beginning of what could become a mature relationship between LC and H-SC.

Since Hampden-Sydney is not co-educational and Longwood is primarily a woman's college, a spirit of cooperation and toleration could be beneficial. For example, the possibilities of an exchange of ideas between the two Pi Delta Epsilon Chapters (honorary journalism fraternities) was mentioned. A joint meeting sometime during the year has the potentialities of being enjoyable as well as constructive. Other organizations such as our Student Christian Association and Longwood's YWCA could also cooperate.



Past experience between the two glee clubs and dramatic organizations has proved that Longwood and Hampden-Sydney can do some things better together than separately.

However, a practical and realistic approach must be maintained for this cooperation. It is highly improbable that AKG will be able to work with Omicron Delta Kappa, a man's leadership fraternity, which is rather opposed to losing its identity as such. But undoubtedly more organizations could work together than could not.

If more cooperation between the two colleges were to arise out of these meetings, more favorable attitudes could lead to a mature relationship dealing with all activities which the schools have.

What's Their Theme

Circus Time Drawing Near; LC Performers To Appear

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Circus time is here again and all Longwood drops books, studies, meetings (ha!) and classes to begin concentrating on that skit—that is bound to be the greatest, best, most colossal and the one that is sure to win! Each class has the very secret to success—the key to victory.

But first, let's look at the facts: Circus week end, an annual event at Longwood will be held October 30, the day before Halloween. Each class presents a skit. We have two sets of people here—the green and whites and the red and whites and there will be a first place and a second place. One of the classes will win first place and one will win second place. The one that wins second place will feel good and yell and scream and holler, but the first place winners will feel better—yell and scream and holler louder! The other two classes will feel bad until they realize that the judges had no judgment.

And now for a little preview of how the preparations of the great event are coming along.

The Senior class follows their usual pattern—because of their many previous shows which they consider excellent—"The Toyal Typewriter" of last year, for instance, they move into this year's plans with the highest expectations. The script, of course, was well planned in full detail last summer and so they've held a few practices just to polish up a few lines!

Then there are the Juniors. Ah, yes—the gals with the talent that has been exhibited in all shapes and forms with everything from the rahjetah blues to L'Esprit. Props were well on the way weeks ago and sure to make the theater sensational—props count in the final voting. So if the Juniors forget their lines, it will not be a total loss.

The sagacious Sophomores, always the ones to try out something new, have a great technique. In order to get spirit high and everyone in gay circus mood, they have their class president come down and faint at practice. Of course, it could be "part of the act." It is the general opinion among the sophomores though, that they will win Circus. If you didn't happen to catch the special preview they gave in the Rec last week, drop over the 30th of October and find out what it's all about.

Finally, we have the Freshman class who have the philosophical theory that organization is progress—therefore the dancers in group two on the left hand side will meet in Room 432 at 7:30 p. m., while the people in Part I, Act III on the back side of the props on the right end will meet in the Freshman lounge at 1 a. m., on Tuesday.

Ten days from now at 8 p. m., monkeys, kangaroos and elephants will start the parade. For the first time you'll be in the spotlight. Your class will think you're great. If you have a solo part, you'll be singing it for two or three years and love it everytime because it's part of Circus.

And as the years go by, you'll look back over those four fabulous years, all the crazy things you did, and people you knew—but most of all you'll remember Circus. As you sit back in your old rocking chair towards the end of October you'll wonder how it's all going in Farmville!

Ebersole Baby Opens '96 Presidential Race

Ed. Note: The Joel Ebersoles were visited by the stork on Sept. 21. We thought their birth announcement was so cute we wanted you to see it.

Dear Voter:

This, being the campgain season, you are of course delighted with requests for your vote. Howeevr, I'm not seeking your vote for the coming election, rather I'm lining up electors for the presidential election of 1996.

My qualifications should meet with your approval. I was born in a small but progressive town in the early hours of the morning (5:11 a. m. to be exact) although my parents are musicians, I will not harp on that fact. I've never told a falsehood, have never had my character questioned, and thus far have lived the life of a peaceful citizen conscious of my place in society.

Therefore, dear voter, I would like to have your support and serious consideration to my solicitation of the vote in 1996.

I pledge that your confidence in me will be well placed.

Sincerely,
Jeffrey Warren Ebersole

Group Gives Plans For Foreign Films

By PAT JONES

The bargain of the century is here! It's in the form of six top notch films which you can see for just two dollars!

This year the State Theatre is inaugurating a special series of films for college students and owns people of Farmville. Early last spring an idea to bring some of the better films of other countries to Farmville was conceived. Since our community would not ordinarily be able to bring films of prominent art forms from other countries, a committee was formed, and work was begun to develop a plan of approach. The music, Spanish, French, and English departments, along with the Longwood Players were represented on the committee. They submitted names of top films which they would like to see brought to Farmville. From their suggestions came the present schedule as six movies of the Better Film series.

The program will begin with the showing of "Golden Coach" on Nov. 17. This is an Italian film, spoken in English, receiving high praise from U. S. critics, which is based on the novel, "The Bridges of San Luis Rey." On Jan. 19, a British movie filmed in India, called "The River", will be shown. Tales of Hoffman", scheduled for Feb. 19, is made by the same company that had such success with "Red Shoes." and many stars from Sadler Wells Ballet Company perform in it.

Laurence Oliver stars in "Beggar's Opera" set for March 16. "The Bicycle Thief," an Italian movie that has won several top film awards, will come to the State on April 20. And finally, "Ceasar and Cleopatra" has been tenatively scheduled for May 18.

All films are either spoken in English or English sub-titles. Most are spoken in English.

A second list of films has been submitted to Mr. Alvin Simons, manager of the theatre. This was done as an added precaution. If anything unforseen occurs, a substitute film can be made available. For example . . . if the film "Bicycle Thief" is unavailable at the time, Mr. Simons could bring in another outstanding film as "Camille" starring Greta Garbo or "Hamlet" with Lawrence Oliver.

CHURCH NEWS

By ANN THAXTON

Baptist

Elizabeth Ann Thomas, '54 Longwood graduate, will speak at the Baptist Church Sunday, October 24 at 7 p. m. Ann spent ten weeks this summer in Jamaica doing missionary work. The topic of her talk will be "Trip to Jamaica." She was one of four Virginia College students to be selected for this work. These students were selected for outstanding service by a screening committee consisting of the state student secretary, church student secretaries, and representatives from colleges in the state. All students are invited to hear Ann's talk.

Everyone is invited to a skating party October 23. Transportation to the skating rink will be provided. Shoe skates will cost one dollar and clamp skates fifty cents. Refreshments will be served at the Student Center after the party. The center will be open for games, for those who do not skate.

Episcopal

The Canterbury Club will hold its regular meeting at 7 p. m. in the Parish House. The program will be the third act of "Murder in the Cathedral" which concerns the death of Thomas A. Becket. After the program will be a short service in the church and refreshments in the Parish House.

Methodist

A Halloween party will be featured in the fellowship room of the church this Saturday night. Costumes will be optional for the occasion.

Don't forget choir practice at 5 p. m. on Friday at the student center.

L C Triumphs Over William and Mary In First Hockey Game of '54 Season

Davis Scores For LC

Longwood's hockey teams won the first games of the season over William and Mary Saturday, October 16 on the Williamsburg field. The first team defeated the W. & M. team 1-0. The reserve team came out on top, 2-0.

There was no score well into the second half when Longwood's first team scored the first and only goal of the game. Mary Davis made the winning goal for Longwood.

The second team scored both goals in the first half. Both points were made by Fay Evans. The William and Mary team was held scoreless.

Girls traveling to the games were Joan Willare, Mary Davis, Helen Waitman, Buzzy Hartis, Lucy Thwing, Lou Wilder, Mary Ann Ward, Jane Lohr, Carolyn Gray, Ann Snyder, Patsy Hamner, Barbara Benedict, Nancy Hartman, Audrey Owen, Fay Evans, Loretta Kuhn, Linda Garrison, Evelyn Rowe, Barbara Scott, Pearson Grymes, Becky Hines, Ann Wayne Fuller, Joan Ward, Barbara Felthaus, and Shirley Blankenship.

Following the two games between Longwood and William and Mary, a game was played between the Richmond and Williamsburg clubs. The Richmond club won 3-1. Clara Borum McCarter and Else Wente, 1954 graduates of Longwood, played on the Richmond and Williamsburg clubs, respectively.

Longwood Will Offier New Riding Program

Horseback riding will be taught at Longwood this college session under the direction of Count and Countess Aladar Gyurky. The countess is better known as Mrs. Judith Kelley. At present Count and Countess Gyrurky teach horseback riding at Hollins College.

The horses, which will be kept at the stables at Longwood Estate, from Hungry. They are expected to be delivered to the stables the first of nxt week.

Ten Longwood girls, Dr. C. L. S. Earley and a number of Farmville high school and elementry students have signed up for instruction for the first semester.

Lessons which will be held on Tuesday, Wednesdays and on Saturday morning, will be forty-five dollars for one semester and sixty dollars for the year. Riding will be taught twice a week.

Riding is being offered in cooperation with the physical education department which is directed by Miss Olive Iler.

Mrs. Kelly will meet those who have signed up for riding lessons in the game room at 2:30 Sunday afternoon.

Lucy Thwing is teaching physical education at the John Randolph Elementary School and Becky Hines is instructing physical education at Rice Elementary School.

From the Bleachers

BY LOU WILDER

Time is flying! The fight for color cup begins with class hockey games in November. Remember you need eight practices to play for your class. No extra practices will be held this year so don't wait until the last week. Practices are held Mondays and Wednesdays at 3 p. m. and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4 p. m. Remember to sign up in the field house so all your practices will be recorded. Anyone taking hockey for credit in a gym class or seasonal sports class automatically receives four practices.

Tennis singles start soon. Sign up with Nancy Quarles right away so that the matches can get underway before bad weather starts.

"Rec" swim is held on Wednesday nights at 10 p. m. and Friday evenings at 7 p. m. There's still a prospect that Longwood will have a varsity swimming team. Of course, there will be a class swimming meet later in the year—the more practice the better.

The annual song contest will be held November 9 during assembly under the direction of the Athletic Association Council. The songs will be judged and a prize will be awarded to the class with the best song!

Longwood's reserve hockey team will meet Stratford College's reserve team tomorrow afternoon at 4 p. m. Come on out and support the team. Let's show them the strong Longwood spirit.

It has been suggested that badminton and table tennis matches be held between colleges this year. If you are interested, leave your name with Jeanette Puckett, sophomore member of the A. A. Council.

We'll be looking at you "from the bleachers" at all the sporting activities.

28 Rushees Join Sororities

Social sororities on campus have completed fall rushing with 28 girls accepting bids. Theta Sigma Upsilon led in rusing with 13 acceptances.

Delta Sigma Epsilon received Betty Parr, Pan Cantrell, Betty May Crenshaw, Phyliss Ann Daniels, Betty Jane Faggert, Ellen Hamlett, Nancy McLawhorn, Jean Parrott, Carolee Silcox, Mildred Sutherland, and Jo York.

Joan Darnell and Frances Bays accepted Pi Kappa Sigma bids.

Accepting Sigma Sigma Sigma was Nancy Dee Deaton.

Theta Sigma Upsilon will pledge Nancy Anderson, Virginia Ann Burgess, Edna Faye Edward, Hazel Hanks, Klenna Kesterson, Roberta King, Jean Mann, Mary Elizabeth Mayo, Peggy Packett, Betty Jean Persinger, Catherine Phillips, Sue Raymond, and Barbara Tyer.

Helen Smith accepted a bid from Zeta Tau Alpha.

sold in order to bring those films. They have been printed and may be purchased from any of the following people: Dr. C. L. S. Earley, Mrs. R. C. Simonni, Jr., Mrs. Shelton Whitaker, Mrs. J. Barrye Wall, Jr., all of Farmville; Dr. Lee Ryan of Hampden-Sydney; and from Virginia Foward, Jean Saunders, Mary Cowlies, and yours truly, in the Publicity Office at Longwood College.

Our committee hopes you will support this series of films. We have been working hard to bring it to you. At times it seems useless to keep trying when brick walls kept appearing out of nowhere, but the final goal was worth the effort. The committee hopes that a growing appreciation of other countries, in art as well as living will develop a rise in movie standards will be realized.

If this endeaver blossoms into a going concern this year and everybody with it, then Better Films is set for a good long run.

Parl. Course Starts

The first class in parliamentary law was held on Wednesday, October 6. Mr. M. H. Bittinger, professor of history, conducted the class which was compulsory for presidents and vice presidents of all organizations except publications.

By attending these classes it is hoped that the officers will be able to conduct meetings with more ease. The methods of calling a meeting to order and of introducing business were discussed. Mr. Bittinger gave other hints for making the meetings run more smoothly.

The second in this series will be held on November 3.

Social Notes

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Week ends have been unusually quiet for the past two weeks. Most of the girls have been attending dances and frat parties all around. Let's take a peek and see what's been going on!

A couple of weeks ago, Bootsie Miller and Ann Brierly attended the N. C. State-William and Mary football game and parties. (P. S.—their team came out on top.)

On the same week end, Bettye Maas attended the Delta Sigma Delta fraternity parties at M. C. V. Bettye said there was an oyster roast and some fine combo parties Saturday night.

Quite a few girls attended the Virginia-V. M. I. game at U. Va. this past week end; and stayed on for the frat parties that night. Those attending from Longwood were Judy Harris, Jane Lohr, June Manlove, Colleen Goff, Gale Branch, Flo Pollard, Nancy McLawhorn, Joanne Wilson, Betty Jane Staples, Shirley Ward, Lawana Rutland, Donnie Devine, Pat McLemore, Joan Jones, and Dottie Wallace.

Attending the Richmond-V. P. I. game and parties this week end were Pat Morgan, Harriett Browning, Sandy Dyer, Nancy Deaton, Sally O'Malley, Bobbie Mays, Ann Thomas, Carolyn Stoneman, Frances Raine, Patti Parker and Elsie Meade Webb. The weather stayed nice for the game.

Washington and Lee was the destination this week end for Betty Jean Jenkins and Gerry Luck who attended the Phi Gamma Delta parties there.

Traveling farther north we find that several girls hit our friendly little neighbor state for the week end. Loretta Kesterson, Barbara Whitehead, Shirley Sylvester, and Sara Lou Wendenberg attended the parties at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Patti Billups received a "dupie" from Bill Brown recently. ("Dupie" translated means a diamond engagement ring!) Suzanne "Tracy" Faison became engaged to Dhowdy Hopkins of Norfolk.

Wearing a diamond ring from Billy Thomas of Richmond is Pat Bodkins. We forgot a couple of engagements last week end—Betty Barr is engaged to Bill Gibbs of Richmond, and Jean Edwards has received a diamond from Cecil Edwards. A pinning that we missed was Helen Waitman's. Helen is now pinned to Bob Wheeler of Ohio.

Patricia Worell has received a Cotillion Club pin from Eugene Grizzard of V. P. I.

We're sorry to have lost Bev T. Newcomb, but we wish to her and Perry the best of luck. Three of our former students are now new brides. Doris Harenun became Mrs. John Salmons a few weekends ago. Catherine Miller was married to Jim Hedrick of Greenville, Ala. last week end. This past week end Barbara Clarke was married to Buddy Fisher. Much happiness to all of you.

Saved just enough space to tell you about the Bicentennial Ball Friday night. Twenty girls and their dates, most of whom attend Hampden-Sydney, made up the figure.

So goes the past two weeks at L. C. Keep us informed on the campus doings, huh?

Ode To L C Witches

BY PHOEBE WARNER

At a black institution we do dwell
A pair of us live in each dingy cell,
For our latest means of transportation
We use no gas which is quite a sensation.
In our bright new 1954 model brooms
We fly along to the dreaded classrooms,
In one we find great witch doctor Moss
Who lectures with a voice somewhat hoss.
We then travel west with deeper fear
To enter a class on Willy Shakespeare.
From here we can hear Dr. Earley yell
"Back to your cages witches", or to . . . lunch.
With the smell of the dining hall brew
We realize today we have goblin stew.
One of us came and left suddenly they say
At seventy miles an hour Hazel flew away
She left dear Hampden-Sydney quite in the dark
But to that point we can make no remark.
For the time has come again to talk of us
For as our President says, "Fust things fust".
On Tuesday's in chapel there's nothing better
For us witches to do than write a long letter.
It's important young terrors a note to take
Don't cut this assembly, you'll burn at the stake.
For special refreshment we have a shot
Of Dr. Pepper at ten, two and four on the dot.
On special occasions we hold scared dances
The dates who attend, are taking their chances . . .
For witches have passions on these occasions
They get their own way by sly persuasions.
We smart witches don't waste our life
For we're studying ways to become a wife.
Our specialty in food is . . . yes . . . roast lizard
Through this we win our sly old wizard.
Alas and alack the bell tolls twelve
And into our cages we must delve
But fear not faculty we'll return
Make way for us or it's you we'll burn!

Members of Administration Visit Virginia High Schools To Foster Public Relations

Six members of the Longwood administration visited Virginia high schools last week to talk with girls interested in attending the college.

Mrs. Meade L. Shackleford, director of public relations at Longwood, is in charge of this program. She represented the college at Glade Spring High School in Glade Spring; Meadow View High School in Meadow View; William King High School in Abingdon, and Chilhowie High in Chilhowie. She also talked with girls attending Saltville High School in Saltville; Rich Valley High School in Chatham Hill; Galax High School in Galax; Marion High School in Marion; Tazewell High School in Tazewell; Richlands High School in Richlands; Graham High School in Bluefield; and Radford High School in Radford.

Representing Longwood at Alberta High School was Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of Modern Languages. Miss Eleanor Weddle, physical education instructor, spoke with girls at Fluvanna County High School at Carybrook, Louisa County High School at Mineral, and Scottsville High School at Scottsville.

Mr. Raymond French, associate professor of chemistry and physics, interviewed high school students at Warsaw High School at Warsaw. Washington and Lee High School at Montross and Copelen High School at Copelen.

Visiting Appomattox High School at Appomattox and Concord High School at Concord was Mrs. Nell H. Griffin, professor of home economics.

Mrs. Charles Patterson, assistant professor of education, talked with girls from Churchville High School in Churchville, and Northview High School in Mount Solon.

Mrs. Shackleford has asked that Longwood girls also talk with prospective students concerning the college so that they may have some basic information concerning the school.

Girls Form Figure For Bicentennial

Twenty girls including officers and members of the Cotillion Club presented the figure for the Bicentennial Ball which was held in the Longwood Gym, Friday night. This event was the last in the year-long series of events celebrating the 200th Anniversary of Prince Edward County.

Beth Kent, president of Cotillion Club led the figure which was composed of Cotillion members Carolyn Stanley, Martha Donaldson, Joyce Quick, Nancy T. Masters, Louise Nelson, Peggy Worthington, Mary Hundley, Dot Douglas, Ann Watkins, Margaret Dryden, Norma Jeanne Croft, Betty Jean Jenkins, Suzanne Garner, Joan Jones, and Patti Parker. Also Nancy Jane Jones, Nancy Deaton, Betty McAden, Mary Alice Powell, Gail Branch, and Patsy Abernathy took part.

The girls and their dates entered the gym under a terrace garnished with fall leaves. They moved around the floor to the strains of "Stardust" which was played by the V. P. I. Southern Colonels.

The figure was a "two hundred" which represented the 200th Anniversary celebration. After the figure had been formed, Nancy T. Masters and Patsy Abernathy entered wearing period costumes bringing the contrast of the old and new. As the past bowed out it left behind the present in the form of the dancing Cotillion girls and their dates.

Association Hears Speech by Meeker

Professor Richard K. Meeker of the Longwood College English department, was one of the speakers on the program of the College English Association meeting held in North Carolina State College, October 16.

Mr. Meeker participated in a panel discussion of "Promoting More and Better Writing Beyond the Freshman Year" with representatives from other colleges in the North Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia area.

Other members of the Longwood English department attending the meeting included Mr. Foster B. Gresham, instructor of English, Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., head of the English Department, and Miss Mary P. Nichols, associate professor of English, who has been serving as secretary-treasurer of the Association.

President To Deliver Speech at Dedication

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of Longwood, will deliver a dedication address for a new building at St. Margaret's School in Tappahannock, Sunday, October 24.

St. Margaret's is a preparatory school for girls owned and operated by the Episcopal Church.

National Science Foundation Plans To Award Fellowships

The National Science Foundation has announced that it plans to award approximately 700 graduate and 130 post doctoral fellowships for scientific study during the 1955-1956 academic year. These fellowships are awarded to citizens of the United States who are selected solely on the basis of ability. They are offered in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological and engineering sciences, including anthropology, psychological (excluding clinical psychology), geography and certain interdisciplinary fields.

Graduate fellowships are available to those who are studying for either masters' or doctoral degrees at the first year, intermediate or terminal year levels. College seniors who expect to receive a baccalaureate degree during the 1954 - 1955 academic year are eligible to apply. The post-doctoral category includes awards to individuals who, as of the beginning of their fellowships, have earned a doctoral degree in science or have had research training and experience equivalent to that represented by such a degree.

All applicants for graduate (predoctoral) awards will be required to take an examination designed to test scientific aptitude and achievement, which will be administered on January 27, 1955. Selection of Fellows will be based on examination scores, academic records and recommendation regarding each candidate's abilities. Evaluation of each candidate's qualifications will be made by panels of scientists chosen by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences. Final selection of Fellows will be made by the National Science Foundation. Fellowship awards will be announced on March 15, 1955.

The annual stipends for graduate Fellows are $1400 for the first year, $1600 for the intermediate year, and $1800 for the terminal year. The annual stipend for post-doctoral Fellows is $3400. Dependency allowances will be made to married Fellows. Tuition and laboratory fees and limited travel allowances will also be provided.

Applications for post-doctoral fellowships must be received in the Fellowship Office of the National Academy of Sciences—National Research Council by December 20, 1954, and for graduate fellowships by January 3, 1955.

Further information and application materials may be secured from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, N. W., Washington 25, D. C.

The name of Gayle Lesh Peoples of Petersburg was inadvertently omitted from the Dean's List, according to Miss Virgilia I. Bugg, registrar.

Dept. Buys Equip.

The Foreign Language Department has purchased a tape recorder for students to use in improving their pronunciation. It will be installed in the listening room and will be available at any time.

Miss Helen Draper, head of the department, hopes that since the students can actually hear their own voices the recorder will prove invaluable.

The French and Spanish Clubs are also sponsoring a booth at Circus and will sell peanuts. This year the booth will be decorated with large replicas of the French and Spanish flags.

College Places Senior Leaders On 'Who's Who'

Dr. Lancaster Submits Capital Outlay Request

College Bases Figure On Student Increase

The capital outlay request of $1,712,500 for Longwood College during the period 1956-1962 has been submitted by President Dabney S. Lancaster to the State Commission on capital outlay.

The quote estimated will provide for the needs in the physical plant of the college in so far as they can be anticipated. The figure was based in the estimated increase of enrollment which is expected to occur within the next six years. By 1957 an enrollment of 750 students is expected; by 1959, 900 students; and by 1961, 1000.

To provide facilities for this expected increase in students, Dr. Lancaster requested a new dormitory which would house 200 girls. This dorm would be constructed on the same plan as the present junior building of Cunningham Hall but on a larger scale. It would be built as the south wing of Cunningham and would be erected on the present site of the house now occupied by Dr. J. W. Molnar, professor of music. This construction of the building has been estimated at a cost of $650,000.

The second request made by Dr. Lancaster was to enlarge the heating plant facilities. This addition is estimated at $70,000.

An addition to the library stacks was the third request. $200,000 was the estimated figure for its construction. An additional $110,000 was also requested for the extension of the two wings in the library.

Dr. Lancaster asked for $125,000 to erect a new business education department building which is expected to be built on the lot behind the business manager's house on Madison Street.

The sixth request was to build a new home management cot-

College Lists Artist Series

Five programs will be included in the Artist Series at Longwood this year.

These programs are a group of cultural entertainments presented by outstanding artists of the U. S. and foreign countries and are made available to the students each year.

A concert by the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra on November 23 will open the series. Roy Jesson, composer, concert pianist, and associate professor of music at Longwood will play Beethoven's "Concerto Number 4" as guest pianist with the Symphony.

Next on the series, Mata and Hari, comedy dancers, will be seen on January 5. These dancers have appeared on television and are noted for their satires on such things as the sports, newsreel, Carnegie Hall, the ballet, and the circus.

Joel K. Ebersole, tenor, will be presented on February 15. Assistant professor of music at Longwood, Mr. Ebersole has appeared as soloist with the Fayettesville (Indiana) Symphony Orchestra, has been on the artist series at Indiana University, and has sung on radio and television.

On March 9 the world renown Dublin Players will stage George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion". Trained in the classic Abbey Theatre in Dublin, Ireland, the Players are on a tour of the U. S., and are known for their presentation of Sakespeare's plays, Irish classics, and Shaw's works.

An organ and harp recital by McCurdy and Greenwood will complete the series on April 26. McCurdy is head of the organ department of Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, and Greenwood is a former harpist with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Snead Writes Magazine Review

A magazine article written by Mr. Christy Snead, assistant professor of business education, Department of Business Education, Longwood College, has been published in the October issue of the "Balance Sheet." This publication has the largest circulation of any business education professional magazine in the United States.

Mr. Snead's article entiled "Don't Sell Your Business Department Short" has received wide acceptance among business educators and administrators in the nation.

The article, written for school administrators and high school and college instructors of business education, summarizes a brief history or a kaleidoscopic view of business education. After presenting a brief history of business education, the article points out its growth through two world wars. Mr. Snead points out the trend in business education that has been taking place in the last thirty-five years and why it will continue percentagewise to attract more and more of the enrollments in the colleges and high schools.

Group To Give 'Blithe Spirit'

Plans are progressing for the presentation of "Blithe Spirit" which will be staged November 18 and 19 in Jarman Hall by the Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs.

In the second fall play of the season, Nancy Tanley Masters, James Parker, Florence Blake, and Dorothy Rector will portray the four main characters, while Anita Heflin, Barbara Burnside, Ann Brooking, Jim Nichols, Russell Vass, and David Meleney will assume minor roles.

"Blithe Spirit," an improbable farce in three acts, is a work of Noel Coward, England's leading contemporary playwright of brittle sophisticated comedy. The play does not depend upon any whirlwind movement to make a point; instead, Coward trusts to the intrinsic absurdities of the plot. By means of a spiritualist and an inconvenient ghost, the author takes us into an absurd world of comic fantasy.

Charles Condomine, a happily married novelist decides to hold a seance in order to gather material for a book on the subject. He and his wife, Ruth, have invited friends in to witness the performance of one Madam Arcati, a self-styled medium. After an attempt to enter the spiritual world, Madame Arcati and the guests leave, and Charles returns to the living room only to discover that the seance has materialized his late first wife, Elvira. She is a unique ghost in the English theatre being more exasperating than awesome, and remains throughout the play quite impishly unchastened by her sojourn to "the other side."

James Parker, who portrays the character of Charles Condomine will be remembered for his roles in "Angel Street", "Romeo and Juliet," "A Physician in Spite of Himself," "The Boor," and "The Twelve Pound Look."

Ruth Condomine is played by Nancy Tanley Masters, whose for-

Honor To Include Ten L C Students

Ten Longwood College seniors have been selected to the national "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

They are Martha Jane Bailey, Mary Ruffin Cowles, Donetta Elizabeth Devine, Evelyn Eloise Macon, Nancy Nelson, Jean Carol Parker, Dorothy Christian Vaden, Helen Marie Waitman, Ann Carter Wendenburg, and Jacquelyn Turner White.

Approximately 65 colleges and universities nominate students to membership. These students are selected on the basis of scholarship and participation, and leadership in academic and extra curricular activities. Also citizenship, service to the school and promise of future usefulness are considered in the selection of these students.

Jane Bailey of Lexington is a sociology major. She is serving as vice-president of Student Government and has served as class representative to Student Government. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, the French Club and Cotillion Club. She is president of her social sorority, Pi Kappa Sigma.

An English Major

An English major, Mary Ruffin Cowles is from Minor. She is vice-president of Beore Eh Thorn, review editor of the Colonnade, and secretary-treasurer of Ochesis. She also holds membership in the Longwood Players, the college choir, the Cotillion Club and the Library League.

Donnie Devine, an elementary major from Richmond, serves as Editor of the annual this year and has previously been a member of the Virginian staff for three years. Her other activities include membership in Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, Future Teachers of America, Association of Childhood Education and Zeta Tau Alpha, social sorority.

Heading dinner room hostesses, Nancy Nelson from Newport News, is an English and French major. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma and served as general Circus chairman. She is vice-president of Kappa Delta Pi, and president of Alpha Psi Omega. She holds membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, F. T. A., and Beore Eh Thorn. Nancy has held the vice-presidency in the French Club and the Longwood Players. She has been in the cast of four college plays; also she has served on the "Y" cabinet, and on the annual staff as literary and photography editors. Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority of which she is president, claim her membership.

Elsie Macon from Lynchburg is an elementary education and math major. She is vice-president of Alpha Kappa Gamma and is Student Standards chairman. She has served as managing editor and editor-in-chief of the Colonnade. She now holds the position of short story editor. Elsie claims membership in Kappa Delta Pi, Cotillion Club, Longwood Players, and Grandmaughters Club.

From Emporia

Jean Carol Parker is an elementary major from Emporia. She is president of the Y. W. C. A. She has served as treasurer for the organization and has served on Freshman Commission and as Y. W. C. A. Freshman Counselor. Jean Carol was Green representative for her freshman class and treasurer of that class. Alpha Kappa Gamma, P. Delta Epsilon, College Choir and Orchesis claim her membership. She is also a member of A. C. E., F. T. A., Cotillion Club, and Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority.

A physical education major from Charles City, Helen Waitman is president of the Athletic Association. She also serves as treasurer of Alpha Kappa Gam-

Dr. Simonini Recalls Saint Mark's Piazza As Fanciful Highlight

By DR. R. C. SIMONINI JR.
(Talk in 600 words)
(As Requested by Editor)

There is something endearing in our memories about each place where we have lived, as every college freshman knows who has written a theme about "I Prefer to Live in Pamunkey Court House' or some other equally charming place in Virginia. In the prattle of world travelers, too, we have often heard glorified that "ideal spot"—perhaps a flower-blown town on the Riviera, or Tudor Wenlock resting quietly over a nee Queen Elizabeth's visit in 1591, or the little acquamarine atoll off Papua in the South Pacific.

But if I could construct in my imagination such a place, I would want life as well as beauty. I would begin with the most magnificent piazza in all the world, St. Mark's Place in Venice, in whose enormity one can feel oddly in tune with 10,000 other promenaders. One should get his first impression of St. Mark's as Ruskin got it, approaching it from the shadow of the pillars at the end of the narrow Calle San Moise and emerging suddenly into the brilliance of the vast square opposite the cathedral. This is also how Renoir saw that rude pile of colored stones, domes, arches, and statuary yoked miraculously together in a Byzantine and Gothic symbiosis.

The Piazza is an ever-changing mirage of sensory delights. At night colored lights make the basilica a treasure-heap of gold, opal, and serpentine. The other three sides of the square are enclosed by arcaded palaces against whose lacy facades three orchestras fill the air with music as unrestrained and charming as the architecture itself. One must indeed stand in the middle of this square with an ear bent towards the Pagliacci potpourri coming from Qaudri's cafe on the north and the other tuned to the Viennese waltzes from Florian's orchestra on the south and ask himself "Can this be real, or is this some kind of midsummer night's magic?" Or if one prefers he might sit at the base of the pillar holding St. Mark's lion along the Grand Canal and study the airy tracery of the Doges' Palace and sniff the headly sea breezes from the crowded lagoon, even as did Shylock and Antonio.

One must be ready at all times, however, for that periodic recall to reality from the great campanile, carefully rebuilt after its fall in 1902 which rocked all Italy and made even the rival Genoese sad. Venice lives in the shadow of this massive spire whose flying choir of tenors and baritones seem to carefully prepare the ear for the final assault of a monstrous basso profundo which might be cast as the herald of Doomsday itself.

Then I would carefully place these marbles of man adjacent to that miracle of man and nature, the Villa Borghese in Rome. This loveliest of parks is a midway of fun and beauty for all ages and all temperaments. Here you can sit under flowering trees by a fountain and discuss politics with young communists and neo-fascists from the University of Rome while your children delight in the capers of a nearby Punch and Judy show. Or you may wish to see in the museum Canova's marble perfection, Paulina Borghese, and then spend an hour watching the sunset over the Eternal City from Pincian Hill. And under the pinetta trees at night, how silver sweet sound lovers' tongues like softest music to attending ears!

Finally, I would surround St. Mark's Place and the Villa Borghese with the hills of Florence. Let us place there pleasant bud-dled Fiesole with its slender tower watching all, Morello's hump beyond, and across the river San Miniato beloved of Michelangelo.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1954

Hats Off

Once in a lifetime an opportunity comes along to make a significant cultural and educational gains. This opportunity has been knocking at our door for the past month.

The Better Films Committee, a committee composed of people whose goal is to bring classic films to Farmville in greater quality and quantity, is providing an excellent opportunity for Longwood students and people of Farmville.

This committee is bringing here this year six films which are masterpieces in the art of picture making. The appearance of these films has been even more attractive by the reduced price of two dollars for a season ticket. It is a marvel alone that increased prices for these great films will not be in effect; but it is yet better that one may see them for a sum below that of the regular prices by purchasing a season ticket.

The idea of presenting these films began as only a dream. Much work, time, effort and planning have gone into the project since it was first undertaken last year. To the committee, there have been elating developments and there have been those which were discouraging. The committee, however, did not give up until the task was completed.

This editorial comes in the form of a salute to those people of the Better Films Committee for their hard work and also to those people who have supported the committee by purchasing tickets to make this dream of better films a reality!

The following is a letetr written by Pat Jones, chairman of the Better Films Committee, to the people who supported the Better Films project.

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my thanks to all for their enthusiasm and help in bringing the Better Films Series to Farmville. Sales have gone way over the top! This occurred through the industry of a number of persistent and energetic people.

Special notice should go to Mary Cowles, who guided ticket sales here at Longwood, and Dr. Lee Ryan, who was in charge at Hampden-Sydney. They did a splendid job, and their efforts and interest deserve high commendation.

I am deeply grateful for the guidance of Dr. C. L. S. Earley, without who e help the series could not have materialized. Also my sincere thanks go to Mrs. R. C. Simonini, Jr., and Mrs. Barrye Wall, Jr., for their active help in bringing the films.

Sincerely,

Pat Jones

Congratulations

At this time it seems most appropriate to congratulate all individuals and groups who so willingly and energetically participated this this year's Circus.

Members of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national leadership fraternity, should be especially praised for their leadership and guidance throughout the development of the undertaking. Special recognition should go also to Nancy Nelson for the excellent job she carired out as general chairman of Circus.

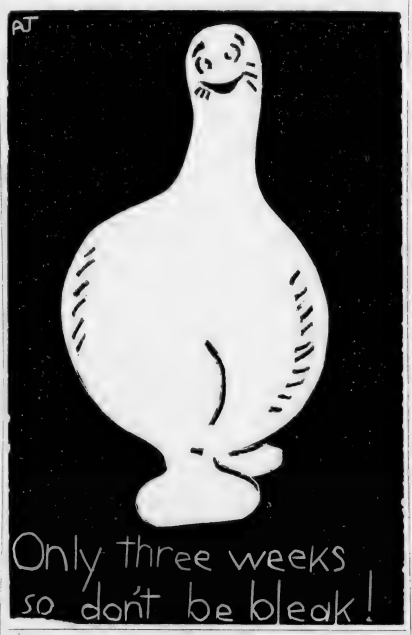
Humorous and original lines opened this years' "Big Tent" with the introduction of the clowns donned in new costumes which will be passed on to next year's AKG members for Circus use. A new addition to the Circus presentation was the Longwood-Hampden-Sydney band which played for the introduction and during the intermissions.

Class skits were also outstanding in that they displayed originality and appropriateness to the occasion. Talent was exhibited throughout the skits not only in song and dance but also in musical composition, script writing, and art work.

In considering the combined efforts of all individuals, great satisfaction should be derived from this year's Circus. Congratulations on a successful performance!

Thinking Ahead

Tomorrow the student body will vote for a general chairman and business manager to head the 1955 May Day festivities.



The selection of these two officers may seem somewhat premature and insignificant at this time of year, but contrary to this notion the selection of officers now is of primary importance.

A tremendous amount of ground work is needed to build any May Day program. Now even more time and planning are needed to continue the job undertaken by students last year. For this reason, chairmen must be elected early so that necessary work on the selection of a theme can begin.

Elections for these two chairmen will be held tomorrow during the assembly program. Elections for those committee chairmen will be held in the near future.

We urge you to consider each candidate carefully before marking the ballot.

Swoozy Reveals Guest Key To 'Whatchi's' Life Recipe

By JACKIE MARSHALL

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. This is John Jabberon Swoozy bringing you the up to the second news on most everything from the state of Marilyn to "Hernando's Hideaway."

Today we have as our special guest, that charming personality of the keyboard, Libby Watchi who will give us his recipe for a good life. But first—a brief glimpse at the world in general. I see North America, South America, and a small portion of Europe. Pretty good for a brief glimpse, eh?

And now, I see that the stage is set for our guest. The oil lamps are casting a bright, greasy glare all over a great black organ and sitting at the keyboard is that doll himself—Libby Whatchi! The mike is yours, by George!

"Hello there, ladiez an' gennulmen. How are all you wonderful people tonight? I unnerstand that I'm here to tell you (sigh) wonnerful people about how I think a good lif can be lived by all you (sigh) wondderful people. Well—just because I think you're all so wonnerful, I'l be delighted to tell.

There's three things you need for a good life. First—a wonnerful Mother like mine who would sacrifice most anything for the sake of her children. You know. Mom sacrified my Dad for me when I was a mere child. I remember it was a beautiful warm spring day and Mom, George, Dad and I were boating. Dad wanted to teach me to swim but because I had a piano recital that night, I had just gotten a Toni and the neutralizer hadn't set yet, I refused. Dad became quite angry and would have thrown me in if Mother hadn't thrown an anchor around his neck and pushed him overboard. Yes, it was a beautiful warm spring day.

The second thing you need is a brother George. If it weren't for George, I'd be a failure. You see, George is my right hand and "Bumble Boogie" in the key of A flat minor would sound terrible without both hands.

You also need a strong eye muscle. In this business, one good solid wink makes up for ten sour chords. Not many people can wink like a Buick making a right hand turn.

Well, I see George is turning the oil lamps down, so I must say goodnight to all you (sigh) wonnerful people. I've had so much fun talkin to you and it saddens my bright little eyes to go. But, with the soft strain of Opus No. 7156 floating to you from me, I'll say—goodnight all."

"And that was your friend—not mine—Libby Watchi. This is John Jabber-on Sweoozy bidding you a rather sickening goodbye from Libby Watchi, Mom, George and myself.

CHURCH NEWS

By ANN THAXTON

Baptist:

Thirty-five Baptist students will leave Friday for the B. S. U. fall convention in Alexandria. The convention them.. is "Twentieth-Century Discipleship."

Seminars, Bible studies, and business meetings will be conducted. The four Virginia Baptist students who served as missionaries to Jamaica this summer will tell of their experiences at the meeting Saturday night. The group will return on Sunday, November 7.

A Union Vesper Service will be held at the Farmville Baptist Church, Sunday, November 14 at 7 p. m .The general theme of the evening program centers around Thanksgiving. "Highroad to Happiness," a pageant concerning the November holiday, will be presented by several of the Baptist students. The B. S. U. Choir will render several special selections. Also a pantomime, "To Thee Who Giveth All," will be presented. Everyone is invited to attend this service.

Methodist:

Today members of the Wesley Foundation are giving a program at Hampden-Sydney based on Kalilil Girban's "The Prophet."

The Wesley Foundation will send a delegation to the regional Methodist Student conference at Madison College this Saturday.

Miss Malinda Ayres, the Methodist student director, returned yesterday from a director's seminar in Nashville, Tennessee.

Four Longwood girls journeyed to the North Carolina State Methodist conference in Salisbury, North Carolina, with Virginia state M. S. M. director Gerry Speidel on October 22. They were Jo Ann Dyer, Frances Northern, Jo Hillsman, and Pat Jones. In addition to conference activities, they attended the Catawba College production of Ferenc Molnar's "Liliom"; visited the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; and attended chapel at Duke University in Durham.

Presbyterian:

Last Sunday Elizabeth Sutherland led the devotions which were followed by a film entitled "Marriage Today."

This Sunday Presbyterian members will meet at Hampden-Sydney for the supper meal. Transportation will be furnished for all at 5:45 p. m. in front of the Rotunda. Dr. Clower, Professor of Bible, will speak at 7 p. m.

Social Notes

Our best wishes go to Virginia Anderson who was married on Friday to Joseph C. Russell, a student at the University of Virginia. They were married at 4 p. m. in University Baptist Church, Charlottesville.

Attending the V. M. I. vs. Florida State football game and parties in Lynchburg this week-end were Gerry Hayes, Ann Griffith, Shirley Paxton, Ann Woodhouse, Joanne Farless, Audrey Owen, Diane Hansen, Bootsie Miller, Nancy Hartman, and Joan Williams.

The Chi Phi's at H. S. had a combo party Saturday night which several "Longwooders" attended. Among those there were Bettye Maas, Rheta Russell, Julie Moncure, Baby Carter, Gale Branch, Harriet Browning, Annette Crain, Sally O'Malley, Betty Cory, Dot Douglas, Martha Alexander, Dottie Wallace, Pat Ashby, and Mary Jo Hutchinson.

Flash!!! Third floor Cunningham (Junior part) gave a bang-up "cocktail" party last Tuesday night for Stephanie Bauder on her birthday. Mrs. "Tippy" Tabb crashed the party and it was a complete success.

Week-end before last some of the girls attended Randolph-Macon Homecomings. Among those there were Sis Brown, Peggy Worthington, Julie Moncure, Sue Upson, Dale Brothers, George Ann Reynolds, Frances Williams, and Carolyn Smith.

Washington and Lee claimed some of the girls this week end. Attending dances and parties there were Ann Watkins, Betty Jean Jenkins, and Betty Mann.

Pinned — Carolyn Smith to "Tick" Stringer, a Kappa Sigma at Randolph-Macon; "Teeny" Moore to Buddy Brown, a Kappa Psi at M. C. V.; Dottie Rector to Deane Hillenbrand, a Sigma Chi at Wake Forest; and Sylvia Overton to Tucker McLaughlin, a Phi Kappa Sigma at Virginia. Receiving Naval Academy pins were Shirley Sylvester and Sara Gayhart.

Engaged—Pat Cahill to Wesley Dibeler; Lou Pomeroy to Sherwood Eberhard of Sandston; Nancy Lou Riddle to Harold Tippel of North Carolina; Betty Rose Davis to Charles Wittkopp of Del Mare, North Dakota; and Shirlee Johnson to Glenn Bailey of William and Mary. By this time, everyone knows that Patsy Abernathy is engaged to Woody Rice, of Lockhaven Pa., a former H. S. student.

Westhampton Breaks Down Unbeaten LC

The once invincable Longwood College Varsity Hockey team was defeated for the first time in several years. Westhampton College delivered the blow when it defeated the blue and white team 4-0 in an exciting tilt in Richmond, October 23.

The team rallied to its loss by defeating Roanoke College 2-0 in a home field game, October 28.

Miss Olive Iler and Miss Brockenborough of the physical education department took 14 Longwood girls to the first Annual Tidewater Field Hockey Tournament at Westhampton College. The "Little Colonels" sponsored the tournament which was held October 29-30.

The Longwood team defeated the Norfolk Division team 2-1 and the "Little Colonels defeated the Longwood team 2-1 in tournament play.

Colleges attending the meet were Westhampton, William and Mary, Norfolk Division of William and Mary, Mary Washington, and Longwood.

After the matches had been completed, a committee selected a Tidewater Team to play the Blueridge and Washington teams. Elsie Wente and Clara Borum McCarter, 1954 Longwood graduates, and Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor of science, were selected for this team.

H-S SPORT SLANTS

By LARRY HOOVER Sports Editor of The Tiger

What is it that causes a football team to undergo a complete reversal and follow three somewhat humiliating defeats with two impressive victories? If we knew how to determine that certain something, we could almost guarantee that our name would go down with the immortals in the annals of "sportingdom". Whatever that intangible quantity may be, we can certainly surmise that immeasurable amounts of it have been injected into the Terrible Tigers of Death Valley.

On Friday, September 24, the preliminary game of the annual Tobacco Festival featured the Richmond Spiders and the Hampden-Sydney Tigers. A much-publicized, spirited squad left the campus that Friday on "The Tiger Safari", but returned home with spirits somewhat dampened after a crushing 40-0 defeat at the hands of Merrick's minute-men backfield.

The following week the Bengals played host to their first Little-Seven foe, Emory & Henry, in a rain soaked Homecoming game. The Wasps always manage to field a strong team, but were by no means favored to up-end the Little-Seven Champion Tigers. Evidently, the Wasps didn't read The Tiger before the game, because they handed the Garnett and Gray a 20-6 drubbing.

After a week's lay-off the twice beaten Tigers journeyed to Johns Hopkins for a Conference clash with the Blue Jays. They returned home on the bottom end of a 14-13 score in a game which could have easily gone either way. None the less, the Tigers were not too impressive against a team which lost to Randolph-Macon 27-0.

Then it happened. The team rebounded incredibly from their third defeat and the practice sessions following the J H game were the most inspired of the year. A bus load of victory-hungry gridders left Death Valley on Friday, October 22, en route to Westminster, Maryland, home of the Western-Maryland Green Terrors.

The Terrors, who were leading Conference contenders, had never before been beaten by an H-S team and were in the midst of one of their more successful seasons. That was the set-up when the Tigers took the field Saturday afternoon.

Within less than a minute after the opening whistle sounded, the Tigers turned the tide and converted a winless season into a successful one. H-S quarterback Jim Smith gathered in the pigskin on the opening kickoff and raced 93 yards for the first Tiger score in a stunning 38-6 victory. It was the fuse that touched off their biggest point-producing explosion in recent years and set the stage for one of Western-Maryland's worst tragedies in her successful football history.

To prove their point the Tigers made it two in a row last Saturday by white-washing 14-0 a strong Sewanee, Tennessee team that held a 7-1 edge over the Presbyterians. The scoring punch was supplied by Quarterback Jim Smith, Fullback Cabell Rives, and End Jim Overbey, and Hickey's host of hard-running halfbacks.

On Saturday, November 7, H-S will journey to Bridgewater where they will meet the Eagles in another Little Seven and Mason-Dixon contest. The following week they meet arch-rival Randolph-Macon on the Death Valley gridiron, and on November 20, they wind up the campaign by meeting Guilford College in Danville.

We will offer no predictions for the remaining games, but we feel that this spirit that has carried the Tigers through their amazing comeback, along with a squad full of well-coached talent, should be enough to carry the 1954 edition of the Hampden-Sydney football team to a winning season.

L C Reserve Team Whips Stratford

With a winning score of 1-0, Longwood's reserve hockey team played Stratford Junior College on the local athletic field, October 21. It was the team's second game and second win of the season.

The score was made during the first half by Loretta Kuhn. Neither team scored during the second half of the game.

The reserve team's third game of the season was against Westhampton's reserve team in Richmond Oct. 23 at 2 p. m. The score was 2-1 in favor of Westhampton. Faye Evans made Longwood's one goal.

Girls playing in the two games were Nancy Hartman, Joan Willard, Audrey Owen, Faye Evans, Loretta Kuhn, Evelyn Rowe, Lucy Thwing, Barbara Scott, Pearson Grymes, Becky Hines, Barbara Felthaus, Joan Ward, Shirley Blankenship, Ann Wayne Fuller, Barbara Benedict, and Patsy Hamner.

'Blithe Spirit'

mer performances include roles in "The Boor," "Death Takes a Holiday," "The Long Christmas Dinner," and "Romeo and Juliet."

Florence Blake has been cast as Elvira and has previously appeared in "At Liberty" and "Before Breakfast," and has designed sets for many plays.

Madame Arcati is played by Dorothy Rector whose work on lighting and in stage managing has been outstanding. She will make her first appearance on the Longwood stage in "Blithe Spirit."

Dr. C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English, who is directing the play, announced that emphasis will be placed on make-up, outstanding sets, costumes and special lighting effects. Tickets for the performance will go on sale November 10 at the price of 75 cents.

Saints preserve us, what is this hemisphere coming to?

While the Sophs and Freshmen were gnashing their teeth and putting their shoulders to the old grindstone to win the annual Circus event, the respective class sponsors were beaming—and betting on the sidelines. So sure were each of thier color's victory that the stakes were unceasingly raised; the sky was the limit.

Russian roulette, penny ante, and two deck poker all bow in humiliation to this most fabulous of all bets between Mr. French, who has shied away from all hues of above-stated red since the year one, and Miss W., whose dyed in the wool red and white spirit is unquestionable. (It has been rumored that she has ordered a complete shipment of new red tank suits!)

All in all the classes have enjoyed the bet to the hilt:

Longwood Pan-Hellenic Plans Annual Workshop

Longwood College's Pan-Hellenic Association will serve as host this week- end to the annual State Pan-Hellenic Workshop.

All Virginia colleges having women's Pan-Hellenic associations were extended invitations to attend the meeting. These schools include Radford College, Madison College, the University of Virginia, Randolph-Macon Woman's College and the College of William and Mary. Radford, Madison and Randolph-Macon have accepted the invitation to send delegates to the convention. William and Mary and the University of Virginia were unable to send delegates.

Opening with registration at 10 a. m. Saturday morning, the day long convention will include a general business meeting from 11 a. m. to 12 a. m., a tour of the Longwood campus from 12 noon to 12::30 p. m., and a luncheon at Longwood House from 12:30 to 2 p. m.

Following the luncheon, the group will return to the college to meet for small group discussions of present Pan-Hellenic problems.

The workshop will conclude between 3:30 p. m. and 4 p. m. when the delegates will again assemble in mass for summaries from each discussion group's recording secretary.

Miss Evelyn Bell, national Alpha Sigma Alpha president, will deliver the keynote address.

Club Plans Sale Of Holiday Cake

Plum pudding and fruit cakes will be baked and sold this year by the Home Economics Club during the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons.

The entire club will not only fill "over-the-counter" orders from the students and Farmville people, but will also package and mail the foods to other cities and states, and to overseas areas. Postals charges for these packages being mailed by the club will be fifteen cents.

Pudding and cakes being delivered for Thanksgiving must be ordered by November 18, while those to be purchased for the Christmas holidays must be ordred by November 29. The price of the fruit cakes will be one dollar and the pudding a dollar and a quarter.

Union Vesper Services will take place November 14 in the Baptist Church, acording to Jean Carol Parker, president of the YWCA.

This service marks the first in the series of vesper services to be held this year. Following the program, the various churches will hold social fellowships.

The Longwood "Y" has been invited by Madison College to attend a conference on November 13 and 14. Theme of the conference is "Where Are You" and is to serve as a preparation for the national assembly which is to take place in Kansas, December 27 through January 2, 1955. These conferences are included in a program for the YWCA centennial which is being held this year. The Longwood YWCA hopes to send delegates to both conferences.

Board Elects Dr. Lankford, President

Dr. Francis G. Lankford, Jr., professor of education at the University of Virginia, has just been elected president of Longwood College to succeed Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster according to an announcement made public last night by the Virginia State Board of Education.

The State Board voted unanimously for Dr. Lankford's selection. He will succeed Dr. Lancaster, whose retirement was made official last spring, as president next July 1.

As president of Longwood College, Dr. Lankford will preside over a school with a physical plant valued at approximately $1,380, 000, a student body of about 700, and a faculty of 66.

Dr. Lankford is a nationally recognized scholar in the field of mathematics and in the teaching of mathematics. He is the author of numerous articles contributed to professional journals in his field and is a co-author of several textbooks on applied mathematics.

He is also well-known in Virginia for his work on numerous state committees in the field of education. In 1943, he directed a Virginia State Chamber of Commerce study on opportunities for the improvement of high school instruction in Virginia. He is also chairman of the committee on science teaching of the Virginia Academy of Sciences.

After graduating from Randolph-Macon College where he received his B. S. degree in 1928, Dr. Lankford studied at the University of Virginia where he took his master's degree in 1932 and his Ph. D. in 1938. During the following two years, he had a General Education Board Fellowship for post-doctorial study at the University of Michigan. He has also taught in the summer sessions at Michigan, Harvard, and the University of Texas.

His teaching experience includes services as principal of Heathsville High School in Northumberland County and positions from instructor to professor of education at the University of Virginia.

Dr. Lankford has been active in such professional associations as the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, the Virginia Academy of Sciences, and the Virginia Education Association.

The new president, who is 48 years of age, was married in 1935 to the former Miss Florence Fleet, a graduate of the College of William and Mary. The couple has two sons.

Dr. Lancaster, president of Longwood College since 1946, has led a varied life of service in the field of education. For more than thirty years he has been active in educational work in Virginia and in the nation.

A graduate of the University of Virginia in 1911 with the B. A. degree, Dr. Lancaster completed his graduate work at Virginia Polytechnic Institute where he was an instructor in the Modern Language Department until receiving his master' degree in 1915. Dr. Lancaster held a research fellowship at the University of Missouri in 1916. He has served in numerous positions in Virginia schools and in Alabama schools. A recipient of the Doctorate of Laws degrees in 1943 from the University of Richmond, he is a member of many societies. He also is author of a Virginia textbook on agriculture and has contributed to such publications as the Virginia Journal of Education.

In 1915, Dr. Lancaster was married to the former Miss Mary Tabb Crump of Richmond. The Lancasters have four dauhters and 13 grandchildren.

More information will be released in the December 8 issue of the Rotunda.

Schenkman To Lead Norfolk Orchestra For Series Opening

Audience To Hear Varied Selection

A concert by the Norfolk Symphony Orchestra will open the 1954-1955 Artist Series here at Longwood on Tuesday, November 23.

Four numbers will be presented by the orchestra under the direction of Edgar Schenkman. They are Beethoven's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 4 in G major with Ray Jesson as guest pianist; Prelude and Fugue in C minor with orchestration by Dr. John W. Molnar, head of the music department; Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4 in A major and Tschaikocksky's Overture — Fantasy from "Romeo and Juliet."

The only permanent organization of its type in Virginia, the orchestra consists of 70 players, all of whom are residents of the Norfolk area. Three music lovers founded the orchestra in August 1920 under the name Civic Symphony Orchestra, and fifty musicians played in the first concert on April 12, 1921. In July 1949 the Norfolk Chorus merged with this group and since then, the two have presented such compositions as the Messiah, Elijah, and Mozart's Requiem.

In addition to conducting the symphony orchestr, Mr. Schenkman is also director of the Summer School of Music at Mary Washington College and has achieved national status as a musician, conductor and educator. During World War II he served as arranger of documentary films for the U. S. Government, as well as being associated with several

Local Combo To Entertain

"The Night Owls" Combo of Farmville will set a lively scene for the Student Government Dance which is scheduled for this Saturday night from 8:30 p. m. to 11:30 p. m. in the main Recreation Hall.

The group is composed mainly of local Farmville musicians and is under the direction of Phil Franck from Cumberland.

The dance marks the first time that the Student Government Association has undertaken to present a combo dance. It also marks the first time that a combo has been employed to furnish music for any regularly scheduled juke box dance.

The combo which was organized last year has had many engagements in this area. It has played for the local club dances, for the Crewe Community Service Club, Veterans' Club and for the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"The Night Owls" will render both popular dance music and Dixieland selections for the dance.

The Recreation Hall will be decorated to lend a festive air to the dance.

Dress for the dance will be the usual juke-box dance attire.

Admission for the combo dance will be 35 cents per person.

The seventy-piece Norfolk Symphony Orchestra will appear in Jarman Hall next Tuesday night, November 23.

Students Choose Ward, Donaldson

Mary Ann Ward and Martha Donaldson have been elected by the student body to fill the position of general chairman and business manager, respectively, of the 1955 May Day celebration.

Due to a closeness of results in the first voting, a revote was taken yesterday.

Dot Vaden, president of Student Government, appointed a committee to draw up the slate which was accepted by the student body. This committee will also draw up a slate for the committee heads of May Day. This slate will be presented to the student body at a later date. The committee chairmen who will work with Mary Ann in planning the May Day theme and activities will be in charge of transporation, May Day dance, music, costumes, props, court, publicity, program and the formal dance.

This is the second year in which May Day has been managed by the student body.

Mary Ann, a senior physical education major is vice president of the Athletic Association and a member of the Monogram and Cotillion Clubs. She is also a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha social sorority.

Martha, a senior business major from Roanoke, is associate editor of the Rotunda, secretary-treasurer of Cotillion Club and a member of Pi Delta Epsilon. She is president of Alpha Sigma Tau social sorority.

Unique Characters To Appear In Coward's Hit, 'Blithe Spirit'

The 'Blithe Spirit' cast members seem to be listening for voices from "the other side" as they run through a rehearsal of the seance scene.

LC, HSC Players Combine Talents

When the curtains open in Jarman Hall tomorrow night at 8 p. m., the unique characters of Noel Coward's comedy, "Blithe Spirit" will come alive.

The Longwood Players and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs will join forces for the presentation under the direction of Dr. C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English.

"Blithe Spirit" will be the second full play of the year and will open tomorrow night and Friday night on the Longwood stage.

James Parker and Nancy Tanley Masters will be seen as the happily married couple, Charles and Ruth Condomine. The happiness of the marriage, however, is soon to become dubious, when Madam Arcati, portrayed by Dottie Rector, employes her talents as a medium to materialize Elvira, the ghost of Charles Condomine's first wife, Elvira, brought to us by Florence Blake is the picture of sophistication and amuses herself continually by tormenting all with whom she comes in contact.

Anita Heflin is Edith, the Condomine's maid. Jim Nichols and Gaynell Edwards will be seen as Dr. Bradman and his wife, while the four guests are Russell Vass, Ann Brooking, David McLeney, and Barbara Burnside.

Barbara Burnside will also handle the stage managing; Pat Jones is in charge of music and sound, and Fred Stables is managing the lights. Properties and sets are being prepared by the Play Production 101 class, while Florence Blake and Dr. Earley, are designing the sets.

Richard Daiger is handling programs; B. J. Stables and Pat Morris are supervising advertising and publicity; Nancy Ingram as house manager.

Advance tickets are now on sale at the price of 75 cents. Tickets may also be purchased at the box office on the nights of the performance.

Club Selects Calcott

The national honorary journalism fraternity, Pi Delta Epsilon has selected Mr. George H. Calcott, assistant professor of history to serve as its sponsor.

He will replace Dr. Marvin W. Schlegel, professor of history, who is studying in Germany this year.

Pi Delta Epsilon has extended membership bids to Sally Cecil, Jackie Marshall, Molly Ann Harvey, Margaret Ann Felton, Mary Jo Hutchinson, Phyllis Nurney, and Margarite Franklin.

Honor Society Selects Nine as New Members

Five seniors and four juniors were tapped into Alpha Kappa Gamma honor society in Chapel, on Thursday, November 5.

Those receiving the badge of recognition for new membership were Beth Kent, Nancy Tanley Masters, Lou Seibel, Jackie White, Peggy Worthington, Jane Blake, Carolyn Gray, Georgia Jackson, and Helen Warriner.

Alpha Kappa Gamma is a national honorary fraternity for leadership in womanly service. Membership is composed of juniors and seniors who have proven themselves most capable and worthy in constructive leadership.

Beth, a senior from Richmond, is majoring in elementary education. This year she is vice-president of House Council, president of the Cotillion Club, and art editor of "The [illegible]." She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, Kappa Delta Pi honorary society, H2O, Orchesis, and Longwood Players.

Nancy, from Newport News, is majoring in biology. She is president of Pi Kappa Sigma sorority, Alpha Psi Omega honorary drama society, vice-president of Pi Kappa Sigma sorority, secretary of Longwood Players, and figure leader for the Cotillion Club.

Lou, from Vinton, is a home economics major. She is president of Future Teachers of America, and a member of the home economics club, Southwest Virginia Club, Cotillion Club, and Wesley Foundation.

Jackie, from Norfolk, is majoring in elementary education. She is president of House Council and a member of Student Government, Student Standards Pan-Hellenic Council, A. C. E., Cotillion Club, and Theta Sigma [illegible] sorority.

From Rocky Mount, Peggy is majoring in Spanish and English. She is a member of Kappa Delta social sorority, secretary of Pi Delta Epsilon, and business manager of "The Virginian." She is a member of Beore Ha Brom, Kappa Delta Pi, and Cotillion Club.

Jane, an elementary education major from Virginia Beach, is president of Student Government, and a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, Kappa Delta Pi and Cotillion Club.

A [illegible] year, [illegible] major from Chester. She is president of Student Government, Rocky Statesman, and a member of A. A. Council, B. S. U. Council, Cotillion Club and Orchesis.

Georgia, [illegible] major, is president of the junior class, managing editor of "The Colonnade."

Praise and Criticism

Whenever an advance or an improvement is made in anything, praise for the improvement by those people whom it effects is certainly warranted. Likewise, when an improvement is needed, constructive criticism is always helpful.

With these two facts clearly in mind, we would like to set forth students' praise and criticism of the manner in which the Hampden-Sydney dances were handled this past week end.

Last year were were permitted to remain at the dances and combo parties for a longer period of time than was customary. This year we were permitted to stay out even longer. For this extended length of time, we wish to express our appreciation by saying thank you.

On the other hand, we would like to voice student opinion on the method by which students were required to check with Longwood chaperones at the dance. Briefly, students were checked on a list held by various chaperones. The list was marked in two ways: (1) a check for those students who attended the dance and (2) a different check for those who actually spoke to chaperones.

Various students who attended these dances have commented that they were extremely embarrassed when conspicuous white sheets of paper confronted them in the presnce of dates and onlookers.

When we as freshmen entered Longwood we signed the honor code. It is assumed that every student upholds our honor system. Therefore, when a student signs out for a dance, she is on her honor to attend that dance. Furthermore, being checked on the list at Hampden-Sydney dances Friday and Saturday night implies mistrust of those students who attended.

On the other hand, the purposes of the check list should be carefully considered. First of all, it serves as a check to see that students arrive at the dance safely and without car accidents. It also is a check by which chaperones can contact a girl if an emergency arises. Such emergencies would be phone calls from home or telegrams of some nature.

With these purposes in mind, one can easily understand the need for such a list; but the method of checking can and must be improved. No student wishes to be scrutinized by chaperones.

To effect any improvement, suggestions must be made. We would like to see that each student be responsible for checking herself in at a dance. The check list, for only the purposes mentioned, could be placed in the powder room of the H-S gym. When coats and wraps are removed, each girl would be able to check herself. No danger of seeing conspicuous white sheets of paper would occur.

We feel strongly that those students who did not speak to chaperones violated common courtesy. On the other hand, we feel that a check of this type is not only embarrassing but unnecessary.

In reference to the honor code, however, several girls who signed out for the dance violated this code. These girls were not present at the dance. We would like to repeat a sentence—when a girl signs out for a dance, she is on her honor to attend that dance. The actions of these girls should be criticized.

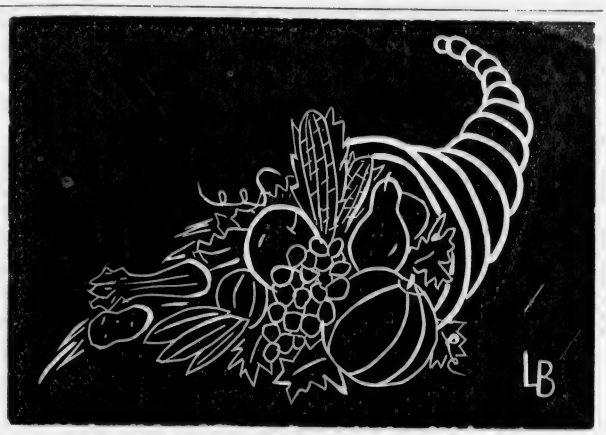
Praise and criticism in one editorial are a strong dose of medicine but before any improvement can be made specific criticisms must be brought out into the open.

We hope this will serve as food for thought.

Thanksgiving Message

Most of us hear and read Thanksgiving messages year after year. What we have to say about this day has doubtlessly been said before but perhaps not in this manner.

First we say hurray for Thanksgiving; hurray for going home—hurray for the carved turkey; and hurray for football games and parties.



We, however, have an even stronger hurray. One of great importance is for the courageous men and women who initiated this day early in our country's history. They were capable of doing something that most of us seldom, if ever do—take time out to be thankful for the good things which have been given them.

Today when we have so much more in the way of material blessings, we take such "minute" things as never having been cold or hungry for granted. Of course this attitude is wrong. Actually our never having been cold or hungry is in itself something for which we should be grateful. Few peoples of the world today can boast of a standard of living that even approaches ours.

A quiet prayerful hurray is in order for world peace. We may be glad that man is at least temporarily sane enough not to be willfully destroying himself.

We, of course, have many personal things for which to show our appreciation. These include our homes, friends, and unlimited opportunities which are open to us as future young American college graduates.

Let us add a hurray for these blessings too. Let us be thankful for the goodness that Heaven has bestowed upon us, and let us not take them for granted in the future.

Nick Fitt ---- Notorious Guy Bids Victims Sad Good-bye

Minnie Paxaday
Filter Tip Hall
Kingsize University
Old Gold, California

Dear Miss Paxaday:

My assignment concerning said villian Nick Fitt, alias Nicitimus Fittuscoughaski has been closed and the details plus expense account are herewith reported.

On November 10, 1954, I answered your desperate call. Hurrying to your suite in the Cavalier Hotel I sliced my way through the smoke screen left by a villian who had made his Kool get-away through a nearby Chester field.

There I discovered you entwined in chains after calling for Phillip Morris, your fiance. I set about finding clues to establish a case concerning this cancerous crime. My first Lucky Strike was the tobacco stained rug upon which you were lying. After feeling the few shreds of finely processed tobacco, I realized I was on the trail of that notorious habit-forming thug, Nick Fitt.

Outside the hotel, I hailed a passing Camel and began casing the joints and dives most frequented by Nick and his gang. Finally, at Black Lung Bar, I met success upon questioning the bartender Winston who pointed his yellow-stained finger toward an upstairs room. I cautiously approached the door and flinging it open I found Nick Fitt and his Pal, Mall, planning their next attack with the gang—Kent, L. and M.

My Partner Will Power had luckily followed me to the scene and aided me in overcoming the fuss and fumes which these creatures of habit created.

Brought before Parliament, Nick Fitt was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Carton State Penitentiary on the charge of criminal assault to the human body.

Your story is ended, you are free from the lurking shadow of Nick Fitt and I hereby close this case which took me to various night-spots involving my time, my effort and your money.

Expense Account:

Item I.—Drinks for bribing Nick's doll, Ciggie Butt who gave evidence leading to his arrest.

Item II.—Drink at Vice Roy Bar.

Items III.—Drink at Dragg Grill.

Item IV.—Drink at Smoke Ring Saloon

Item V.—Bail .

Total account—two grand.

If you do not find this description adequate, please notify me at my office in the Penecilin Building. As I say to all my clients—"L.S.M.F.T.—Lung Smokers Mean Fuller Tombs."

Sincerely,
Detective Sergeant Emdee

Believe it or not!

Once upon a time when our own Betty Jefferson (a high and mighty senior she be) went to Averett College, so did another Betty Jefferson who is secretary to the president there. Our Betty is from Danville, so's Betty No. II. It was was just a wee bit frustrating to both Bettys who were inevitably confusing friends, faculty and each other at Averett.

When our Betty decided to grace the halls of Longwood, she breathed a sigh a relief as she left Betty No. II to her right of individuality at Averett.

'Tis a sad tale, for Betty No. II graduated from Longwood in '49 and her room was No. 37 in junior dorm, 124 her senior year; and her roommate was president of Student Government. Wails our Betty, "So's mine!"

CHURCH NEWS

SOCIAL NOTES

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Hold on to your hats, girls, while we tell you of the many Longwood girls who spent the past two weekends at dances and parties and more dances and parties! (A decidedly high spirit of morale is evident on campus for all of us did something or went somewhere.) If we miss a few of you, let us know what you're doing next time.

Those who recently received diamonds were Charlotte Fitts who is engaged to John Maragon of Hampden-Sydney. Joyce Hunt has received a ring from Bill Henderson of Saltville. Liz Wilson received her ring from Martin Miller of Staunton. Robinette Ballard is engaged to J. B. Gilbreath of Norfolk.

Among those receiving pins were (and this happened quite a while ago but I slipped up again) Ginny Obenchain who is pinned to John Cross of M. C. V. and a former Kappa Alpha at Hampden-Sydney. Fran Bailey has received a Theta Chi pin from Bill Hatchett of the University of Richmond.

Attending Homecoming dances and parties at the University of Richmond week-end before last were Carolyn Smith, Carolyn Williams, Betty Jean Jenkins, Susie Garner, Betty Cory, and Ann Woodhouse.

Openings at Virginia the same week-end attracted quite a few of us. Those who attended parties there were Nancy Lee Harris, Jane Lohr, Dorema Burchett, Sis Brown, Sylvia Overton, Joyce Gillchrest, Stephanie Bauder, Nancy McLawhorn, Virginia Obenchain, B. J. Staples, June Manlove, Betsy Radcliffe, Gerry Luck, Libby White, Colleen Goff, Mary Jo Hutchinson, and Virginia Anderson Russell.

Parties at V. M. I. last weekend drew a few "Longwooders." Attending dances there were Audrey Owen, Joanne Parlier, Boosie Miller, Diane Hansen, and Nancy Hartman.

No sooner had we forgotten last week-end parties than this week-end came along. Homecomings and Openings at Tech, V. M. I., William and Mary, and Hampden-Sydney drew crowds of us.

V. M. I. Openings found Violet Marshall, Shirley Alcock, Mary Champ Williams, Shirley Paxson, Ann Woohouse, and Ann Watkins.

Joan Darnell, Gail Leonard, Lou Wilder, Mary Davis, Janet Lloyd and Ann deAlba were among the many who attended Homecomings at William and Mary.

Hampden - Sydney Homecomings were concluded this week-end. The first half of their parties

Dr. Simkins Reveals Views About Historians' Opinions Of Southern Achievements

Dr. Francis Butler Simkins, President of the Southern Historical Association, told an assembly of over 600 historians last week to stop apologizing for the culture and achievements of the South.

As President of the Southern Historical Association, Dr. Simkins holds about the highest honor that can come to an historian in the South, and the Longwood professor is generally recognized as one of the most prominent historians in the nation. This semester Dr. Simkins is on leave of absence to deliver a series of lectures at Princeton University.

Speaking at the annual convention of the society in Columbia, South Carolina, Dr. Simkins criticized historians who judge the great culture of the South by contemporary standard. It is not necessarily true, said the distinguished professor, that universal education is better than folk culture, that nationalism is better than provincialism, that urban standards are better than rural standards, that small farms are better than plantations, that the larger the number of voters the better the commonwealth, that the two-party system is better than the harmony of one party, or that breaks in the color line are necessarily a sign of progress.

Dr. Simkins tended to agree with Sinclair Lewis who, Dr. Simkins said, "condemns America to an esoteric hell because most of its provinces have succeeded in ironing out their provincial differences."

The true tragedy of the South was "not the defeat at Appomattox but the truckling of both skalawag and Burbon, both materialist and idealist, to alien values," he stated.

Speaking with the customary tongue-in-cheek wit known to his students, Dr. Simkins kept the large audience chuckling. The address was hailed by newspaper critics as a "puckish swipe" at historians who accepted the dogmas of the South's backwardness.

Librarian Will Serve On Book Committee

Miss Irving Armstrong, a member of the college library staff, has recently been appointed to a committee which will list suggested books for high school libraries.

Dr. Beverly Ruffin, Miss Armstrong, Miss M. Terry, and Mrs. Martha LeStourgeon, of the library staff will attend the Virginia Library Association Annual Conference to be held November 21-23 in the Hotel Roanoke at Roanoke.

A display of textile designs by Dan Cooper will be exhibited in the browsing room from December 1-15.

31 Students Receive Cotillion Invitations

Thirty-one girls have accepted bids to the Cotillion Club in the fall bidding of upperclassmen according to Beth Kent, president of the organization.

Bids were presented November 8; and girls accepting bids received green and yellow Cotillion ribbons.

Those girls accepting bids were Pat Ashby, Harriet Browning Muriel Boswell, Virginia Burgess, Frances Bays, Pat Cantrell, Jo Anne Dyer, Mary Davis, Becky Hines, and Nancy Hughes.

Other fall "Goats" are Virginia Johnston, Roberta King, Carolyn Lowe, Margaret Miller, Nancy McLawhorn, Bonnie Moore, Jean Parrot, Barbara Roller, Jane Railey, and Betsy Richardson.

Also Carolyn Smith, Lou Seibel, Shirley Sylvester, Betty Scarborough, Leslie Smith, Helen Smith, Janie Scott, Delores Winder, Liz Wilson, Joan Ward and Jo York accepted the invitation to membership.

H2O To Stage Aqua Pageant In December

December 9 has been set aside as the date for Longwood's annual Christmas water pageant which is sponsored by the H2O Club. Performances will be held at 5 p. m. and 7 p. m.

"Christmas Around the World" will be the theme of this year's program. Mexico, Hawaii, China, Holland, and America at Christmas time will be visited by the spectators who attend. A narrator will relate to the audience the story of Christmas in each country which will be featured by the swimmers.

In Holland two pairs of Dutch shoes will be represented by four girls doing synchronized swimming. Since Hawaiians seldom see snow, the snow flakes will travel to Hawaii; a Pinata will be featured in Mexico. A huge Christmas tree will be formed for the celebration in America. China's gala celebration of the Yuletide has not been revealed.

Patsy Hamner, chairman of the pageant, will be assisted by Beth Kent. Nancy Nelson is in charge of publicity. The props committee is headed by Dolores Winder, and the costume committee by Jane Lohr.

From the Bleachers

BY LOU WILDER

Class hockey games began Monday afternoon with contests between sister classes. The remaining competitions will be played this week. Come out and support your team. They need your help!

The seniors won over the sophomore class 1-0 on Monday afternoon. The senior team scored its goal in the first half. Both teams played hard the entire game. The second half, however, was scoreless for both teams.

The juniors downed the freshmen 5-0 on Monday afternoon. The juniors led by a small margin of 1-0 at the end of the first half. They rallied in the second half with four additional goals. The freshmen team, however, made an excellent showing, especially considering the lack of experience as compared to the junior team.

The real fight to win hockey for the color cup started yesterday with games between the seniors and freshmen and the sophomores and juniors. The freshmen scored the first goal of the game but the seniors scored before the half was over, leaving the score tied, 1-1, when the half-time whistle blew. The seniors rushed into the second half with four additional goals making the final score 5-1 in their favor. The sophomore-junior game remained scoreless until the latter part of the first half when the juniors made one goal. Since the second half brought in no tallies for either team, the final score was 1-0 in favor of the juniors. Therefore, the two colors are even in points for the cup. The final tilts will be held tomorrow afternoon between the juniors and seniors and the freshmen and sophomores.

Hockey is the first sport of the year in competition for color cup. The winning color team will receive ten points. Ten points are awarded for all team sports such as basketball and softball and five points are given on individual sports such as tennis, archery, and swimming.

Color rush was held on the Athletic Field this afternoon at 4 p. m. One girl from each color team competed for class banners on the following buildings; senior, junior, Library Hall, Rotunda, and Student Building. Congratulations to all the winners and to everyone else who completed.

State; Barbara Williams, Wake Forest; Betty Jane Shackleford and Western Walker, East Carolina; Carole Carson, University of Tennessee; and Jane Bailey, Sally Dousenberry, and Ellen Hamlet, Duke University.

Our congratulations go to Doris Underwood (one of the old grads) who was named as 1954 sweetheart of Lambda Chi Alpha at Hampden-Sydney this week-end.

And congratulations also to Mary Ann Ward (Galax) who has received a 1954 red Buick as a graduation gift from her parents. We like it.

That's about all for this week. Remember to let me know what you're doing.

Pageant Chairman Announces Theme

"As the Prophets Foretold" has been announced by Barbara Mays as the theme for this year's Christmas pageant.

Barbara, as pageant chairman, plans to present this annual program in a two-act story form rather than in the traditional pageant style. .

For the first time, try-outs for participation will be open to the entire student body. They will be held during the coming week. Eleven speaking roles plus parts for five participating shepherds complete the cast positions.

The election of the Madonna will be held during the first week of December and the program will be presented on the evening of December 14.

For two consecutive years he was guest conductor of the All-State String Orchestra under the auspices of the Virginia Music Educators Association. He is chairman of the American Music Committee of the Virginia Federation of Music Clubs. Mr. Shenckman came to Virginia in 1948 to assume the conductorship of Norfolk's chorus and orchestra.

Student tickets may be obtained in the Office of Secretary at no charge. The right half of the auditorium has been reserved for students.

Edgar Schenkman will assume the conductor's baton next Tuesday night.

Fraternity Bids 13

Thirteen students have received bids to Kappa Delta Pi, honorary scholastic fraternity in education, according to Pat McLemore, president.

The new members are Jane Blake, Anne Field Brooking, Virginia Cowles, Liz DeHaven, Joyce Gillehrest, Matti Joan Harvey and Loon Hayes.

Anne Jones, James Parker, Fannie Scott, Margaret Sheppard, Helen Wiermer, and Ann Weatherholtz were also invited to join.

These members are selected on the basis of a cumulative 2.25 scholastic average. This average requirement has been included recently in the constitution of the society.

Joint Choirs Plan Seasonal Concert

Rehearsals are now in progress for the annual Christmas Concert which will be presented by the combined Longwood and Hampden-Sydney Choirs. This traditional concert will take place in Jarman Hall on December 12 at 8:30 p. m.

The program will open with selections by the combined choirs. The Longwood Madrigal Singers, the Hampden-Sydney Choir and the Longwood Choir will follow in order with their separate parts of the program. The combined choirs will conclude the concert with selections from the "Messiah" by Handel.

The Longwood Choir will sing in Boydton on December 5; in Tappahannock on December 7; in Emporia on December 9; in Farmville on December 12; and at Hampden-Sydney on December 13.

Seniors Win Contest

The seniors won the annual song contest for the third consecutive year yesterday during the regular assembly period. The Athletic Association sponsors the contest yearly.

Karen Spencer has composed the music for all three winning songs. Senior song co-chairmen were Carolyn Stanley and Betty Jane Staples.

Coward's Characters Create Challenges

By SALLY CECIL

In Jarman Hall last Friday night, the lights dimmed, and the curtains opened to reveal Dr. Earley and Barbara Burnside "creating" to the tune of "If I Ever Needed You."

As those in the audience sat wondering what was to happen next, the atmosphere changed quite suddenly as Dr. Earley called, "Let's put wheels under this thing—let's go!" Immediately, the students became the characters of "Blithe Spirit," and the real work began.

The contrast of the characters' parts is outstanding. Ruth Condomine in the person of Nancy Tanley Masters is the typical cool, elite wife in the socially prominent family.

The part of Ruth is a straight part, meaning that it is a role without particular pathos or comedy, which, nevertheless, must be made as forceful as any other part. The fact that Nancy must not react to Elvira further complicates the matter, "but," she added, with a twinkle in her eyes, "I do enjoy coming back as a ghost."

During a cocktail scene Nancy was criticized for sipping too frequently and later stated, "If I actually drank that much I'd be seeing pink Elviras!"

"Flip" Blake, who portrays the flippant Elvira, really has her hands full with the additional responsibilities of working on sets and costumes. She finds that Noel Coward's play is done in a lighter vein than most of the presentations in which she has been active. She feels that the part is hard to get into in that there is no living comparison to Elvira. Said Flip, "This part is really putting me six feet under."

Beating her fists and twisting her beads, Dottie Rector expressed the intensity of belief in "the other side" which emerges from her role of Madam Arcati, a rather masculine, stiff figure who actually sets the mood for the eerie events to follow. Dottie claims that the lines "hit you in the face and you don't know where they're coming from." Her understanding of the part seems clear in her statement, "I really find myself listening for the voices from 'the other side'."

When faced with the idea of an interview, James Parker, alias Condomine, rolled his eyes and mumbled, "I'm totally unprepared—I came without my shoes." Though his part is unbelievable he deems it difficult to become "a rather amusing blase English novelist," and he feels that the lines are unusually hard to learn.

James continued to thumb through the 1952 edition of "The Cinema" as he commented that Charles' frustrations may be easily visualized and understood.

With Irving Berlin's "Always" playing in the background, Nancy Masters assumed a meditative pose and quite spontaneously expressed the sentiments of the entire cast when she said in telling why she loved her part, "Let me count the ways—I just do—it's always lots of fun being somebody else—it's just being a part of the play that's important."

Dr. Lankford Discloses Opinions On Election To College Presidency While Visiting Longwood Yesterday

Future President Notes LC Spirit

A reputation for high standards a good faculty, a tremendous loyalty among alumnae members, and a spirit apparent in the student body are all qualities which Dr. Francis G. Lankford, professor of education at the University of Virginia, admired about Longwood College in being asked to comment on his election to the presidency.

"My opinion is definitely one of great enthusiasm," he related yesterday during an informal interview while visiting the college campus.

Breaking from his warm smile for a moment, Dr. Lankford assumed a contemplative look and a soft tone of voice while he continued his resume of the qualities he found prevalent within and without the college.

"Whenever I visited Longwood," he continued, "the fine spirit of the students and their devotion to their college have been most apparent. This spirit remains with the alumnae, too. Many of my friends have told me since my election to the presidency that they are Longwod alumnae. Always there is a generous measure of pride in this affiliation with their Alma Mater. I have known many students in a number of colleges and I know that where students love and respect the name of their college, there is much that is worthy of respect. So I shall come to Longwood next summer with great enthusiasm for the opportunities I will have to help carry on the fine traditions of this college. It will be a great privilege, too, to follow the capable administration of your beloved President Lancaster."

Dr. Lankford is a rather tall man in stature and in every way displays traits of leadership, scholarship, and friendliness.

Several questions concerning his opinion on various subjects in the field of education and the liberal arts were discussed.

When asked about his views on higher education for women he replied:

"I believe emphatically that a sucessful liberal education is one that equips young women to perform vocational tasks efficiently and to live rich, happy, and satisfying lives beyond them."

He stated that he believed that this same principal could be applied to teaching. A teacher must have a breadth of interest and a depth of background in order to instruct effectively.

"To maintain high standards at Longwood means helping all students to measure up fully to their potentialities. Of course, all work and no play makes a dull girl as easily as it makes a dull boy. I believe well-educated young women are versatile persons with many intrests and they know how to work and how to play. This is equally true for those who will teach and those who will not."

Dr. Dabney Lancaster holds informal talk with Dr. F. G. Lankford, the president-elect of Longwood College.

When asked whether or not he would display a different kind of leadership here at a woman's college from that at a man's university, he smiled very faintly and leaned back in the chair before commenting.

He explained that being president of a college, of course would be different kind of experience mainly because his present status is not that of an administrative position. He further explained that his methods now are directly related to classroom and individual instruction situations—classes and individual conferences,, instruction in graduate studies, and hours of cross table talk with students. "I enjoy this contract with students-both men and women!" he said. He stated that despite the fact that the University of Virginia is regarded a man's university, women are enrolled also. Illustrating this viewpoin ,he said that one of his classes consists of 31 members, only two of which are men. The women studens range from sophomores to mature women, working toward degrees. He said that this large number of women occurred primarily in the Education Department. One of the qualities considered in Dr. Lankford's election to the presidency was his academic scholarship, and he was asked to comment on the tendancy to select for college presidents in state institutions politicians, military men, and professional educators. He said first he was a "neophyte in politics." He said, however, that the position involves working with political leaders, and that, of course, the good-will of politicans in the state was highly important.

Working directly with students in the college will be an important consideration. "It will be my goal to help the students and faculty to maintain the good name Longwood has and the reputation it enjoys for high standards,"

He said that he believed and hoped to carry on these high standards which Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster has established under his administration. "My experiences while president will come out of my experiences in teaching. All other phases of the position, I hope to learn gradually."

Changing the subject slightly, the question on his philosophy of education was imposed.

'Y' Will Give Seasonal Play Next Tuesday

"As the Prophets Foretold," the Christmas play, will be presented on the night of December 14 at 10 p. m. in Jarman Hall.

This play is the annual program presented by the Prayers Committee of the YWCA: however, this year marks the first time that the program is being presented in play style rather than in pageant form. Barbara Mays, who is chairman of the committee and in charge of the pageant, commented concerning its form.

"I hope that in giving the the Christmas story in play form it will make it more real and living to students."

"As the Prophets Foretold" tells of the birth of the Christ Child and of the old prophet, Reuben, whose wisdom guides the shepherds and wise men to Bethlehem where his prophecies are fulfilled.

Those students in the cast are Freddie Stables as Reuben; Anita Heflin, Jane Crute, Evelyn Shifflet and Rose Frost as the shepherds; Margaret Dryden as the little boy; Pat Walton, Harriet Klohr and Virginia Obenchain as wisemen and George Ogburn as Joseph.

The identity of the Madonna will be revealed on the night of the program.

During the first half of the program, the junior choir will sing well-known Christmas carols to intensify the mood of the play. These selections will be rendered from the balcony of the auditorium. During the second half of the program members of the junior choir will appear on stage in the role of angels.

Marguerite Franklin is in charge of programs for the play; Barbara Peach, costumes; Ann Snyder, props; Dottie Rector, lighting; Mary Ellen Hawthorne, music; Pat Cantrell, business, and Mary Ann Wright, junior choir director.

Following the play will be the presentation of Chirstmas checks for the needy families of Farmville.

Dr. Simonini Lectures At Nat'l Convention

Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., head of the college's English department, was one of the speakers at the convention of the National Council of Teachers of English held last week at Detroit, Michigan.

Dr. Simonini spoke on "The Teaching of English in Italy" and drew on his experience last year as a Fulbright professor to show how techniques of teaching English as a foreign language might be employed at home.

Dianne Acree, a sophomore, will serve as the senior's honorary sister classmate at the "Christmas Fantasy" Ball Saturday night.

Joint Choirs Plan Yuletide Concert On Sunday, Dec. 12

The combined Glee Club and Choir of Hampden-Sydney and Longwood Colleges will present their Annual Christmas Concert in Jarman Hall, Sunday evening, December 12. The program will begin at 8:30 p. m., and although no admission will be charged, a silver offering will be collected. Dr. John Molnar, head of the Music Department at Longwood, will conduct the combined choirs.

The combined choir consists of eighty-one members, 30 from Hampden-Sydney and 51 from Longwood. During the month of December the choir has scheduled a number of appearances in other towns. Mr. Roy Jesson, of the Longwood Music Department, conducts the choir on tour. On December 5 they presented a concert at Boydton, and on December 7, they appeared at Tappahannock. A concert will be given at Emporia on December 9, and on December 13 the Christmas Concert will be given at Hampden-Sydney.

Outstanding among the selections in the concert will be the "Ceremony of Carols," by Britten. In this number the Longwood Choir will sing "Procession," "Wolcum Yole," "There Is No Rose," "The Young Child," "Balallow," "As Dew in April," "Spring Carol," "Deo Gracias" and "Recession." This presentation takes the contemporary setting of Medieval poetry and it will be the first time that the selection has been presented in this area of Virginia.

Also on the program will be the Madrigal Singers, a selected group of eight girls from Longwood. They will sing three numbers, one of which will be accompanied by a cello obligato by Ann Jeter. The Madrigal Singers include Dot Morris, Frances

Acree To Present Seniors' Bouquets

A fantasy in snow and stardust will set the mood for girls in billowy dresses and for their dates at the annual Senior Dance this Saturday night in the gym.

Entitled "Christmas Fantasy," the dance will carry those present into a world of winter-wonderland. A blue, star-studded sky, frosty trees, and drifts of snow will form the background for the dancers who will enter this snowy land from a huge white house at one end of the gym. Further highlights in decoration will be a sleigh of gaily wrapped Christmas packages and the orchestra on a snowy hilltop against a background of fluffy white clouds.

Dianne Acree, sophomore from Tappahannock, has been chosen by the Senior Class as their honorary class member from their sister class. Dianne will be the seniors' "Snow Fairy" who will present to them bouquets prior to the figure.

Dance Chairman

Shirley Osbourne is general dance chairman and has for her assistants Carolyn Stanley, decoration chairman; Jeanne Lynch Hobbs, music chairman; and Ellen Brent Dize, after-dance-party chairman. Shirley's other committees are headed by Becky Hines, clean-up; Marlene Lucas and Martha Donaldson, favors; Mary Rogers Button, tickets; Joyce Quick, programs, and Anne Carter Wendenburg, publicity.

Jeanne Lynch, music chairman, has engaged Jimmy Yankovich and his Orchestra from the University of Richmond to play for the dance.

The Yankovich band is well-known for its performances in clubs in and around the Richmond area and for its engagements at various school dances.

After the dance which will last from 8 p. m. until 12 p. m., the seniors and their dates will be entertained with a combo party at Longwood Estate. The Yankovich combo will provide the music. Light refreshments will be served.

Figure

The figure will begin with the seniors descending the stairs in the house and joining their dates. After being presented with their bouquets they will form the figure which will be led by Betty Islin, honorary Senior Class member from last year's Senior Class. This year's class officers and the dance chairman will lead the figure with the members of the Senior Class following them.

The following people have been asked to be chaperones for the dance: Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Mrs. Ruth Gleaves, Miss Nancy Chambers, Mr. George Calleott, Dr. C. L. S. Farley, Miss Betty L. Price, Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Simonini, Miss Eleanor Weddle, Mr. Raymond French, Mrs. Caroline Eastham, Dr. Sutherland, Mrs. Jonathan Tabb, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Molnar, Mr. and Mrs. Christie Snead, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Merritt, Dr. and Mrs. George Jeffers, and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Brumfield.

Shirley said, "The seniors are looking forward to a marvelous dance. We are working hard to make it an outstanding event of the season and we hope that many people will be there Saturday to travel with us into our "Christmas Fantasy."

French, Spanish Clubs Will Hold 'Fete-Fiesta' Friday, December 10

By JAN KUYK

Il est ne le divin Enfant, Joyeux Noel, Nacio Jesus Cristo, Felices Pasques!

With such exclamations the French and Spanish Clubs of the Foreign Language Department will proclaim the Christmas season in their annual Yuletide party, the "Fete" or "Fiesta". This celebration is given mainly for the enjoyment of the students, but the customs of the two countries are also seen through the entertainment. Guests are invited; however, tickets must be purchased by Thursday since refreshments are being served at the party.

French and American holiday activities and quite similar, but many old customs still prevail in the provinces. Basically the season is a religious celebration with the entire family going together to midnight mass on Christmas even singing carols on the way and during the service. In all the homes as well as in the churches, the creche or nativity scene is in evidence several weeks before Christmas, although the Christ Child is not laid in the manger until Christmas Eve.

The people of the province of Provence began many years ago to make their own creche scene figurines or "Santons," and soon the artisans of the province took up the practice. Today these tiny figurines are well known throughout the world and are sold during "La foire aux Santons," "The Fair of the Little Saints," which lasts 40 days, beginning on December 10. Not only may one buy the Nativity Santons, but also one may purchase small replicas of the people of the various walks of life in Provence. There is a superstition that the figurines bring happiness and keep away evil.

Some of these "Santons" will be brought to life in the Fete. There will be the Shepherds in the field as the people walk to mass singing "Venez Divin Messie," and the live creche will be portrayed at mass. Nancy Webb will sing "Cantique de Noel" in the church, while the entire group renders "Il Est Ne Le Divin Enfant."

In early times dancing was an important part of mass, and this is still observed in some provinces. "The Dance of the Shepherds" will be given as it is in the province of Brittany, with men dancing while the women clap and sing.

On Christmas Day life will be breathed into more "Santons" by a little girl who finds the small figurines beneath her tree. New Year's Day will bring the dance of the mistletoe by Nancy Jane Jones. In prehistoric times the Druids believed that the mistletoe was sacred, signifying youth. "Au Gui l'An Neuf" will be an interpretation of this belief while "La Dance du Gui" will show the modern idea of decorating with the Yuletide plant.

In addition to these celebrations the Wise Men will arrive on January 6 as the group does "Marche des Rois," and Le Pere Noel will visit the Fete at the end of the party.

The Mexicans begin their celebration of Christmas on the night of December 16 with the tradi-

Report

At this time it seems appropriate to report on the progress the College has made under President Dabney S. Lancaster's stewardship here during his eight-year service. A report by Dr. Lancaster concerning this progress has been published in the December issue of the Alumnae News Magazine. With a few additions to the report, we would like to relate these advances as presented in the magazine.

Recognition: Prior to 1946, Longwood College had been accredited by the Virginia State Board of Education and the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and was a member of the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education and the Association of Virginia Colleges. Since 1946 the College has also become a member of the Association of American Colleges, the National Association of Business Teachers Institutions, and the American Association of University Women. It has also been approved by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association.

Physical Plant: The campus laboratory school was remodeled at a cost of $60,000 in 1947. A new addition to "The Annex" dormitory was completed in 1950 and designated as "Tabb Hall." This addition and the rebuilding of the Colonnade in front of the old auditorium site cost $160,000. Jarman Hall, the auditorium and music building, was completed and equipped in 1951 at a cost of $500,000. The new science building was also completed and equipped in 1951 at a cost of $550,000. The conversion of the old science building into a home economics building with equipment cost $5,000. Homes for the faculty have been purchased or remodeled taking care of eight individuals or families and costing about $50,000. Approximately $15,000 has been spent on the purchase of property. The landscaping including the addition of new shrubs, trees and walks has cost approximately $5,000. A sprinkler system for fire protection has been installed at a cost of $50,000. The total amount spent on the physical plant is approximately $1,380,000.

Music Department: In 1946 there was one professor of music (voice and piano) and one associate professor of public school music. In 1954 there were six full-time faculty members and one part-time instructor on the music faculty, offering work in voice, piano, organ, stringed instruments, and public school music. A degree has been offered in music education since 1952. Additions to the equipment include a four manual organ presented by the alumnae for the auditorium, a Baldwin electronic organ, and numerous pianos and stringed instruments.

Curricula: There has been a study of all curricula in the college, extending over a three-year period and a number of changes have been made, emphasizing a sound foundation in the liberal arts and sciences with adequate professional training for those preparing for teaching. Degrees in elementary and secondary education, bachelor of arts degree, bachelor of science, home economics degree, and a business education degree are being offered. In addition to these degrees, two degree programs in music have been established, and a master of education degree set up. The latter degree program was recently established. Graduate classes in education are underway now but a resident program will be fully established in the summer of 1955.

Library: The library has been improved by the addition of a course in library science to prepare primarily teacher-librarians. The number of books has been increased from 43,000 to 60,000 bound volumes in addition to numerous reports and much unbound material.

Faculty: The faculty has been strengthened with approximately 30 per cent of the faculty now holding the doctorate, and there are no permanent members of the faculty holding less than the master's degree. Most of these have additional institutional training beyond the masters..

An interesting comparison between the status of degree holding faculty members in 1946 and the status of degree holding faculty members at present has been made. In 1946, 13 members held Doctorate degrees; two members had education one year beyond a Master's degree; 41 held Master's degrees; one held a Bachelor's degree; and two members held no degree. The total number of faculty members was 59. Part-time instructors were also employed.

At present 20 faculty members hold Doctorate degrees; 10 members have one year beyond Master's degree; 25 hold Master's degrees; and two members hold Bachelor degrees. The total number of faculty members is 57. Part-time instructors are also employed now.

The faculty-student ratio has changed since 1945-46. In 1946 there were 852 students enrolled at Longwood. Of this number 116 members constituted the senior class. Because of our selective admissions program, the enrollment decreased to approximately 653 for 1953-54. One hundred and fourteen members were present in the senior class, however. The holding power of the college has definitely increased.

Salaries: Salaries are still inadequate and have barely kept pace with the increased cost of living.

Financial Support: In 1946 the college received from the General Fund of the State $158,845 with $359,975 from fees paid by students, or a total operating fund of $518,820.

In 1954 the General Fund appropriation amounted to $378,350 with an estimated $434,550 in fees, a total for operating the institution of $812,900. This shows an overall increase in operating funds of slightly less than $300,000.

Admission Policy: In 1947 a new policy of admitting students was inaugurated in an effort to admit to the college only those students who by all the evidence available would have a fair chance for success. Formerly, nearly all graduates of accredited high schools who applied had been admitted. In 1947 a committee of six members of the faculty with the Dean of the College as chairman was appointed and all available information was compiled for each applicant. This included the inauguration of a psychological test, the results of which were used as a check against the high school record. The results of this program, for a while, meant a considerable reduction in the number of students, but the quality of instruction, due to the process of selection, coupled with the restudy of programs of study and the strengthened faculty, have enabled us to improve the standards of instruction in a gratifying fashion.

A comparison of the graduates who entered under the old system with those who have now graduated and who were admitted under the new plan shows that formerly we graduated approximately 40 per cent of the entering class and today we graduate an average of 55 per cent.

The State should not be interested primarily in the number of students on the campus but in those who are preparing to make a sound contribution to the welfare of the Commonwealth. At the present time the number of applicants for admission is increasing steadily each year and the college is operating at capacity now.

Dr. Lancaster has stated that the progress made by the college during his presidency could not have come about without the support of faculty, staff, students, and alumnae, as well as that of several governors, the General Assembly, and other state officials and the State Board of Education.

P. Noble Alius G. Gobel Calls Alice 'Dirty Bird'

By MARTHA DONALDSON

Editor's Note: No doubt many of you who have sut'ched on your television set on Saturday night have encountered a subtle-witted comedian in the person of one George Gobel. Since he is the "ra¹e" now we wish to feature an article ——— but, read on . .)

I have a true story to pass on . . . actually "true story" isn't the right word. It's going to be more like a lie!

You see it all began about three weeks ago . . . to be more exact, two weeks, six and three-fourths days ago.

. . . Oh, now, I guess you're wondering who I am. Well, my name is Paul Noble . . . now actually that isn't my real name, but to prevent duplication and a possible law suit which at this time my allowance would squelch, I'll use this rather misleading name. Well, at any rate, here I am . . . and there you are . . . and . . . here's the story . . . or lie, depending on whether you're honest or a trifle lax on telling the truth.

Well, now where was I? Oh yes, at the aforementioned preceding time which is actually two weeks, six and three-fourths days ago check me now . . . I could h a v e miscalculated. Actually though I use a foolproof finger and toe method of counting. Those fractions do give me a fit, but I'l split a hair or two to get the proper time . . because this is of great importance at times, I suppose.

You see that is when I got a letter from my wife, Alice. Now, Alice isn't really my wife. It's just that she writes her name as "Mrs. Paul Noble" on a few things . . . the bottom of her saddle oxfords, the walls of powder rooms and things like that. You know how sentimental women are . . . .they're always dreaming.

Alice is a college student. Now, that means that she is naturally pinned or engaged, but not to me . . . to two other guys by a previous arrangement. I'm not demanding enough to want a girl who is unasked for because actually you can't hardly get them no more. We need them though because just as I was saying the other day, girls make the best wives.

Now to get back to the letter. It seems very . . . very . . . ar . . . these other guys Alice goes with, especially the one she is engaged to—well, he wants her to stop going steady with me. Now, when he said that I thought to myself, "Buddy, are you trying to make trouble?" Boy, I'm telling you. I don't like those two men . . . they are dirty birds if I ever saw dirty birds and they are pret-ty dirty, I'll tell you, as far as birds go . . .

Well, this letter from Alice, was sweet, personal and full of love, but between the lines I detected an evil forboding. Now, actually, there is really nothing between the lines. You know that and I know that . . . it is just an expression. It is just an expression, a play on words . . . a sort of expression. Have I made that clear, now?

Herewith, within is Alice's sweet letter. It is probably just my imagination to feel a little bit of foreboding for it says, "To whom it may concern: We're through. Signed Mrs. Dirty Bird." Now, is that bad as far as love letters go? Am I playing second fiddle to a dirty bird? Well, you don't know and I don't know so there you are and . . . here I am.

SOCIAL NOTES

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Parties have definitely died down since the holidays, so, if you can remember that far, let's see what happened over Thanksgiving.

We had one bride—Betty Rose Davis was married to Charles Witkopp, of DelMare, North Dakota. Our best wishes to both of you!

V. M. I. Ring Figures drew quite a number of girls from here. Spending the holidays in Lexington were Donnie Devine, Betsy Barefoot, Shirley Alcott, Ann Jeter, Shirley Paxton, Mary Williams, Rheta Russell, Charlotte Fudge and Margaret Dryden. Donnie received a diamond from Lin Clark of Richmond during the figure.

Others receiving diamonds were Stephanie Bauder who is now engaged to Sid Settle of the University of Virginia; and Jane Blake who has received a ring from Don Lawrence of Hartford, Conn. Pollyanna Martin is engaged to Don Foard, research assistant to Dr. Robert Brumfield of the Longwood staff.

Saturday night, Nancy McLawhorn was officially named as the Sweetheart of Sigma Chi at the University of Virginia. Nancy received, among other things, a Sigma Chi cross of white roses, and a Sweetheart pin. Our congratulations!

Shirley Ward attended Yale University over the holidays as the guest of George Bell.

Carter Brenaman and Virginia Herre attended the Army vs. Navy football game.

Marguerite Franklin went to Lynchburg College for parties there this week end.

Here's a little ditty we thought you'd enjoy—the Junior's own Helen Warriner is learning to knit! (Mary Jo told me so I know it's so!)

CHURCH NEWS

By ANNE THAXTON

Baptist

Miss Rees Watkins, Young People's Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Union of Virginia, spoke at the Young Women's Association meeting Tuesday night. The Y. W. A. set a goal of $150 for their foreign mission offering. Girls who have not yet turned their offering in are reminded to do so.

Anne Thaxton has been chosen as Longwood's nominee for one of the student summer missionaries to Jamaica. Three students will be chosen from Virginia colleges.

Episcopal

The Canterbury Club's last meeting on December 4 was a supper meeting. The speaker was the Rev. Charles Vache from Bon Air, the son of the Rev. Jean Vache, of Farmville. On December 12 there will be a Christmas party at 7 p. m. This will terminate with the groups attending the choir concert.

Methodist

On December 2 the Wesley Foundation Choir sang for the Farmville District Conference at Chase City. The Wesley Foundation is sponsoring a coffee hour each Friday night at seven p. m. to help build friendly relations between the students and faculty of Longwood. Mr. George Calcott was the first faculty guest for the December 3 meeting. Mrs. M. L. Landrum will be the next guest. Everyone is invited to come.

Presbyterian

Nancy Nelson, a senior from Newport News, will present the Christmas reading of the Nativity at the Candlelight Service at 7 p. m., on Sunday, December 12.

Swimmers Will Depict Symbols Of Christmas

Pageant to Feature Snow Flakes, Pinatas

Wooden shoes, snow flakes, and pinatas will take to water as "Christmas Around the World" is depicted in the Longwood pool.

Performances for this year's water spectacle are scheduled for 5 p. m. and 7 p. m. tomorrow..

Christmas in America, Holland, Mexico, Hawaii, and China will be interpreted to depict the theme.

An aquatic Christmas tree will represent foreign and American Christmas. Participants in this phase will be Nancy Hartman, Sally Henderson, Jo Ann Spurgian, Marcia Robins, Gail Carroll, Shirley McKinney, Shirley Kemp, Annie V. Weaver, Annette Crain, Mary Patterson, Jeanne Vestal, Jackie Pond, Sue Ralston, Marion Ruffin, Adele Donaldson, Carolyn Waugaman, Frances Patton, Rheta Russell, Geraldine Belch, Mary Ann Barnett, Louise Turner, Mary Davis, Betty Cantrell and Janet Bain.

Holland's Symbol

Holland's Yuletide symbol will rise in the formation of two pairs of wooden shoes by synchronized swimmers. These swimmers will be Joan Ward, Ann De Alba, Jeannette Stinson, Nancy Richardson, and Penny Meredith.

A Pinata will be formed for Mexico's Christmas by Nancy Quarles, Jane Ruppert, Sally Tilson, Elizabeth Buchanan, Joan Payne, Linda Garrison, Ginny Heree, Sara Gayhart, Barbara Whitehead, Loretta Kesterson, Eve Rostin, and Jane Cadawallader.

Snowflakes

Snowflakes will visit Hawaii. They will be formed by Betty Crenshaw, Jeannette Puckett, Barbara Ann Scott, Barbara Tyler, Jackie White, and Dreama Burchett.

June Dressler, Joan Harvey, Gloria Kratsch, Celina Leon Gomez, Nancy McLawhorn, Carol Ogden, Cindy Baldwin, Hazel Bell, Derta Duante, Jean Haden, Jo Hillsman and Shirley Sylvester will also visit by water the land of palm trees.

An unusual treat in the China sequence is in store for spectators. Those taking part are Claudette Cross, Marcia Robins, Gail Carroll, June Clem, Hilda Hartis, Loretta Kuhn, Ann Snyder, Audrey Owen, Betsy Richardson, Joan Payne, Margaret Cadwallader, and Delores Winder.

Nancy Nelson, publicity chairman for the pageant, reports that the pageant plans are more elaborate this year than in previous year. The H2O Club, sponsor of the pageant, hopes to set a precedent in establishing more spectacular performances of this type.

Patsy Hamner is in charge of the pageant.

LC Students Attend Meet

Five Longwood girls accompanied by Miss Eleanor Weddle, swimming instructor at Longwood, attended a synchronized swimming workshop, December 4 at Mary Washington College.

William and Mary, Madison, Mary Washington, and Longwood were represented a group from each school presented the synchronized number.

Mary Washington's Terrapin Club, presented a group of stunts. Following the presentation other schools were invited to practice the stunts.

The workshop ended with a discussion of water clubs at the various schools. Organization, membership, finances, and the work of water clubs were considered.

Girls in the Longwood group were Ann DeAlba, Joan Ward, Jeannette Stinson, Nancy Richardson, and Patsy Hamner.

Foster Wins Honors In 4-H Club Contest

Mary Anne Foster, a freshman from Poquoson, received top honors on Saturday, November 27, in the farm and home electric contest of the 33rd National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago. As a result of this honor, she was awarded a $300 scholarship from the Westinghouse Educational Foundation sponsored by the Westinghouse Electric Corp.

Mary Anne, who has completed forty projects ,was the only girl to win one of six scholarship prizes. She is well informed on electrical terminology and has improved lighting throughout her own home and has helped her father rewire his shop.

The Westinghouse Corporation flew Mary Anne to New York on Monday, November 29 to appear on their Studio One program on CBS-TV.

After an eventful and successful convention, Mary Anne has returned to college where she serves as vice-president of her class.

Prof. Receives Honor

Miss Elizabeth Burger, associate professor of science at Longwood College, made the first all-American team in the National Amateur Field Hockey tournament held at the University of Michigan on Saturday, November 27. She plays the position of goalie.

From the Bleachers

BY LOU WILDER

The score in the race for color cup stands 10-0 in favor of the red and whites. They won the points for class hockey.

The very close game between the freshmen and sophomores which ended in a 1-0 win for the freshmen, and the tight 1-1 tie between the juniors and seniors put the red and whites one game ahead and gave them the winning points.

Basketball is the next team sport in competition for color cup. General practice is being held Mondays and Wednesdays at 3 p. m., and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4 p. m. Get your eight practices now.

The varsity basketball squad will be posted before the Christmas holidays. Games are being arranged with Roanoke, Westhampton, Madison, Bridgewater, and Norfolk Division. The freshmen will also have a team which will play interscholastic and intercollegiate games.

Don't forget the Water Pageant tomorrow at 5 p. m. and 7 p. m. This year's pageant is quite different from previous exhibitions. A different theme, more props, and simple costumes are being used. You'll like it!

Dr. Lankford

his soft, warm tone of voice, Dr. Lankford stated that he felt like his points of view were fairly conservative. In so far as the preparations of teachers is concerned he said that to be an effective teacher, a person needs to be well educated.

Two words spoken by Dr. Lankford aptly described his opinion concerning the selective admissions policy here.

"Heartily endorsed!" he exclaimed. "It is a completely sound policy".

Plans to continue professional work in mathematics were voiced by Dr. Lankford. "I hope very much to continue my work here. I have a very strong interest in this — I enjoy the field and have spent much time in it."

In reference to mathematics he related that he had done much writing in the field. His latest books in the field of algebra will be used as first and second year high school textbooks. He expressed a reason for wanting to continue his professional work.

"I feel that there is an opportunity here to help public schools in the State; and they seem very eager for help."

He cites, for an example, that recently he taught a fifth grade class in an elementary school in Richmond while 45 teachers and supervisors observed the class. After this period of teaching, a discussion concerning methods and procedures in teaching was held. He also said that he has appointment in the near future to visit public schools in various parts of the state.

As the interview turned to Dr. Lankford's two children, he broke into a broad smile. Dr. Lankford has two sons aged 17 and 13. William Fleet, attends Woodbury Forest and is in the eleventh grade. He is primarily interested in sciences and his tenative plans are to attend the University. Francis G. III, who is 13 years old attends the eight grade at Lane High School in Charlottesville.

Dr. Lankford, when questioned about young Francis' main interests replied, "Nothing but sports! I know he would like my saying that."

It was learned that when Francis found he was going to move to Farmville he exclaimed, "Wonder what teams they have at Longwood!"

"I thoroughly enjoy gardening," said Dr. Lankford when questioned about his favorite hobby or pastime. He went on to explain that he had converted the back half of an extra lot next door into a garden. He smiled again as he mused that the front half of the lot was used for a football field and that football literally was played continuously among the boys in the neighborhood. He confessed that he got out there himself on occasions.

Toward the close of the conversation Dr. Lankford assumed a dignified and sincere tone as he conmented on Dr. Lancaster's presidency. In summary to everything that he had said the whole afternoon, he stated:

"I'd like to pay tribute to Dr. Lancaster and his administration I've known Dr. Lancsater a good many years and have held our friendly association high. I have profound respect for him as a person. I know the problems ahead will be less serious because I'm succeeding him."

He said that he was not saying this out of politeness but out of a deep sincere regard for him.

"There is a vast difference between succeeding a man who has done a good job from that of one who has left the job with everything yet to be done."

Freshmen To Play Hostess

Freshman orientation classes will entertain prospective Longwood students with a picnic supper on Saturday evening in the main recreation hall. Members of the faculty will be present to meet the girls and talk with them about about the college's educational offerings.

As part of their orientation activities, the freshmen will also conduct tours of the campus and Longwood Estate for the benefit of the visitors. On Friday night the high school seniors will attend the French and Spanish Clubs' "Fete-Fiesta" and on Saturday night they will observe the traditional Senior Dance.

Seniors from the following high schools have been invited: Lexington, Rustburg, Montevideo, Falls Church, Clifton Forge, Great Bridge, Deep Creek, Windsor, Covington, St. Agnes, Oak Grove, Washington-Lee, Montgomery County, Norview, Woodrow Wilson, Maury, Granby, Craddock, E. C. Glass, and Washington, D. C. High Schools.

Also Charles City, Buckingham Central, Scottsville, Clintwood, East Stone Gap, Gate City, Hermitage, Thomas J. Herson, Glade Spring., William Campbell, and Clincho will be represented by visitors.

The orientation classes have planned all the activities for the week end.

Mr. J. H. Bash, principal of the Farmville High School, will address the Longwood orientation classes concerning secondary education tomorrow at 1 p. m.

On January 6, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the College, will speak to the combined classes on the subject of possibilities in the field of education. The group is now observing classes in the Farmville public schools.

tional Posadas. For nine nights groups of friends re-enact the journey of Mary and Joseph to Bethlehem and their search for lodging. Going to a different one's home each night, they sing "La Posadas" upon arriving at the host's house.

Inside the dwelling Judy Billet sings "La Virgen Esta Lavando." Next a dance "El Sonic" is done by some of the students. This dance is under the direction of Celina Leon-Gomez from Honduras and is a typical dance of her country. "Hacia Belen Va Una Burra" will be sung by Miki Duarte and Celina Directed by Miki "Chamiuscao," a familiar dance of Mexico will follow.

On December 25 comes "La Corrida de Toros." The bullfight is a great celebration in Spanish-speaking countries and on Christmas Day families join in the festive spirit of the crowd at the arena. "Jarabe Tapatio," the well-known Mexican Hat Dance will also be featured on Christmas Day, as well as the songs "Pastores a Belen" and "Alegria, Alegria, Alegria."

Spanish - speaking children receive their gifts, not on Christmas Day, but on January 6, the day on which the Three Wise Men reached Bethlehem, bearing their gifts to the Christ Child. The children write letters to Gaspar, Melchor, and Baltasar on the Eve of the Three Kings Day, requesting the things they want. Like children everywhere, they are eager to go to bed so that the Kings will come quickly. They leave corn, grass and water for the camels in boxes, which the Kings are to fill with presents.

No celebration would be complete without the traditional pinata. Pinatas are usually decorated clay jugs, filled with all sorts of candy and nuts.

Nancy Nelson, vice-president of the French Club, is in charge of arrangements for her group. The Spanish Club's arrangements are being carried out by Mary Jo Hutchinson, a member of the Spanish Club. Miss Helen Draper, professor of modern languages is advisor to the French group while Miss Emily Barksdale, associate professor of modern languages, is advisor to the Spanish group.

Gathered around the Nativity Scene, representatives from France, Spain and United States are shown.

Frosh Select Commission

At a recent meeting of the freshman class, twelve girls were selected to serve on the YWCA Freshman Commission.

Suzanne Falson will act as head of the group which includes Betsy Barefoot, Patti Billups, Linda Garrison, Anita Heflin, Violet Marshall, and Kathy O'Leary. Other members of the Commission are Anne Roundtree, Jeanette Stinson, June Strother, Jeanne Vestal and Libby White.

The purpose of this group is to promote the general spirit of the freshman class and to assist the general class activities.

AKG To Hold Door Contest

Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary society, is sponsoring for the first time, a contest among the students to select the decorated room door which best portrays the Christmas season.

The doors will be judged on appropriateness, attractiveness, and originality. This selecting will take place Monday, December 13 and the prizes will be awarded at the Christmas banquet on Wednesday, December 15.

Williams, B. J. Staples, Karen Spencer, Joyce Clingenpeel, Mary Ann Wright, and Wilma Salmon. They will sing "Children's Prayer," "Cradle Song of the Virgin," and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring."

As a special feature Mr. Josson will render the "Pastoral Symphony," by Handel on the organ. This selection is taken from Handel's "Messiah."

Sophs Begin Work On '55 Production, Elect Co-Chairmen

Branch, Parker To Direct Class

Gale Branch and Patty Parker have been elected co-chairmen of the Sophomore Production which will be presented January 14.

The theme has been selected and the chairmen explained, "Although we have a very short time to prepare the show, the theme is quite unusual and we hope we will have some good entertainment.

They further commented that for those people who completely understand the production, the story won't be over when the final curtain falls.

Theme Song

The theme song which will occur throughout the production is entirely original in words and music and is closely interwoven with the general theme. The script has not been completed.

Instead of the usual direct casting method as used for plays, productions and shows, a type casting method will be employed. This form of casting will involve the selection of cast members according to personality, type, and suitability to various parts. This method is being used because of the short length of time involved and in consideration of the type of production. The theme will be revealed at a later date.

"Much library research work has gone into the writing of the script," commented Gail as she discussed a few plans for the show.

Committees

Committee heads have been chosen also. Mary Mayo and Sara Lou Wendenburg will head costumes. Props will be supervised by Shirley Hardy and Fran Bailey. In charge of backdrops are Belle Fitzgerald and Flo Soghoian, while tickets and programs will be handled by Carolyn Stoneman.

Carolyn Clark will serve as the chorus director; and stage manager will be Barbara Burnside. Barbara Roller and Fran Bailey are in charge of music.

Association Selects LC Student's Work For Nat'l Anthology

Through a recent news release it was announced that a Longwood sophomore, Judith Billet, will receive publication of a poem in the Annual Anthology of College Poetry.

"Of an Afternoon In March" is the title of her poem, which was selected for the Anthology by the National Poetry Association.

The Anthology is a yearly compilation of the finest poetry written by American college students, representing every section of the country. Selections for the Anthology were made from thousands of poems submitted.

List Reveals Various Jobs Of Graduates

The president's office has released a list of the present occupations of the 1954 June graduates. The teaching profession again claims the majority of the students' positions. Other occupations include business, graduate work in Medical Technology, and traveling for Future Homemakers of America.

Those teaching in Hampton are Pat Donnely, Betsy Robertson, Dee Steger, and Frances Marker. Ruby Smith is teaching in Buena Vista, while Doris Smith is teaching in Henry County. Janet Dunkan and Beverly Johnson are employed in the Chesterfield County schools. Mary Anne Evans and Billie Tomlinson are teaching in Richmond and Tom Moore and Sylvia Reams are teaching in Petersburg.

Paula Dovel, Betty Newsom and Betty Southhall are employed in the Manassas Public School. Mildred Parker, Jean Pearce and Doris Garlasco are teaching in Riverdale, Md., Amelia and Connecticut, respectively. Virginia Berry, Nancy Gilbert and Patsy Sanford are teaching in Churchland while Laura Trent and Mary Bennett Barksdale are employed in the Campbell County schools.

Lillian Guthrie, Betty Hoffman, Doris Horne, and Isabell Karnes are teaching in Hanover County; Bagota, New Jersey; Kempsville, and Fieldale, respectively. Betty Hood and Ellen Porter are teaching in Deep Creek and Jean Lafoon is teaching in Farmville. Both Nan Bland and Lula Grant are teaching in the Holland public school system, the former Clara Borum and Marilyn Thompson are teaching in Highland Springs. Lib Boswell, Ann Foster, Elizabeth Gillikin, and Elizabeth Kitts are employed in the Princess Anne County schools. Lynell Bradshaw is teaching in Henrico County and Jane Branch and Wanda Doll are teaching in Oceana. Mrs. Marjorie Morris, Jackie Palmer, Shirley Robey, Virginia Wince, and Roberta Wiatt are teaching in Charlotte Court House, Halifax County, York County, Winchester, and Gloucester, respectively.

Dinwiddie County schools have employed Virginia Sutherland and Maxine Elroy, while Mary Frances Miller and Dot Stringfield are teaching in Bedford, and Ivor, respectively. Mason Moore is teaching in Columbia, South Carolina, while Ann Perrow and Virginia Moon are employed in Lynchburg. Martha Wilson, Clara Kreinbaum, Mary Lou Burnett, Illia DesPortes are teaching in West Point, Arlington, Altavista, and Orange, respectively.

'As The Prophets Foretold'

A highlight of last night's Christmas play, "As the Prophets Foretold", was the scene showing the Madonna portrayed by Anne Thaxton, and Reuben, played by Fred Stables.

Dr. Highet Gives Lectures About Travels, Life, Books

Dr. Gilbert Highet, professor of Latin at Columbia University and chief book critic for Harper's Magazine, is being presented in a radio series each Sunday afternoon at 3:30 over WFLO under sponsorship of the Hampden-Sydney College Library.

The 15-minute program—"People, Places and Books"— is drawn from the Oxford-educated scholar's wide travels, familiarity with books and zest for living, which he expounds on in a penetrating, amusing manner.

The lecture series covers all parts of the world and introduces its listeners to a sizeable library of books and general cultural topics spiced with Dr. Highet's scholarly background and agile mind.

The broadcasts have a large following, being heard over a 27-station coverage in the United States, Canada and Hawaii. The chief background interests cover subjects of broad social and literary interests.

Mr. Paul Grier, librarian at Hampden-Sydney College, recommends the series, now in the sixth week, highly. He considers the area fortunate to have this listening pleasure, as well as the benefit of Dr. Highet's observations on a wide range of subjects.

Dr. Highet, 47, a Scotsman, came to the U. S. and Columbia University in 1937, and both he and his wife, the novelist, Helen MacInnes, have become American citizens.

The series is presented to this area as a contribution by the college to the cultural and better listening wishes of this area. Dr. Highet himself has an answer for the popularity of the program. He writes:

"In the past 30 years there has been an outstanding rise in cultural interest and taste all over America. Nowhere in Europe could we go into the previous and see the kind of interest in books music and the arts we have here."

The program will continue each Sunday afternoon for 10 weeks at 3:30 o'clock.

Dr. Highet is the author of the books, "The Art of Teaching" and "The Classical Tradition." Mrs. Highet is well-known for her "Assignment in Brittany."

Schlegels Tell Of European People, Land

(From The Farmville Herald)

The early part of November found the Schlegels on leave of absence this year from Longwood College where they both teach, in Frankfurt, Germany. Before settling down to studies at the University there, they spent the interim between summer and winter schools touring several European countries.

The following excerpts tell of their impressions and experiences in Europe to date.

"Although our Austrian friends had all reassured us, we still had a few qualms about driving our car through the Russian zone to Vienna, but they turned out to be unnecessary. We did get the 'grey cards' one is supposed to have to pass through the Russian zone, but, as it turned out, we wouldn't have needed them. The soldier at the American end of the bridge would have let us go by without stopping if Dot had not halted and asked to be checked in as entering the Russian zone; if we hadn't checked out at the other end within six hours, the Army, presumably, would have started to look for us."

Delightful City

"Vienna proved to be a delightful city. Fortunately for us, it has not yet been taken over by the tourists, and prices there are still quite cheap in terms of dollars. We had one of the best steaks I have eaten in the Wiener Rathauskeller for 60 cents. At small cort one can sit in a pleasant Weingarten or Weinstube and listen to the delightful Viennese music played on an accordian and guitar.

"Driving, by the way, is amazingly easy in Vienna, which has two million people but few automobiles. We could park almost anywhere. When we went to the theater, we left our car right across the street from the entrance, closer than we can usually get in Farmville.

"After a week in Vienna we left on Sunday, Sept. 12, to drive to Salzburg, on to Innsbruck in the heart of the Tyrol, and then we drove over one of Austria's higher mountains, the Arlberg, stopping that night on the edge of Austria in a little town called Feldkirch with the usual castle upon a hill above it and with arcaded streets like those usually found in Italian towns. Next morning we drove a few miles to the capital of Liechtenstein in order to get a glimpse of this tiny country, about the size of Prince Edward County. Then we turned around . . . and entered Switzerland.

Prosperous Swiss

"What impressed us most about Switzerland is the prosperity of the Swiss. The streets of Zurich were as full of cars as in any American city, and many of them were American cars, which cost almost twice as much to operate over here. They are also build-

Series To Bring Dance Satirists

On Wednesday evening, January 5, Ruth Mata and Eugene Hari, international dance satirists, will present an evening of danced theater at Jarman Hall at 8 p. m. This program will be the second in the 1954-55 Artist Series.

This well-known dance team saw America first as dancing comedians for an internationally famous European troupe whose headquarters were in Switzerland. Both were born and brought up in a suburb of Zurich. After four American tours, Mata and Hari whose real names are Meta Krahn and Paul Ulbright, decided to become American citizens and entered the concert field on their own, and remained in this country.

A background of classic training in many dance forms belongs to Ruth Mata and Eugene Hari. But the spark that sets off their hilarious and highly individual art comes from their own lighthearted viewpoint. These two are remarkably alike in thought and expression, which, they say, makes their own matrimonial and professional partnership not only fortunate, but inevitable.

They both have serious capacity for work, patience, endurance and stability. But what makes them unusual in the solemn ranks of the dance is the fact that they can laugh, at themselves and others, can see the humor, pathos, the divine and ridiculous in the human scene.

They have appeared from coast to coast in a long list of supper clubs like La Martinique, The Hotel Pierre and Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe in New York, Chez Paris in Chicago, and Ciro's in Hollywood. They made their bow on Broadway in "The Straw Hat Revue" in a cast which included such other unknowns as Danny Kaye, Jerome Robbins, Imogene Coca, and Anita Harvey, and followed this up with a long run in the Olson and Johnson stage musical, "Laffing Room Only." They are top favorites on television.

Mata and Hari have also been acclaimed by audiences in New York's two major movie palaces which specialize in stage entertainment: The Radio City Music

Keeping of Christmas

Changes are everywhere. Many institutions and customs that we once thought sacred have gone by the board. Yet there are a few that abide, defying time and revolution. The old message, "For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord," is still the heart of Christmas. It can be nothing else. This message can neither be changed—nor quite forgotten.

We all feel the pressure of approaching Christmas. The traffic is terrible. Parking spaces are unavailable. The stores are crowded. Mob scenes make shopping a nightmare. We think about presents and wonder what in the world to get "Susie Smith" or "Johnny Green." Perhaps there is nothing in a store which they need. What about some token of love—what about love itself—and friendship—and understanding—and consideration—and a helping hand—and a smile—and prayer? We can't buy these things in any store, and these are the very things people need. Christmas is not in the stores but in the hearts of people.

Let's not succumb to the sophisticated attitude—"Christmas belongs only to the children," for the older you get, the more it means, if you know what it means. Have you been saying, "I just can't seem to feel the Christmas spirit this year!" You should stop to consider what has actually been said in a flippant statement such as this one, for you are saying that you feel no joy that Jesus came into the world. You are confessing that his presence in the world is not a reality to you. Surely this inference is not intended.

"On earth peace, good will toward men" was not pronouncement upon the state of the world when the angels sang it, nor is it a reading of the international barometer of the present time. It is a promise—Gods' promise of what one day will come to pass—earthly peace.

In our moment to think of what Christmas truly means, we would like to "get down to earth" and include such human behavior as good manners and to consider all that good manners imply. Courtesy is too little practiced and too easily scorned as superficial and of no importance in our bustling world. The stately graces and gallant behavior may belong to the days of crinoline and candlelight (though we still have crinoline and candlelight), but good manners that by long practice come from within and do not grow out-of-date. On that day when the young are courteous to their elders, and their elders are courteous to them, when all motorists look out for the other fellow and the other fellow is polite, when no one demands preferential treatment, then the spirit of Christmas is being kept.

Christmas is a religious commemoration of the birth of the only perfect man who ever walked the face of this beautiful earth. He left two commandments—that we should love God first and with all our being and that we should love our neighbor as ourselves. We come nearer doing this during the Christmas season than at any other time.

And finally, Christmas morning comes. You'll catch the spirit all right. Don't worry—you'll be ready for it then. Possibly it will catch you, which is even better. Then you'll remember what Christmas means—the beginning of Christianity—the second chance for the world and hope for peace.

So we will not "spend" Christmas or "observe" Christmas. We will "keep" it as it is, in all the loveliness of its ancient traditions. May we keep it in our hearts that we may derive hope and peace from it.

"O tidings of comfort and joy!"

Y-Committees

The Longwood YWCA, of which every student is a member, has had for many years a system whereby certain committees work on specific activities necessary for its functioning.

In times past, most members of these committees have taken a rather inactive part, while the chairmen have had most of the responsibility. This situation cannot be blamed on any one person; it is quite difficult to assign one job to a large crowd when it sometimes requires the attention of only a few. The "Y" cabinet hopes to correct this condition and effect a system whereby each girl, who has signed up for a committee and is willing to give her time and energy, may have an opportunity to work.

Each committee is important in its own field. In order that the students may have a better understanding of the services of these committees, an explanation of the main purposes follows.

The Church Co-operative Committee works with the churches to promote a closer relationship between the church and the college student. Its primary function is the sponsoring of the Union Vesper services which take place four times a year in place of the individual church youth meetings.

The Library Committee takes care of the "Y" books which are available to all students. These books are found in the College library.

Planning the music for all functions of the "Y" is the responsibility of the Music Committee.

One of the most important committees is the Membership Committee. This group is responsible for assigning little sisters to upperclassmen. It also sends to the last year's graduating class informative letters concerning activities and functions of the college which would be of interest to its members. This is done twice a year.

The Prayers Committee is in charge of planning the prayer services held each week night in the Episcopal Church. It also plans the Christmas programs held annually.

The Public Affairs Committee plans the spring and fall devotional chapel programs which are sponsored by the "Y."

Seeing that cards are sent to students and faculty members during occasions of illness or death in the family is the primary function of the Service Committee.

Planning for the reception for freshmen at the beginning of the year is the responsibility of the Social Committee.

The Sing Committee sponsors class and organization skits held throughout the year.

Girls who have previously worked on these committees and those planning to participate in the undertakings are to be commended. The "Y" hopes that each member will feel that she has an active responsibility in her own chosen committee.

Review of Alumnae Bulletin Shows Articles of Interest

By JACKIE MARSHALL

The December Bulletin of Longwood College Alumnae News has been distributed to faculty and administration members and at present is being issued to alumnae members.

Several newsworthy articles which will be of interest to faculty, alumnae, and students, are included in the magazine.

A report by Dr. Dabney Lancaster on his stewardship during the past eight years of service to Longwood brings to attention such outstanding features as improvements made in the general physical plant, and the progress Longwood has fostered in the admission policy and recognition of the college. In this article, Dr. Lancaster foresees the coming demand for teachers and the necessity for expansion of dormitory accommodations.

"Longwood's Atomic energy" is an article concerning the atomic research project under the direction of Dr. Robert T. Brumfield, professor of biology. Longwood College has entered into a contract with the Atomic Energy Commission for research on the biological effects of radiation. This contract enables the college to contribute to fields of research related to the development and use of atomic energy.

The much publicized admissions program of Longwood is explained in an article by Mrs. Kathleen G. Cover, sociology instructor. The program is discussed to inform alumnae of the advantages of such a policy.

"Progress at Work" reveals the establishment of a graduate program leading to either a Master of Science or Master of Arts degree in education with a choice of an English, history, biology or mathematics major. It also will enable graduates of liberal arts colleges, who are now teaching, to meet requirements for certification and at the same time do graduate work. The masters degree will not be given until the student has obtained a collegiate professional equivalent. This article was written by a senior, Dot Douglas.

"From France and Mexico" is an account of customs, sights, and experiences abroad by Helen Tanner and Fay Greenland.

The cover of this issue features a picture of the Rotunda in the spring..

Decorations Lend Christmas Spirit

By Martha Donaldson

Longwood has certainly grasped the Christmas spirit which is perfectly evident to anyone walking through its halls and outside it windows.

A bright array of both religious and festive scenes appear on the windows and have been placed upon the doors. A variation of materials ranging from pine bows to aluminum foil have been combined with hard, but joyful work to form the most outstanding Christmas display Longwood has seen for many years.

Alpha Kappa Gamma has excellerated this more for more and prettier decorating by offering prizes for the door displaying the upmost in beauty, orginality, and suitability. The "Y" has added to the decoration by placing colorful murals on the large bulentin board in Ruffner and Tabb Hall.

Because of the many comments heard concerning these decorations, we think that these added flavors to the spirit of Christmas should be recognized.

LETTER TO EDITOR

Perhaps if we understood why there are specific times to sign out for week-ends, each person would be more concerned about the matter. One reason for signing out early is to give dining hall staff an idea of the number of people who plan to be away for the week-end. In turn, they are able to let the waitresses know whether or not their tables can be closed. Many times these girls who work in the dining hall make plans and are unable to know if these plans can be completed because of our failure to sign out early.

We complain about the food, but do we ever consider the amount that is wasted when we don't inform the dining hall staff before hand that a large number of people plan to be away. The food is bought a day in advance. Maybe we could help them to save a little money by observing the sign out deadlines, and in turn, they might be able to offer more and better food to us.

I know that if each and every one of you really understands the situation of the dining hall staff, you will cooperate with them in every way. Consider this before you leave the campus the next time.

SOCIAL NOTES

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Before telling you the happenings of the past week, I'd like to extend my congratulations (and I think I speak for all of us) to the Seniors for what we think was one of the most beautiful dances we've ever seen. Shirley Osbourne and all of her committees work'd long and hard to achieve a night such as "Christmas Fantasy." It will be long-remembered by us, the underclassmen, and we're sure the seniors won't forget it either.

Bridal magazines are floating around the dorms for a definite purpose this time. Frances Bays will lead off the holiday list of L. C. brides when she will be married tonight to James Brown of Richmond. Others (that we've heard about) who have set the date are Charlotte Fitts and John Maragon, Dec. 27; Jo Debnam, and John Miller, Dec. 18; Louise Turner and Thomas Caldwell, Dec. 19; Nan Picinich and Pete Jordan, Dec. 20; Lou Seibel and Kenneth Rader, Dec. 26; and Betty Barr and Bill Gibbs, Dec. 28. Our best wishes to all of you—

Sally Cecil, Phoebe Warner, Sally O'Mally, Elizabeth Pancake, Leslie Smith, and Nancy Desmond attended the Theta Chi parties at Hampden-Sydney this week-end. Joanne Wilson, Nancy Cousins, Julie Moncure, Jane Lohr, Caroline Oakey and Betty Jean Jenkins were in Charlottesville for parties at Virginia.

Loretta Kesterson once again visited the U. S. Naval Academy.

Receiving Diamonds — Audrey Powell became engaged to Johnny Pottard over Thanksgiving. Helen Waitman received her ring from Bob Wheeler of Ohio this week end.

Flash! Mrs. Nancy Tanley Masters will join her husband this week after his year and eight month's absence while serving with the U. S. Armed Forces in Germany.

Flash! Welb—will return to L. C. next year to graduate with her class! She is living this year in Yokahama, Japan, where her father is serving with the U. S. Government.

Engaged—Garnelle Edwards is engaged to Dean Stearns from Lima, Ohio. She wanted "lots" more than a ring.

Hall parties began this week and we've caught the 'ole spirit once again. Have a Merry, Merry Christmas and we'll see you again next year!

DOT'S DASHES

By DOT DOUGLAS

Do you have a suppressed desire to clobber your roommate? Well, my dear, you are normal! According to that eminent psycho case, Dr. Neuro Otic, the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas is the worst psychological time of the year for college students. Well, why shouldn't it be? Aren't you sick of her jokes, her clothes, and her little problems. Well, take the siutation in hand—move the little old pest, clothes, jokes and problems out in the hall and to the nearest elevator shaft.

Now that we're all Alcatraz roommates and this is a bad psychological time again, let's change the subject.

To get roommates out of our hair, let's get a BAD HOME PERMANENT because—there was a little girl who had a little curl right in the middle of her forehead, and when she was good, she was very good, and when she was bad, she was popular!

Can you believe it, day after tomorrow is Friday? The day after that is Saturday. Saturday a week ago was a good day. All of us mighiys looked pretty—if pale—and our dear dates came beaming through the receiving line so happy to be with us, but sorry that we weren't cute freshmen with new clothes. Just the same, we'd rather be seniors with old clothes, old jokes and an old roommate.

Back to that again—aren't our roommates great? They love us—deep down—even though we are depressed in this psychologically bad time. Let's show them that we care. Let's do the greatest thing we can do for them—move out!

Newspaper Items Show Sports, Activities, News From Outside Colleges

H-S Football Player Receives Top Honor

By DOT DOUGLAS
And JACKIE MARSHALL

We are so often absorbed in our own little college world that we forget that other colleges are also revolving on an interesting orbit of activities.

This week we selected some news bits from other colleges that we think will be of interest to you.

Recently, Hampden - Sydney's Stokeley Fulton was named to the 1954 Little All-American football team as picked by the Associated Press sports writers. He was also picked as the outstanding small college player in the state by newspapermen. And for the fourth time in four years he was picked to the All-Little Seven Squad. Fulton is president of the Hampden-Sydney student body and co-captain of the football team.

More football at Hampden-Sydney includes the selection of four other Tiger men to the A. P. All-Little Seven football team. They were Cabell Rives, Ronnie Henry, Bill LeHew, and Jim Frazer. Jim Overbey and Jim Smith received honorable mention.

Emory and Henry, champions of the 1954 Little Seven placed three men on the first team. Randolph-Macon placed two and Bridgewater placed one.

From Lexington, VMI's 80-voice Glee Club will prepare several musical programs for the "Voice of America" broadcast to Europe and Asia next spring.

Other news from the VMI "Cadet" is on a more sober side. Lt. Colonel Blandy B. Clarkson died at the age of 64. He was a veteran VMI faculty member and one of the most prominent figures in the institution's athletic history. He had been associated with VMI for the past 44 years. He headed the athletic program for almost three decades and coached VMI football teams for seven years. He coached the only undefeated football team in VMI's history.

From several colleges come the United Press's 1954 Virginia All-State Football team. Undefeated V. P. I. and the University of Richmond, dominated the team.

First team ends were Tom Petty (V. P. I.) and Eric Christensen (U. R.). Tackles were Jerry Sazio (W. & M.) and George Preas (V. P. I.). John Palzer (U. Va.) and John Morgan (V. M. I.) were named guards to the mythical team and Jack Prater (V. P. I.) was given the center position. Dave Woolwine was named to the quarterback position. Halfbacks for the team are Dickie Beard (V. P. I.) and Louis Wacker (U. R.). Frank Palaczkowski was named to the fullback position.

The William and Mary Choir will be singing on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy radio show at 8 p. m. this Sunday night, December 19.

Edward R. Murrow, nationally known news commentator, recently spoke at the College of William and Mary at the anniversary of the founding of Phi Beta Kappa at that school.

The "Rotunda" has a cousin "LaRotunde" from the University of Ottawa. Our cousin, printed in French, just celebrated its 23rd anniversary of publication.

The "Concordian" from Concord College at Athens, West Virginia, reports that 115 pints of blood were donated by the students when the Red Cross Bloodmobile unit visited the campus, Nov. 18.

The "Proscript" of the Richmond Professional Institute, reports that a new type of perfume, designed to make fruits smell extra fruity, soon may be in evidence in grocery stores, according to Chemical Week, a McGraw-Hill publication. Consisting of orange, tangerine, lemon and lime odors in liquid form, the scent is sprayed on citrus displays.

Another article in the "Proscript" states that the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission officers recently reported that by 1960, an enrollment of 3,559,000 in elementary schools is expected with an expected rate of increase of a million a year in the next six years.

From Roanoke College comes the question of the week. "Brackety-Ack"—"Since 'pro' means the opposite of 'con,' can you give me an illustration? Answer—'Progress and Congress.'"

Juniors To Take Test

The Junior English Test for all students of current junior standing will be given on Thursday, January 13, from 7-9 p. m. in Rooms 29, 30, and 31 of the West Wing.

The test covers correctness and achievement is a prerequisite for and reading ability. Satisfactory achievement is a prerequisite for graduation in all curricula.

Freshmen Choose Nichols President

Freshman class elections have recently been completed at Longwood. Merodith Nichols from Richmond has been elected to the presidency of the freshman class with Mary Ann Foster from Pocquoson to assist her as vice-president.

Ann Brierley of Farmville will assume the duties of secretary for the class and Shirley Hauptman of Winchester will hold the office of treasurer.

Freshman representatives to the Student Government are Pearson Grymes from Richmond and Betty Forbes of Warwick. Sue Taylor and Ellen Calloway were elected to serve on the Student Standards Committee. They are from Richmond and Bluefield, respectively. Freshman house president will be Carolyn Waugaman from Roanoke.

Lucia Hart from York, S. C., and Georgia Ann Reynolds of Suffolk were selected as co-chairmen for Freshman Production which will be presented in the early spring.

Miss Eleanor Weddle, physical education instructor, is serving as sponsor for the class.

Alumnae

while Beulah Carter, Betty Cullip, and Glenn Vought are employed in the Danville school system. Ann Edmonds, Jemima Cobb, Betty Islin, June Johns, and Sylvia West are doing their teaching in Warwick. Those teaching in Norfolk include Nellie Culpepper, the former Trianne Lampkin, and the former Mary Denny Wilson. The former Gail Dixon and Cora Wood are teaching in Philadelphia, Pa., and Fishersville, respectively.

Those employed in Hopewell include Barbara Blackman and Marian Parrish, while Nell Copley and Joanne Utley are teaching at Virginia Beach.

Eleanor Koch is teaching at the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind in Staunton.

Outside the field of education are Ann Moore in secretarial work in Richmond, Emily Eggert studying medical technology at Medical College of Virginia, and Edith Frame traveling for the Future Homemakers of America Association.

Teachers Remark On Ancient Italy, High Living Cost

ing a lot of new roads, good roads, too, in spite of the mountains they have to contend with.

Land of Contrasts

"Italy seemed to us a land of contrasts. It is on the one hand, the most ancient of all the lands we have visited, with still visible monuments of a past stretching back 3,000 years to the Etruscans. On the other hand, it is also one of the most modern of all countries with strikingly different new buildings thought up by the inventive Italian architects—Yet they use the same basic materials and building methods the Romans used 2,000 years ago, and the Etruscans before them.

"One sign of modernity in Italy which was not always pleasant was the overemphasis of free enterprise. The Italians have gone wild on advertising. There is advertising everywhere: even the mailboxes and trash baskets are sponsored. Peddlers pester you everywhere, especially as one goes farther south.

"The Italians also display a great love of freedom in their driving. The Italian motorist believes firmly in his right to drive wherever he pleases—The rule seems to be that whoever honks his horn first has the right of way. The most remarkable thing was that we saw few accidents. From Italy we went on for a week in southern France, where we found better preserved Roman ruins than in Italy."

High Cost of Living

"Now after all our traveling we are trying to get settled down in Frankfurt. Our greatest difficulty has been the high cost of lodgings here in the city, which lost many houses during the war and is still overcrowded with Americans and refugees from the Russian zone. Cheap rooms are available, but if one seeks such comforts as central heat and hot water, he must pay about twice as much as at home.

"Our struggle with the German langauge continues unabated, on attending our first lecture in German, we discovered that we could understand for about five minutes before we grew too tired to follow. It will probably be a month or two before we understand the lectures, although we can already get along fairly well in ordinary conversation."

Commission Sponsors Formal Yule Banquet

The annual Christmas banquet, sponsored by the Freshman Commission, will be held tonight at 6 p. m., in the main dining hall. Guests will include several members of the faculty, administration members, and the town students, Suzanne Faison, head of the Freshman Commission will extend a welcome to the guests. Entertainment for the evening will consist of a trio including Commission members—Traci Faison, Violet Marshall, and Patti Billups. There will also be a solo, "O, Holy Night," by Carolyn Wolfe, accompanied by Elsie Wells at the piano. The Longwood Madrigals will also render a musical selection.

Immediately following the banquet, the Freshman Commission, will lead the singing around the Christmas tree in the Rotunda; and the "hanging of the green" will follow the festivity.

Classes Make Dessert Plans

Freshman orientation classes have begun entertaining members of the Longwood faculty, heads of campus organizations and high school seniors at teas and desserts which have been scheduled for December and January.

Miss Nancy Chambers' 11:05 Monday orientation class entertained at a dessert yesterday. Miss Ruth Gleaves' 2:05 Tuesday class will be hostess at a dessert on January 4.

Others scheduled are a dessert party on January 6 for Farmville High School seniors; a dessert on January 11, 13; and a dessert party on January 18. Worsham High School senior girls have been asked to attend on January 13.

Plans are underway for High School weekends scheduled for January 15. Miss Chambers' 9:05 Monday section will play hostess to these seniors. A picnic is on the agenda for the weekend.

Applications Show Student Increase

Applications from high school seniors for admission into Longwood College in 1955-56 were two weeks ago twice as many as at this same period last year.

This announcement was made by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president, who stated that the applications included in the tabulation are signed applications from those seniors who are definite in their choice of school next year.

Dr. Lancaster sent to students this week reprints of the article "Selectivity Pays Off" which appeared in the Virginia Education Association Magizine. He did this to inform students as to the standing of Longwood College in the selective admission program.

Mata, Hari Will Give Dance Performance For Second Program In LC Artist Series

Hall and the Roxy. For Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, they appeared in the film musical, "Meet the People."

In designing their own costumes, the satirists, Mata and Hari, are guided by the principle of economy of detail. Working with basic black or white tights they achieve a variety of effects by changing hats, belts, draperies and tie-on skirts. These help them make the lightning changes which mean, in turn, no wait between numbers for the audience.

One of the satiric dances in the lively repertorie of Mata and Hari is entitled "Sports News Reel." It's a once-over-lightly version of a news reel's kaleidoscope of sport. "It's all fast, impressionistic and clear," quotes one critic concerning the per-

On Tuesday, February 15, Mr. Joel Ebersole, assistant professor of music, will present a concert as the third Artist Series program. Mr. Ebersole, who is a tenor, graduated from the Cincinnati School of Music and attended Indiana Univeristy summer school where he continued his study in the field of music. He has not yet announced the selections for his performance.

The Dublin Players will present "Pygmalion," a British comedy by George Bernard Shaw on Wednesday, March 9. The play concerns itself with a British gentleman who attempts to prove that he can transform a girl of the streets into a lady of society.

On Tuesday, April 26, the Artist Series will present McCurdy and Greenwood, artist of the harp and organ. This program will conclude the series.

Mata and Hari, who will appear in the second Artists Series Program in January, are shown in one of their dance poses.

Junior Class Elects Chairman for Dance

Plans have begun for the annual dance of the Junior Class which will be held on February 12.

General chairman for the dance is Margaret Dryden. Committees will be headed by Fannie Scott, decorations; Ellen Thomas, music; Phyllis Nurney, tickets; and Ann Jones, publicity.

LC Magazine Holds Contest

Georgia Jackson, member of the Colonnade staff, announced yesterday during assembly that the Colonnade will hold its annual short story contest which is open to all students of Longwood.

The stories entered may be humorous or serious in nature, and a student may enter as many stories as she wishes. Underclassmen are particularly urged to compete in this contest.

Three prizes will be offered. The student winning first place will receive ten dollars; second place, five dollars; and third place, three dollars.

All stories must be turned in to Barbara Southern, Jean Saunders or Georgia Jackson by February 8.

Longwood Issues Invitations To Enjoy Conveniences

By MARGARET MILLER

Located near our campus is Longwood Estate where the girls as well as the townsfolk and out-of-town guests may go for entertainment, good meals, and relaxation! Longwood House, as it is widely known, is a large white home surrounded by boxwood, maple and holly trees, and the rolling green of the golf course.

Longwood Dell, surrounded by the well-kept grounds of the estate, is the scene of the annual May Day pageant. A cabin in the woods behind the dell is available for organized cabin parties. Scenic paths wind through the estate and outdoor fire places make picnics possible.

Inside the house, Miss Grace Moran, hostess at the Estate, offers hospitality to all visitors. Miss Moran was a member of the Longwood faculty until 1950. After retiring from her position as geography professor here, she took over duties as hostess at the Longwood House. This marks her fifth year of service to those who patronize the Estate.

Delicious meals are available by advance arrangement and the menu contains a choice variety of foods. Reasonable prices for these meals start at $1.00 to $1.75 for luncheons; $1.50 to $2.00 for dinners and $2.50 for steak dinners. A three-course Sunday dinner is priced at $1.75 and a waffle supper which is served each Sunday evening is $1.00. Teas and dessert bridge parties have slightly lower rates and banquets range from $1.75 to $2.50 per plate.

Lighter orders are handled without advance notice. It is traditional for Longwood girls to try the famous cinnamon buns.

Attractively furnished parlors in a homey atmosphere can be used for dating. A grand piano and a record player provide music for listening. Miss Moran is always more than glad to conduct a tour through the house. A small gift shop which affords interesting things such as chinaware, stationery, jams, jellies, pickles, bridge tallies, cards and other "nick nacks" is located in the house.

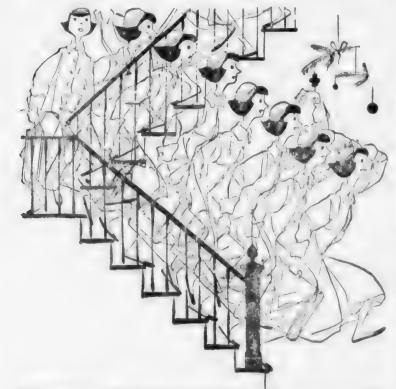
A new attraction on the Estate, is a stable of riding horses.

Longwood Estate which now consists of 103 acres, has an interesting historical background. A plaque which has been placed in the hallway reads:

LONGWOOD

Property acquired 1765 by Peter Johnston. Home of Peter Johnston, Jr., Lieutenant in Lee's Legion and judge of Circuit of Virginia. Birthplace of General Joseph E. Johnston. Purchased 1811 by Abraham B. Venable, U. S. Senator, organized and first president of first bank of Virginia. Given by Samuel Woodson Venable in 1848 to Nathaniel V. Venable, officer of the War of 1812. The present house erected by him 1815. Birth place of Lieutenant Colonel Charles Scott Venable, C. S. A. 1829 - 1900. Member of General R. E. Lee's staff; professor of Mathematics and chairman of faculty, University of Virginia; author."

Credit is due the late Mrs. J. L. Jarman, wife of the late president of the college, for inspiring the idea of Longwood House as a haven for the school girls. She was responsible for its restoration and availability for those who wish to use it for recreational purposes.



The welcome mat is always there, and the spacious grounds lend an invitation to those who enjoy the available sports. Once one has visited the Estate and enjoyed the conveniences it offers, plans to re-visit with friends will no doubt follow.

Pan-Hel Association To Aid Entertainers

Longwood's Pan Hellenic Association voted last week to accept a suggestion concerning the greeting and entertaining of Artists Series performers at the college. This plan was approved by the eight national sororities on campus.

The Association's members will correspond with each artist preceding their visit to Longwood to make plans for meeting them upon their arrival in Farmville. It will be the representative Greek association's responsibility to assist the performers with their rehearsal plans as to time and place for the practices.

The Pan-Hellenic members which include a representative from each sorority, an alternate representative, and each sorority's president, will also entertain the artists with an informal coffee hour either preceding or following the programs.

Sophs To Give Fantastic Fun For Storyland

Students To Register For Spring Semester Tomorrow Afternoon

Longwood To Offer Additional Classes

Registration for the second semester of the current session will be held in the Biology Department of Stevens Hall tomorrow, January 13, beginning at 1 p. m.

Juniors and seniors will make out schedules at 1 p. m. Freshmen and sophomores will begin scheduling classes at 2:30 p. m. There will be no classes in session during the afternoon.

Students are to schedule no more than 17 semester hours of work. If they wish to take additional hours they should secure an application from Mrs. Mary Watkins, Executive Secretary. This form must be filled out and presented at the "Final Approval" table along with schedules. Additional hours may only be added to schedules in this way.

It is suggested that students confer with their department heads in regard to schedules prior to registration.

Schedule cards will be available in Stevens Hall. Students should fill in the top card on the schedule and obtain approval from the head of the department in their major subject. He will sign his name to this card for approval. Each faculty member in whose class the student plans to enroll must initial this schedule.

Students should fill out the other four cards attached to the strip exactly like the first card. This strip should be turned in at the "Final Approval" table. Students will receive a copy of the schedule at a later date.

Schedules should be approved by: Dr. J. P. Wynne, Curriculum I; heads of the majored departments in Curricula II, III, VIII, and IX; Mrs. Nell Griffin, Curriculum IV; Dr. Merle Landrum, Curricula V and V-A; Dr. John Molnar, Curricula VI and VII; and Dr. C. F. Lane, Curricula VII-A and IX-A.

A new sociology course, sociology 335, will be offered in the spring semester. This course will deal with problems, treatment, and prevention of juvenile delinquency.

Other courses which have been added to the spring schedule are Biology 455, a field biology; French 422, Contemporary French Literature; Government 442, American State and Local Government; and History 338, Southern History. Also added to the schedule are Home Economics 300, a survey course in foods; Physical Education 211, Intermediate Swimming; and Phychology 353, Mental Hygiene.

Groups Offer Study Grants

Opportunities for foreign study in fifteen countries are listed in Foreign Study Grants, 1955-56, pamphlet published today by the Institute of International Education, 1 East 67th Street, New York City.

Study awards at the University of Ceylon, the University of Teheran in Iran, and the Free University of Berlin are described, as well as other awards administered by the Institute. Universities, private groups, and governments in Europe, Asia, and Latin America have offered fellowships to American students for the 1955-56 academic year. More detailed information on these grants is available from the offices of the Institute.

Earliest deadlines for applications are January 15 for the two awards at the University of Ceylon and January 22 for advanced study in Brazil. Closing dates of other competitions are in February, March, April, and May.

General eligibility requirements for the fellowships and scholarships, designed mainly for graduate students, are: U. S. citizenship, proof of good academic record, and capacity for independent study; good character, personality, and adaptability; and good health. Ability to read, write, and speak the language of the country of study is a requirement for most competitions.

A private donor will give five grants for study in Spain. Other countries in which awards are available are Austria, Brazil, Ceylon, Cuba, Denmark, Great Britain, France, Germany, Iran, Italy, Mexico, the Netherlands, Sweden, and Switzerland.

Largest number of grants is offered by the French Government. Forty assistantships and thirty fellowships are offered. February 1 is the closing date for these awards. Under the French Government assistantship programs Americans will teach English conversation classes in French secondary schools and teacher training institutions. A few teaching appointments in French universities will be made to applicants with special training in American literature and some experience in college teaching. The French fellowships offers opportunities for study at universities and other state institutions of higher learning.

Among the specialized grants are four labor scholarships given

Barter Playhouse To Give 'Macbeth' Monday, Jan. 31

Monday, January 31 at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall the Barter Theater from Abingdon, will present William Shakespeare's famous tragedy "Macbeth." Sponsored by the Longwood Players, the play will bring to the campus the dark world of blasted heaths, ill-smelling mists and blood found in this Shakespearean drama.

When it comes to Shakespeare, Owen Phillip's, Barter's director-actor, has been acclaimed as a genius in the talent of making audiences forget the fact that Mr. Shakespeare was ever a schoolroom assignment.

This 1955 "Macbeth" moves with precision through its two acts and 14 scenes in reacting its saga of violence, treachery, and revenge. The story of the murderous Macbeth, his sinister wife and their fairful misdeeds is retold by Paul Lukather and Jenny Davis and a capable cast of supporting players.

Mr. Lukather's version of the title role is that of a young general lit with evil and merciless ambition and his performance is intense and alive in accentuating the maniacal savagery of his character.

Miss Davis does an equally fine job in depicting the Lady Macbeth. Her emotional qualities are especially effective in the episodes prior to and following the cruel murder of Duncan and also in the sleep-walking scene.

Critics have reviewed this Barter production of "Macbeth" as "a work of art, something to see and to hear, an absolute must for all playgoers."

Southern Announces Short Story Deadline

Barbara Southern, editor of the Colonnade has announced that February 8 will be final deadline for all entries in the annual short story contest.

The prizes will total $20 in value. First place winner will receive ten dollars; second place, seven dollars; and third prize, three dollars.

The prize winning story will be published in the March issue of the Colonnade.

The judges for the contest will be Miss A. I. Armstrong, assistant librarian; Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., professor of English, and Mrs. Mildred Davis, assistant professor of English.

Students participating in the contest may use any topic of their choice. Entries are to be judged on originality and plot development.

If an insufficient number of short stories are submitted, the Colonnade reserves the right to withhold the prizes.

Carolyn Clark as the fairy mother in the "Journey of Return" wields the wand over Nancy Lenz, who plays Christopher Robin in production.

L C Article Gets Unexpected Results; Contributions Include Portrait, Urn

The far-reaching effects of a magazine article are something of which few of us are fully aware.

"Santa Claus Comes to Longwood" is an article by Mrs. Meade L. Shackelford which recently appeared in the Bulletin of Longwood College Alumnae News and which has brought about amazing results from its readers. The article per ains to the various gifts and bequests which are frequently made to the college by friends and alumnae.

Mrs. Shackelford mentions many of the more outstanding gifts, among them a letter collection of the family of Peter Johnston, founder of Longwood Estate. Mr. J. Ambler Johnston, an architect of Richmond, and a descendant of the latter, was among the many readers who were inspired to contribute something to the college. He presented to the school a portrait of the beautiful Martha, niece of Peter Johnston. She lived from 1800 to 1826. The portrait is accompanied by a very carefully worked out family tree of the entire Johnston family.

Still another gift from the contemporary, Mr. Johnston, is a brass urn which is to grace Longwood Estate with its antique beauty. The urn was the personal property of General Joseph E. Johns on of Civil War fame, and has been referred to in the Johnston family as "Uncle Joe's Ashtray."

According to the article, other outstanding gifts and contributions include "an agriculture collection of rocks, minerals and plants, and a box of letters including some from famous Confederate military figures". Many of the letters, besides being of great interest and of notable historical value are quite informative of the conditions of the time during which they were written. [illegible] has profited greatly from the valuable collections of books which friends and alumnae have so generously contributed. Various organizations on campus [illegible] frequently as donors of much needed items.

Among the paintings which Longwood possesses, is an oil pain ing entitled "Waterlilies", by Elizabeth Tuble Holsman. It was a gift of the late Mrs. William Arthur Maddox of Rockford, Ill. Mrs. Maddox also donated the six plaster reproductions of Luca Della Robbia's "Singing Gallery" in Jarman Hall, and the Chinese prayer rug which hangs in the corridor west of the Rotunda.

Dr. Lankford Visits Farmville Ele. School

Dr. Francis G. Lankford, professor of education at the University of Virginia and president-elect of Longwood College, visited the Farmville Training School last Friday to conduct an experiment in the teaching of mathematics on the elementary level.

Dr. Lankford carried out this experiment by teaching two classes in mathematics—one class under standard procedures and the other under special methods.

Prince Edward County was chosen as one of the ten counties for the conduction of this experiment by Dr. Lankford..

Christopher Robin Sees You Friday

By JAN KUYK and JEAN SAUNDERS

It is not at all an unusual sight to see Robin Hood brushing his teeth on second floor Tabb, Dopey heading for the gym in phys. ed. attire, or Alice in Wonderland bopping to "Work with Me, Annie." All is fair in love, war, and Sophomore Production!

"Journey of Return" will be held on Friday, January 14 at 8 p. m. Admission will be 35 cents for everyone.

Two Days

Just two more days of hair tearing and wishing like mad that we were juniors before the curtain goes up on the first act. In twenty-five words or a little more —the theme of Production this year is an attempt to show what some adults lose when they become adults—the child's unquestioning faith in his own world—a world made so much more complete by the presence of Cinderellas, Pinocchios, Snow Whites, and Winnie the Poohs!

Taking the audience's hand, Christopher Robin, played by Nancy Lenz, leads them on their journey into the realm of storyland. "There is a cast of thousands in this colorful extravaganza," however there are no actual leading roles. Individual songs and dances will be varied and great emphasis is being placed on a chorus which will serve as the narrator and handle most of the dialogue. The chorus dialogue is used with the purpose of leaving an impression on the audience.

Stage Manager

Barbara Burnside is serving as stage manager for production, while Mary Mayo and Sara Lou Wendenburg are handling costumes. Bell Fitzgerald and Flo Soghoian are working on backdrops; Carolyn Stoneman is supervising the sale of tickets and the distribution of programs; Carolyn Clark is directing the chorus; and Fran Bailey and her committee arranged the music. Co-chairmen of Production are Patt Parker and Gale Branch.

Costumes for the production have been taken directly from story books so that there will be no audience confusion in identifying characters.

"And that," said Pooh, "is that!"

Rotunda Announces New Staff Positions

The completed staff of the Rotunda has recently been announced according to Shirley Ward, editor of the publication.

Freshmen Betty Cantrell, Ella Carter, Linda Garrison and Cora Alice Sommerville, and Doris Thompson, junior transfer, are new members of the news staff. Previous members also serving on the staff are Jane Beach, Pat Cantrell Addy Donaldson, and Sally Ceell.

Linda Garrison is a new member to the layout staff serving with Margaret Miller and Carolyn Stanley who have served previously.

On the staff of typists again this year are Addy Donaldson, Thelma Emory Reeder, Hall Betty Jean Jenkins, Loretta Kesterson and Barbara Whitehead. Linda Garrison is a new member of this staff.

The circulation staff is composed of entirely new members. The freshmen who compose this staff are Ann Brierley, Bobby Carter, Betsy Mastellon, Frances Rosenkrans, and Kit Warren.

Marjorie Lucas who is a freshman has been made an assistant advertising manager.

Dr. Montague's Notions Fascinate Faculty, Students

By DOT ARMSTRONG and MARGARET ANN FELTON

"The purpose of women," proclaimed Dr. Ashley Montague, noted lecturer and author, "is to civilize men."

This was only one of the intriguing statements made by Dr. Montague, the guest of honor at a reception held by Beorc Eh Thorn, honorary English society, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Simonini, Jr., Monday night. Dr. Simonini heads Longwood's English department.

Besides "The Natural Superiority of Women" on which he spoke Tuesday during assembly, Dr. Montague has writen a number of other books, including "The Nature of Human Development." Although he first intended to be a surgeon one of his instructors interested him in anthropology, which remains his favorite field. He also holds degrees in an amazing number of subjects, including anatomy, pharmacy, surgery, biology, mathematics, languages, psychology, and English. He attended the Universities of Florence, Cambridge, London, and Columbia.

Surrounded by fascinated members of the faculty and of Beorc Eh Thorn, the distinguished, grey-haired Dr. Montague discussed everything from cigarette smoking and cancer to his latest book.

On the subject of women, the author feels that women in America are intellectually on a higher level than men, as well as being far more sensitive and intuitive. He also firmly believes that women can bear physical pain and mental anguish better than men. On the whole, Dr. Montague feels that women are just naturally superior to men in most respects. When asked what his own wife thought of his notions concerning the female of the species, he replied with characteristic British dignity, "She thinks that my ideas are quite sound.

Speaking of marriage, the Englishman had some interesting views on this subject also.

"People seem to be more than they are, " he stated succintly, "but should be more than they seem. Most people look for the wrong thing in marriage. Marriage should be based upon character and natural interest. It should be placed more on an intellectual level."

Dr. Montague's future plans include a trip to England soon, although he states that his work is here in America. He, however, is seriously considering spending the remainder of his life in Italy.

Choose Wisely

Were your new year's resolutions complete? We assume that you joined us in resolving to study harder next year; but, did you resolve what to study?

Since registration for next semester's classes is to be held tomorrow, we thought it might be helpful to consider some registration resolutions.

All of us, except seniors, might look into the advisability of taking as many required subjects as possible, next semester. This is wise for a number of reasons. There is always the possibility of a prolonged graduation because we saved too many required subjects for the senior year and found then that these subjects were all taught at the same hour!

Also the possibility of failing and having to repeat a required class makes it doubly important that a student fulfill early all requirements in a curriculum.

Required courses cover a number of fields. Students may become especially interested in any one of these. If we discover this interest early, we will have time to elect more courses in this field. The early taking of basic required courses may in this respect be helpful in our selection or change of a major.

Also required courses are usually good basic background. Having completed these early in the college career, a student will find electives easier and more meaningful.

There is also the psychological advantage that comes with the peace of mind in getting requirements over with and looking forward to a relaxed and enjoyable schedule the senior year.

Registration resolutions can be made for elected subjects too.

Too many of us schedule only those elected courses in which we know we will do well with little effort. Often we do not consider the subject's usefulness, or the satisfaction of mastering it.

In this evaluation, we overlook courses that might open new horizons of helpful knowlege to us—knowledge which in later years we may regret not having. Then we will be sorry we took "subject 711" just to make an "A" on it.

Contribute Willingly

Once again students are being asked to contribute to the College Chest Fund.

You have seen posters concerning this drive. No doubt you have also heard various comments expressing the hope that each student will contribute at least one dollar to the fund. You may feel that this amount sounds extremely high for just another drive. Some students, moreover, have been stating that they don't even know what a College Chest drive is! Concerning these various points we would like to clear up and explain some of your misjudgments—for it is not just another drive!

First of all, the college chest was originated at Longwood several years ago in an effort to eliminate the many different fund drives on campus. That is to say, the Red Cross Drive was held early in the fall, and students were solicited for that. Then the March of Dimes campaign began. Students were again asked to contribute. Next came the World Student Service Fund (which has recently changed its name to the World University Fund), and so on. Every time a student turned around, some society would have its hand out for money!

The Student Standards Committee and the YWCA then conceived the idea of uniting the drives into one major campaign. This drive was planned to include four major funds—The Red Cross, The March of Dimes, the WSSF and The International Christian University. Students were requested to donate money one time and one time only. The money donated was divided among these four funds. This practice has continued up to the present time.

This year the two college organizations decided to omit the ICU from this drive and add in its place the Cerebral Palsy Fund. The ICU was omitted because it was not vitally connected with students here. On the other hand, the Cerebral Palsy is a fund in which we can see the results of our contribution.

In consideration of the actual drive, it must be repeated that this one time will be the only time money will be collected. For this reason, it is sincerely hoped that you will give generously. Still sounds like too much? Put the matter on a personalized basis! If you, your brother or sister should be stricken with polio, could you or your family afford to pay hospital expenses for iron lungs, physical therapy, nurses, doctors—could you?

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis has made available necessary treatment and equipment to families during such a crises. This service is made possible through the money that people like us donate to the fund.

When a member of the Freshman Commission, Student Standards, or the YWCA comes around to your room next Monday and Tuesday, give as much as possible!

It is hoped that we can better the successful record of donations contributed last year!

SOCIAL NOTES

by MARGARET DRYDEN

Wedding bells blended in with the Christmas bells for quite a few of the Longwood girls over the holidays. And quite a few diamonds and pins were received on campus!

Holiday brides were Charlotte Fitts, now Mrs. John Maragon; Jo Debnam, Mrs. John Miller; Louise Turner, Mrs. Thomas Caldwell; Nan Picinich, Mrs. Pete Jordan; Lou Seibel, Mrs. Kenneth Rader; Betty Barr, Mrs. Bill Gibbs; Shirley Johnson, Mrs. Glenn Bailey; Shirley Fishback, Mrs. James Crosen; Pat Cahill, Mrs. Wesley Diebler; and Robinette Ballard, Mrs. B. J. Gilbreath. Contratulations to all of you!

Several engagements have come about—Shirley Garst to Joe Maupin of Roanoke; Ann Coleman to Don Ross; Shirley Sheppard to Guthrie Goodman; Mary Alice Ellington to Gene Thomas of Richmond; Betty Jane Staples to Sam Glasscock; Peggy Simpson to Ray Kelsey; Gaynelle Edwards to Dean Stearns; Barbara Southern to Richard Meeker; Mary Agnes Patterson to Eddie Knicely of Clifton Forge; Joan Payne to Ray Southern of Pulaski; Betty Jane Griffin to John Holland of Carysbroow; Jean Carole Parker to Edward Harrell of Virginia Tech, and Nell Crocker to Sonny Owen.

Also receiving diamonds were Carolyn Jones from John Copley, of Reedsville, N. C.; Shelva Lee from Paul Cobb of Boykins; Rochelle Person from Bobby Worrell of Newsoms; Emily Fallon from Andrew Selph of William and Mary; Betty Lou Cornick from Robert Smith of Virginia Beach; Patricia Deaner from Frank Clark of Lagley; and Carolyn Lowe from Robert King of Danville.

Those who received pins were Ellen Hamlet, a Kappa Sigma pin from Johnson Willis, of Duke University; Jane Railey, pinned to Malcom Chitty of Duke University; Martha Joyner, a Sigma Chi pin from Clyde Shelton of Hampden-Sydney; Gerry Luck, a Sigma Chi pin from Arthur Koch of Hampden-Sydney; and Betty Frances Scarborough, a Theta Chi pin from Hubert Gentry of Hampden-Sydney.

The University of Virginia opened its doors wide for several of us weekend before last. Those attending parties there were Shirley Alcock, Carolyn Okie, Jane Lohr, Nancy Nelson, Joyce Gillchrist, Sylvia Overton, June Manlove, Betty Jane Staples, and Joyce Quick.

Joan Jones, Harriette Browning, Suzanne Garner, and Sandy Dyer, attended parties at the University of North Carolina this weekend.

The Kappa Sigmas at Hampden-Sydney played host to a fraternity party Saturday night. Those attending from Longwood were Norma Jean Croft, Loretta Brooking, Bettye Maas, Martha Alexander, Jane Carson, Leslie Smith, Anita Heflin, Ann Wayne Fuller, Judith Elliott, Dale Brothers, Betty Jean Jenkins, Gale Branch, Pat Morgan, Flo Pollard, Nancy Richardson, Anne Crain, Georgia Anne Reynolds, Shirley Hauptman, Barbara Parkinson, Kitty Nelson, Gerry Luck, Martha Joyner, Sis Brown, Lucia Hart, Joanne Allen, Betty Jean Sprunhan, Barbara Felthaus, Helen Smith, Nancy Lea Harris, and Joanne Fariess.

So goes another weekend of parties. Your editor hopes you'll go to lots and lots of them during 1955!

Sagacious, Sapient Stanley Catechizes, Analytical Rage

by CAROLYN STANLEY

In our short, inexperienced lives we have already witnessed many phases and ages—the atomic age, the impressionistic age, the surrealism and modernistic phase, the hydrogen craze—and now we are surrounded and bounded by the most collossal of them all—the analytical rage!!

Yes, many years ago there were only a few psychologists that could console those with emotional problems that present themselves—but now we have all become enrolled in the profession as well as the practice!

Example:

Is your roommate in love? Help her decide now whether this thing will last or not. Do your faithful duty and invite all the girls on your hall in (as if they need inviting) and try to decide whether she is wasting these precious years of her life!

She has just returned from a weekend—you gather the crowd in a dingy, smoke filled room—your home and hers!

"Did ya have a good time?" "What did you do?" "Where did you go?" "Did you see anybody?" "What did he act like?" And so on 'til you can get down to business at hand.

Do they have the same interests? That's usually a good pertinent first question—

"Yes," she tenderly replies, "We do."

"Oh, that's really toooo bad."

They like quiet evenings at home, children ("children!!?), a martini before dinner and a good Mickey Spilane novel.

"They are doomed!" the girl down the hall bellows! "They'll never get out and become extreme introverts; the children will be shy and not have any friends in school, they'll drink themselves to a mere existence and wind up beating each other up"!

"Indeed not," replies Patti Paycho in her determined view to the lovelorn—"people who have common interests have a chance to expand until they find new, exciting interests— then they can marry someone else!"

"What about your personalities, dear? usually follows—. Is he gay and carefree? Is he responsible? Do you laugh at the same jokes? Does he think you are a party-pooper if you go home before breakfast? He is! He is! Yes! He does! Oh, honey—you do have a problem!"

"What you need is a quiet, calm, cool and collected banker's son with scads of dough-ray-me!"

"Oh! No! Annie Analyze pops in—"she needs the irresponsible type, the happy-go-lucky Joe to bring her out more, laugh at her and tell her just where to go—to do her shopping!"

"Where does he go to school? What's his major? Fraterntiy? Do his friends like you? Do you like his friends? What's his family like? Any brothers? How old? Are his frat brothers cute?"

Oh!—he's a Chi Phi at Va."

"Now, there's another clue!," replies Susie Swerty and Fannie Ferger in one breath! And your student teaching, trying to bring the younger generation up to be good citizens! Honey, your sense of direction is all off!"

"Well, one more question and then I must go," chimes in Joan. "Does he wear Harris tweeds, charcoal grey suits with argyle socks to match, colored shirts? Clothes make the man, you know!"

"Yes, sometimes," sighs the frustrated girl."

"Then, how many dates have you had with him? When did he first kiss you? First date?"

"First date," she giggles.

The crowd mumbes—

"First date, he must be interested."

"First date, he certainly doesn't respect her!"

"First date, lucky girl!"

"What church does he go to? Can he jitterbug? What are you giving him for Valentines Day? Does he have manners? Has he ever been married before? What's his favorite TV program? Is he smooth? Does he like Longwood?"

"He hates Longwood. Goodnight—."

Far into the night the frail young thing tosses and turns—shall I tell him now or later? Tell him what!!! Ain't none of them know what's deep down in my heart, how I luv him and he luvs me—.

Next time I go away—I'll never come back!!

'55 LC Basketball Team To Meet Roanoke Maroons On February 4

20 Girls Join Squad For 5 Game Session

Twenty girls have been selected to open the 1955 intercollegiate basketball season for Longwood, it was recently announced.

Three girls will be playing with the team for the fourth year. They are Mary Ann Ward and Hilda Hartis, physical education majors, and Virginia Burgess, an elementary major. Helen Waitman and Nell Crocker, also seniors, will be playing for their third years.

Juniors elected to positions on the team are Dale Brothers, Patsy Hamner, Jane Lohr, Ann Synder, and Lou Wilder. Sophomores on the team are Loretta Kuhn, Barbara Ann Scott, and Barbara Whitehead.

New Squad Members

New squad members from the freshman class include Linda Chambers, Jane Carson, Margaret Dowdy, Ann Jeter, Jo Maxey, Nancy Richardson, and Carol Wolfe.

This list is tentative now and will remain so until semester grades are issued.

Opening with an away game on February 4, the team will meet the Roanoke College Maroons on their home court.

A contest with Westhampton College has been scheduled for February 12 in Richmond.

Cagers from Madison, Norfolk Division of W&M, and William and Mary College will travel to Longwood for games on February 19, 25, and March 5, respectively.

The freshmen will probably have some separate games during the season. .

Captains of the team will be chosen during the first week in February.

Last year's season ended with a record of five wins and one loss. The team rallied a 71-49 win over Roanoke, won 52-42 over Madison, topped Bridgewater 58-53, beat Norfolk Division 51-41, tallied up a 54-24 win over William and Mary, and lost 31-37 to Westhampton in the first game of the season.

Three senior members of the varsity basketball squad have an afternoon's workout on court. Mary Ann Ward is attempting a goal while Helen Waitman guards her. Hilda Hartis is offering support in the practice.

Study Grants

by the Transatlantic Foundation for study in Great Britain. Open only to candidates from the labor union movement, three awards are given for Ruskin College, Oxford, and one for Coleg Harlech in Wales.

Woolley Foundation awards will be made to four candidates for the study of art and music in Paris. A limited number of social work fellowships are available to experienced American social workers for work, study and observation in France..

Summer school opportunities include eight awards for the University of Vienna Summer School and several partial grants toward tuition and maintenance at the English and Scottish summer school courses at the Universities of Oxford, Edinburgh, London, and Birmingham. The Birmingham course on Shakespeare and Elizabethan drama is held at Stratford-on-Avon.

In addition to a listing of the available awards the Institute pamphlet suggests fields of study in the countries where awards are offered. Suggested fields are languages and cultures, fine and applied arts, sciences, government and history, social sciences, and philosophy and theology.

The Institute of International Education administer exchange programs or public and private agencies in the U. S. and abroad. Each year approximately 4,000 persons from 80 countries study or train in a country other than their own under its auspices.

A Year In Retrospect

(Editor's Note: The following is an excerpt from the January 7, 1955 issue of the Hampden-Sydney Tiger.)

Nineteen hundred and fifty-four was the year that added many words to our vocabulary and many personalities to our acquaintances.

As usual, it was a year of momentous international crises and tribulations. But last week we were assured by John Foster Dulles that we were closer to peace than in years. Dulles was named "Times Magazine" Man of the Year," and rightly so, for it was due to his "get tougher" policies in Europe and Asia that the world now seems somewhat more secure.

Along with our Secretary of State, the name of the new French Premier became prominent in our headlines. Mendes-France proved to be the first French leader to move parliament to forward any drastic changes.

Although the year ended with the world in somewhat less turmoil and the outlook for peace optimistic, eleven U. S. airmen didn't make it home for Christmas. Only time will tell what the Peiking Regime expects to do with our "spies in uniform."

Emilie Dionne died in August in Canada; Britain's Queen Mother charmed Americans with her graciousness and informality; Dr. J. E. Salk gave us new hope into the mysteries of polio; Oppenheimer was given an appreciative slap in the face; Andre Vishinsky passed away but with few few mourners; part of Niagara Falls went down the St. Lawrence; and Averell Harriman finally got a job.

The big news in the Old Dominion proved to be the Supreme Court decision last spring and the varied repercussions. Following a southern governor's convention in Richmond, Virginia announced it would study the new situation and meet it as intelligently and practically as possible, which was more than could be said for several other Southern states represented.

A holocaust named Hazel tore through Virginia between Richmond and Lynchburg in October causing havoc and not stopping until it had wrecked a billion dollars worth of U. S. property

In the entertainment world, Peter Pan opened in New York with delightful Mary Martin taking us back to James Barrie's Never-never Land. The cinema industry overdid itself with few techniques but came up with a minimum of good movies; George Gobel stole our hearts on Saturday night; and Joe DiMaggio won national headlines although retired from baseball.

As for Hollywood and the coming awards for the year's efforts, two flicks, "On the Waterfront" and, "The Country Girl," will undoubtedly take most of the Oscars. Regardless of who gets the Oscars, Mr. Kazan's Terry Malloy will be remembered long after 1954.

In sports, Roger Bannister gets top mention for twice breaking the four minute mile barrier. Bannister, a medical student, introduced a new golden era on the cinders.

The Yankee-less series left us talking about Willie Mays, Leo Durocher and the Giants. After the series we rooted for Ohio State, Navy and VPI. College basketball will be dominated by La Salle, Duquesne and of course, Kentucky. Tom Gola looks like the cager of the year.

The world changed momentously in 1954 and many new personalities reached 30 point type —but we predict that Gina Lollobrigida will be remembered the most in 1955.

2 Groups Sponsor Chest Fund Drive

The Y. W. C. A. and Student Standards Committee are sponsoring again this year the College Chest Fund which was originated at Longwood several years ago in an effort to unify the many different fund drives on campus.

This drive is composed of four major funds—the Red Cross, the March of Dimes, the World University Service, and dthe Cerebral Palsy Fund.. The latter replaces the International Christian University Fund which was formerly included in the Chest.

Members of the Freshman Commission, Y. W. C. A., and Student Standards Committee will be in the various buildings on January 17 and 18 to collect student contributions. The two sponsoring organizations are asking that each student give a dollar or as much as possible, in the consideration that this will be the only time money will be collected. Donations will be divided equally among the four services.

College Plans Agenda For School Visitors

High school students will visit the Longwod campus this weekend as prospective members of next fall's freshman class.

Thomas Jefferson, Hermitage, Woodrow Wilson, Randolph-Henry, Giles County, Fairfax, Albemarle County, Thomas Dale, Jefferson, William Campbell, E. C. Glass, Marshall, George Wythe, Broadway, Virginia Beach, Buckingham Central, Clifton Forge, Lexington and Deep Creek schools have been invited.

Students arriving on Friday will attend the annual Sophomore Production at 8 p. m. in Jarman Hall.

A tour of the campus followed by a drive to Longwood Estate for buns and cokes are on the Saturday agenda for the guests.

An orientation class has planned to entertain the visitors at a picnic dinner to be served in the Main Recreation Hall at 6 p. m. In the evening they will attend the juke box dance.

Services in the local Farmville churches will close the guests' weekend activities.

Lord's Acre Ended Sunday on The Hill

The Lord's Acre and Lord's Talent program at Hampden-Sydney's College Church had its wind-up and dedication this Sunday, January 9, at the 11 a. m. service, according to the Rev. W. B. Rogers, pastor.

It was at this service that results of the past year's program were given. Members of College Church undertook the plan to change the church basement into Sunday School rooms.

Dr. J. C. Robert, Southern Educator Will Succeed Dr. Edgar G. Gammon As Hampden-Sydney's 27th President

Versatile Experience Heads Qualifications

Dr. Joseph Clarke Robert has been named twenty-seventh president of Hampden-Sydney College, succeeding Dr. Edgar G. Gammon.

Dr. Gammon, 70, will retire at the end of the current academic year after 16 years as president of the college. The new president's appointment was announced [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Richmond, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Hampden-Sydney.

Dr. Robert, 48 year old historian, is now president of Coker College, Hartsville, S. C. He has held this position since August of 1947. He said that he has "no trepidations" to begin with him to his new post but that he regards the presidency of Hampden-Sydney as an "incredible opportunity and amazing challenge."

He is a native of State College, Miss., and comes from a long line of [illegible] educators. In 1927 he graduated magna cum laude with an AB degree from Furman University, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and ODK honorary fraternities and Sigma Chi social fraternity. He received his Masters Degree and Ph. D. from Duke University. He was also a Wautauga Fellow at Harward.

During his career as an educator, Dr. Robert has taught history at the University of Richmond, the University of Kentucky, and Ohio State University. He was a member of the faculty of Duke University for 14 years. He was assistant professor of history, associate professor of history, professor of history, and associate dean of the graduate school.

Books written by the president-elect include "The Tobacco Kingdom," "The Road from Monticello," and "The Story of Tobacco in America."

Dr. Robert's wife, Mrs. Evelyn Mercer Bristow Robert, is a native of Richmond and graduated from Westhampton College and Cornell University. They have two children, Frank Chambers, a student at Davidson College, and Carol Mercer.

Dr. Robert currently serves as a member of the board of elders of the Presbyterian Church at Hartsville.

Dr J. C. Robert, newly appointed president of Hampden-Sydney College, will assume duties next fall.

In its announcement, the board through Dr. Johns, paid high tribute to Dr. Gammon and his 16 year administration. Under Dr. Gammon the College's endowment has been increased four times to about $1,800,000; the school has gained accredation from the Association of American Universities; a Phi Beta Kappa chapter has been organized; and many improvements have been made in the physical plant.

A new gymnasium, and post office were constructed, Venable and Cushing Halls along with Graham Hall, which now houses the infirmary and dormitories, were renovated

Dr. Gammon is a graduate of Hampden-Sydney College and Union Theological Seminary. Before his appointment as president in 1939, he was a clergyman for 28 years. Among his many pastorates throughout the South was College Presbyterian Church at Hampden-Sydney.

Students Choose Committee Heads

Nine students have been selcted by the student body to fill positions of committee chairmen of the 1955 May Day celebration according to Mary Ann Ward, general chairman.

The transportation committee will be headed by Barbara Whitehead; the music committee by Karen Spencer; props by Lou Wilder; and programs by Eloise Macon.

Jane Blake will be in charge of May Day dance, and Nancy Tanley Masters has been elected to direct the program's choreography. Loretta Brooking is responsible for costumes and Patsy Abernathy for the court. Anne Thaxton will head publicity.

Meeker To Be Ph. D.

Mr. Richard K. Meeker, assistant professor of English, will receive a Ph. D. from the University of Pennsylvania on February 12.

"Experiments in Point of View: Animal, Vegetable and Mineral Narrators in The Eighteenth Century Novel" was the title of Mr. Meeker's recently accepted dissertation on which he has been working for the past three years.

After graduating from Lafayette College in Eatson, Pa., Mr. Meeker received his Master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania, and then began work on his doctorate.

Willie or Chris Wrote All This

by PHOEBE WARNER

There was once a lad named Will,
Who as a youth was rather nil
But at an older age we find
He had a rather clever mind.
He wrote concerning tragedy.
Of murders, ghosts, and knavery.
We seem to hear of Hamlet most
And poor Ophelia, who gave up the ghost.
And then we come to a later addition
Of bloody Macbeth and the apparition.
And yet, how could poor Willie know
That Julius Caesar was stabbed by Brando.
He also created King Richard the III
Who in a mirror looked rather absurd.
There is yet a tale of woe
Of this dear Juliet and Romeo.
They died and so became very free
From the threat of their family.
There was a shrew no men could tame
Even HS couldn't doubt this claim
Puck's love potion after a fashion
Put Titania into a somewhat passion.
Then the poor, poor lass was led
To fall in love with jackass head
In "The Comedy of Errors" we see
The dangers of like identity.
Touchstone was known as quite a clown.
A man of fame and much renown.
Today we find that Gobel's the word
With all his talk of "Dirty Bird"
Have you heard of shy Othello
Who became such a jealous fellow
First he smothered his loving wife
Then he turned and took his life.
So to you, our dear Shakespeare
Forever praises will you hear—
And never will I believe it so
That credit should go to Chris Marlowe.

Richmond Minister To Head Religious Emphasis Program

'Y' Announces Theme Of Daily Discussions

The Reverend W. Holt Souder, Assistant Rector of St. Paul's Church in Richmond, will be the speaker for Longwood's annual Religious Emphasis Week which will begin February 6, and continue through February 10.

The Y. W. C. A. theme for the year, "Strength Through Faith" will center the talks that Reverend Mr. Souder will give each evening Sunday through Wednesday at 8 p. m. and Tuesday afternoon in assembly.

Cabinet to Meet

Discussion groups will be open each afternoon of the week for the students, and a formal reception will be held Monday night. The Y. W. C. A. cabinet and their advisors will meet with the Rev. Mr. Souder Wednesday at their regular meeting time to discuss plans and evaluate the program for the coming year.

The Reverend Mr. Souder has recently accepted a call to become rector of Christ Episcopal Church in Winchester. He came to St. Paul's from the rectorate of Varina Parish on February, 1953, where he was rector for two and one-half years.

School In Virginia

A native of Charlottesville, Reverend Souder studied at Hampden-Sidney College, the University of Virginia, and graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria in 1950.

In 1947, he married the former Jessie Cook of Richmond and they have three children.

Joan DeAlba, vice-president of the "Y", is in charge of Religious Emphasis and has been making plans with Reverend Souder in order to make this a successful week.

Carolyn Stanley, chairman of publicity for the Y. W. C. A., urges the student body to give their full support to this program.

The Golden Coach Plays in Farmville

by HELEN WARRINER

"The Golden Coach" is scheduled to be presented tonight for a one-night run at the State Theatre as the second perfomance of the Better Films Series.

The movie, released in 1954, is directed by Jean Renoir who also directed "The River," which was viewed last November as the first of the series. "The Golden Coach" is an international movie in that its leading actress is Italian, the story ,Spanish, its director French, and its film location in Italy.

Anna Magnani, one of the world's leading actresses, plays the leading role, Camilla. The plot is a Renaissance love story. Camilla falls in love with three men: a Castillian nobleman, a South American bullfighter, and a Spanish viceroy. The viceroy shows his love by giving her his golden coach, but his council does not approve this and he has to ask her to return it. Camilla refuses to give it back, and she escapes in the coach. The other two lovers then re-enter the scene and the story reaches its climax.

This film has received high praise from U. S. critics and is based on the novel "The Bridges of San Luis Rey."

Music by Vivaldi and striking color photography are skillfully combined to set and maintain the mood of the picture.

The next film, "Tales of Hoffman," is scheduled for Feb. 19. It is produced by the same company that had such success with "Red Shoes" in which there are many stars from Sadler Wells Ballet Company.

Mrs. Margaret Cox, who is in a very familiar setting to students, is an important person in the post office at Longwood.

Dance Group To Go To WC For Festival

by MRS. EMILY K. LANDRUM

Members of Orchesis, the Modern Dance Club, will attend the Dance Section of the Fine Arts Festival at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, February 18 and 19.

Jose Limon and his company will be guest artists this year. Pauline Koner will evaluate the student choreography on Friday evening. Mr. Limon will teach a master class on Saturday afternoon to which only advanced students of dance will be permitted to attend. A concert by the Limon Company will conclude the Dance Festival on Saturday evening.

As yet, Longwood's group work is in the formative stage because of accompaniment complications this semester. The group work will consist of 5 to 9 girls in a psychological study based on themes of restlessness, which could stem from the roaring Twenties, or apply to our own contemporary hurley-burley. Man's aimless gyrations and distortions in his eternal and ephemeral search which lead him into group conformity and either unity or disintegration, will form the musical basis for the three-part work.

Ten students are trying for places in the group. These are Mary Cowles, Joan DeAlba, Nancy McLawhorn, Patti Parker, Florence Sogholan, Patsy Abernathy, Barbara Benedict, Loretta Kesterson, Evelyn Rowe and Sara Lou Wendenburg. One or two students from the Dance Fundamentals Class will be invited to join the group.

Longwood College placed last year with a theme and variation study. Placing will be more difficult this year since Mr. Limon and Miss Koner are outstanding exponents of the dance on the concert stage. Also they are evaluators who have studied for years with Doris Humphrey the highest ranking teacher of composition in this country. Mr. Limon is considered the greater of the second generation modern dancers of our day and time. He was a member of the Humphrey-Weidman Company until Miss Humphrey had to forego dancing and turn to teaching. Mr. Limon and Miss Koner show the influence of this great master teacher-choreographer.

Barter Theater To Give Immortal Bard's Play January 31 At 8 p.m.

A scene from "Macbeth" as portrayed by cast members of the Barter Theatre will appear in Shakespearian tragedy on Monday night, January 31.

Longwood Players To Sponsor Group

William Shakespeare's "Macbeth" will be presented by Robert Porterfield and his Barter Theater Players on January 31 in Jarman Hall at 8 p. m.

Mr. Porterfield has explained that Barter troupes Shakespeare because "it lends to colorful production. We have learned over a period of 22 years that the Bard's plays must be theatrically, imaginatively, and yet economically produced."

The company's formula for presenting Shakespeare is to have the script typed out as prose instead of poetry. They feel that this procedure tends to kill the instinct for cadence and make the meaning more coherent to the actors and thus to the audience.

"Another Barter practice for staging Shakespeare," Mr. Porterfield explains, "is to never stop the play with blackouts or lowering of curtains for scene changes. It should continue as a steady flow of dialogue. Scenes change in full view of the audience since a blackout or wait in a scene, to the modern audience, is like a film break in a movie theater."

Must for Playgoers

Sponsored by the Longwood Players, Macbeth has been reviewed by critics as "a work of art," something to see and to hear, an absolute must for all playgoers." The Abingdon troupe is currently on national tour with the eighteenth century tragedy. Owen Phillips, Barter's director-actor, has been acclaimed as a genius in the talent of making audiences forget the fact that Mr. Shakespeare was ever a schoolroom assignment.

Macbeth's ruthless ambition and his eventual downfall involves violence, treachery, and revenge. The misdeeds of this arch villian are familiar to all students of Shakespeare.

The leading roles of the murderous Macbeth, and his sinister wife, will be interpreted by Paul Lukather and Jenny Davis.

Perform Here Often

The Barter Theater Players have appeared here many times previously in such plays as "The Merchant of Venice," "The Curious Savage," "The Virginia," and last year were seen in Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!," a comedy of a young boy and his family at the turn of the century.

Marshall, Kuyk Edit Rotunda

This issue of the Rotunda is a try-out edition for those students wishing to assume the various staff positions for the coming year.

Jackie Marshall and Jan Kuyk served as co-editors for this issue, and Gail Leonard acted as managing editor. Others assuming temporary positions were Margaret Miller, feature editor; Margaret Dryden, news editor, and Betty Jean Jenkins, copy editor.

Shirley Kemp worked as desk editor, while Linda Garrison headed the sports section, and Pat Cantrell compiled social notes for the issue.

President Attends Richmond Meeting

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster and Dr. Francis G. Lankford, president and president-elect of Longwood College, attended a meeting of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce in Richmond, Monday, January 17, to study the final report of the high school situation in Virginia.

In the early 1940's Dr. Lankford made a study on the high school situation in Virginia as to its needs for better institutions, courses of study, consolidations of schools and building needs.

Postmistress Gives Loves-Antiques, Ben; Expresses Desire To Change Postal Scene

by MARGARET MILLER

You don't have to be on the Faculty to answer repetitious questions by Longwood students. Nobody knows this better than Mrs. Margaret Cox, the college postmistress, for she is constantly replying to the eternal queries, "Are you sure I didn't get a letter?" and "Is all the mail up?" Even though she can't guarantee a letter in every box, she does provide a few services other than those required of her. These include money for books, stamps, and even trips to the Snack Bar.

Mrs. Cox is originally from Buckingham Court House where she was the twelfth child in a family of thirteen. Her twin sister, Mrs. Sydney Newman, also resides in Farmville now. While attending S. T. Exam Jitters

In addressing the student body at a recent assembly, Dr. Lancaster advised everyone to avoid the "exam jitters." To those freshmen who have not as yet tasted of exam week at Longwood College, the jitters have no advantage whatsoever. Exams are as easily passed as not, according to the time spent learning, not cramming. To cram knowledge is to throw off the entire mental system, just as to cram food is to throw off the entire digestive system.

Every girl enrolled at Longwood is intelligent to some average degree or she wouldn't be here. Whether or not she has developed her intelligence since enrollment is known only to her, is reasonably sure by her professors, and is soon to be filed by the registrar. Thus, there is the system of examinations to prove beyond a doubt your progression in your chosen field. If more proof is needed to prove that exams aren't just a movement, incognito, for the survival of the fittest, look at the many people before you who have more often than not made the grade in fine form. This is a matter of calm study and review, not a question of to flunk or not to flunk.

The student body as a whole should remember two important considerations during exam week. First is the consideration you owe your neighbor. Study, and when you are ready to take a break, remember to take a quiet one for the sake of the girl next door who is still studying. The second consideration is owed yourself. Take it easy on the health. This is exam week not an endurance test. Set a schedule; study awhile, laugh awhile, eat three meals a day, and go to bed before the moon goes back over the mountains.

Clearing House

The Student Standards Committee is an organization composed of girls from each class and considers problems arising in the school. Many students here at Longwood do not understand the actual functions of this group and therefore do not make proper use of it. As stated in the Handbook "Student Standards acts as a clearing house for problems between the student body and the faculty or administration."

These problems do not necessarily mean issues involving the entire student body; a class or a hall may give complaints to one of the representatives to be reported at the monthly meeting. For instance, at the moment the group is attempting to get water fountains for the senior dormitory and the third floor Ruffner. Many problems arise in processing a request of this sort and these must be solved before any steps can be taken.

Recently the light beside Cunningham and the light illuminating the side steps of the library have been installed through the efforts of Student Standards. These are both vast improvements.

Two large issues are being discussed at the present time. The first concerns the request for bag suppers for Sunday nights, and the second the possibility of having cafeteria style breakfasts. Much thought has been given to the question of bag suppers and the group with the help of the administration has come to the conclusion that the idea is impractical. The facts that the suppers would have to be made Sunday morning and the sandwiches would be stale, that there would be no beverage or any hot dish, and that the girls who are away for the weekend would not get a supper are among the objections.

Discussion of the cafeteria style breakfasts has not brought about any definite solution as yet. The suggestion has been to serve breakfast from 7:15 A. M. to 8:45 A. M.

Any questions or problems may be brought to Eloise Macon, Chairman of the Committee, or to one of the class representatives.

Keeping of Values

In past assemblies, Longwood College students have had the opportunity of enjoying programs which have been carefully planned by the assembly committee. Some degree of disrespect to the singing of the Alma Mater, however, has been evident among scattered groups in the auditorium. It is required that the student body attend assemblies, and by giving the necessary interest, attention, and participation in the program, one can gain much satisfaction from the program.

To stand during the singing of the Alma Mater is not only customary but is done so in esteem to the college and the Senior Class. Those who remain seated without cause are undervaluing those things for which the students in this school stand. Throughout the program, attention or quiet observance is certainly due the speaker or group in charge.

These are a few objectionable details which can be improved. Should these conduct oversights be continued, the high spirit of Longwood College would be endangered.

It is assumed that all of us are interested in these corrections and will attempt to be more considerate in the future, so as to maintain the high standards which we ourselves have set.

Nature Girls' League Gets Radiator Fatique

by JEANNE SAUNDERS

For the fresh air fiends who thrive on winter walks and windy bike rides, it is quite understandable how this season of the year fosters many troublesome ailments: flu, colds, sore throats, sinus trouble etc.

However, I have discovered—after one and a half years of thorough observation—That the worst malady of all is contracted by the indoor introvert who chooses to spend every spare moment perfecting her bridge hand and analyzing "Mad Comics." I refer, of course, to the sickness commonly known as Radiator Fatigue.

The symptoms of this disease are not scientifically frightening, rather they are simple everyday symptoms that you're liable to find anywhere around the school; droopy shoulders, baggy eyes, foggy glances, and as the disease progresses to the final stages, it can be accurately predicted that the victim's head will more than likely twitch whenever she passes a radiator. (This twitching will probably be accompanied by fist-shaking and a few choice gutteral utterances directed at above-stated heating system.

I confine this infirmity to the normal, average student, who requires the normal, average amount of sleep. Their fast moving associates usually bound out of bed laughing and then race from 7 a. m. till 11 p. m., stopping only for snatches of coffee, morning paper, and Pogo. At the first chime of the day's last bell, these nature girls pass completely out and are oblivious to everything—including their own soul rendering snores. Our average student, however, having spent her day in a more cautious manner, finds it more restful to sing, drift, and float into a more subtle repose.

This is all very well and good until around three o'clock in the a. m., which is approximately when a really good case of Radiator Fatigue begins. As the heater enjoys its first exploding burst, the victim's main thought is AIR RAID. The normal reaction is to dive under the nearest trashcan, however, if your trashcan is anything like my trashcan, this move could be fatal. The radiator continues to pop and scream, and our subject relaxes a wee bit—greatly relieved that it isn't an air raid—and then crawls dazedly back to capture a few more hours of sleep.

Masters have tried it before and failed. You are up, so make the most of it. You might even try writing about it. If you're not too exhausted.

SOCIAL NOTES

by PAT CANTRELL

Many of our girls were at Hampden-Sydney to attend the KA Rose Dance and Combo Party this week end over which Betty Ann Neas of Roanoke reigned as KA Rose. On the dance floor were Shirley Alcock, Judith Alexander, Martha Alexander, Jane Bailey, Betsy Barefoot, Patty Billups, Elizabeth Blackman, Pat Cahill Diebler, Ellen Callaway, Bobbie Carter, Charlotte Chadwick, Carolyn Clark, Dinny Coates, and Betty Cory.

Also at Hampden-Sydney were Annette Crain, Norma Croft, Peggy Dickerson, Dot Douglas, Margaret Dryden, Judy Elliott, Joanne Farless, Marguerite Franklin, Patsy Hamner, Judy Harris, Ann Hart, Lucia Hart, Shirley Hauptman, Carol Hepler, Betty Jean Jenkins, Nancy Lea Harris, Ann Jeter, Martha Joyner and Jane Karicofe.

Bettye Maas, Violet Marshall, Gerry Luck, Julie Moncure, Caroline Oakey, Sally O'Malley, Jean Parrott, Mary Beth Picinich, Nancy Richardson, Betty Pat Rogers, Bobby Jo Rogers, Sue Rolston, Arlern Rose, and Rheta Russell were present. Also from LC were Sue Scarborough, Jeanette Stinson, Sue Upson, Jo Ann Wilson, Jean Windley, Mary Ann Wright, Carole Wyman and Anita Heflin. Dot Douglas and Mary Ann Wright were at the KA House for the afternoon party.

Joan Jones has received a Sigma Nu pin from Bob Loy of N. C. State. She was also named sponsor of Sigma Nu for 1955. Congratulations, Joan!

A couple of engagements have come about since Christmas. Ann Carter Wendenburg received a diamond from Hayden Silver, Jr., V. P. I. graduate, and plans to be married March 19. Lee Hughes is engaged to Glenn Boyd of Warwick.

We also have one lucky girl who got married. Phobe King was married to Lt. J. G. Francis K. Aldred at Pt. Pleasants, W. Va.

So goes the news for another week. Good luck on exams, everybody!

Gym Classes Offer Lively Folk Dancing

Frosh Now Think Jitterbug Simple

by LINDA GARRISON

"May I have this dance?"

"Certainly."

"Do you Rufty Tufty?"

"No, but my fox trot's pretty good."

"How about Greensleeves?"

"Who's got gleen sleeves?"

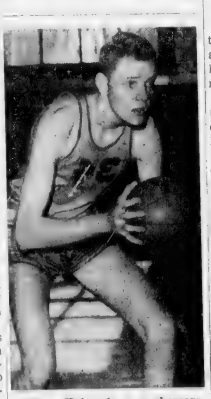
"Well, maybe we'd better sit this one out."

Feeling highly embarrassed, I slumped down in a chair near the gym door. I really must be uneducated, I thought, as class began. What was "Rufty Tufty," and "Greensleeves" and what did they have to do with this freshman gym class?

The class assembled into groups of fours, two couples facing each other. As the music from the piano begin, the couples went into action with a series of turns, skipping up to meet each other. This mysterious dance was the "Rufty Tufty."

As the piano burst forth with a different tune the groups of four joined to [illegible] of eight and then proceeded to do a dance requiring all of my powers of imagination to understand. These freshmen were really on the ball.

Freshmen Perform



While I was sitting there, I watched the vivacious freshmen perform a series of such dances, with names like "The Old Rustic," "Barn Dance for Three," "Highland Schottische" and "Half Moon." The "Highland Schottische" is really a thing of wonder as a dancer must concentrate on kicking her leg to the right place, jumping on her other leg in time to the music balancing one arm over her head and keeping the other arm firmly on her waist. And I thought the jitterbug was complicated! If we had to perform a series of dances at our American parties such as the British folk dancers perform at theirs, I'm sure parties would go out of style in favor of some less strenuous form of recreation.

Social Dancing Included

I learned later that these folk dances weren't the only types of dancing being done in the freshman gym classes. Some of the classes offer instruction in social dancing. Some freshmen have been taught the fox trot, the waltz, and the jitterbug. Also they had previously learned the basic fundamentals of modern dance.

A look into the future reveals some instruction for freshmen in the square dance next semester.

There's no doubt that in their physical education classes the freshmen are receiving a varied and useful program of dancing in this country and those around us. An understanding of the fundamentals of folk, social, and modern dance should foster a broader appreciation for this universal pastime and art.

Russ Holcomb, a sophomore at Hampden-Sydney, is one of the Tiger's key men in the basketball line-up for the season.

Orchesis Sponsors Dance News Board

Orchesis is sponsoring the bulletin board located on the hall the leads to the college post office.

On this board are posted notices of coming dance events in Richmond, of news and views of events in New York, of ballet, tap, and modern dance. Orchesis also publicizes reviews of movies that are acclaimed for their dance value.

Patti Parker, a sophomore orchesis member, is in charge of the bulletin board for the year.

Frosh Reveal Theme For Birthday Dinner

A Valentine theme will be used by the freshman class for the February birthday dinner. The date is February 8.

Anne DeAlba will serve as program chairman and Sarah Gayheart, decoration chairman for the dinner.

Longwood Librarians Attend Conferences

Miss Irving Armstrong, assistant librarian and member of the Service Department, spent January 13 and 14 in Richmond, attending a librarian's meeting. She worked on the newly organized state committee, which works with the Division of School Libraries and Textbooks. This committee chooses books on the high school level for libraries.

Dr. Beverly Ruffin, head librarian, attended the Activities Committee of Virginia Library Association Saturday, January 15, in Richmond. .

The current exhibits in the library, from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, consists of famous paintings of the Seventeenth Eighteenth, Nineteenth, and some of the Twentieth centuries. A few examples are "Mary and Christ Child," Durer; "Flight Into Egypt," Rijn; "The Bridge," Benson; and "Portrait of a Cardinal," Champaigne.

Sport Slants

BY LARRY HOOVER

For the next two weeks the Death Valley Cagers will be taking the customary lay-off for mid-semester exams. Having just completed a full week of Mason-Dixon activity, the Tigers have now passed the half-way mark in their 25 game schedule. They currently hold a 7-7 record.

Last week's activity found the Bengals winning one and losing two. The Mt. Saint Mary Mounties from Emmetsburg, Maryland, came from behind to edge the Tigers 69-60 on Monday, Jan. 10. The H-S five played well behind the sharp-shooting of John Richards, who had 20 points, but the Mounties, one of the leading Conference contenders, were too much for the Milam-men.

On Wednesday, the Bengals journeyed to Lynchburg, where they met and defeated the Lynchburg College Hornets 78-67. Richards was again the leading scorer with 25, while Chuck Mottley and Russ Holcomb had 17 and 15, respectively.

The Death Valley five hit the skids in their next outing on Friday, Jan. 14 as the Roanoke Maroons outlasted them 65-53 in a slow-moving, sloppily played contest. The Tigers just couldn't find the range, connecting on less than 20 per cent of their field goal attempts.

The H-S team played perhaps its best game on January 8 at Gammon Gymnasium against arch-rival Randolph Macon. Earlier in the week, the Bengals had looked most unimpressive against the Medical College of Virginia, and after several rather humiliating defeats at the hands of four of the Big Six schools, the local fans were looking forward to the Tiger-Yellow Jacket clash with no little anxiety.

The R-M five started fast, connecting on their first seven attempts from the floor. The Bengals, however, staying in the game behind the accurate foul shooting of Russ Holcomb, were on top 41-31 at half time. Tall Russ swished the net 12 times from the free throw line in the first period. He took scoring honors for the night with 25 points, 17 of them being charity tosses.

The Tigers were never in serious trouble as they increased their lead to 15 points with three minutes remaining. At this point, Coach Claude Milam emptied the bench, whereupon the Jackets proceeded to "cut loose". Led by their captain, "Tick" Stringer, they closed the gap to five points until Tiger reserve Phil Key ended the game with a lay-up which made the final score 74-67.

After fourteen games, the individual scoring goes something like this: Center Russ Holcomb leads the parade with a 14.2 points per game average. Freshman Guard Wayne Land is second with a 13.4 mark, while Forward Warren Carter is third with 12.0. Rounding out the regulars are Juniors John Richards with 8.5 and Chuck Mottley with 5.8. Freshman John Putt has been the top reserve with a 6.1 average in seven games.

The Tigers will resume action on February 1 when they meet VMI at Death Valley. A strong Bridgewater College five moves in on February 2, and then on the fifth, the Bengals will travel to Emory & Henry to round out the week of play.

Neigbhoring Counties Feel Rumbling of Earth Tremor

(From the Richmond Times-Dispatch

Residents of four Southside Virginia counties Monday morning reported a loud rumble and a tremor resembling a slight earthquake.

The tremor was stronger in Prince Edward but was felt in Buckingham, Cumberland and Nottoway counties.

It occurred at 7:37 A. M. and was felt for only about three seconds, acording to residents here, including Mayor W. C. Fitzpatrick. He said he was at breakfast when he heard a report and felt a tremor. No damage occurred as a result of the quake.

Some thought the tremor could have been caused by a jet plane breaking through the sound barrier but a Langley Air Force Base spokesman said there was no record of a plane in the area at that time.

The earth tremor was the second phenomena to happen here within the last four months, the first being Hurricane Hazel. Some Longwod girls have stated that this is the first time they have experienced these "two freaks of nature."

'This Little Piggie Went To Longwood'

by JACKIE MARSHALL

Four hundred and five pounds of pork chops,
In front of Longwood C.,
Enjoying a brief vacation
From crated captivity.

The pig of whom I speak, my friends,
Drew a sympathetic crowd,
When Monday afternoon at four,
Upon us, his presence he endowed.

He snorted around the campus
Glad to move about,
But every time he saw someone
They started grabbing for his snout.

He was rather upset at leaving,
And snorted indignantly as he rode out of sight,
"Oink, oink to all you unfriendly people,
Anyway I put up a good fight."

The above is an actual report of an adventurous pig who yielded to his roaming desires in front of Longwood College Monday afternoon. After much coaxing and persuasion, freshman Sally Tilson firmly whacked said pig who returned to his crate. Unfortunately, the crate again gave way and Mr. Pig enjoyed another brief campus tour before his final recapture.

Farmville Lions Club Offers Scholarships

The awarding of two scholarships for a school session has recently been established by the Farmville Lions Club, according to Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, president of the local organization.

These scholarships which will total $150 each per school session, wil be awarded to a deserving boy and girl of Prince Edward County and who are attending Hampden-Sydney College and Longwood College.

Honorary Society Installs Members

Seven new members were initiated into Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary social science fraternity on Wednesday, January 12, at 7 p. m.

Herb Goodman, president of the organization, and Dr. C. G. G. Moss, head of the History Department, officiated at the service at which time Sally Cecil, Anne Brooking, Marian Ruffin, Edna Cain, Anne Weatherholtz, Mary Cowles, and Katherine Tompkins were initiated.

Election of officers was held at a business meeting following the initiation of the new members. Herb Goodman was re-elected president. Sally Cecil was chosen to serve as vice-president, while Anne Brooking will act as secretary, and Marian Ruffin as treasurer.

Tentative plans were made for a debate scheduled to take place in March between Hampden-Sydney and Longwood. Sally Cecil and Anne Brooking will represent Longwood.

Hart, Reynolds Head Freshman Production

Lucia Hart and Georgia Anne Reynolds have been elected co-chairmen of the freshman production which will be presented February 26.

Much of the casting will be for character roles while the rest will be chosen by tryouts. About 50 members of the class will appear on stage.

Committee heads are Sue Ralston, props; Shirley McGaffee, costumes; June Strother and Jeannette Stinson, dances; and Suzanne Faison and Anne Hart, music. Script typists are from the business department.

gent service with a smile, the class of 1951 dedicated their annual to Mrs. Cox.

As a result of being confronted with endless piles of letters and packages, especially those of the late holiday rush, she expressed her feelings in the following poem:

There was an old woman who was always tired.
She worked at Longwood College P. O.
Where help was never hired.
Her last words on earth were, "Dear friends, I'm going
Where letter writing ain't done and selling stamps ain't boring.
And everything there will be just to my wishes
People won't send letters, they won't send packages.
I'm gonna where a loud anthems will always be ringing.
But as I have no voice, I'll get rid of the singing.
So friends, weep for me not, weep for me never.
I long to do nothing forever and ever."
So she folded her hands in her last endeavor,
Crying, "No letters, no stamps, no packages, Forever!"

Masters, Ward Win 'Personalities' Poll

Devine Gives Results Of Student Voting

Nancy Tanley Masters and Shirley Ward have been selected by the student body as "Senior Personalities" to appear in the 1955 edition of the Virginian according to Donnie Devine, Editor of the yearbook.

These two girls were chosen from a field of eight seniors who were nominated by a representative faculty-student committee. One junior appointed from each publication, and one junior from the student body appointed by Student Government together with three members of the faculty-administration who were chosen by the editor of the annual acted as a nominating committee. This committee selected eight girls from the senior class. All seniors were eligible for nomination except those chosen for "Who's Who."

The girls nominated were chosen on the basis of personality and all around contributions to the college. Others chosen by the committee were Barbara Mitchell, Betty Davis, Mary Hundley, Sally Wilson, Beth Kent, and Joan DeAlba.

Nancy, a biology major, from Newport News, is president of Alpha Psi Omega. She has been co-chairman of Circus for three years, and the class representative for three years—serving as Circus Queen this year. Nancy is a member of Orchesis and is secretary of the Longwood Players. She has been very active in dramatics and has been in the casts of "Death Takes a Holiday," "The Boor," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Blithe Spirit." Nancy is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, has been on May Court for two years, serves as figure-leader of Cotillion Club and serves as first vice-president of Pi Kappa Sigma social sorority.

English major, Shirley Ward, from Roanoke is serving as Editor of the Rotunda. She is a senior class representative to Student Government and a member of Student Standards and Alpha Kappa Gamma. She is also a member of Cotillion Club and FTA. Shirley is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha social sorority.

The feature section of the annual will carry a picture of Nancy and Shirley.

Press Group To Hold Meet

The annual convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association will be held in Lexington, March 4 and 5 with Virginia Military Institute and Washington and Lee as joint hosts.

Final plans for the convention will be made at an executive committee meeting at Washington and Lee on February 19. Dick Martin, of VMI, is convention chairman and is being assisted by Dave Clinger, of W & L, who is VIPA's secretary-treasurer.

At last year's convention in Lynchburg, Shirley Ward, a Longwood senior, was elected publicity director for this spring's convention.

Plans for the convention include a talk by Mr. O. W. Riegel, director of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation. Mr. Riegel, well-known public opinion expert, was with the Office of War Information under Elmer Davis during World War II. He has just returned from a meeting with President Eisenhower. Mr. Riegel with 16 members of the National Committee for an Adequate Overseas U. S. Information Program, conferred with the President on ways of improving dissemination of information about America abroad. He is author of "Mobilizing for Chaos" and is a consultant for the Department of State. He is also director of the Southern Inter-Collegiate Press Association, and curator of the E. I. DuPont Radio and Television Awards.

The main purpose of the convention is to afford delegates from the various colleges in Virginia methods for improving their publications. Critiques for this purpose will be held for newspapers, magazines, yearbooks, and business staffs. Those publications entered into the convention contest will be judged. A trophy for the outstanding publication in each class will be awarded at the convention banquet which will conclude the two-day action.

Delegates from "The Colonnade," "The Rotunda," and "The Virginian" will represent Longwood at the convention.

Freshmen Disclose Production's Title

The curtains will rise on "Memoirs of a Ghost," this year's Freshman Production, in Jarman Hall on Saturday night, February 26. The play will begin at 8:00 p. m.

A theme committee headed by general production co-chairmen, George Anne Reynolds and Lucia Hart, as completed the script for the play and roles have been assigned to over eighty members of the Freshman Class. Working with the chairmen on the theme were Sue Rolston, Carolyn Williams, Shirley McGaffee, Anita Heflin, and Liz Blackman. Information about the actual theme will be released at a later date.

Other major committees for the production began functioning early in the year. Sue Rolston, chairman of the props committee announced that construction and selection of props is now underway. Shirley McGaffee, chairman of the costume committee, reported that costumes are being obtained and made at present. Suzanne Faison, head of music, and June Strother and Jeanette Stinson, co-chairmen of choreography, have announced that the arrangements for the music and dances are in the process of being completed. Margie Crismond is business manager. Jane Rupert is typist, and Margie Lucas and Shirley Alcock are co-chairmen for the make-up committee.

The leading role will be played by Ann DeAlba. Other major speaking parts will be played by Carolyn Williams, Jane Lloyd, Anita Heflin, and Sally Henderson.

"Hard practice began Monday," reported George Anne. The Freshmen have shown almost 100 per cent participation which leads George Anne to believe that the Freshman Production this year will be a sure-fire success."

"Memoirs of a Ghost" will be dedicated to the Junior Class. It is a tradition at Longwood to dedicate production to sister classes.

Lucia added this comment on the coming production, "We're all looking forward to Fresman Production because it will be a new experience to us and will give us the chance to work out original ideas without the strain of competition that was present in Circus."

L.C.Professor Will Present Voice Recital

Tuesday at 8 p. m. in Jarman Auditorium, Joel K. Ebersole, assistant professor of music, will present a voice recital.

A native of Springfield, Ohio, Mr. Ebersole received his masters degree from Indiana University; a diploma in voice from College of Music of Cincinnati and his B. S. in Music Education from the University of Cincinnati. He is now working towards a doctorate.

Mr. Ebersole was a soloist with the Lafayette Indiana Symphony Orchestra in 1953. He has also presented solo recitals in Springfield and Cincinnati, Ohio; Bloomington, Indiana and Farmville.

Last summer he was graduate assistant in voice at Indiana University where he also sang leads in operas and operettas.

Another program planned for the Artists Series is a presentation by the Dublin Players of Dublin, Ireland, who will present George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" on March 9.

On April 26, there will be an organ and harp recital by McCurdy and Greenwood.

Devine Appoints Two To Virginian Staff

Anne Brierley and Betsy Ruckman have been chosen to fill the two freshman staff positions for the Virginian. The selection was made by Donnie Devine, Editor-in-Chief of the annual.

Ann attended Farmville High School where she served on the annual staff for four years. She held the positions of circulation manager, business manager and editor-in-chief.

At Longwood she is secretary of the Freshman class and is majoring in biology.

Betsy was graduated from Thomas Jefferson High School in Richmond. She served on her high school annual staff for two years—during which time she edited the junior and senior sections.

Betsy is a business major at Longwood.

Juniors Launch Misty Ocean Ball

In an aquatic setting of sea animals and shells, the Junior Class will unfold their annual dance on Saturday night.

Entitled "Spindrift," the decorations will feature the more exotic and colorful species of underwater life. Silver and pink mobiles of fish will adorn the pale blue ceiling and sides. A huge shell will spotlight the center of the gymnasium. The ship, "Spindrift," will be built around the bandstand.

Students In Charge

Margaret Dryden is general chairman for the dance. Her assistants are Fannie Scott, decorations; Ellen Thomas, music, Ann Jones, publicity; Phyllis Nurney, tickets; and Evelyn Hall, party following the dance.

Ellen Thomas, music chairman, has engaged The Aristocrats of Roanoke to play for the dance. The orchestra is well-known for its performances at college dances throughout the state.

Following the dance which will last from 8 p. m. until 12 p. m., the juniors and their dates will be entertained by the Aristocrats' combo in the main recreation hall. Combo party refreshments will include ham biscuits, sandwiches, potato chips, cokes and cake.

Chaperones

Dr. and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dr. C. L. S. Earley, Miss Nancy Chambers, Miss Olive Iler, Mr. Raymond French, Mr. George Calcott, Miss Eleanor Weddle, Mrs. Caroline Eastham, Mrs. Jonathan Tabb, Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Simonini, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. George Jeffers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Merritt, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Brumfield, Dr. and Mrs. Frances B. Simkins, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Gresham, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Paterson, Jr., have been invited as chaperones.

Margaret said, "We have been working long and hard to make our dance successful and we hope that many of you will be on hand Saturday night when we introduce "Spindrift."

Tickets are on sale each night following dinner and may also be purchased at the door on Saturday night.

Rev. W. Holt Souder Includes Fishing, Golfing, Family Among Interests

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Many of us have come to know the tall, slender young man, the Rev. Mr. W. Holt Souder who has been on our campus for the past few days as our guest speaker for Religious Emphasis Week.

His trip to Farmville has been quite an occasion for him, one that has brought back many memories of old times, for his first connection with our school dates back to the time when he was one of the roaring Tigers of Harrod n-Sydney. He recalls the whole college crowd meeting at "Shannon's," that has been replaced by our modern day "College Shop;" and the terrifying policeman they dubbed "Captain" that roamed the Farmville State Teachers campus in the late 30's! While at H.-S. he joined the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity there, and says quite modestly that he "was just an average student."

It is his last two years, he majored in Economics at the University of Virginia and lived at home While there, he became quite an earnest golfer and served as manager of the golf team, for this has always been one of his favorite sports.

The year of 1946 was certainly the Boom year of his life! After 39 months service in the United States Army, he was discharged and returned home. And in the second place, his father, President of the Golfers Association at that time, asked him to go to Richmond and oversee a golf tournament. It was here that he met Isabelle Carle, who was entered in the tournament. Your reporter forgot to ask if Isabelle won the match, however, she did win the heart of a certain Mr. Scuder, and the two were married the following September.

Still another event in his life occurred when he entered the University of Virginia law school. It was at this time that he realized that he wanted to go into the ministry. Mr. Souder commented on this decision by saying that "the idea of being a minister had been in my mind a long time. I decided that I would never find out what I really wanted until I tried it. My own experience has led me to believe that this is sort of true of being a Christian. You never find out what a wonderful thing it is until you're tried it."

So the decision was made and he and Isabelle moved to Alexandria where he began his studies at the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia.

Rev. Souder's first assignment was in Varina, a small town near Richmond, where he was rector of the Episcopal Church for 2½ years. He then came to St. Paul's Episcopal Church as associate rector.

It is certainly apparent that Mr. Souder enjoys talking about his wife and three small children, Ann, 5 years old, Basil 3 and Marshall 2. With a broad smile, he mentioned over and over the four people back home that have inspired his life so much!

Besides golf, the Souders go fishing once a year down on the Beauty Gets The Vote

Tomorrow Longwood's student body will be faced with a difficult task. From the bevy of beauties selected by student nomination, we must decide which girls are the truest representation of the loveliest Longwood has to offer—we must decide who the May Court royalty will be.

As Longwood's loveliest girls promenade across the stage displaying their charm and beauty, many of us will feel that to make a final decision is an impossible task. Just what are the precise qualities that we want embodied in our May Court—just what "check list" of attributes can we use to help in our choice? The prime requisite which immediately occurs to everyone is BEAUTY. Indeed attractiveness of face and figure are very important for the person who is before the public eye so long.

If a girl passes this first test, we will all agree that another important trait is GRACE and POISE.

We feel that if a girl possesses beauty, grace, and poise she is May Court material. A crowd of spectators can tell little or nothing about a girl's personality, leadership ability, or school-spirit from merely seeing her walk gracefully up to a stage and sit regally through a ceremony. Furthermore honors such as Who's Who and Circus Court provide for those intangible qualities. While character is always an important consideration, appearance is a prime requirement in May Court voting.

The choice will be difficult, but if we keep these suggestions in mind the queen and her court spotlighted in the 1955 celebration will make this truly a May Day to remember.

No Soapboxes

It is once again time for elections.

The selection of editors and business managers will take place within the next few weeks. The election of presidents to head the four major organizations on campus will take place during the first week in March. Minor offices will be chosen after the completion of major elections.

The purpose of this editorial is not new; however, the message it conveys is always worthy of notice.

The method of handling elections at Longwood is different from that of many other colleges. Some colleges hold an all out campaign with banners hanging and bands playing "Happy Days Are Here Again." Campaign speeches are made and campaign cards are distributed among members of the student body. Candidates for an office hand out candy bars and cigars to all voters, in hopes that the gesture will affect the balloting.

We are not criticizing this type of campaigning in the event that voters know who and for what they are casting their ballots. However, certain qualities and ideals of a candidate should be foremost in the minds of the voters.

The candidates for an office, major or minor, should excel in leadership. This leadership should foster high ideals and standards among members of the various organizations. This leadership should be a guide or an incentive to members who wish to follow it.

The candidates should have the spirit of the school.

The qualities of a candidate for election are qualities which are evident to the voting student body. These qualities within themselves are comparable to a campaign speech hours long. These qualities, if a candidate possesses them, are enough to induce wise thinking and careful selection on the part of the voter. For this reason, campaigning is not necessary here.

'Strength Through Faith'

With the theory in mind that man gains "Strength Through Faith," Religious Emphasis Week is being presented to us as an intellectual rather than revivalistic program.

Believing that knowledge of the life of Christ is an essential basis for gaining strength, the Rev. W. Holt Souder has been lecturing this week on the story of Jesus' life. Mr. Souder has shown to us how Jesus as a human being faced life's temptations through strength. It was his purpose to explain through this illustration how this same strength is available to us. Mr. Souder has further explained that the power to achieve this strength was given by God to Jesus, His unique agent, but the like power is equally within our grasp.

The strength to be as God's children and to behave as God's children comes from God alone, who is the source of all strength. However, it has been pointed out to us that the first step towards gaining strength is believing that it is offered to us. The next move is to behave as His children.

If we meet an obstacle in our search for this strength, Mr. Souder advises that we talk with someone who has found it. Just as when ill we seek doctor's aid, he suggests we seek religious aid when in doubt. This help does not necessarily need to come from a minister or church counselor. Christian friends who have found this "Strength Through Faith" can also advise.

Feeling that in general we have and take advantage of a well-rounded religious life at Longwood, Mr. Souder finally suggests that we continue to climb for strength through Bible reading, prayer and silent meditation.

A Vote of Thanks

To the students of Longwood College, the Rotunda entrance hall is representative of the school's beauty and tradition.

It is our wish to extend our thanks to those persons who have recognized the need to redecorate the area most important to the college and its students.

SOCIAL NOTES

By MARGARET MILLER

Longwood girls started off the new semester by attending parties and dances at many of the nearby colleges.

Midwinters at V. P. I. drew a large crowd including Liz Blackman, Bobbie Carter, Rheta Russell, Phyllis Nurney, Ellen Thomas, Marion Ruffin, Barbara Scott, Liz DeHaven, Molly Ann Harvey, Gayle Peoples, Mary Alice Powell, Cindy Baldwin, Jeanne Hudson, and Flo Pollard. Others attending dances there were Jeanne Lynch Hobbs, Jean Payne, Penny Meredith, Mary Ann Jennings, Gayle Carroll, Jackie Hueter, Frances Patton, Beck Fizer, Anne Woodhouse, Betsy Richardson, Barbara Felthaus, Sis Brown, Pattie Billups, Caroline Oakey, Mary Ann Barnett, Ginnie Hayes, Anne Griffith, and Jeanne Funal.

The Fancy Dress Ball at Washington and Lee found Nancy Webb, Nancy Lenz, Ann Watkins, Jane Bailey, and Billie Miller present.

Dale Brothers went to the Phi Delta Theta party at Randolph-Macon College and Fannie Scott and Beth Kent attended the Delta Sigma Delta frat party at M. C. V. Also, Carolyn Smith attended the Kappa Sigma Star Dust Ball in Richmond.

Last weekend, Mid - Winter Dances at V. M. I. attracted Audrey Owen, Nancy Hartman, Bootsie Miller, Ellen Dize, Charlotte Chadwick, Shirley Paxton, Donnie Devine, Sis Brown, Beverly McDowell, and Ann Wayne Fuller.

The PiKA-Chi Phi parties at Hampden-Sydney drew Jeanne Lynch Hobbs, Norma Jeanne Croft, Betty Pat Rogers, Beth Kent, Jane Bailey, Joyce Quick, Dot Douglas, Baby Carter, Shu Scarborough, Bette Maas, Molly Ann Harvey, JoAnne Farless, Muriel Boswell, Loretta Brooking, Bobbie Carter, Martha Alexander, Barbara Parkinson, Judy Alexander, Marodith Nichols, Betty Ramsey, and Charlotte Pudge. Also Emily Atkinson, Dinny Coates, Tracie Faison, Eleanor Harvey, Sue Howard, Shirley McGaffee, Shirley Hauptman, Sue Taylor, Annette Crain, Elizabeth Brown, Ilen Calloway, Gerry Luck, Betty Wheeler, Mary Mayo, Nancy Desmond, Mary Gravely, Ann Miller, Jane Cadwallader, Joanne Allen, Norma Reamy, Shirley Alcock, Carolyn Wood, Bobbie Jo Rogers, Betsy Barefoot, Gayle Carroll, Betty Jean Jenkins, Pearson Grymes, Ann Hart, and Nancy Webb.

Several girls have added "Mrs." to their names. Among these are Joyce Hunt who married Bill Henderson from Saltville and Pollyanna Martin, who married Don Foard, a member of the Biology Department here. Shirley Sheppard is now married to Guthrie Goodman of Cumberland and Patricia Simpson recently became Mrs. Ray Kelsey.

Frankie Williams has received a diamond from Marvin Etheridge from Back Bay.

Belated congratulations also go to Ann White Thomas who has been engaged to Tommy Matthews since Christmas.

See you all at "Spindrift!"

Committee To Select Publication Positions

Longwood's Publication Committee, composed of the present editors, the advisors to the publications and members selected from the Senior Class, will select major staff positions on the college's three publications during the later part of February. Previous to the selections, interested students have been trying out for the positions open.

Gail Leonard served as editor of the Rotunda in this second try-out issue.

Co-managing editors for the issue were Jackie Marshall and Jan Kuyk. Linda Garrison served as news editor and Pat Cantrell as sports editor. Feature editor was Margaret Dryden, while Shirley Kemp assumed the duties of desk editor.

Loretta Kesterson acted as copy editor, and Margaret Miller was in charge of Social Notes.

Margie Lucas handled all advertising for this issue. Her regular position is assistant business manager.

Jrs. Send Frothy Invitation

BY MARGARET MILLER

Underneath a sea of blue
Lies a wonderland for you.
The sunken "Spindrift" bids you all
Attend an underwater ball.

Music floats on crests of waves
And echoes through aquatic caves.
Marine life views the scene with wonder
At dancers 20,000 leagues under.

Tides will usher couples in
As rippling rhythms 'round them spin.
Seahorses watch and fish attend
While music and the ocean blend.

An ever-moving panorama
Filled with underwater glamour
Sends a frothy invitation
To the Junior's "Spindrift" creation.

Case of The Foreign Bean Intrique, or ——— 'Who Stole the Can Opener?'

My name is Joseph Wartskowski and I led thirteen lives for the F. B. D. I. (Full Bureau Drawer of Investigation). The story I am about to tell you is meant to separate the men from the women. This revelation is that of my sixth life.

The way in which I fought for law and order in the Bean Case is one of the most sickening cases not recorded.

One day, the chief called me in and said "Joe," he always called me that, "Joe, there's a lot of dirty work going on around here." At first I thought he was referring to my soup-splotched tie, but he continued, "The Maroons (they're just a shade worse than the Reds are trying to kill us all off by poison." I gasped and grabbed for the smelling salts. "I've just received a letter saying there's one can of beans on the market that is poisoned and if we don't find it, some unsuspecting American family is going to eat these beans and then just go—poff! The letter was signed "Anonymous." Now go to it, Joe, boy. "And those beans!"

First, I looked up the case history of Anonymous but was unable to find anything on him. I knew I'd have to start from scratch.

I decided that as a protective measure to all citizens, it was my duty to shoot to kill everytime I saw someone with a can of beans. In two weeks, the death toll was at 354. The chief commended me for my stalwart loyalty. And then, it happened. Bean-easies broke out all over the countryside. Shady, underground-workers set up illegal, bean eating - clubs where little beans, big beans, and middle sized beans were served all day, every day. I raided around ten of them; at the end of the tenth raid, 235 more bean-hungry citizens had given up the ghost.

People began to smuggle beans across the city limits, into waiting trucks which sped away to deliver them to well paying citizens.

Some people ate beans every day and cast guilty glances at the poor devils who begged and moaned in the streets for one dried-up bean.

The end of this was reached when on my birthday Mom happily presented me with a can of beans for dinner. Poor Mom, she was so thrilled at being able to give me such a rarity. Naturally, I shot her, but unable to resist the beans, I became a victim of the very case I was striving to solve. Yes, I ate the poison beans. Fortunately, I had a stomach pump handy in my hip pocket.

Today, those bean-poisoning villians are still loose and are no doubt busily sabotaging some bean factory again. I'm still desperately trying to track these evildoers down, but—I need your help. Be on the lookout! Beware of menus! Are there any beans on your table?

Hoopsters Elect Ward To Captain Varsity Six

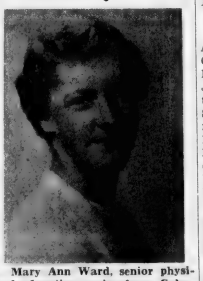
Team Starts Season With Roanoke Win

Captained by Mary Ann Ward, Longwood College opened its 1955 basketball season by defeating Roanoke College in two games last Friday night. Longwood triumphed in the first game 46-27 and again in the second game 42-18.

Longwood Line-up

Starting line-up for the first game included Mary Ann Ward, Helen Waitman, and Hilda Hartis, guards. Playing forward positions were Virginia Burgess, Barbara Whitehead, and Anne Snyder. Both teams found this to be a fast moving, hard fought game.

Linda Chambers, Nell Crocker, Dale Brothers, forwards and Margaret Dowdy, Lou Wilder, and Ann Jeter, guards, on the second game's line-up, romped to victory with a lead throughout the scoring.



Everyone on the team saw action in these two games. Others playing were Jane Carson, Nancy Richardson, Loretta Kuhn, Carol Wolfe, Patsy Hamner, and Jo Maxey.

Roanoke's Third Defeat

This was Roanoke's third game of the season. They had suffered two previous losses.

The team was accompanied by Misses Olive Iler, Rebecca Brockenbrough, and Eleanor Weddle.

On the playing roster for the rest of the season are home games with Madison February 19, Norfolk Division February 23, Bridgewater February 26, and William and Mary March 5. Next weekend Longwood travels to Westhampton for two Saturday games.

Mary Ann Ward, senior physical education major from Galax, Virginia, has been elected captain of the varsity basketball team. "Galax" has played with the team for four years and received the Blazer Award this year.

7 Girls To Attend Dance Convention In North Carolina

Seven students will attend the Arts Festival at Woman's College, Greensboro, North Carolina. Headed by Mary Cowles, with Joyce Clingenpeel as accompanist, the group will consist of Florence Sogholan, Patti Parker, Jeannette Stinson, June Strother, Mary Mayo, and Dinny Costes. Patsy Abernathy, Sara Lou Wendenburg, Evelyn Rowe, and Barbara Benedict were chosen also, but are unable to attend.

The group will leave here Friday morning, February 18, and will return late the evening of February 19.

Abiding by last year's rules for composition, the Longwood group has chosen a theme which is meant to be danced by women, which brings out effeminancy in all movement, which uses a combination of Graham and Humphrey specialized techniques for dance, and which is timely, that of the contemporary.

The work from Irving Mapper's Sonatina has been titled "Time was: time is: time is not, —."

Since the last article appeared in the paper, instructions have been received to costume the number for TV. According to Mrs. Landrum the work can be costumed for TV appearances but the Longwood composition is too serious an intent to be presented over TV. Detailed information as to choreography will be submitted regardless.

Jose Limon will be the guest artist with his company of which Pauline Roner is the featured dancer. A master class will be taught by Mr. Limon Saturday afternoon to which all of the Longwood group have been accepted. A concert by the Limon company will be given Saturday night.

3 To Attend VAF Meeting

Helen Waitman, president of the Athletic Association reports that Mary Davis, Carolyn Gray, and Fay Evans will attend the Virginia Athletic Federation for College Women at R. P. I. February 25 and 26.

Other A. A. plans include scheduling of class games. All students who are interested in class basketball and volleyball must have 8 practices in order to be included on their class roster. Class games will start the third week in March. Basketball practices are to be held at 4 p. m. on Tuesday and Thursday and 3 p. m. on Wednesday. Volleyball practices will be held at 4 p. m. on Wednesday and 3 p. m., on Tuesday and Thursday.

College Launches Plans For Summer

Plans for the 1955 summer school session have officially been launched, according to President Dabney S. Lancaster.

Students who enroll in the Longwood graduate study porgram will be able to pursue the study in courses leading to a major or a minor in various fields.

Those courses leading to a major include biology, English, history and social studies, and mathematics.

Those courses leading to a minor are art, business education, physical sciences, home economics, library science, music, and physical and health education.

The summer catalogue has been sent to the printers and is expected to be returned next month.

Students Recitals Begin on Thursday

On Thursday, the first of a number of informal student recitals will be presented. Mary Ellen Hawthorne has been placed in charge of this voice and instrumental program.

These recitals, which are to be given by music majors, have been scheduled for the first and third Thursday of designated months.

Saturday has been set aside for the date of the meeting of directors of bands and choruses of high schools in the Clarksville and Petersburg areas. Following lunch in the Tea Room, there will be a conference at which time a discussion will be held on the music festival. The festival will be held at Manchester High School on March 14. Dr. Molnar, head of the Longwood Music Department, will act as one of the judges.

Dr. Lester S. Bucher, state supervisor of music for the State Board of Education, will be at Longwood to hold a round table discussion on Thursday. Junior and senior music majors will be the predominant participants. The purpose of the meeting is to give the students an overall picture of music education in the state of Virginia.

Students To View Two Dance Forms

By MRS. EMILY K. LANDRUM

Longwood students will have a unique opportunity to view ballet and modern dance as two forms of contemporary dance, as dance in education and dance in the theatre at a student assembly program March 29.

To the uninformed, the initiate or the neophyte, ballet seems opposed to modern dance, or vice versa. To those schooled in the contemporary performing arts, the two are so closely linked that it is difficult to draw a line between modern ballet and modern dance.

With this thesis in mind, Orchesis will present the techniques of ballet and modern dance, showing how each are used or developed into choreographic form. Pantomime as gesture will definite ballet while movement stemming from many sources will explain modern dance. Members schooled in the ballet idiom will demonstrate ballet. These are Pattie Parker, Jeanette Stinson, and June Strother. Those representing the modern dance school will be chosen at a later date.

Excerpts from the club's repertoire will show how each idiom can be used interchangeably and together. Handel's Suite No. 1, with its Allemande, Courante, Sarabande, and Gigue will offer both groups opportunities to display technical skills and creativity.

Meeting of the two groups will show the type of movement which predominates when either the modern dancer uses the ballet idiom or the ballet dancer uses the modern.

Buosnis little "Ballet Scene" will be used as an example of music for the ballet. Excerpts from Mozart's Alleluhia, a joint work to be given by the College Choir and Orchesis will show the technical precision of the ballet and freer, lyrical quality of modern dance, which causes one to move from an inner compulsion.

Dr. Francis B. Simkins Returns To Longwood From Princeton Univ.

Visit New Experience Comments Historian

BY DOT DOUGLAS

Dr. Francis B. Simkins, a man small in stature, with a big store of knowledge, has just returned to the Longwood College history department from Princeton University.

Dr. Simkins commented that his semester's experience as a visiting lecturer at Princeton was a unique one for him; since his previous teaching experiences have been limited to a co-educational university and to a woman's college.

Princeton University, according to Dr. Simkins, has very high standards and a very formal academic life. Princeton students, however, neglect formality in the way they dress for class attendance. They go about wrapped in rough clothes of the army surplus type. Since they are not allowed to own automobiles, they dress in this type of clothing as means of keeping themselves warm as they move from class to class.

Sponsored by '32 Class

Dr. Simkins acted as a visiting lecturer at Princeton. He was sponsored by the class of 1932. This class left an amount of money to the university, the interest from which is used to pay a visiting lecturer.

Dr. Simkins' duties entailed the instruction of three special groups of undergraduate seniors in a study of the South.

Being selected to one of these groups consisted of twelve students each was a great honor in the school's academic light.

Dr. Simkins instructed the groups by introducing a general topic. Each student then took an aspect of the topic and wrote a research paper on it, citing 500 items of good reference material. The students then read each others papers, after which a discussion was held.

"Religion in the South", "The Three Southern Races" and "The South's Political Status" were three of the general topics introduced by Dr. Simkins.

Bookish Viewpoint

Dr. Simkins commented that from these studies he thought "the students had a bookish more than a realistic knowledge of the South." They are liberals who want the South to do what they call "catch up with the rest of the nation." They think this should be done by giving the Negro greater rights.

Dr. Simkins says there is some truth to the joke that goes around the Princeton campus. The joke is that a professor at Princeton dies in his forties because he gets heart trouble from overwork. According to Dr. Simkins, there are no lazy teachers at Princeton. The average professor is athletic and a meticulous dresser. The professors have small teaching schedules but are expected to do much individual advising of students and at the same time do much original research.

Musical Hit To Come To WRVA Theater

With the impressive record of three triumphant seasons on Broadway, "Guys and Dolls" will come to Richmond's WRVA Theatre for the week beginning Monday.

The well known musical comedy will include many members of the original Broadway cast in this road production.

Miss Jessie A. Patterson, associate professor of music, is sponsoring a student trip to the performance Monday night.

Va. Museum Loans Exhibit To Library

A collection of twenty-three watercolors, prints, and drawings by nineteen Virginia artists will be on exhibition in the Browsing room of the library until February 16. This exhibition, "Watercolors, Prints, and Drawings by Virginia Artists, 1953," is on loan to Longwood College from the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

These Virginia artists show varied style, subject matter, and techniques. Miss Janice Lemen, associate professor in Longwood's Art Department, has a watercolor —"Variations on a Small Brown Bird"—in the collection. Other interpretations of Virginia scenes are—"On the Docks" by Finlay F. Ferguson of Norfolk, and "Limestone" by Elizabeth Nottingham, from the Shenandoah Valley. Wanda S. Kidd uses Virginia's famous fruit, the apple, for a woodcut still life in dark brown and rust, while Allan D. Jones pictures a littered beach and pier, "After the Storm" seen through the wreckage.

Robert Bryant Trotter shows by use of the pencil, three designs formed by driftwood and leaves. "Eternal Flux" by Lois Bartlett Tracy, is an abstraction in watercolor and tempera. "Tree-o-Trio" is a portrayal of three witches in a tree under a moon by Georgia Allen Weaver.

English Tests Show Status

Results of the Junior English Test and the Standard Test given to freshmen in January have been issued by Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., head of the Longwood English department.

On the Junior English Test the local median for mechanics of expression was 56.25 as against the national mean of 55.4. The local median for effectiveness of expression was 57.1 compared to the national mean of 56.3. Juniors show some weakness in reading comprehension, however, in that the local median was 56.17 while the national mean is 60.9.

On the total score for the Junior English test the Longwood median was 56.14; the national mean 58.7.

Longwood freshmen showed themselves to be somewhat stronger in English than students tested nationally. The local median for the freshman test of English usage, spelling, and vocabulary was 54.9 as compared to the national mean of 51.3.

One must recognize in making comparisons, according to Dr. Simonini, that the national means were derived through testing done about 20 years ago and that the level of literacy in this country has been declining ever since.

The Rev. Mr. W. Holt Souder, guest speaker for Religious Emphasis week, aids Longwood students in inspirational guidance.

Longwood Buys Bus For Student Travel

A 1947 model passenger bus has been purchased by Longwood College for the purpose of providing transpopration when college activities make out-of-town trips necessary for members of the student body.

The bus, which has the passenger capacity of a Greyhound bus, was purchased from the Navy Department and will be painted with the school colors of blue and white.

Mr. Sam Graham, College Business Manager, stated that he hoped the vehicle would be ready for use by Saturday.

He has already accepted a call to Christ's Episcopal Church in Winchester, where already he has made many friends in this congregation and new community.

This is the first time that Rev. Souder has ever conducted a Religious Emphasis Week although he has been connected in some way with many youth groups. He says he has found it "quite an exciting experience."

Freshmen To Present Tales Of Glorious Past In 'Memoirs Of A Ghost'

Production Centers On Longwood House

By ELLA CARTER And BETTY CANTRELL

"Memoirs of a Ghost," featuring drama, costumes, and colorful dancing and music, will be presented by the Freshman Class on Saturday, February 26, at 8 p. m., in Jarman Hall.

Four Longwood College students, Jane Lloyd, Carolyn Williams, Anita Heflin, and Sally Henderson, learn the story of Longwood House, as told by the ghost of Peter Johnston, one of the first owners, portrayed by Ann DeAlba.

Production will unfold with the Revolutionary War period and will carry the history of the house through the ante-bellum days, the gay nineties, and the twenties. The ghost accomplishes his purpose when at the end the girls realize that "This Old House" has had a glorious past.

The cast, composed of 80 freshmen will provide an evening of entertainment. This will include the waltz, the Grand March, Charleston, can-can, soft-shoe and group singing as well as a solo by Carol Wolfe.

Other characters in Production include Mary Lee Teal as Peter Johnston, Sr.; Carolyn Waugaman as Peter Johnston, Jr.; Jane Adams as Mrs. Johnston; and Libby White as the colorful debutante.

Lucia Hart, co-chairman of the production says: "The five scenes are a combination of dramatics, dancing, and singing which I hope will be most enjoyable and exciting."

Kent To Reign As May Queen

Fourteen Longwood beauties will reign at the annual May Day festivities on May 7 at Longwood Estate, according to a student body vote on February 10. The queen and her maid of honor were selected from the senior class.

Beth Kent, a senior from Richmond will be crowned May queen. A member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary leadership fraternity, Beth is also vice-president of House Council, president of the Cotillion Club, and a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma, social sorority.

Maid-of-Honor will be Nancy Tanley Masters, a senior from Newport News, who is a member of the Longwood Players and president of Alpha Psi Omega, national honorary dramatic fraternity. She is also a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, figure leader for the Cotillion Club, and a member of Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority.

Joan DeAlba from Warwick, Nancy Nelson of Newport News, and Martha Donaldson from Roanoke represent the senior class. Representing the junior class is Patsy Abernathy from Virginia Beach.

The sophomores on the court are Amy Riggins and Joan Darnell from Hampton, and Diane Acree from Tappahannock. The freshman class members include Bonnie Paxon from Great Bridge, Suzanne Falson from Norfolk, Peggy Dickerson from Lynchburg, Carol Stroupe from Roanoke, and Libby White of Hampton.

Visualizing a busy year ahead, new editors, Margaret Miller, Gail Leonard and Helen Warriner look at the calendar. Molly Harvey was absent when the picture was taken.

Hines Serves As Chairman

Becky Hines, senior from Naruna, was recently elected by the student body to serve as chairman of the nominating committee for major and minor elections.

Two requirements set up for the selection are that the chairman be a member of the senior class and that she be a non-sorority student.

Elections, under Becky's supervision will be handled in this manner: heads from each major organization will submit names

Alpha Kappa Gamma Honors Students For Outstanding Leadership in College

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity, recognized five seniors and one junior for outstanding leadership contributions to the college in an assembly program held February 10.

Joan Conley, Donnie Devine, Martha Donaldson, Carolyn Stanley, Mary Ann Ward, and Louise Wilder were tapped into membership in recognition of their leadership service.

Joan Conley was a math honors candidate last year. She is serving as senior House Council president this year. Kappa Delta Pi, honorary scholastic fraternity; Eastern Shore Club, and Future Teachers of America claim her membership. Joan is a math major from Frederica, Del.

Editor-in-Chief of the "Virginian," Donnie Devine is an elementary major from Richmond. She is a member of Student Standards, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalism fraternity; ACE, FTA, Zeta Tau Alpha, social sorority, and Cotillion Club.

Martha Donaldson, recently elected business manager of May Day, holds membership in FTA, Pi Delta Epsilon, and the Southwest Virginia Club. She is president of Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority; secretary-treasurer of the Cotillion Club and associate editor of the Rotunda. Martha is a business major from Roanoke.

From Winchester, art major Carolyn Stanley holds membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, and Kappa Delta, social sorority. She is Senior class historian, president of Westminster Fellowship, and secretary of Kappa Delta Pi. She has served on the YWCA cabinet for four years. Carolyn served as chairman for senior dance, and is dance chairman for Cotillion Club.

General May Day Chairman and Vice President of the A. A., Mary Ann Ward, is captain of the basketball team, recipient of the Blazer award and a member of the Monogram Club. Mary Ann is a physical education major from Galax. Alpha Sigma Alpha, social sorority, and Cotillion Club claim her membership.

Lou Wilder, an elementary major from Williamsburg, has served as secretary of her freshman and sophomore classes. She was also a member of Freshman Commission. Lou now serves as a junior representative to the Student Government Association. She holds membership in the Monogram Club, A. A. Council, Cotillion Club and Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority. She has served as sports editor of the 'Rotunda" for the last two years. She also serves as varsity basketball manager.

Mrs. DuPont Accepts Honorary Membership From AKG

"In the deepest humility I accept it"—these were the words spoken by Mrs. Alfred I. DuPont as she was presented with honorary membership into Alpha Kappa Gamma, national leadership fraternity for women. This honor was bestowed on Mrs. DuPont by Ann Carter Wendenburg, president of the local Joan Circle, at an initiation held in the Honors Room Monday afternoon.

At the same initiation service, Carolyn Stanley, Donetta Devine, Louise Wilder, Mary Anne Ward, Joan Conley, and Martha Donaldson were initiated into Alpha Kappa Gamma as active members.

Mrs. DuPont, an alumna of Longwood, attended college here for one year in 1901. Longwood was known as State Female Normal School at that time and Mrs. DuPont pursued an academic course in her studies.

Mrs. DuPont arrived in Farmville Sunday evening and was guest of President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster while here. She was entertained by the college with a luncheon at Longwood House Monday afternoon. Miss Ruth E. Gleaves, Dean of Women, served as hostess. Members of the college faculty and administration were present.

After having dinner in the dining hall with the student body Monday, Mrs. DuPont left for Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. DuPont was chosen to honorary membership in Alpha Kappa Gamma because of her outstanding service and unselfishness to her fellowman. Mrs. DuPont is well known for the support she has given to the field of education through her outstanding leadership and generosity. She has made it possible for many deserving girls to further their education and for colleges to expand their facilities.

Her service is sumed up in the certificate which was presented to her during the initiation service: "Because of your love for young people, because of your demonstrated belief in sound education, because of your desire to help young women to secure a college education and finally because of all you have done for the welfare of your fellowmen and women without thought of self, we, the members of the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, have selected you into honorary membership into this society."

Mrs. Alfred I. DuPont receives from Ann Carter Wendenburg, president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, a leather bound certificate denoting her honorary membership in the leadership fraternity. Mrs. D. S. Lancaster, also an honorary member, and Dr. Lancaster look on the proceedings.

Board Also Names Business Managers

Editors and business managers of Longwood's three publications for 1955-56 were announced today by Dorothy Morris, chairman of the college's Publications Committee.

Newly chosen editors of the Colonnade are Margaret Miller and Molly Harvey. Phyllis Nurney will serve as business manager for the magazine.

Gail Leonard has been selected as editor of the Rotunda and Joyce Gilchrest will serve for her second year as business manager.

Editor of the 1956 Virginian is Helen Warriner; her business manager is Fanny Scott.

These girls were selected by a Publications Committee consisting of the present editors and advisors of each publication. Selection of the nominees was based on participation, scholastic standing, interest, and ability.

Margaret, an English major, holds membership in Cotillion Club and Granddaughters Club. She has been active on the Rotunda Staff for three years as a feature writer and has worked on the Colonnade staff for two years, receiving honorable mention for three of her contributions.

Molly Ann, an elementary major, has worked on the Colonnade for three years, serving as poetry editor this year. She holds membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, national journalism fraternity; Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority; and Cotillion Club.

Phyllis is a business major from Smithfield. She is member of Alpha Sigma Tau, Cotillion Club, and Pi Delta Epsilon.

Gail, a junior English major from Richmond, has previously worked on the Rotunda staff as News Editor. She also serves as the vice-president of the Junior Class, and is active in the Longwood Players, Cotillion Club, Pi Delta Epsilon, and Zeta Tau Alpha, social sorority.

Joyce, who will serve for her second year as Rotunda business manager, is a biology major from Arlington. She is a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, Cotillion Club and Kappa Delta, social sorority.

Helen, a junior French and Spanish major from Amelia, has previously served as assistant editor of the Virginian. Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary leadership fraternity; Pi Delta Epsilon, Kappa Delta Pi, and Beore Eh Thorn claim her membership.

Fanny, a junior from Norton, is active in the Cotillion Club, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Delta Epsilon and Kappa Delta. She is majoring in biology and general science.

President Discloses Alumnae Information

President Dabney S. Lancaster released information Monday concerning committee functionings and alumnae meetings in connection with Longwood College.

A committee meeting on general problems in teacher-education will be held at Longwood on Saturday. Miss Dorothy Pratt, professor of education and psychology at Randolph-Macon Women's College is chairman of the committee.

Yesterday, Dr. Lorin Thompson, head of the Bureau on Population and Economics at the University of Virginia, met with President Lancaster and Mrs. Meade Shackelford, public relations director, to discuss the compilation of a bulletin on the building and equipment needs of state supported institutions.

Dr. Lancaster is head of the committee which has been working on the bulletin. Those college presidents serving with Longwood president are Colgate W. Darden, of the University; G. Tyler Miller of Madison College; Dr. Walter S. Newman of VPI; and Rob-

An Encouragement Boost

FOR the past month the Student Standards Committee has been working on a plan to promote the installation of cafeteria-styled breakfasts in the dining hall.

This plan was mentioned very briefly in a recent editorial concerning the activities of the Student Standards Committee. Since the student body first learned of this proposed plan, many favorable comments have been voiced by students. There are still students who know nothing of the plan. We would like to give them the details.

The proposal, as it stands now, includes the serving of breakfast—cafeteria-style—from 7:15 to 8:45 a. m. Students would be able to get breakfast during these hours but not any later. The proposal does not include any change in the usual morning menu.

A plan of this type would enable more students to eat breakfast every morning and would enable those students who have no eight o'clock class to sleep for a longer period of time. The advantages of cafeteria-styled breakfasts can easily be seen.

On the other hand, there are still many problems connected with this plan. A committee of student representatives from the Student Standards Commitee, the dining hall staff and committee, and members of the Business Manager's office have been working diligently to complete some method which would be suitable. The problems connected with the project include finances, personnel, and the time element. The committee is meeting tomorrow to further discuss and plan this means of serving breakfast.

Those students who know about the plan are interested in seeing this system go into effect. We would like to give the committee all of the encouragement necessary to put this plan into action, if the problems can be worked out satisfactorily. The students definitely would like to see it in effect.

CHURCH NEWS

This Is Sad-Real Sad; Sr. Dragnet Got It Bad

By CAROLYN STANLEY

Dum—da—da—Dum—

We are Seniors. We live in Senior building. We live with Happy and Tippy. We have boys in our class—but mostly girls. We have a television set. Our favorite is George Gobel. We have a washing machine that washes our clothes—when it feels like it. We have privileges—Senior privileges—we go to nine o'clock movies! (ain't that sumthin?)

We have talent. We have brains, personality, good looks and Dr. Wynne's Philosophy of Education.

We have witty girls, real witty girls (ain't that sumthin?)

We have girls, we have girls that are engaged, girls that are pinned, girls that go steady—and girls trying mighty hard.

We got short ones—and the tall ones— the Democrats— the Republicans. We got crossword puzzlers and puzzlers that cross words—we got Southern and Northern.

We student teach. We student teach and we student teach. It's fun. We go to meeting—meetings and meetings. Sometimes we go to class . . . it's not fun. We drive each other mad!

We came up the hard way . . . hard knocks, hard bumps, hard days and hard biscuits—it was easy. We had each other.

We're gonna miss this ole place, we're gonna miss you gals.

We'll miss the fire drills at one a. m., the jazzy tunes across the street at 2 a. m. and the morning bell at seven a. m.

We'll miss watching Bobby B. watching his garden, watching the library clock, watching the high school teachers coming down the path, watching the wind, the snow, the rain . . . (always looking out the window . . . always watching).

We'll miss the trips . . . to New York, Richmond, Burkeville and Harry's . . . most of all we'll miss the trips to Harry's.

We'll miss all the rushing around.

We'll miss the Hampden-Sydney boys, U. Va. boys, Tech and V. M. I. boys . . . "God give us men!"

We'll miss each other too — Douglas's cheery smile in the morning, Jean Lynch's quiet subdued manner, Phoebe's alluring voice ringing through the halls, Flip's cigarettes — and Ward's jokes!

We'll miss a lot of things. Sniff.

We'll be leaving soon — three months.

We'll be leaving soon . . .
We'll be leaving . . .
We'll be . . .
We'll . . .

be seeing you.

Teenage 'Criminals' Respond To Petersburg Condemner

Editor's Note:

The following is a "Letter to the Editor" which appeared in the February 15 issue of The Richmond Times-Dispatch.

This one article has inspired many teenagers throughout the state to write letters, explanations or essays in classrooms, answering to and breaking down the accusation made by a citizen of Virginia. The eleventh grade classes at Farmville High School are only a few of many classes in the State which have written essays concerning the subject "Today's Teenagers". Several of these letters written by the Farmville students were sent to the Richmond newspaper. Other essays were turned in to teachers as a classroom assignment. Several of these answers or essays appear after the original article.

Because some of the students of Longwood College are still in their teens or have just come from the teenage era, the Rotunda feels that the letters and essays are of general interest. Also, because the majority of students here is in the teacher-training field, we again feel that this will be of interest.

An answer from a college student's standpoint appears at the end.

"Blasts Today's Teenagers As Impolite, Sarcastic, etc.

The young teenagers of today are very impolite, have no manners at all, and are sarcastic in their answers. They think the world owes them a living, but they have a lot to learn in their later life about this. They use bad, profane language, also they think it is smart to drink and get drunk.

Now about the sports they play in. Most want to win in that one sport. But others don't care whether they win or lose as long as they get a letter and are on the team. They also play for themselves and not for the school. Put themselves first and school second. And it should be the other way around.

Also, the young teenagers want you to do everything for them, but do nothing for you. Treat you like dirt under their feet, and like to destory things such as cutting up buses, breaking windows, breaking into places, and such. All I can say is they are going to wind up in the pen, six feet under dirt with a bullet in them or go to hell for the way they have been acting. Only one way to get out of this mess is to ask God to forgive them.

Also I would like to say that quite a few or rather most all teenagers tell lies. I like the ones who tell the truth and also keep their promises.

Most teenagers are against the U. M. T., because I believe they hate military things. But I think it would do most of them good if the governmen passes this law. It would teach them so many worthwhile trades and also get a taste of army life.

It would be possible for the young boys to join the National Guard, Army Reserve, Air Force Reserve and a few other branches of the service.

I don't think going around beating up other people for the fun of it is very funny. I would like to say I pray for the young and old people who have not found Christ in their hearts to find Him and have peace on earth to make them better."

DEAN JORDAN
RFD, Petersburg

"Are teenagers so bad that adults actually hate us? That is certainly one question to which I would like to have the answer! In the article on teenagers, it seems as if we are described as hungry and bloodthirsty savages, hanging around waiting to hurt someone or take something we want that doesn't belong to us.

I am sixteen years old and I am reasonably sure that I am a normal teenager. I have most certainly never come home drunk, have never stolen, cheated, or smoked. I also think that the author of the article should have more respect for our parents than what he apparently has.

It may be true that maybe one parent out of one-hundred doesn't care what their children do, but if I ever acted the way the article says I am supposed to, my parents would have "my head for it." I would have no privileges what-so-ever.

Adults raise their children more strictly than to let them do such as has been said of us.

I have lived in several parts of the country—Tennessee, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, and now Virginia; I have met very few teenagers who fit Mr. Jordan's description. In closing I would like to say that if I have to look up to someone like that for guidance and leadership, I certainly would wind-up six feet under the earth!"

VIRGINIA ALLEN
Eleventh Grade

"The letter to the editor of the Times-Dispatch may express one person's opinion of teenagers, but this article doesn't say anything about the good points of teenagers. We have to be reminded occasionally to think about other people when we do things. Most teenagers are polite to each other and to adults. They do little things without a thought about getting something in return. Teenagers can be depended upon to do things of importance just as adults; however, there are some who aren't able to take large responsibilities.

Another point I'd like to make is this: today's teenagers are what today's adults make us. We were brought up by our parents. If our training has been good and we've been taught to appreciate good things as well as other's feelings, we will be a good product of the last generation."

DAVID KENNEDY
Eleventh Grade

"I have very little to say in answer to the article on teenagers by Mr. Jordan; but I hope it will be sufficient to prove that all teenagers are not liars, thieves, vandals and drunks. I do not know whose conduct led Mr. Jordan to place a curse on all teenagers, but I hope they will realize that they have exposed some decent young people to very severe and unjust "criticism."

I am a teenager and I must say that I have yet to be drunk or break windows. Neither am I an habitual liar and I never stole so much as a hairpin from anyone. I know that I can speak for the majority of the teenagers with whom I am acquainted, as well as for myself.

Continuing then; since I am not a hardened criminal, I seriously doubt that I will find myself in the penitentary or "six feet under with a bullet in me" to quote Mr. Jordan.

In closing, I will say that I do not want Mr. Jordan's prayers for my salvation. If any prayer to God will save me, it will be from one whose heart is filled with concern and love, not hatred for those of us who need guidance and help. You have judged us, Mr. Jordan—who, then shall judge you?"

"Today the typical, average American teenager has created a unique and original character all to itself. It is a work of youthful ingenuity that some adults have often wished they could possess. Most average teenagers, today, are not afraid for one instant to express their inner thoughts or opinions. Most parents years ago taught their children to be seen and not heard, causing shyness and over emphasized meekness upon their character in later adulthood. Today the average youngster carries with him or her the ability to reason by thinking things out before believing in certain facts. Also, they believe in sticking to one basic standard or line of thought on certain subjects, creating not a one-tracked mind, but a reasoning power pertaining to both sides. These are just a few of the good traits to be found today in teenagers."

BOB FULCHER

"I think that one of the most admirable traits of teenagers today is their interest in education, even after high school. They want to see just how far they can go. I think that they have only pity for the few who are allowed to drop out of school at an early age.

I feel that in teenagers and adults there's always room for more prayer and any type of Christian work. The adults could quite possibly be responsible for some of our unadmirable traits.

To sum things up "the teenagers of today are not going to the dogs." They realize that someday they will be the leaders of the country, and look forward to it with interest and anxiety."

Thank goodness, there are not many Mr. Jordans in the world! He obviously has taken examples of a few of these teenagers, who have misjudged values, and magnified their actions into one representative action of all teenagers. In my estimation, he has definitely gone out on a limb while making such statements as "they are going to wind up in the pen, six feet under dirt with a bullet in them or go to hell for the way they have been acting."

I feel somewhat the same way the other students have expressed themselves. For those teenagers who may have gotten a little mixed up in their actions, they or we have no one to blame but this present adult generation for their lax attitudes toward teenagers. On the other hand, these "mixed up teenagers" are in the minority. If Mr. Jordan would have an opportunity to observe classes in high schools all over the country, he would no doubt find intellegent, alert, young American citizens in the making.

Instead of "downing" the youth of the nation, Mr. Jordan needs to praise them. Re-read the essays which these local students have written. The answer lies there!

All of Us Know 'Charlie Hop' His Smile Puts Him on Top

Professor Sponsors Many Groups

By MARGARET MILLER

Where's Charlie? Longwood's "Charlie Hop" (alias Mr. Raymond Holliday French) can often be found in the Rotunda surrounded by a group of girls. Nearly every student knows the "man behind the smile."

Before coming to Farmville to teach, "Charlie Hop" graduated from V. P. I. After three years in the corps, he became a sergeant but assumed the duties of a laboratory assistant in his fourth year and became a civilian.

From Virginia he traveled to Emmetsburg, Md. where he taught chemistry and physics in a Catholic college and a girls' convent. Naturally, at first, this seemed like a novel set-up, but it was soon discovered that each class was chaperoned by a nun!

"Charlie Hop" still has a soft spot in his heart for sports. For several years, he pitched on the baseball team in his home town, Callao, and also enjoyed playing tennis. Although he still enjoys good fishing and hunting trips, 'Charlie Hop" is kept busy with campus activities. He says that he enjoys working with the girls and the groups with which he is associated. He sponsors the Class of 1957, Chi and Tau Theta Pi, men's fraternity.

In his office in the Science Building, one can find his prize possession—his fishing tackle. According to this interview, his favorite past time is keeping Dr. Simkins in hand.

During the summer sessions, "Charlie Hop" becomes recreational director of activities planned for the children of summer students. This position finds him constantly in the company of the younger set, going from the croquet court and pool to story hour.

The class of 1946 dedicated The Virginian to him for his cheery smile, generosity, and thoughtfulness. "Charlie Hop" confessed that his smile almost fades when his class doesn't participate wholeheartedly in activities.

An essential person at Longwood, "Charlie Hop" with his funny lil' grin, and his, "Hi, you all," receives a toast from the Rotunda.

Thespians Select 'Dark of the Moon'

"Dark of the Moon," by Howard Richardson and William Berney, has been selected by the Longwood Players as the college's annual spring play, to be presented March 17, 18, in Jarman Auditorium.

According to Dr. C. L. S. Earley, assistant professor of English, the cast selection is complete and rehearsals have begun.

The play is a musical fantasy of earthy mountain life in Tennessee with James Nichols cast as John, a witchboy who wishes to be changed to a normal boy so he can marry Barbara Allen, a beautiful mountain girl, played by Nancy Nelson.

Other members of the cast in order of their appearance are: Anne Brooking as Conjur Man, and Joyce Quick is Conjur Woman. Russell Vass as Hank Gudger, Mary Hundley as Miss Metcalf, Granville Sydnor as Mr. Jenkins, Charles Tate as Uncle Smelicue, Carol Carson as Mrs. Summery, George Ogburn as Mr. Atkins, Mary Cowles as Mrs. Bergen and Dorothy Rector as Edna Summey.

Herb Goodman will appear in the part of Burt Dinwitty, Ronny Davis will be cast as the Church Organist, Tommy Biggs as Mr. Bergen, Vernon Austin as Mr. Summey, Fred Stables as Marvin Hudgens, J. G. Buston as Floyd Allen, and Barbara Burnaide as Mrs. Allen.

Charles Bailey will take the role of Mr. Allen; James Parker, the part of Preacher Haggler; Beth Kent, Greeny Gorman; Carolyn Stanley, Ella Bergen. Nancy Tanley Masters and Sally Cecil will play Fair Witch and Dark Witch, respectively.

US Marine Officer To Visit LC Campus

Colonel John R. Lanigan, Director of the Fifth Marine Corps Reserve and Recruitment District, announced today that Woman Marine Second Lieutenant Elizabeth M. Faas will visit the Longwood College campus tomorrow to interview students interested in the Marine Corps' summer Women Officer Training Program.

Lt. Faas is the Woman Marine Procurement Officer for the fifth district, which comprises five states and the District of Columbia. She will be accompanied by Woman Marine Lt. Peggy H. Rice.

The summer program, open to all qualified women college students except freshmen, consists of junior and senior courses. Lasting six weeks, the courses are held at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico.

L C Tops Madison For Third Game

Longwood's first and second basketball teams chalked up their third win of the season over Madison 52-24 and 61-36, respectively. The games were played Saturday afternoon February 19, in the Longwood gymnasium.

Longwood made the first score of the game and held a lead at the end of the first quarter 12-5.

With a half-time margin of 30-11, Longwood held the Madison sextet 41-14 at the third period and tallied a final 52-24 win.

The second game's first quarter ended with Longwood ahead 12-8. The Longwood cagers led 31-22 at half-time.

A ten point advantage at the third quarter pushed Longwood on to a 61-36 stronghold over Madison at the game's end.

First team starters for Longwood were Mary Ann Ward, Hilda Hartis, Jane Lohr, Virginia Burgess, Nancy Richardson, and Barbara Whitehead.

Other Longwood girls seeing action in the two games were Nell Crocker, Linda Chambers, Ann Snyder, Jane Carson, Dale Brothers, Jo Maxey, Loretta Kuhn, Carol Wolfe, Ann Jeter, Patsy Hamner, Margaret Dowdy, and Louise Wilder.

Norfolk Division, Bridgewater and William and Mary are on Longwood's schedule for home games on February 23, February 26, and March 5, respectively.

Twelve Enroll At Longwood

By PAT CANTRELL

Twelve new students have been accepted at Longwood for the spring semester. Four of the new students are transfers.

Ruth Shelton, a transfer from Stratford Junior College, says that she plans to teach business education.

Norma Taylor, a special student, attended William and Mary College last semester. She belonged to the Glee Club there.

Vivian Willett, sophomore from Bowling Green, transferred from Radford College where she worked on the staff of the Radford Review.

Mrs. Mania Woonen Bromlugh, a former Longwood student, also transferred to Longwood this semester from William and Mary.

John Brooks and Wesley Beamer from Crewe entered as freshmen. From Burkeville are William Kirchmier registered as a freshman and George Elliott as a junior.

Four residents of Farmville also entered Longwood — Mrs. Ora Summers graduated here in 1941, while Guthrie Derwood, John Roberts Earl and Gerald Smith entered as freshmen. Mr. Earl is a native of Knoxville, Tennessee.

SOCIAL NOTES

By MARGARET DRYDEN

Once a year along about this time comes what we call the February slump. It's right after exams and just before springtime and there just isn't much happening. But we did manage to scrape up a few odds and ends.

About the biggest thing that has happened recently was Midwinters at Virginia. Quite a few Longwood girls attended. We know a few of you so we'l name as many as we know about; Nancy McLawhorne, Joanne Wilson, Colleen Goff, Nancy Cousins, Jane Lohr, Betty Staples, Ellie Everett, Judy Harris, Nancy Deaton, Jane Harlow, Stephanie Bauder, Shirley McGaffee, June Manlove, Ann Griffith, Sylvia Overton, Libby White, Joyce Gilchrest, Sara Hackworth, Martha Donaldson, Kathy O'Leary, Mary Rogers Button, and Gerry Luck. Louis Armstrong, as you probably know, provided the music.

One engagement has come about. Shirley Haden has received a diamond from Herschel Fyke of Roanoke.

Mary Rogers Button has received a Sigma Chi pin from Hals Yowe of the University of Virginia.

Loretta Kesterson, Shirley Sylvester, and Betty Jean Jenkins journeyed to Annapolis and the Naval Academy again this weekend.

Davidson was the destination of Sandy Dyer and Frances Harmon. North Carolina is drawing quite a few of our girls now. Dotty Rector and Ann Woodhouse were at Wake Forest for their Midwinters.

Elsie Meade Robertson, Beth Kent, Susanne Garner, and Betty Lou Allen attended parties at N. C. State.

Marian Ruffin and Carolyn Smith attended the basketball game and fraternity parties at Randolph-Macon this weekend.

Betty Adkins attended the Pi Kappa Alpha party at the University of Richmond.

Let's make a wish that the coming weekends will bring lots of parties and lots of dances and much fun. O. K.?

Wrong Word Makes Meaning Absurd

From The Brackety-Ack

A boner is an error; but it is more than just that. It is a misprint, or a wrong word in the right place, or a right word in the wrong place, that turns a simple fact into a side-splitting absurdity.

Bureau Informs Public of LC Activities

What is our College News Bureau? The answer to this question is positively known by few, vaguely considered by many, and totally unknown to others. Yet, the News Bureau at Longwood College functions continuously under the direction of Mrs. Meade Shackelford not only to inform the public of activities and improvements within the college but to gain public understanding of the college.

"The News Bureau" said Mrs. Shackelford," was begun at Longwood College three years ago. Its purpose, to send out publicity, is only a part of the whole Public Relations Program."

Public Relations Programs have been established under full or part time direction at 95 per cent of all colleges and universities in the United States. Many divisions branch from this program in an effort to develop, identify, and publicize it. The News Bureau is one of the branches essential for the purpose of interpreting the functions of all other branches. It sends out information on all aspects of college life which include news on student activities, faculty, administration, college developments, and curricula improvements.

This general information is sent to newspapers and radio stations throughout Virginia while news of individuals such as scholastic leadership is sent to hometown newspapers and high school papers of the student concerned.

Besides the fact that every student is interested in seeing her activities recorded in her hometown newspapers and high school this is of great value in publicizing the college as an educational institution.

The way in which information eventually reaches the News Bureau creates a problem. Some college events are learned of in time for the News Bureau to report it to newspapers before the event is too dated to be of public interest. Others are learned of at such a late date as to render it un-newsworthy material.

This problem can be solved only through the cooperation and aid of the student reporter who should be appointed or elected by each organization to be held responsible for reporting their news to the News Bureau. Mrs. Shackelford requests this cooperation in an effort to insure the News Bureaus continued function at those times when she, as the director, is called away from the college on business.

Another part of the News Bureau is the college activity bulletin board outside the Deans' Office. News on the college, students, faculty, and alumnae, is compiled by Mrs. Shackelford from the Richmond Times-Dispatch, the Richmond News Leader, and the Farmville Herald. This project also calls for student cooperation in any news articles of college interest on the bullstin board.

Mrs. Shackelford believes that by bringing more students into actual work with the News Bureau, it can begin to function in a more thorough way. To explain that the News Bureau is not merely a means of advertising college activities, Mrs. Shackelford said "In a publicity program, one person does all the work on publicizing the college. Whereas in the Public Relations Program, everyone in college aids in carrying out the program. For example, choir concerts, the dramatic productions, speeches, and general person-to-person contacts further good public relations and at the same time gain public understanding of the college. It is the job of the News Bureau to report notices of these scheduled events as a means of pre-advertisement.

Longwood College is a District 4 member of the American Collegiate Publication Relations Association. District 4 holds conferences each year where ideas are exchanged on phases of public relations as a means of further developing the program.

In 1954, the honorable mention Public Relations award, was presented Longwood College by the Richmond Public Relations Association.

Mrs. Meade L. Shackleford, gives press agent, Sylvia Wright, a news release which will be sent to newspapers throughout the state.

Cotillion Signs Spivak To Play Dance Music

Charlie Spivak and his orchestra has been selected by the Cotillion Club to play for their annual dance on April 2. Beth Kent, president of the club, announced that arrangements have been completed for the orchestra's appearance on this campus.

Membership in the dance club has been increased from 250 to 300 members. Voting for spring goats will be held tomorrow night following dinner and bids will be presented the first of next week.

Sorority Chapters Receive 80 Girls As Pledge From Spring Rush Season

Last Thursday 80 students at Longwood College accepted bids to membership in the college's eight national sororities. The signing of bids climaxed a four-day rush period under sponsorship of the Longwood Pan-Hellenic Association.

This regulating group has released in alphabetical order according to the sororities' names a list of new members.

Alpha Sigma Alpha received Ellen Callaway, Jane Carson, Jeanne Vestal, Patricia Worrell, Charlotte Chadwick, Mary Lee Teel, and Mary Park MacFarlane.

Those accepting bids from Alpha Sigma Tau were Linda Garrison, Linda Chambers, Annette Crain, Mary Ann Barnett, Betty Mosteller, Audry Dinsmore Coates, Joanne Allen and Betty Mann.

Marjorie Allgood, Sara Beale, Betty Cantrell, Ann Hancock, Jane Karicofe, Irma Setchel, Kathleen O'Leary, Sue Howard and Penny Meredith signed Delta Sigma Epsilon bids.

New additions to Kappa Delta membership roll are Ann Jeter, Nancy Richardson, Elizabeth Ruckman, Virginia Herre, Judy Elliott, Jean Roadcap, Sarah Hackworth, Marodith Nichols, Shirley Hauptman, Jane Ruppert, Jacque Hueter, Sally Tilson, Eliza Buchanan, Jane Cadwalader, Lucia Hart and Carolyn Waugaman.

Patty Billups, Caroline Oakey, George Ann Reynolds, Bobbie Jo Rogers, Janet Lloyd, Jeanette Stinson, Nan Brimmer, Carolyn Ward, Alice Burnette, Betty Forbes, Ann DeAlba, Emily Atkinson, Shirley Alcock, Violet Marshall, and Elizabeth Blackman have joined Pi Kappa Sigma.

Sigma Sigma Sigma received into membership Sue Taylor, Ann Brierley, Margie Lucas, Suzanne Faison, Pearson Grymes, Carol Stroupe, Frances Patton, Betty Jean Spruhan, Marjorie Crismond, Anita Heflin, Sue Amory, and Frances Harmon.

Margaret Sheppard, Loretta Kuhn, Mary Beth Picinich, Mary Ann Foster, Jean Hopkins, Sylvia Moore, Arden Sadler and Sara Gayhart have accepted bids to Theta Sigma Upsilon.

Zeta Tau Alpha's new members are Pat Cahill Diebler, Catherine Meeks, Shirley McNeal, Berle Stephenson, and Ruth Zich.

YWCA Plans Activities For National Birthday; Dr. Templeton To Talk

In connection with the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the National Young Women's Christian Association, the Longwood YWCA has planned activities for the week March 7-11. Celebrations of this type are being held throughout the country.

Dr. Charles B. (Chuck) Templeton has been chosen to be the guest speaker during the week and will talk to the student body in assembly Tuesday, March 8, and in Jarman Hall at 7 o'clock March 8 and 10. Dr Templeton will also be Hampden-Sydney's Religious Emphasis Week speaker during the same week. This is the first time Hampden-Sydney and Longwood have had a joint program of this sort.

Prayers

As an additional part of the celebration, prayers during the week of March 7-12 will be led by the "Y" officers on the theme of "Y" organizations.

On Wednesday of this week the "Y" Cabinet will sponsor a Y. W. C. A. birthday dinner as a party in honor of the centennial festivities.

Dr. Templeton, born in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, was widely known in Canadian sport circles in football, basketball, and track. At seventeen he became sports cartoonist of the Toronto Glove and Mail, largest morning newspaper in the Dominion. During his last three years in this work, his cartoons were syndicated for papers across Canada.

Newspaper Work

Having had no connection with the church in his earlier years, Dr. Templeton underwent a distinct conversion experience and resigned his position on the newspaper to travel as an itinerant evangelist for three years. During this time he met and married the former Constance Orozco, noted mezzo-soprano soloist, who was then studying at Metro-Goldwyn Mayer studios.

Dr. Templeton met with phenomenal success as the minister of the Avenue Road Church in Toronto. His congregation grew from no members to an average of 4500 people attending each Sunday during the seven years that he was minister.

He founded and directed the Toronto Youth for Christ rally, with regular Saturday night attendance of 3000 young people. He also directed three Toronto Maple Leaf Garden rallies with an attendance of more than 18,-

LC Engages Dublin Cast

Appearing for the first time on the Longwood campus, the Dublin Players of Dublin, Ireland, will present George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" in Jarman Auditorium on March 9. This show will be the fourth program of the College Artists Series.

The company, made up of the finest actors from Ireland's famous Abbey and Gate Theatres, is completing another coast to coast tour of American cities presenting great Irish and English classics. The director of the famous company is Donald Ibbs.

Rated as "top entertainment" by Variety, the newspaper of the theatre, the troupe has also received praises by appearing on the well known Ed Sullivan show "Toast of the Town." People from every city in the United States have applauded their performances of plays by such well known playwrights as. Shaw. Shakespeare, Isben, Oscar Wilde and Noel Coward.

Maureen Halligan, one of Ireland's most accomplished actresses, will play the role of the prim housekeeper in "Pygmalion." Along with her husband Mr. Ibbs, she is the founder of the Dublin Players. Besides playing with the company for the past five years, she has appeared in several English films. Miss Halligan is also a director, writer and contributor to the Irish press.

Others taking part in "Pygmalion" are Geoffrey A. Murphy, Colone Pickering; Ken Huxham, Afred Doolittle; and Julian Worth as Eliza Doolittle.

By winning a scholarship to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, Mr. Murphy started his theatrical career. He has also apepared in many motion pictures, television shows and theatres in England. This is Mr. Murphy's first appearance with the players.

Mr. Huxham has appeared for two years with the group, during which time he toured Ireland, playing Polonius in "Hamlet." He has also had much experience in radio, television and the motion picture.

Admission is free of charge for students. Faculty and townspeople may purchase tickets from the President's office or at the box office of Jarman Hall on the night of the performance.

Smiles show appreciation of student body backing in yesterday's election. Returns place Mary Ann Wright, Lou Wilder, Jane Lohr and (standing) Muriel Boswell in major offices of college organizations.

Four Fill Major Posts As 1955-56 Officers

Presidents To Take Duties Next Month

Louise Wilder of Williamsburg, Mary Ann Wright of Richmond, Jane Lohr of Hood, and Muriel Boswell of Midway Island were elected last night to the presidencies of Longwood's four major organizations—Student Government, Young Women's Christian Association, Athletic Association, and House Council, respectively.

Georgia Jackson of Lexington appeared on the ballot with Lou; Patsy Abernathy of Virginia Beach ran for office opposite Mary Ann; Mary Davis of Whaleyville appeared with Jane for AA presidency; and Ann Snyder of Winchester rans as a candidate for House Council.

Assime Positions Next Month

The new officers will be installed and assume their positions next month. Their term of office will expire with the March 1956 elections.

Previous to this new office, Lou has served as a representative to Student Council for two years. She was recently tapped into Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity.

In her freshmnn and sophomore years, she served as secretary of the class. Lou was also a member of the Freshman Commission.

Her interest in sports explains her membership in the AA Council and the Monogram Club. Her sport positions include basketball manager and sports editor of the Rotunda.

Lou is also a member of Cotillion Club and Alpha Sigma Tau, social sorority.

Mary Ann has served the YWCA since her freshman year when she was a member of the Freshman Commission During the past year she has acted as "Y" treasuer.

Mary Ann, who was vice-president of her sophomore class, is a music major. She is a member of the Choir, Madrigals, and serves as choir director for the Baptist Student Union.

She is also a member of Cotillion Club and Theta Sigma Epsilon, social sorority.

Student Teacher

Jane, a physical education major now doing her student teaching, has been active in the AA serving as secretary this past year. She has played for three years on the college hockey and basketball teams. Jane is a member of the H2G and Monogram Clubs.

In her sophomore year, Jare was treasurer of her class.

Cotillion Club and Pi Kappa Sigma, social sorority claim her membership.

Muriel, newly elected president of House Council, has served this past year as Junior House president.

She has been active in the YWCA, having served on the Freshman Commission and the "Y" Cabinet.

Muriel is a member of Cotillion Club and serves as rush chairman for her social sorority, Alpha Sigma Tau.

College Plans Founders Day

"Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster Day" has been selected as a special title for Longwood College's seventy-first Founders' Day, March 26.

"It will probably be the last day the alumnae as a group will have the opportunity to express their appreciation to the Lancasters for their fine service," said Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, chairman of the Founders' Day Committee in explaining this tribute to the President and his wife.

Reservation cards have been coming in rapidly, and the total number of alumnae expected to return this year exceeds 500, according to Mrs. Ruth Coyner, alumnae secretary.

Beginning with the class of 1895, every fifth class through 1950 will hold reunion meetings at the homecoming.

The faculty members on th Founders' Day committee are Miss Mary Puckett Asher, Joel K. Ebersole, Miss Emily Clark, Boyd Coyner, Mrs. Mildred Davis, Miss Emily Barksdale, Dr. George W. Jeffers, and Thomas A. McCorkle. Miss Ruth Gleaves, Dean of Women, is also a committee member.

The Granddaughters Club will serve as official hostess.

Billet Receives Prize In Magazine Contest

Judy Billet, freshman, won first prize of $10.00 with her short story "Stone Against Steel" in the Colonnade's short story contest. Another winner as announced by Barbara Southern, editor, last Wednesday was Nancy Lenz for "Night Dream," $3.00.

Honorable mention went to Nancy Lenz for "Only a Word." Camille Atwood for "To Grandmother's House We Go." "The Test" and "The Obsession" won honorable mention for Margaret Miller.

Judges for the contest, which lasted from January 1 to February 8, were Dr. R. C. Simonini, head of the English Department; Mrs. Mildred Davis, associate professor of English; and Charles Patterson, assistant professor of education.

The short stories were judged on the basis of originality and mechanics of writing.

VIPA Completes Plans For Weekend Convention in Lexington

Plans for the annual convention of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association to be held in Lexington this weekend, March 4 and 5, have been completed.

This announcement was released by Margaret Dowdy of Lynchburg College, president of this year's convention which is being jointly sponsored by Washington and Lee and Virginia Military Institute. Dick Martin of V. M. I., convention chairman, and his assistant Dave Clinger of W. & L., who is VIPA's secretary-treasurer, have worked out the plans for this year's convention.

Highlighting the convention will be addresses by William Leverty of the Richmond "Times-Dispatch" at Friday night's banquet and O. W. Riegel, director of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation — Washington and Lee, at the banquet Saturday night. Lloyd B. Jordan of the Jordan Engraving Company of Lynchburg and Shields Johnson of the "Roanoke Times-World" are also guest speakers at the convention.

The convention will open Friday afternoon, March 4, with registration in the Student Union Building, Washington and Lee from 2 to 5 p. m. Mr. Leverty will speak to the convention delegates at a banquet at the Robert E. Lee Hotel at 7 p. m., Friday. At 9 p. m. Friday night the delegates will be entertained with a dance in the Pine Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

The Saturday session of the VIPA convention will open at 10 a. m. with critiques—one for the newspaper editorial staffs, one for the yearbook editorial staffs, one for magazine editorial staffs, and one for business staffs. Lunch break is at 12 noon. Mr. Jordon and Mr. Johnson will speak from 2-3 p. m. on the subjects of "Engraving" and "Business Management," respectively. A coke break will follow at 3 p. m at the V. M. I. Post Exchange.

A business session and elections will begin at 3:15 p. m. The Pine Room at the Mayflower Hotel will be the scene of the Saturday night banquet which will begin at 6 p. m. Mr. Riegel will be the banquet speaker. Prof. Robert H. McNeil of V. P. I., retiring Executive Secretary of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association, will be honored at the banquet. Awards to the various college publications will be given by the Executive Secretary at this banquet. This will bring to close the two-day session of the 1955 VIPA Convention.

Frank Parsons, director of the W. & L. news bureau and a 1953 graduate of Washington and Lee, has been named Temporary Executive secretary upon the resignation of Professor McNeill. Mr. McNeil's resignation comes after a long and distinguished service to the organization. His resignation will be placed before members at the convention.

The purpose of the VIPA convention is to bring about better publications in Virginia's colleges and universities. Through —30—

We, the senior members of the Rotunda staff, for the first time have come to the realization that it's all over!

With this issue, the present newspaper staff makes its final "30" on the last page. This "30," in newspaper lingo, denotes the conclusion of a story. In this case, for some members of the staff, it denotes the conclusion of three years of pounding beats, tracking down news, writing the facts, meeting all deadlines, typing stories, proofreading, writing headlines, making up proof pages, copy reading, and last but not least, reading the final product.

On first realizing that this is our last newspaper, some of us breathe a huge sigh of relief and express a thought of happiness. With a second thought, however, we feel something else—sadness—sounds corny but it is true.

Even though a newspaper office possesses no glamor and the activities of the staff are hard work, the enjoyment we've had on Monday and Tuesday cannot be surpassed in many ways. We shall always remember the jokes, funny incidents and the last minute dashes to the "Snack Bar" for nourishment to hold us to the wee hours of the morning. We shall always remember the last minute features to write, in order to fill in an unexpected hole in the make-up. We shall always remember the humorous suggestions for headlines made by the various staff members. We just shall always remember!

We wrote the editorials to reflect the opinions of the student body, faculty, and administrative staff of the college. In every way we have tried to write opinions, formulate solutions to problems, express gratitude for improvements, and criticize those things which we have found worthy of general criticism.

We have at times, expressed valueless opinions, as a result of poor reasoning or misjudgments, but we have tried to uphold the standards and ethics of good journalism. We have also strived to promote school spirit.

To our 1954 staff—news editor, feature editor, desk editor, copy editor, sports editor, art editors, reporters, business manager, circulation manager, and members of the business staff—we would like to express our deep appreciation, realizing full well that without your support, aid, and cooperation, our newspaper would not have been possible.

To the student body, administration, faculty and subscribers, we would like to say that without your support and backing our paper could not have been published.

To the Farmville Herald, especially Mr. Harry Lancaster, we would like to extend a vote of thanks.

We will now look forward to reading a new Rotunda under a new staff. We wish all the success possible to the 1955-56 Staff.

Now writing our "30" we wish to say good by to you, our readers, and "hello" to a new staff.

——"30"——

Congratulations!

Four girls have been chosen by the student body to serve as Presidents of the Student Government Association, Young Woman's Christian Association, House Council, and Athletic Association. .

The student body has shown that they wish to place their confidence in these girls as leaders, realizing that they will be representatives of the college on this campus as well as other campuses. The Rotunda staff extends its congratulations to these newly-elected officers, and wishes for them success in their undertakings for the coming year.

It is especially important for these girls to realize that their duty is not only to the student body but to the new President of the College. They should stand ready to aid him in all occasions in becoming familiar with the customs and rules of the college and to acquaint him with the individual girls. This is a suggestion which could prove of value to the students and administration if taken under consideration.

Minor elections will take place soon and will be handled in the same manner as major elections. The presidents cannot be held responsible for the duties of the entire organization and do their best work in their studies. It is therefore imperative that the student body, when casting its vote, consider very carefully the merits of each candidate.

The only way to get the girls you want to represent you in office is to vote for them. Vote, and when you vote, think.

Cooperation

It has been observed on numerous occasions that the student body has been disregarding those very rules which have been established solely for its safety.

It is surmised that the students do not fully realize the purpose of fire drills, and as a result consider them an inconvenience rather than a precautionary measure.

Although it is hoped that there will be no fire during our college career, the possibility of one is very real. Should fire break out, we, the student body, want the assurance that those in charge will direct us as before, and that the evacuation of the buildings will be handled with the same efficiency and calmness to which the drills have conditioned us.

It is discouraging to those who attempt to carry out the State Fire Drill Law, to encounter the nonchalant and stubborn attitudes exhibited by numerous individuals of the college—students and members of the administration alike.

A specific incident occurred in the post office last week. The siren audibly sounded five times, signifying a college fire drill. The wardens instructed students to leave the post office but there was little or no cooperation. It was immediately decided to repeat the drill. The result was the same: the students retreated as far as the doorway but would not leave the building.

This behavior is not due to ignorance, nor is it due to inability to follow the rules, but this is one rule to which the students refuse to conform.

If safety is of any value, it is necessary for the entire student body to comply with all rules for fire drills.

Dum-da-da dum!

This is illegal! This is not original! This is copying Stanley's feature last week. This is the Junior's version of "So Long, Seniors!" This is ??

Back to facts. We're the Juniors, two years and ten wrinkles worth more than the freshmen, one year and two miles away from the sophomores and three months to go with the Seniors.

We live on the hill with the steps up it. There's also a tree on the hill but mostly steps. There are about 120 of us. We used to be 200 but now, there are mostly steps.

We like the Seniors. They're not a bad lot. We like their television set, their washing machine, but we like them okay too. We hate their privileges, marvel at their brains, endure their wit, sometimes see their good looks, but they're not a bad lot.

Seniors are well known here. Funny thing, they never get any further than being a senior here then they either deplete or repeat.

We've known them three years and we're used to them being around. We hate to have to get used to a whole, new, senior class. Namely, us.

It's more fun to listen to student teachers' complaints than have them. It's more fun to break the television and washing machine than pay for them. It's more fun to look up to the seniors than be looked up to.

We'll probably miss you all, too —more than you'll miss us. You'll have a whole new world. We'll have a whole new dormitory. You'll be making your own money. We'll be making our own bills. You'll be giving tests. We'll still be taking them.

You'll be cooking your own meals— Well, maybe we are better off, because on the other hand, we'll have the Snack Bar. You'll have the teachers room. We'll have late lights. You'll be pooped by ten o'clock. We'll have each other—but then, we're used to that.

Your leaving makes us think. It's like taking off your loafers and socks, putting on heels and hose and with a little bit of Longwood spirit in your heart to boost you, stepping out itno a world of salaries, budgets and gas bills.

But, you'll do fine because you're not a bad lot. Not a bad lot at all. Like I said, this is the Junior's version of "So long, seniors." Sad, ain't it? Stanley, I wish you'd never written that feature!

LC Visitors Laugh At French Get Up

By JEANNE SAUNDERS

All types and conditions of assorted visitors graced Longwood's campus this past weekend. Among the group assembled here were three outstanding "French" celebrities who wandered up and down the halls in tan trench coats and black berets puffing elongated weeds.

"Judee" (Harris), "Mimi" (Sogholan), and "Non-cee" (Quarles) kept the visitors howling as they sauntered into each and every room spealing nasal utterances and rolling gutteral R's, grinning Ipana-style all the whole. Those knowing the tiniest bit of "le Francais" laughed the loudest; the young ladies' vocabulary consisted solely of:

"Regard the snow," "this child is a peasant," and "here come the police."

And then we wonder what makes the world go 'round.

SOCIAL NOTES

by MARGARET DRYDEN

Party news was a bit scarce again this weekend, but we did manage to find a few items.

Hampden-Sydney came through with two parties. The Theta Chi's and Independents were host at combo parties. Attending the Theta Chi "shindig" were Jan Kuyk, Nancy Lenz, Barba Silcox, Emily Atkinson, Carolyn Meadows, Jean Yancey, Norma Reamy, Elba Flynn, Sally O'Malley, Annette Crain, Violet Marshall, Phoebe Warner, Sally Cecil, and Elizabeth Pancake.

At the Independent house were Madeline Bailey, Anne Caldwell, Anna Miller, Jane Karicofe, Carolyn Clark, Frances Rosencrans, Mary Foster, Jean Windley, Patsy Hamner, and Doris Thompson.

Shirley Ward atended a party at the Theta Kappa Psi House at M. C. V. Fannie Scott was at M. C. V., too.

Virginia opened its doors to Rheta Russell and JoAnne Farless.

Dinny Coates and Jane Caldwalder partied at Washington and Lee this weekend.

And last af all, Betsy Welbon went to "Chang's Chop Suey House" in Yokahama, Japan, last weekend with a naval officer. Chopsticks and soft strains of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" lent a romantic atmosphere to a very pleasant evening.

The rest of us played bridge and watched George Gobel. But, we'll have better luck next time! I almost forgot, though, that there comes a "time for a change" once a year on the staff and that time is now. So, bye-bye and thanks to all of you for giving us the scoop this year. Here's wishing all a date every weekend (or at least every other!) in the coming year.

Present Situation Raises New Policy For Co-Existence

By JOYCE GILCHREST

American foreign policy has been one of the most controversial issues before Congress, highlighted by the Knowland-Eisenhower conflict. Within the last few months, however, a new policy in the Far East has been formulated and it seems to please the majority in this country.

Red China is now so powerful that the United States can neither afford to ignore it nor oppose it. Thus, we cannot risk becoming involved in the problems of Nationalist China which are not essential to the defense of Formosa. Chiang Kai-shek has been warned that any war which he precipitates with Red China will have to be his own war.

This new, long-range policy is based on coexistence rather than aggression. This administration and the previous one have both demonstrated a desire for coexistence in their dealings in Korea, Indo-China, Quemoy and the Tachen Islands. In all these cases military pressure could have been applied to enlarge the conflict into an out-and-out war.

An objective of this new Asian policy is to encourage a clean break between Moscow and the Red Chinese capital, Peking. Our new course must succeed in coexistence unless we intend to make war on Peking.

DOT'S DASHES

by DOT DOUGLAS

This is our last dash (hear those trumpets in the distance!) Since it is the last one, it's time for first things first, or in other words, we wish to give tributes to worthy and worthless things and people.

We Give Tribute To:

The Library—Your clock served us well.

The Dining Hall—You served us.

The Post Office—You goofed!

Coffee—You were too weak to stain our clothes.

Housemothers — You wouldn't think of doing the things we do today. That's why you didn't do them. You didn't think of them.

Bridgeplayers—You don't bid because aces get trumped, kings get finessed, and the rest are too small to count.

Snow—You gave us colds and cold feet, and a day away from teaching sweet.

Rain—Good old drippy, sloppy rain, you made our curls fall out again.

Sun—You're fun.

Drink—You're pink.

Cokes—You're our 15-mile favorite.

H. . S.—You're our seven-mile neighbor.

Green and White—As freshmen for you we'd fight, as sophs we liked you all right, as juniors and seniors real—well guess how we feel?

Chi—Hi!

The Infirmary—You gave us a pill and made us ill, but who else has monogrammed tongue depressors.

Exams—Boo!

Movies—Television is getting bigger and better.

Radio—Goodness, gracious sakes alive, why do you stop after five?

The Rec—Heck!

Boys—Two boys are better than one, but for men, we yen.

Parties — Especially Mitch's party celebrating her seventeenth payment on her tea room bill.

The Brain—A wonderful machine—always works till we're called on in class.

Dumb Man—A dumb man is a dope, a dope is a drug to relieve pain. Therefore a dumb man is just what the doctor ordered.

Smoking—We cancer there's anything finer.

Friends—People with money and clothes to lend.

Sports Cars — Unsanforized Fords.

Homo Sapiens—That's you. Our tribute to you is eat onions. You'll be remembered. Actually you wil be anyway: You see—

Speech Therapy Class Aids Local Youngsters

By JAN KUYK

Each Monday and Wednesday at 11 a. m., eight Longwood students journey to the Training School to hold class. They are not enrolling in the sixth grade, nor are they student teaching, but are working with the elementary students who have speech difficulties. Their class is speech therapy, and they are trying to learn and, at the same time, aid the young students.

Dr. C. L. S. Earley, associate professor of English, likes to refer to the therapy classroom as a "broom closet" and readily admits that the work with the elementary students is an experiment both for himself and for his class.

Varying from lisping and stuttering to the easily cured baby talk, the children's speech defects offer many of the problems that a graduate speech therapist might encounter. So far the youngsters have shown no shyness and are eager to work with the class.

A rather good knowledge of psychology is necessary if the child's difficulties are to be properly diagnosed. If eleven year old Johnny talks too rapidly, occasionally stutters, and constantly wants to be noticed, it is probably because he wants extra attention. Billy is hard to understand because he speaks indistinctly; the reason is quite evident when it is discovered that he has four sisters and undoubtedly has little chance to talk. Of course, some of the children have definite impediments that must be cured by constant practice and exercise.

Not only do the children work on their difficulties by reading, but also by sounding the alphabet, by choral readings, and by playing word games. The boys who are interested in baseball enjoy playing word baseball in which they advance a base by each word they can think of and pronounce beginning with a given letter. If they miss the word, they are "out."

Musing incidents are constantly arising in working with the youngsters. George Osburn asked two of the boys what they wanted to be when they grew up. One said that he wanted to be a space cadet, while the other aspired to be a policeman. When George declared that he believed of the two he would rather be the policeman since it was safer, the space cadet replied, "Oh, it doesn't matter if my ship blows up, I'll just bail out in my gravity parachute!" This cadet was just waving goodbye to his ninth birthday.

Library Holds Faculty Art

by DOT DOUGLAS

Art can be exemplified in many ways—a tea set, a water color study of pigeons, decorative saints in black and white, a seen in the browsing room of the Library—all are examples of art forms, as conceived by the Longwood College art professors.

Members of the College art department, Miss Virginia Bedford, Miss Annie Lee Ross, and Mrs. Janice Lemen, are presenting a faculty art exhibit to show their own work in the forms of art which they teach.

Prints, enamel, ceramics, carvings, textiles, oils and water colors are art forms shown in the exhibit which began Tuesday and will be displayed until March 31.

Miss Bedford's work is, on the whole, of a crafts nature. She is showing a variety of ceramic work and enamel on copper. She has displayed two water color still lifes, showing a dry paper technique. These painting are hanging behind the circulation desk in the Library.

Water colors, block prints, wood carvings and jewelry are being exhibited by Miss Ross.

Her block prints include six black and white saints. The saints are done in a decorative manner which includes foliage and birds. Two of these prints have been in an exhibit of national showing.

Miss Ross has 14 water colors of a realistic nature on exhibition also. A series of Victorian houses was done in Columbus, Ohio, as part of her Masters thesis at Ohio State University. Another groups shows Colorado as seen from her cabin near Colorado Springs. Her landscapes show moods in nature and she especially likes exciting skies, particularly those found in nature before a storm.

Mrs. Lemen features water color and oil paintings, serigraphs, and textiles. "The Day Camp Pickett Band Played," a decorative water color, recalls a memorable school day last year.

Students from Southwest Virginia will be interested in Mrs. Lemen's series of water colors which she did on that section in the summer of 1953. Mrs. Lemen's 19 water colors on exhibition show great variety of subject matter and technique. Her work ranges from realistic to abstract.

From the Bleachers

Longwood's varsity basketball team suffered its first loss of the season against Bridgewater College by a score of 62-41 on Saturday, Feb. 26 at 2 p. m.

The early part of the game was a see-saw battle with the first quarter ending in a 14-14 balance.

Bridgewater took the lead in the second quarter of the game. The half time score stood at 30-22 in the visitor's favor.

The Longwood players were unable to retain the lead again. Third quarter found the home team trailing 25-49.

Bridgewater's forwards scored six field goals and one free shot to give them a final score of 62 over Longwood's 41.

Longwood cagers seeing action were Virginia Burgess, Nancy Richardson, Barbara Whitehead, Hilda Hartis, Helen Waitman, Mary Ann Ward, Jane Lohr, Jo Maxey, Jane Carson, and Linda Chambers.

Bridgewater girls playing in the game were Owens, Heatwole, Kelly, Rowe, West, Hushman, Ikenberry, and Hersch.

Longwood's Varsity squad topped Norfolk Division 63-48 in the fourth game of the season on the home court Saturday, Feb. 19.

The lead in score changed throughout the game. Longwood held a 16-10 margin at the end of the first quarter, but held only a one point lead, 29-28 at half time.

The third quarter ended with Norfolk Division ahead by one field goal 38-36. Longwood took over in the fourth quarter, and brought the score to 63, holding the visitors to their final 48 points.

Burgess, Whitehead, Richardson, Ward, Hartis, and Waitman were the starting players for Longwood. Others who saw action were Carson, Chambers, Maxey, and Lohr.

000 at each rally.

In the interest of youth evangelism, he traveled through ten European nations during 1945 and on his return to America spoke to crowds ranging from 20,000 to 70,000 in such stadiums as Soldier's Field in Chicago, the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, and the Chicago Stadium.

Enrolling as a special student at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1948, Templeton completed a three year course of study at the institution. On May 4, 1951 he was ordained by the Presbyterian Church U. S. A. and was elected a member of the staff of the Joint Department of Evangelism of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A. by the General Board. He was the first full-time evangelist to be elected a member of the staff of the Council.

Dr. Templeton has done a great deal of work in radio and television, speaking regularly on "National Vespers" and "Look Up and Live." His evangelistic missions regularly draw attendance in excess of 10,000.

Dr. Charles B. (Chuck) Templeton has been chosen as the speaker for Longwood's celebration of the Y. W. C. A. national centenniel.

Dept. of Welfare And Institutions Awards Scholarship To Bailey

Jane Bailey of Lexington, a senior of Longwood College, has been awarded a scholarship which will cover all fees of the college for the senior year by the State Department of Welfare and Institutions.

She received the first scholarship awarded by the Department of Welfare and Institutions to seniors in accredited colleges and universities in Virginia who are preparing for professional positions with the state or a local welfare department or a juvenile and domestic relations court in Virginia. Recipients of the scholarship are required to work for one year in such positions in Virginia.

Delegates from colleges throughout the state will attend the meeting in Lexington this weekend.

Delegates from the Rotunda staff are Shirley Ward, Gail Leonard, Jackie Marshall, Jan Kuyk, Ella Carter, Joyce Gillchrest, hoff, Shirley Kemp, and Pat Cantrell.

Representing the Virginian are Donnie Devine, Peggy Worthington, Anne Brooking, Marion Ruffin, Helen Warriner, Fannie Scott, Frances Raine, Mary Jo Hutchinson, Marguerite Franklin, and Carolyn Stoneman.

Margaret Miller, Molly Harvey, Phyllis Nurney, and Georgia Jackson will represent the Colonnade at the convention.

H-S Contemplates Larger Enrollment

Dr. Edgar Gammon, president of Hampden-Sydney College, has announced that the college is contemplating increasing its enrollment. A committee of the Board of Trustees has been appointed to investigate the possibilities.

The prospect of increasing the student body raised several problems. If the enrollment were enlarged to 500 students, the college would have to raise $250.000 to meet the cost of improvements. The Commons would have to be enlarged, and housing facilities for faculty members increased.

To enlarge the student body to 500 members, the college must raise two million dollars. A new Commons and a new dormitory would still be necessary to increase faculty housing. McIlwaine Hall will either be renovated or demolished.

Another matter of interest to Hampden-Sydney students was considered at this meeting. This is the proposed lake behind Cushing Hall. It had been reported earlier this year that consent of the Board was the only remaining requirement for the realization of this plan.

The decision of the Board was to create a committe, headed by J. W. Dunnington of Farmville, to inquire into the costs and problems of building and keeping up a lake of the needed size. Money for the proposed lake has already been allocated. Four presbyteries, acting jointly, have offered to pay for the construction of the lake suitable for recreational purposes.

'Dark of the Moon' Rehearsals Progress As Cast Fills Air With Mountain Dialect

By SALLY CECIL

From the depths of the wardrobe room of Jarman Auditorium voices heavy with mountain dialect issued forth.

Further investigation revealed a rehearsal for "Dark of the Moon" in full swing. The cast sat about the room on the floor and delivered lines from between dress racks, behind boxes, and under tables. The stage was in use, so the cast was holding a line rehearsal, because when Dr. C. L. S. Earley directs, the show must go on.

All parties concerned seem quite enthusiastic about the presentation of the beautiful mountain story, "Dark of the Moon." It combines the harsh realism of mountain life with the mysteries and intrigue of the supernatural. As in any situation, the play has its lighter moments of comic relief, but essentially it is a deep, moving story of the conflicts, anxieties, hopes and bitter disillusions which all humanity encounters.

It appeals to the mature audience who will understand that the playwrights are not laughing at the characters in any way, but are bringing them to life as the charming, realistic people they are.. Interviews further verified this point.

Dr. Earley, the director, said that this play is "one of the most original and interesting plays I've directed. Every college theatre should present new and challenging drama.

Nancy Quarles, stage manager, feels that it is one of the best shows that she has ever seen written in this style. She stated that "It is good for us to do it because it's experimental."

Jim Nichols interprets his role of John, the Witch Boy, as one containing double tragedy -- first, in that the character discovers that he cannot actually be a human; and secondly in that human existence is never fully satisfactory because humans never really know each other.

'After years of voice training and struggling for correct enunciation, I find it quite difficult to achieve the earthy dialect required," said Nancy Nelson, who portrays Barbara Allen. Nancy feels that although the play concerns itself with fantasy, it is just as tragic and moving as any realism. She further stated that very delicate treatment is needed to present a true picture of these mountain people and their lives, rather than lapsing into satire or burlesque.

James Parker who will be seen as Preacher Haggler feels that it is a challenge to create the role of a mountain preacher. He stated that the role gives him a chance to create someone that really exists and yet retains a very heavy characterization. In reference to the play, James expressed his belief that it is "destined to become one of the classic plays of the Modern American Theatre. The Longwood Players are showing growth and development in presenting something so different and experimental in nature." He probably presented the feelings of the entire cast, when he stated that the playwrights are to be complimented on their endeavor to capture and dramatize this segment of American life.

Popular Evangelist Addresses Students For 'Y' Anniversary

Templeton on Campus Through Tomorrow

by MARGARET DRYDEN

"Young people offer a greater challenge to me than any other group," said Dr. Chuck Templeton while talking to a group of Longwood students following assembly yesterday.

Dr. Templeton, who is on the Longwood campus in observance of the Y. W. C. A. centennial festivities this week, is a young man of medium build with a friendly and warm manner. He speaks in a powerful and down-to-earth tone which proves to be very enlightening.

Home In New York

While traveling as an itinerant evangelist some years ago, he met and later married the former Catherine Orozco, noted mezzo-soprano soloist, who was then studying at Metro-Goldwyn Mayer studio. Dr. and Mrs. Templton now make their home in New York City where he is secretary of Evangelism for the Presbyterian Church. The other member of the Templeton family is their Siamese cat, "Mia," which is a Spanish word meaning "mine." "When we first got her, she walked around saying "mia" so often that we decided to adopt the term as her name," explained Dr. Templeton. This was Mrs. Templton's suggestion as her native tongue is Spanish, her original home being in Mexico. Mrs. Templeton accompanies her husband on many of his tours. She still sings a great deal and often teams up with her husband.

Television Aids Work

Dr. Templeton, who has been in evangelistic work for the past ten years, regularly appears on the television show "Look Up and Live." It is especially designed for young people who do not have God in their lives. The show is introduced with the current hit tunes after which Dr. Templeton, dressed in a plain business suit, begins talking. "Before they realize what has happened, I'm talking to them about God," said Dr. Templeton.

Dr. Templeton's hobby is drawing. It was once his work, for at the age of seventeen, he was the sports cartoonist of The Toronto Globe and Mail. He is quite interested in sports of all kinds although most of his enjoyment is as a spectator now.

About two weeks ago, Dr. Templeton released his newest book, "Life Looks Up" which was published by Harper's and can be purchased at book stores now.

To Speak In Jarman

Dr. Templeton spoke in Jarman Hall yesterday afternoon and again last evening. He will speak in Jarman Hall tomorrow night at 7 o'clock. He is also speaking for Hampden-Sydney's Religious Emphasis Week activities. On the two occasions that he has already spoken, students have expressed that they have enjoyed his messages and come away from them understanding more fully the power of God.

Editor Picks Staff Posts

Positions for the 1955-56 Rotunda staff have been appointed by Gail Leonard of Richmond, new editor-in-chief of the publication.

Today's release lists Jackie Marshall of Suffolk as managing editor Jan Kuyk of Richmond has assumed the responsibilities of news editor with Adele Donaldson of Alexandria as assistant news editor.

Feature editor is Margaret Dryden of Salisbury, Md., and Pat Cantrell of Boydton has accepted the position of social editor.

Thelma Emory of Eberon was appointed copy editor. The desk editor's duties have been assumed by Shirley Kemp of Hampton.

Linda Garrison of Williamsburg will serve as sports editor, starting with the next issue of the Rotunda.

Dr. Priestly To Talk On World Situations

Dr. S. E. Gerard Priestley, a well-known speaker on international affairs, will address the Longwood student body in an assembly next Tuesday.

Sponsored here by Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary social science fraternity, Dr. Priestly is being sent through the Council for International Education and Research.

FBLA Group Plans Meeting At Longwood

Longwood College will serve as host to the Future Business Leaders of America during the second regional meeting of District II, to be held in the Student Building, Saturday, March 12, 1955.

Dublin Players Arrive To Stage 'Pygmalion'

Informal Banquet At College Estate Honors President

by JAN KUYK

Last night at Longwood House the faculty and administration of Longwood held an informal banquet in honor of President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster who are leaving in June.

Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women, was general chairman for the banquet while members of both the faculty and administration were on the committees. In charge of the banquet was Mrs. Genevieve Holliday, college hostess and Mrs. Louise Y. Dugger of the tea room. Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology, supervised the program. All art work was done by Miss Virginia Bedford, while others serving in various capacities were Miss Emily Barksdale, Miss Rebecca L. Brockenbrough, Miss Helen Draper, Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss and Dr. R. C. Simonini, college professors, Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary, supervised the purchasing of a gift for the Lancasters.

Each person at the banquet was presented with a program of the evening's activities. These programs were decorated with a map of the Lancaster's future home in Bath County on the Cow Pasture River. Across from their home is

Irish Play Marks Fourth In Series

"Pygmalion," one of the most popular plays by the Irish wit, George Bernard Shaw, will be presented by the Dublin Players of Dublin, Ireland, in Jarman Auditorium, tonight. This will be the fourth program in Longwood College's 1954-55 Artists Series.

Composed of the finest actors from Ireland's famous Abbey and Gate Theatres, the company is now touring American cities from coast to coast presenting great Irish and English classics.

"Variety," the trade paper of the Theatre, has rated the theplans as "top entertainment." In their television appearances in New York, notably Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town" on CBS-TV, the company gained such unusual response that they were asked by Mr. Sullivan to repeat performances several times on his program. Audiences from San Francisco to Houston to Boston have applauded their repertoire of plays by Shaw, O'Casey, Shakespeare, Ibsen, Synge, Lady Gregory, Oscar Wilde, Noel Coward, and Lennox Robinson.

"Pygmalion" is a modern version of the Greek legend of Pygmalion and Galatea, the story of the sculptor who fell in love with a beautiful statue of his own creation. The Greeks would hardly recognize their original tale, however, for Shaw, in telling of the professor who undertook to teach a rough Cockney flower girl the way of society, unleashes his fabled jibs at the foibles of the present day in his usual hilarious manner.

Professor Higgens meets Eliza Doolittle quite by chance, and charmed by her beauty, determines to perform a great experiment. He will take this girl into his home, correct her speech, teach her manners, and see whether or not his theories about environment and heredity are proved correct. The experiment is a roaring success. After several months of diligent work, Higgens exposes Eliza to the most magnificent ball of the season as a veritable lady of high birth.

Maureen Halligan will play the role of the prim housekeeper in "Pygmalion." She, with her husband Ronald Ibbs, is the founder of the Dublin Players. One of Ireland's most accomplished actresses, she has played leading roles with the Dublin Players for the past two years and has appeared in several English films. She is both a skilled director and writer as well as an actress, and a contributor to the Irish press.

Others who are taking leading roles in "Pygmalion" are Julia Worth, who will portray the role of Eliza Doolittle; Geoffrey A Murphy, Colonel Pickering, Ken Huxham, Alfred Doolittle.

Miss Worth, the youngest of the Dublin Players, is in her first season with that company. At the age of eighteen, she won acclaim by the famous Gaiety Hall in London where she studied under some of the outstanding directors of the day.

Mr. Murphy, who started his theatrical career by winning a scholarship to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art, has appeared in repeated television shows, motion pictures and theatres in England. Although an Irishman, this is Mr. Murphy's first appearance with an Irish company.

Mr. Huxham, who experience

110 Students Attend VIPA

A record number of college publication staffs, editors and business managers attended the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association convention held in Lexington this weekend.

Fifteen schools were represented in the registration of 110 college students. The largest delegation of students attending the convention was from Longwood College. Longwood had 23 representatives present. The delegates attended publication critiques, business sessions, and talks and discussions rendered by engraving experts, leading journalists, and newspaper men in the states of Virginia and North Carolina.

Officers for the next year's convention were elected Saturday afternoon during the business session meeting. Winnie Louhoff of Longwood College was elected secretary-treasurer. Stan Zitz of Virginia Military Institute was elected president for the 1956 convention and Rod Layman of Bridgewater College was elected vice-president.

The convention delegates also elected Frank Parsons, who is director of the News Bureau at Washington and Lee, executive-secretary of V. I. P. A. He replaces Robert H. McNeil, director of the News Bureau at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, who has held the executive secretary's position for the convention since 1949. Worker [illegible] Mr. Parsons will act as co-ordinator for the activities of V. I. P. A. particularly in executive committee work.

Four students were appointed by the new officers to serve on committees at next year's convention. Buddy Stump of the University of Richmond was appointed publicity director; Carter Smith of Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Van Stevens of V. M. I. will serve as council members; and Anne Forsyte of Madison College, will serve as convention chairman.

Announcements of various publications from various colleges was made at the banquet Saturday night by Margaret Dowdy, president of this year's convention.

In the yearbook judging, The Bomb of V. M. I. received first place recognition; The Web of the University of Richmond received a second place standing, and The Rehearsal, Staging Of Fantasy Continue As Cast Prepares For 'Dark of the Moon'

by SALLY CECIL

Rehearsals and stage work are now well under way for "Dark of the Moon," to be presented at 8 p. m., on March 17, 18, and 19, in Jarman Auditorium.

Dr. C. L. S. Earley, director of the play, and all members of the cast are working enthusiastically on the creation and characterization of the roles.

Witches Nancy Tanley Masters, Sally Cecil, Dotty Morris, Florence Soghoian and Conjure Woman Joyce Quick attempt to lure Witch Boy James Nichols back to their inhuman existance in a scene from "Dark of the Moon."

"Dark of the Moon" is a musical fantasy of mountain folk of Tennessee. These people are basically good, 'God-fearing' people who, nevertheless, meet any crisis which is beyond their comprehension with violence. Dr. Earley has cast Jim Nichols as John, the witch boy who gets Conjure Man, Anne Brooking, and Conjure Woman Joyce Quick, to change him to a human so he can marry Barbara Allen, portrayed by Nancy Nelson.

The play is taken from one of 230 odd versions of the folk ballad "Barbara Allen." It was written by Howard Richardson and William Berney and was first produced in New York in 1945. It was acclaimed by the New York critics as one of the best fantasies of the modern theatre. New York critics compared it to "Tobacco Road" for its earthy humor, to burlesque for its sexiness, to "Oklahoma," for its easy way of introducing tangy folksongs, to "Grand Guignol" for its thrills, and to Shakespeare's "The Tempest" for its combination of life, comedy and fantasy, and its moments of great poetic beauty.

Fair Witch and Dark Witch, portrayed by Nancy Tanley Masters, and Sally Cecil try to lure Witch Boy back to them throughout the play. As a human Witch Boy encounters the violent emotions of the valley people and the dominating personality of Preacher Haggler, played by James Parker.

"Dark of the Moon" will be the college's second production for the year.

Reviewing Student Government

Editors' note: The following is an article discussing the functions and freedom of the Longwood Student Government Association. It has been written at the request of the Richmond Times-Dispatch and a copy is being sent to their editorial staff.

The city paper is formulating a review of the trends exercised in student government associations in Virginia womens' colleges. The Times-Dispatch will study this release and quote excerpts from it for their summarizing review.

Shirley Ward, a senior member of the Longwood Student Council, prepared this article.

A student government association is only another name for a police force!

No doubt many college students and even members of college faculties throughout the country have this mistaken idea concerning the functions of an organization of this type. This idea is prevalent because one of the association's duties is often to hear various cases concerning the breaking of honor codes or social rules. In the minds of students, this one unpleasant duty is magnified until the Student Government is thought of as the "FBI" or a "judge and jury."

Every college in the State of Virginia has a governing body. In turn, each association is, in various degrees, representative of certain ideals and standards. It is true that some Student Government associations not only deal with students who have not conformed entirely with regulations set up by the colleges, but are also dedicated to a higher service.

This article will serve as an explanation of the status of the Student Government Association of Longwood College in Farmville.

Every Longwood student is a member of the Student Government Association. The student body is governed by the Student Council. Officers are elected by the students. Two representatives chosen by each class serve on the council as well as ex-officio members who are presidents of major organizations. One day student also serves on the Council. This council has the responsibility of enforcing and upholding the honor system. This organization manages the affairs of the student body in cooperation with the administration. Before going into detail concerning its actual functions, a brief review of its history is in order.

The association on Longwood's campus is not a new thing! On the contrary, it is quite old and, in turn, has progressed over a long period of time. It was established in 1910 under the student presidency of A. Louise Ford who is now Mrs. S. Gardner Waller, wife of Major General Waller, adjutant general of the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Its purpose was to preserve student honor and to further the interests of the school insofar as it lay within its power. This early council had jurisdiction over study periods and activities in the dining hall, both functions now under the jurisdiction of the House Council and the Dining Hall Committee, and both of which are composed of students only. Although its purpose included the preservation of honor, the Honor System, as such, did not make its appearance until 1929 under the presidency of Miss Etta Marshall, now Mrs. J. A. Stubbs, living in Washington State. The 1930 edition of the college annual aptly stated its purpose:

"To live our life at its best, to grow into wider freedom, to make and to accept the pervasive college spirit, to leave Farmville a little stronger than we found it—for this the Honor System came into being and for this the Student Government Association exists."

Since 1929 the Student Council has received more and more freedom in its activities. M. Boyd Coyner, professor of education at Longwood, made several interesting observations on the progress of the association.

"The biggest change during the course of time was the College's transition from a two-year program to a four-year program. With this change came more continuity in the student body. The association was able to set up a substantial working program."

When questioned about his opinion of the Honor System here, he stated: "The Honor System protects, vitalizes, and strengthens the student body in a healthful way. The morale of the student body is better for its being present on campus."

He said that having the students sign the honor pledge at the beginning of their freshman year was good. He stated, however, that the signing of the pledge isn't necessarily a cause for honor but definitely affects it. "More dependable behavior results," he said.

The foregoing deals somewhat with the background of Longwood's organization and how it functioned in the past. The present Student Government covers a much wider range. As previously stated, "It manages the affairs of the student body." As an illustration of its expanding function, it has assumed the management of May Day. Last year for the first time, students took complete charge of May Day activities. The Student Council works out all preliminaries in nominating candidates for chairman of the May Day Committee, from the student body at large, and placing these candidates before students for election. The business manager is chosen in the same manner. After this major election, small committee chairmen are elected. The Student Government continues to act as an advisory board to the May Day Committee.

The Council also takes complete charge of Orientation week for freshmen in the fall. This week serves as an introduction to the college—its customs and traditions—as well as to the acivities of college life in general. During this period of time, social and house rules and the Honor Code, which each freshman must sign, are explained. This is considered the most important aspect of Orientation Week.

In connection with this "First Week" activity, the Student Council edits and publishes a Student Handbook, containing general information, a map of the college and surrounding area, and the constitutions of major student organizations.

The Student Council also institgates various projects in connection with special events such as Founder's Day and Commencement, and carries these projects out quietly and without "fanfare." Students and faculty members, in many cases, are unaware of these proceedings until they are announced.

Ushers for Longwood Artists Series programs are provided by the Council.

Dr. R. C. Simonini, Jr., professor of English, commented on the activities of the Council.

"It seems to operate satisfactorily and effectively. The Honor Code works in a woman's college better than in institutions for men and co-educational institutions."

Miss Beverly Hershberger, a freshman, stated her opinions concerning the Council, "It seems to be well organized and fair-minded. The signing of the Honor Code was impressive, almost sacred! It makes one feel that he doesn't want to break it. It places a trust in the student body and it brings members of the student body together."

Of the other students questioned concerning the activities of the Student Government, many did not know that the Council engaged in anything other than the trying of cases of misconduct or infringements of the Honor Code. (The latter are very few in number.)

The main word in the foregoing discussions, however, is the word "student." The Council at Longwood is given freedom in carrying out its functions. It is truly a Student Government, working with the administration to clear up problems occurring during the course of its activities. The administration acts only in an advisory capacity or as a policy determining body.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster said that during his nine years as President of Longwood College, he has never reversed a decision of the Student Council. However, he has, at times, asked the Council to reconsider a case when he was able to furnish evidence which was not available at the time when the Council made its decision.

Dr. George W. Jeffers, professor of biology, and advisor to the group for the past five years, summed up his opinions in this way.

"An advisor to a student government is somewhat of an anachronism since there is the ever-present danger of defeating the functions of student government. So long as you have an advisor or an advisory committee, you cannot have a goverment by students, for students."

"At Longwood," he continued, "during the past decade, the students have assumed more and more responsibility for their own conduct—and have done remarkably well. They still have a long way to go in determining policy, but I have noticed that as the students show a willingness to assume the responsibility, the administration is willing to relinquish the policy making functions."

The Student Council at Longwood College thus far has been able to manage every situation with which it has had to deal. Both students and administration seem to give it their wholehearted support.

Officers for this year are Miss Dorothy Vaden of Danville, president; Miss Jane Bailey of Lexington, vice-president; Miss Carolyn Gray of Colonial Heights, secretary; and Miss Jane Blake of Norfolk, treasurer. Officers for 1955-56 will assume duties next month.

Wandering Lunatic Lurks in LC Dorms After Breakdown

by JACKIE MARSHALL

Hi! I'm losing my mind. Slowly but surely, I'm losing my mind. It's not so bad—losing your mind. In fact, I believe I'll be happier once I've completely lost it.

It all happened one pitch-black winter's night. (Which night doesn't matter when you're losing your mind). I remember gazing out of the dirt-fogged window at the rain which was sweeping across the grounds with fury. Every now and then, the blackness was relieved only by the occasional fiery bolts of lightning which zig-zagged across the sky. I shivered in the damp cold of the large rambling house and pulled my ragged shawl closer around my skinny neck. Teeth chattering, knees knocking and eyeballs twitching, I groped my way to the stairs. Hesitating there a moment, I shuddered in dread of leaving the security of that dark, damp, dirty cell I called my room to go down that long, winding staircase into the unknown gloom below.

Holding my quivering chin high, I mustered all the courage my lonely, little body could and began the descent. Down, down, down (gasp!), down. Stop! What was that noise? What was that dark form slithering down the hall? (It was here that I first began to lose my mind.) Courage, girl! Courage. Down, down, down (gasp No. 2), down and I had reached the depths of darkness.

I leaned against the slimy wall, regaining my strength. Then pulling my ragged shawl close once more, staggered into another little room.

I had made it! Hallelujah, I had made it! I slumped to the floor, sobbing with relief. Finally, I pulled myself together, drew my ragged shawl closer, and, with trembling hands reached for the knob on the wall. Three twists to the left—one and a half twists to the right—then the little door—reach inside—in fact, reach all the way out and through the other side. Fingers come out dusty, cold, empty.

I drew back, disbelieving. Big fat tears rolled down my face. My shoulders sagged so far that my old ragged shawl fell on the floor.

I turned to leave and standing before me was the dark form. "Mail up?", she cheerfully asked. (It was then that I lost my mind). Yes, I killed the form and stuffed her into Box 248. So, Ma, don't bother to write me anymore. For the first time in three years—there's no room in my mail box. Hee, hee, hee, hee heeeee!

Spring-Hot Sun, Roof-Tan Tan-Burn, Pain--Oh, Man!!

by JACKIE MARSHALL

This is that time of year when Longwood's fancy turns to thoughts of obtaining sun tans—a most commendable endeavor upon the students' part to create beautiful, healthy complexions. However, as has been the case in years past, this step is often taken to the extreme. Hours upon hours, day after day, of basking in the sun's rays is unhealthful to the individual, and has unattractive effects upon the campus, in particular, the roofs of each dormitory.

As to the health of the student, it has been advised each year by the medical staff of the college that excessive sun bathing be avoided. There have been numerous cases of sun-poisoning in the infirmary in past years and too much sunning is harmful to body tissues.

Then, there are the roofs,—a fortunate invention. Without them we'd get wet when it rains, cold when it snows and blown away with the wind. However, Longwood has created yet another use for their roofs. We lounge on their flat surfaces, hang on to their slanted surface, and moan on their gravelled surface. Roofs offer no claim to comfort but we followers of the ultra - violet bravely endure all. Unfortunately, we mis-use the roofs. By the end of the sun-tan season, coke bottles, lotion bottles, paper plates, paper napkins, newspapers, magazines and other unclaimed trash littler the roofs from corner to crevice. This practice is entirely unnecessary. Using the roof is permissible; mis-using it is frowned on by House Council and it is against the principles of Longwood. In the future months of spring weather, it is hoped we will all develop beach-brown complexions. However, it is also suggested that this be accomplished with all due respect to the appearance of the school's students and property.

From the Bleachers

BY LOU WILDER

Class basketball and volleyball games begin March 21. Now is the time to get your eight practices and support your color team. To date, the red and whites are leading in the race for the color cup by a score of 10-0.

Basketball practices are held at 4 p. m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Volleyball practices are held at 3:00 Tuesdays and Thursdays; 7:00 Tuesdays and 4:00 on Wednesdays.

The ping pong tournament is under way. Get your opponent's name and plan to have your match as soon as possible.

Reminder: Rec swim is held at 10 p. m. Wednesdays and at 4 p. m. Fridays. Caution: Don't go at 5 p. m. on Wednesdays. That's Men's Day!

Tennis season is right around the corner. For the sake of the courts' longer life, be sure to wear your gym shoes rather than street shoes while playing.

Congratulations to the varsity basketball team on its successful season. Five wins and one loss is a commendable record.

Five members of the varsity team will be graduated in June. They are Nell Crocker, Mary Ann Ward, Hilda Hartis, Helen Waitman, and Virginia Burgess. We hope they'll be watching for news of basketball and other sports in "From the Bleachers" column next year.

Reed and Barton Co. Offers Scholarship To College Students

A $500 cash scholarship will be awarded the winner of the "Silver Opinion Competition' contest sponsored by Reed and Barton during the month of March.

Each Longwood student has been invited to participate in this contest by giving her opinion on her favorite Reed and Barton design stating why she likes it best or why its suits the way she lives. The competition will be judged on the basis of interesting opinions rather than literary techniques.

Besides the first grand award of a $500 cash scholarship, a second and third grand award of $250 cash scholarships will be made.

Entry blanks can be secured by the Reed and Barton Longwood representative, Barbara Mays on second floor, junior building.

New Dean's Office Adds More Space

Remodeling of the Dean's Office in Ruffner Hall was completed last week. This work was done to give another entrance to the office and to enable Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women, to use the larger room as a conference room. Previously, Miss Gleaves found it necessary to receive guests in the Virginia Room.

With the building of the new entrance to the office, Miss Nancy Chambers, assistant dean of women, has moved her desk into the former inner office, and students may now sign out in this room, as well as in the larger room. New built-in cabinets have been put into Miss Chambers' office, and the furniture has been rearranged. This office has also been painted. In the near future Miss Gleaves' office will also be repainted.

Social Notes

by PAT CANTRELL

Longwood girls visited many campuses in Virginia this weekend.

V. M. I. and W. & L. opened wide their doors for the V. I. P.A. convention in Lexington. Enjoying their hospitality from Longwood were Shirley Ward, Gail Leonard, Jackie Marshall, Jan Kuyk, Ella Carter, Joyce Gillchrest, Shirley Kemp, Pat Cantrell, Frances Raine, Doris Thompson and Donnie Devine. Also Peggy Worthington, Marian Ruffin, Helen Warriner, Fannie Scott, Marguerite Franklin, Carolyn Stoneman, Bootsie Miller, Mollie Harvey, Georgia Jackson, Winnie Louhoff and Barbara Southern attended.

At PiKA rush parties at U. Va. were Sarah Hackworth, Beth Kent, June Manlove and Carolyn Stanley. Jane Lohr was at the DKE house and Kathy O'Leary at Sigma Chi house. Stephanie Bauder attended parties at the Law School.

Team Records Final Victory

Longwood's varsity basketball team added a fifth win to its record in the final game of the season by defeating William and Mary 50-26. The team has suffered one loss this season.

The Longwood starters Virginia Burgess, Barbara Whitehead, Nancy Richardson, Helen Waitman, Hilda Hartis and Mary Ann Ward held the William and Mary sextet with a 15-1 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Half time score showed Longwood leading 25-9. During the third quarter, Longwood scored 8 points while William and Mary scored 13. However, the score remained in Longwood's favor at the third quarter and stood 33-22.

Game time found Longwood's cagers with an even 50 to William and Mary's 26.

Other girls playing for Longwood were Ann Snyder, Jo Maxey, Nell Crocker, Jane Dowdy, Jane Lohr, Loretta Kuhn, Patsy Hamner and Linda Chambers. Cagers for William and Mary were Wood, Senic, Chrisman, Kent, Davis, Riggan, Mathews, Smith and Simmerman.

Past wins of the season were over Roanoke College, Westhampton College, Madison College and Norfolk Division of W. and M. The only loss of the season went to Bridgewater.

15 Colleges Send Members To Annual VIPA Convention

Bugle of V. P. I. received honorable mention along with The Calyx of Washington and Lee University.

The Ring-Tum Phi, Friday Edition, of Washington and Lee ranked first place in the newspaper competition. The Stratford Traveler of Stratford College received a rating of second place. The Richmond Collegian of the University of Richmond received honorable mention.

In the magazine competition, The Royalist of the College of William and Mary walked off with first place honors. The Hampden-Sydney Magazine of Hampden-Sydney College ranked second place in the magazine judging. From the University of Virginia, The Spectator received honorable mention.

Washington and Lee and V. M. I. acted as co-hosts of the convention.

Highlighting the convention activities was the banquet speech Saturday night by O. W. Riegel, director of the Lee Memorial Journalism Foundation at Washington and Lee on the subject, "The Foreign Information Program." He pointed out factors as to why college students should be interested in a program of this type. A means of communication, a means for stimulating professional interest as journalists, and a medium for enlightening citizens as to what information is being sent to foreign countries are points touched upon by Mr. Riegel. He concluded by saying that everyone should have faith in its utility. It should be an institution of peace as well as of war and should deal with a policy with which all will agree.

William Leverty, copy editor of the Richmond Times - Dispatch, spoke to the convention members at Friday night's banquet. His subject dealt with the readability of newspapers. He stressed the importance of "brevity, simplicity, and clarity" in a news story. He stated, however, that there was no basic formula in writing stories.

Shields Johnson, vice-president and general manager of the Times-World newspaper in Roanoke, spoke to the delegates Saturday afternoon on "How to Promote College Newspapers." Taking a position approach, he pointed out ways and methods in which college newspapers could improve journalism standards and practices. He particularly pointed out that "Truth is the most important element." Mr. Johnson also held a critique session Saturday morning with business staffs.

A discussion with slides on engraving by Lloyd B. Jordan of Jordan Engraving Company, Lynchburg, preceded the talk by Mr. Johnson.

Joseph L. Morrison, associate professor of journalism at the University of North Carolina, judged magazine entries and held a morning critique session with magazine editors.

Newspapers were judged by Fred Mennagh, assistant city editor of Lynchburg News and Daily Advance with a critique session following.

Associate Professor Paxton Davis of Washington and Lee University judged yearbooks and met with editors.

Next year's convention has been set for Bridgewater and Madison Colleges in Harrisonburg.

Dick Martin of V. M. I. was convention chairman this year. Dave Clinger of Washington and Lee served as secretary-treasurer of the V. I. P. A. Shirley Ward, of Longwood College was publicity director, while Bud Bowman of Bridgewater College served as council member for the convention.

Schools represented were Hollins, Bridgewater, Longwood, Lynchburg, Madison, Mary Baldwin, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Richmond Professional Institute, Stratford, University of Richmond, V. M. I., V. P. I., Washington and Lee, Westhampton, and William and Mary.

CHURCH NEWS

by MARGARET DRYDEN

All the churches are participating in the spring religious services and Y. W. C. A.'s centennial festivities which will feature the famous Evangelist, Dr. Charles B. (Chuck) Templeton. The date for the celebration is March 8-10. Dr. Templeton will also lead Religious Emphasis Week at Hampden-Sydney. So come out tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in Jarman Hall to hear Dr. Templeton.

Baptists—Plans are underway for the spring retreat to be held April 29-May 1 in Blacksburg. Ann Thaxton is in charge of the retreat on this campus.

Students are urged to bring a missionary offering to the B. S. U. meetings. The money will be used to send Virginia students overseas for summer service.

Canterbury Club—Vernon Austen of Hampden-Sydney will show slides of the Holy Cross Monastery in New York City during the meeting Sunday at 7 p. m.

Methodist — The Rev. Donald Kuhn, of Washington, D. C., who is associated with the Board of Temperance there, will speak at the regular service Sunday at 7 p. m.

Dr. John Mohar will lead the discussion during the coffee hour Friday night.

The Wesley Foundation Choir, directed by Dottie Morris, will sing for the Rocky Hills Charges tonight at 7 o'clock. The Rev. Winfree is pastor.

Presbyterian—A Wes-Fel supper will be held at Hampden-Sydney Sunday night at 6:00.

Informal Banquet

Camp Wallawhatoola, a boys' camp on the same river. Norman Myers assisted in the printing of the program.

The menu for the night consisted of the following dishes which were named for places that the Lancasters have lived. The guests tasted for the first time Pineapple Tuscaloosa, Prince Edward Ham, Richmond Deviled Crab, Sweet Briar Snaps, Appalacian Potatoes, Wallawhatoola Salad, and Bath Buns; not to mention Columbia Coffee with Cow Pasture Cream, Lancastershire Pudding, and Mount Airy Mints. Mount Airy is Mrs. Lancaster's ancestral home.

In the theme of informality, each department of the college presented the Lancasters with an amusing gift in keeping with its particular subject.

The big moment of the night came when Miss Draper, as spokesman for the faculty and administration, presented Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster with a television set for their future home.

Mr. M. Boyd Coyner, professor of education and senior member of the faculty, acted as master of ceremonies.

Retired members of the faculty who served under Dr. Lancaster and now live in Farmville were also invited.

Va. Legislative Group To Inspect Longwood While on State Tour

A legislative committee composed of 18 members appointed by Governor Thomas B. Stanley will visit the Longwood campus tonight and tomorrow morning.

The committee, headed by State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrisette, is now touring state supported colleges and universities to make a long range view of building and equipment needs during the coming six years.

Italian Fellowship Gives Opportunity

The Italian Government and two Italian universities will offer fellowships to American graduate students for the 1955-56 academic year, it was announced this week by Kenneth Holland, president of the Institute of International Education, New York City.

Six fellowships are offered by the Italian Government through the Cultural Relations Office of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Men and women may apply in any field. Each grant includes a stipend of 600,000 lire. Free tuition will be given at a school or university for an entire academic year. Candidates in the field of music will be given an extra 50,000 lire for private lessons. A grant of 10,000 lire will also be provided for travel in Italy. Since the number of supplementary travel grants is limited, there can be no assurance of such aid to recipients of the above-described awards.

The University of Padua will offer two tuition and maintenance fellowships.

The Collegio Ghislieri in Pavia, a residential college with a long tradition of high academic standing, is offering one tuition and maintenance fellowship to a male graduate student.

Eligibility requirements for the Italian awards are: United States citizenship; demonstrated academic ability and capacity for independent study; good moral character, personality, and adaptability; and good health.

Candidates for the Italian Government awards must have a masters degree or its equivalent in advanced work, such as recognition an an artist, a scholar, or a scientist. They must present a project, outlined in detail, for advanced study or research. Artists and musicians may have to submit recordings or samples of their work. Successful candidates are required to learn some Italian before taking up their fellowships.

Candidates for the Collegio Ghislier and University of Padua awards must have a bachelor's award at the time the ward is taken up and a good knowledge of Italian.

Closing date for the Italian compstitions is April 1, 1955. Applications may be secured from the United States Student Department of the Institute of International Education.

CotillionClub Brings Spivak To Longwood

Featuring Charlie Spivak and his orchestra, the Cotillion Club will present its annual spring dance next Saturday night, April 2, from 8 p. m. to 12 p. m. in the college gymnasium.

Cotillion Club members and esorts will dance in a surrounding of spring decorations of which the new members of the dance club are in charge.

The annual "Goat Day" initiation for Cotillion Club pledges has been disposed of this year in favor of a compulsory dance decorating plan for the goats. After some research into past "Goat Days," Cotillion Club president Beth Kent has announced that due to unsatisfactory participation, "Goat Day" has become an unsuccessful project.

Therefore, to plan an initiation which will be both a means of goating and at the same time benefit the club, the project was placed in the hands of Carolyn Stanley, dance decoration chairman.

By this plan, goats will be responsible for decorating and undecorating for the dance.

The decoration committee for the dance includes Jane Blake, Fannie Scott, Ann DeAlba, Carolyn Stroup, Shirley Osbourne, Nancy Lenz, and Molly Ann Harvey.

Joyce Quick is in charge of music. Nancy Tanley Masters will lead the figure this year. She is also in charge of the figure, itself.

LC Men Students Reveal Play Plans

The men students at Longwood will present their annual production on Friday April 15, at 8 p. m., in Jarman Hall. The production will feature a one-act play entitled "A Good Woman," and an organ recital by Harold Warner, of Richmond.

"A Good Woman" is a comedy which portrays the misunderstandings which develop when an old boy friend comes back to ask the heroine's advice on marrying another woman. This occurs on the day before the heroine herself is supposed to wed. She thinks the man is asking her to marry him, and for a while the question is, who will marry whom. The play is under the direction of Fred Stables.

Mr. Warner, organist, played for the men's production last year and was so well liked that he has been asked to return this year. He will give a half-hour concert consisting of popular songs, old favorites, and group singing. Mr. Warner repaired the huge pipe organ at the Mosque in Richmond practically single - handed without charging for his services when the city felt the expense was too great. Appearing as a guest artist on the Telephone Hour last March, he received nation-wide recognition for his talent. He is now employed as a telephone repairman in Richmond. Mr. Warner learned to play the organ to help restore strength to his fingers after an attack of polio. He does not read music and plays entirely by ear.

The men's production is being sponsored jointly by the Men's Student Government Association and the Tau Theta Pi social fraternity. It is under the general supervision of Charles Winfree, and Harry Lancaster is in charge of publicity. The production is an annual presentation by the men of the College to raise funds for their various activities.

LC's Founders Day To Mark Tribute to Dr., Mrs. Lancaster

Decorators Select New Spring Outfit For Rotunda Hall

By JAN KUYK

The Rotunda will sport a new spring outfit this year as everyone knows who has had to side-step the tarpaulins on the floor, the painters, or Joan sitting inappropriately in the Virginia Room.

A committee headed by Miss Emily Barksdale, assistant professor of modern languages, has planned and purchased the necessary furniture and material to completely redecorate the entire Rotunda. In order to undertake a project of this sort a great deal of red tape must be gone through, since anything that costs over 100 dollars must have bids made upon it and go through the purchasing agent in Richmond. To accomplish all this, the committee has made three trips to Richmond, while the representatives from the various stores have also made numerous trips here to Longwood.

"All of the themes submitted were well planned and we had a difficult time choosing one," smiled Miss Barksdale, "but we had to remember that the Rotunda gets a great deal of hard wear and the articles chosen must be durable."

The plan submited by Miss Virginia Whitehurst, decorater for a Richmond department store, was accepted by the committee, and the drapes and slip covers are now being made.

The drapes are a Chinese print that compliment the grey-green color of the walls. Four overstuffed chairs and two sofas that are now in the Rotunda are to be removed, and the black leather furniture will have new slipcovers. The seven pull-up chairs are to be covered in a turquoise and muted green stripe, while the two Queen Anne chairs and two small arm chairs will have solid turquoise covers. Coral material has been chosen for the covers of the two wing chairs and the loveseat.

Six new chairs have been purchased by the committee. These consist of four captains' chairs and two tub chairs, all of which will be upholstered in yellow leatherette. A three cushion sofa upholstered in coral leatherette has also been bought. The final additions will be four new tables and four lamps.

Redecorating is also being done in the Home Office. It is being repainted at the present time, and will have new drapes although the material has not been definitely decided upon. The drapes will harmonize with the walls, but will not be of the same material as the Rotunda draperies.

The committee has in addition purchased new draperies for Longwood Estate. The two loveseats at the estate have been covered in green brocade, and a new high backed chair has been added to the furniture.

Included on Miss Barksdale's committee are Miss Ruth Gleaves, dean of women; Mrs. Janice Lemen, assistant professor of art; Miss Irving Armstrong, assistant librarian and assistant professor of library science; Mrs. Nell Griffin, professor of home economics; Miss Annie Lee Ross, assistant professor of art; and Miss Evelyn Hamner, college hostess.

DR. DABNEY S. LANCASTER

Board of Ed. Will Examine Course Plans

The Virginia State Board of Education will meet tomorrow in Richmond to hear the spring report from Longwood College.

At this meeting, the Board will consider the establishment of a degree course in Medical Technology at Longwood. This course will require three years of study at Longwood followed by a twelve months course at the University of Virginia. A student entering this field will receive her degree from Longwood at the completion of her twelve months at the University.

If this new course is approved by the Board, the curriculum will require for the freshman year English 111-112 (6 hours); biology 121-122 (8 hours), chemistry 111-112 (8 hours), mathematics (6 hours), hygiene (2 hours), and physical education (2 hours.

English 211-212 or 221-222 (6 hours), French or German (6 hours), chemistry 201-331 (8 hours), physical education (2 hours), and bacteriology (will be added in 1955) (4 hours) are the courses to be required in the sophomore year. The later biology course may be selected from comparative anatomy, histology, embryology, or parasitology.

The third year nurses' course will include French or German (6 hours); political science, psychology, sociology, economics, or philosophy (6 hours); history 201-202 (6 hours); physics, chemistry or biology (8 hours); and an elective of 6 hours.

At the University a student in this course must study clinical pathology (5 hours), clinical pathology laboratory (20 hours), and microbiology (8 hours).

In the clinical pathology laboratory the student will gain experience in hematology, clinical chemistry, serology, bacteriology, mycology, toxicology, blood typing, determination of basic metabolism, and other clinical laboratory methods.

Nine Year Tenure Achieves Progress

Observance of Longwood College's Seventy-First Founders Day on Saturday will be in tribute to President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster. Dr. Lancaster will retire July 1 after heading the oldest state institution of higher learning for women in Virginia for nine years.

During Dr. Lancaster's tenure, progress has been made in every area of the college, and the returning alumnae have made plans to express their appreciation for his service and achievement at the general session to be held in Jarman Hall at 11 a. m. on Founders Day. At this program, Miss Francis Horton, of Roanoke, outgoing president of the Alumnae Association; Miss Helen Draper, an alumna and professor of modern languages; and Dorothy Vaden, outgoing president of the Student Government Association, will speak concerning Dr. Lancaster's administration on behalf of the alumnae, faculty, and student body, respectively.

Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, chairman of the Founders Day committee explained, "This is the last time that the alumnae as a group will have the opportunity to express to Dr. Lancaster their appreciation for his fine service to Longwood College during the past nine years."

Jesson to Play

Roy Jesson, associate professor of music and a concert pianist, will play a selection on the organ which he composed especially for the occasion. Mr. Jesson, a native of England and a graduate of Oxford University, has named his composition, "Fantasia on Alma Mater."

At a reception to be given for the alumnae by Dr. and Mrs. Lancaster in the president's home at 4 p. m., the alumnae will have an opportunity to meet Dr. and Mrs. Francis G. Lankford, Jr. Dr. Lankford, who is a professor of education at the University of Virginia, will assume his duties as president of Longwood College when Dr. Lancaster retires.

The day will be highlighted with numerous reunion celebrations. Beginning with the Class of 1895, every fifth class through 1950 will hold reunion meetings at various hours throughout the day.

Coffee Hour

Other activities in the celebration include a coffee hour to be given by the Farmville chapter of the Alumnae Association in the Student Lounge at 10 a. m., an academic procession to Jarman Auditorium at 11 a. m., a business meeting following lunch in the dining hall at 12:30 p. m., and a program to be presented by the Longwood Choir at 8 p. m.

Members at the Granddaughters Club will serve as official hostesses during the day.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1955

'Till '62

As the result of a classroom assignment, it has been realized that many students and several faculty members do not clearly understand the six-year expansion program of the college.

From interviews compiled by journalism students for an outside assignment, it was noticed that much has been misunderstood concerning an increase in both the enrollment and the physical plant of the school.

To clarify the plans for enlargement, we are re-printing the institution's capital outlay progam with additional explanatory notes.

CAPITAL NEEDS
1956-1962
Longwood College

Enrollment: 1945—875; 1950—580; 1955—697; 1957 750; 1959—900; 1961—1000; 1963—1000; 1965 1000.

Current Session enrollment (1954-55): 703-; out-of-State students—26.

Needs	Cost of Project
1.—Dormitory—capacity 200	$700,000
2.—Additions to Power Plant	70,000
3.—Additions to Library Stacks	200,000
4.—Business Education Building	135,000
5.—Additions to Library Wings	115,000
6.—Home Economics Dem. House	37,500
7.—Class-Room Building	455,000
	$1,712,500

Today's enrollment stands at 703. If the General Assembly accepts the first request on the list for a dormitory to house 200 students, we will then have living capacity for approximately 900-1000 students. We can visualize 1000 because several dormitory rooms in the present buildings are now unoccupied. Also, there are quite a few rooms now occupied by two girls that were designed to accommodate three people.

Item 1 on the list is the only dormitory being requested. This building seems necessary since Dr. Lancaster recently announced to the State Capital Outlay Commission that he anticipates an enrollment of 1000 at Longwood by 1961. He added that he feels that that number is as large as the college can serve most effectively.

The president explained that the $700,000 dormitory he needs most critically will enable the teachers' college to help meet a desperate demand for more public school teachers during the next six years.

One point to be mentioned here is the near completion of the change-over to the twelve-year-system in most Virginia public schools which means that only a few small high schools will not have graduating classes during the next few years. Another point is the increase in high school graduates from now into the future years as a result of the rise in the birth rate in the 1940's. The estimated enrollment of 1000 will consist of students who can meet the present requirements of the admission program. There will be no lowering of entrance standards in order to expand the student body.

The latter points have all been presented to the Commission for study. They will in turn report their recommendations for appropriations for Longwood College to the General Assembly. It will not be until the Assembly meets in the spring of 1956 that the college will receive notice of either acceptance or rejection of its requests.

Shake A Hand

In only a few short years, we will be returning to Longwood for Founders Day as the present alumnae will return this Saturday. We may sneer at times now and say, "huh, I'm never going back to this place once I graduate!", but probably at least a third of us will return within the first five years following our graduation.

Let's move ahead five years—
Here we are, alumnae returning for Founders Day. We're with our old friends, at the old spots, but something is amiss—the old atmosphere. As alumnae, here's our complaint. There isn't a handful of students on campus. We could have met most anywhere else other than at Longwood and it would have had just as much meaning.

The latter is the feeling of many present alumnae who return for reunions. They say that the college is like a glove without a hand or a lock without a key because the dormitories are practically empty of students and the snack bar (which, by the way, is managed by the Alumnae Association), halls, and dining room lack the everyday activity that they so well remember.

True, alumnae are interested mainly in seeing former classmates, however, they are also anxious to see their Alma Mater in action.

The Founders Day Committee would appreciate as many students as can possibly do so to remain here to extend a hand of welcome on Saturday morning.

Yours To Support

In the next two or three weeks, the installation of student government officers for the year 1955-56 will be held. These officials have been recently elected by the student body and the trust and leadership of the college will soon be their responsibility.

The obligation of a governmental official to the student body is great. It involves the time, ability, and wisdom of our most capable students. As has been evident in the course of the school year, the present government officials have undoubtedly given Longwood College their best services. The duty that has been theirs to perform, has been undertaken with complete and unswerving loyalty to their installation oaths, their classmates, and their college. Their leadership abilities have inspired the student body to cooperate and respect the job they have been doing.

It is hoped that after installing our new officers for the year 1955-56, we will support them with the same spirit as has backed our outgoing officers.

OF INTEREST

By JOYCE GILLCHREST

Longwood students are accustomed to having mud around, but are they familiar with mud-slinging and mud-raking? The time is approaching when mud will be plentiful and not because of the spring rains. Mud-slinging and mud-raking denote underhanded and sometimes false means of gaining prestige. Politicians engage in these practices most freely around election time.

Next year will be a presidential year and a large percentage of this student body will be eligible to vote. The papers will be filled with biased reporting and gossip intended to win votes. Only last week some campaign talk stirred up excitement in Washington. Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler, said that he doubted if President Eisenhower would run for re-election because of a "personal situation in the Eisenhower household." He later explained that he was referring to rumors that the President did not like being an administrator and that Mrs. Eisenhower's health was not too good. The implications in a statement like that are fierce and the Republicans retaliated with a statement by Senator Aiken saying Butler showed how low and evil and loathsome an animal in human form can get. Lyndon Johnson, Senate Majority Leader, said he couldn't understand why Butler's statement upset the Republicans so much. He pointed out that in previous administrations the Republicans "talked about the President's health, the President's wife, the President's daughter, the President's piano, and everything else."

More than personal issues are involved in these unethical attempts to gain votes. Legislation will take the course that promises to bring in the most votes for the party. A well-informed, intelligent voter must see beneath the surface of mud-slinging politicians and seek out the real issues of the day and the position of each party has taken over the last four years.

Griffin, professor of home economics.

Other schools represented were Radford, Mary Washington, Bridgewater, Madison and VPI.

Greenland, L C Senior, Describes Study in Mexico

(From the Farmville Herald)

They say to really understand another country, one should live there for several months. Thus after a years' stay, it is logical to suppose one's knowledge of the place will be fairly extensive.

Fay Greenland, a senior at Longwood College from Norfolk, returned to Farmville last month after spending eleven months in Mexico. A Spanish major, she was one of the five undergraduate students in the United States to win scholarships given by the Mexican government. The program, besides benefiting the recipients in their studies, is to show foreigners a realistic picture of Mexico and to promote better relationships and understanding between the people of both countries.

Fay believes the program did all it was supposed to for her. She lived in boarding and private homes in Mexico City, saw what people wear and eat, sat in classes conducted entirely in Spanish, dated Mexican boys, took trips and learned what life is like the Mexican countryside. She loved it all, and hopes one day not too far away to return.

When she left Longwood College this time last year, she was excited, upset and nervously wondering what lay in store. As the first of Longwood students to try for and win such a scholarship she had no precedent to follow. She took, for instance, all the wrong clothes at the wrong time. Fortified with heavy winter apparel for the cool, high location of Mexico's capital city, she found she had arrived at the hottest part of the year. She sent all her warm clothes home and wrote for her summer things. By the time they arrived, the rainy season was upon her, and she nearly froze to death. And so it seemed to go all year for her.

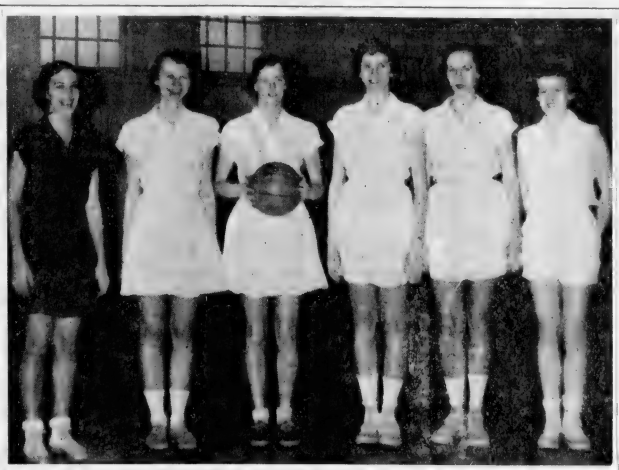
But such discomforts were forgotten as Fay swung into life at the huge National University of Mexico, a life she found to be different in many ways from the one she had left at Farmville. She found herself to be one of 25,000 students enrolled at the University. The university buildings themselves were unlike anything she had seen in the United States. They are, she says, ultra-modern, and comparable only to United Nations buildings in New York. She found the university divided into various colleges of law, architecture, medicine, etc., and the courses much more specialized than they are here. She wanted, for example, to take a general history of Mexico, but realized to her dismay she had to choose among some 200 courses each covering one particular phase of Mexico's development.

Fay, nevertheless, chose one of these courses, and by the time her year was up, she had also taken classes in Mexican literature, Spanish - American literature, Spanish phonetics, Social Problems of Modern Mexico, Methods of Teaching Spanish, French and Typical Regional Dances as well as history.

Students struggling in the United States turning English into French may well wonder what a class learning French and taught in Spanish would be like.

Like all university students, Fay lived off the campus. Most of the time she stayed in boarding houses, but she spent the last few weeks with an Episcopal minister and his family. Family life she says is similar to ours here except that the members seem to be closer knit.

Social life at the university was practically non-existent. There were few school activities, Fay says, and almost no school spirit. Recreational activities were left to the desires and efforts of the students who had to find their entertainment off-campus at the movies, theaters, concerts, dances, clubs, etc.



It was, however, "never better" according to Fay. She dated some of the many American boys there and "one Mexican boy in particular," and found so much to do and see that she never got time to be bored or very homesick. Her lessons permitted her plenty of free time, since there were no daily assignments—only lectures, study on one's own and the big final examination at the end of each course.

In spite of the scholarship, one might easily think that Fay returned home dead broke. It is true she ate well, travelled around widely and purchased a number of gifts for her family and friends. But Fay found living in Mexico most inexpensive. Her scholarship provided $64 a month (800 pesos). Tuition at the University cost $50 for the whole year, and this was paid for by the government. So the amount of the scholarship went entirely for living expenses, and Fay found it more than enough. She paid $40 for room and board, and what was left covered books, transportation and incidental expenses including travel.

Fay found the food different, but this she had expected. She had enrhiadas, tasos, tostados and tortillas. She ate much fruit for dessert instead of sweets. She managed somehow to get through the normal meal of five courses. Living as she did in boarding homes catering particularly to American students, the meals were often "international," but she had many opportunities to enjoy Mexican food, eaten with one's fingers.

Clothing, she says, differs in the country from the city. In the latter, many people wear ordinary clothes such as seen here. In rural areas, however, every woman wears of "Rebozo" (a kind of shawl or stole which is wrapped around the body in many different ways, even providing a kind of pouch for a baby or groceries. Typical dress of the men was white trousers, white shirts with a straight hem and tucks down the front, stopped off with the inevitable straw hat.

Fay wouldn't exchange her year South of the Border for anything. Not only does she believe the scholarship fulfilled the purposes for which it was given, but she made good friends in Mexico, increased her knowledge of the Spanish language, and she has received a deep appreciation for her own country. Glad to be back home again, she plans to repay Mexico for the wonderful year it gave her by promoting better understanding and cooperation among its neighbors to the North.

Varsity six, Buzzy Hartis, Helen Waitman, Mary Ann Ward, Barbara Whitehead, Virginia Burgess, and Nancy Richardson pause for closing season photo.

Kappa Delta Tops Pan-Hel Averages For Fall Semester

Scholastic averages of the eight national social sororities on the Longwood campus have been tabulated by Miss Virginia Bugg, college registrar and released by Pan-Hellenic advisor, Miss Kathleen Cover.

Kappa Delta leads again this semester with the grade average of 2.13.

Rating a second place, scholastically, Zeta Tau Alpha obtained a grade of 1.95. Ranking close for third place, Theta Sigma Upsilon acquired an average of 1.68 6/7 with Sigma Sigma Sigma following with an average of 1.88 1/12.

Delta Sigma Upsilon obtained a rating of 1.82; Alpha Sigma Tau 1.79; Alpha Sigma Alpha 1.76; and Pi Kappa Sigma 1.48.

L C Donates $203.64 To '55 Red Cross

In the 1955 Red Cross Drive for operating funds, contributions by Longwood College netted $203.64 as of March 21 according to Dr. Malcolm Graham of the Mathematics Department. Of this amount, students contributed $52.64 through the Student Chest Fund. Thirty-four contributions from members of the faculty and administration total $151.00.

Members of the faculty and administration who desire to make contributions and who have not yet given are urged to make their gifts soon since the drive will close on March 31. All contributions are greatly needed and appreciated.

Contributions may be made through the Business Office of the College or given to Miss Nancy Chambers, Joel Ebersole, Dr. Charles Lane, or Dr. Malcolm Graham.

Freshmen Tie Dist. Champs

The Longwood Freshman team tied the Randolph - Henry High School Varsity team in a game played here on Friday afternoon, March 11. A play-off was declined and the final score was 45-45.

Linda Chambers led the Longwood scorers with 21 points, and Jane Carson, captain of the Freshman team, followed, netting 16 points. Other freshmen who played during the game are forwards Jo Maxey and Betty Lou Allen, and guards Ann Jeter, Margaret Dowdy, Lucia Hart, and Dinny Coates.

Randolph-Henry from Charlotte Court House, is the District III Basketball Championship this year. They ended the season undefeated. They have been champions for their district for the past two years and have played several other colleges during the season.

Students Highly Praise 'Dark of the Moon' As Season's Best Dramatic Presentation

By PAT JONES

"One of the best productions I've seen in my four years here," said one student. "The best," said another. This was occasioned by the Longwood Players-Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs latest production, "Dark of the Moon," in Jarman Hall last week.

In any event "Dark of the Moon" was one of the most satisfying plays to see for its sheer versatility. Shifting from a near-burlesque mood to its opposite extreme of deep tragedy, the play commanded gales of laughter, satirical and whimsical smiles, and mediums of dance, music, and deep heart-felt sympathy. The song, very necessary dramatic devices for tying the play together, enhanced the supernatural as well as the mountain atmosphere. The witch dances and the folk ballads particularly well-used for effect and unification.

Large Cast

One of the main assets of the play as a college production is its use of a large cast; yet at times there seemed to be too many people on stage. Particularly was this true in the mass witch scenes. There were too many witches, and thus the airy, light feeling of the supernatural was lost in the congested, close feeling of a multitude of forms.

The costuming was very fine, and again, the witch's costumes carried a strikingly eerie, fairy-like quality. The black and white costuming in the revival scene emphasized even more the warring between the forces of evil and good undergirding the theme of the play. Conjur-Man and Conjur Woman both were costumed very well, and both gave fine performances. To see white-haired Conjur-Woman step on stage and her distorted voice floating out into the audience was a shock on every appearance.

Witches Please

Sally Cecil as the dark-haired witch and Nancy Tanley Masters as the fair-haired witch gave excellent performances. It was a pleasure to watch them act. One of the oustanding characterizations was J. G. Buston's Floyd Allen. At times he seemed to slightly overplay, but the overall effect was that of a natural character. To be congratulated on a very sensitive portrayal is Barbara Burnside. As Mrs. Allen she handled a difficult role in a commendable way. Fred Stables as Marvin Hudgins, although a little on the grandstand side was nevertheless very well done, and to be expected of the veteran performer that he is. Mrs. Metcalfe, as portrayed by Mary Hundley will certainly be remembered as one of the most individual and complete performances in the show. The mountain dialect characterizing the play proved difficult to master completely, and Nancy Nelson's cultured accent betrayed her in this. As the heroine, however, she did a masterful job, and her cabin scene in Act II will not soon be forgotten as a most memorable scene in the play.

Lacked Airiness

Jim Nichols as John the Witch Boy, was in the opinion of some people, not as convincing as he might have been. He gave the impression of being more "in a trance" than "otherworldly." He lacked the airiness and fleetness that was evident in the witches. Yet, in spite of this, his performance was very good, not at all lacking in the niceties of dramatic technique.

The best performance was found in that of Preacher Haggler. James Parker was outstanding in the role, disassociating himself from his part and becoming his character entirely. It was a joy to watch him act, symbolically the sinister opposing forces at work against Barbara Allen and the Witch Boy.

The acting on the whole signified very good drama, and the lighting was splendid. One remembers the weird ethereal quality of the green lighted stage when the witches appear, and the strange bright yellow light falling on John and Barbara after the storm in Act 1, and one remembers the somber dingy lighting of Barbara Allen's bedroom, and again, the moon rising in the final scene.

Sets Impressive

The sets were very good, in particular, the mountain. The narrow, sharply rising peaks gave a sense of height and loftiness, and the close togetherness of the peaks not only left plenty of playing area for other scenes, but gave the impression of the whole mountain range as the witches' vast playing field.

Because of our active awareness of the modern world it is hard for us to realize that many people still live as the folks depicted on our stage last week. Such culture has been held up for ridicule; they have been drawn in cartoons, and we have been taught to laugh at them. For this reason and the near burlesque of some of the scenes, some of the implications of the tragedy unfortunately were lost entirely or were too veiled to strike the audience at the time they were given. Yet, the play wasn't spoiled by this, for the success of the production is a stated fact by those who saw it. "Dark of the Moon" will be remembered among the top-rated performances of the college productions.

Blanks For Rooms Available April 12

Room assignment blanks for the 1955-56 session will be available April 12.

When students sign up for rooms, they may select groups for their respective halls and these requests will be granted as far as possible. Rotation of halls will be taken into consideration except in cases where one's physical condition may not permit this. It is requested that students indicate the roommate desired and suitemates also if they are living in Cunningham Hall.

Juniors who wish to obtain room assignment blanks may secure them from Mrs. Caroline Eastham's office in Cunningham Hall. Freshmen and sophomores may obtain theirs from Miss Ruth Gleaves' office. All blanks including those in Cunningham Hall must be filled out and returned to Miss Gleaves' office by April 18 for freshmen, April 19 for sophomores, and April 20 for juniors.

The Power of Negative Thinking

I think I shall never see
A grade as lovely as a B—
A B which stands out, bold and stark
Upon my bluebook. What a mark!
I knew I'll never get an A;
It doesn't even help to pray.
And I'll be darned if I will be Contented with a lousy C.
C's are made by fools like me . . .
Aw, heck! I'll never get a B.

Fraternity Men Redecorate

by MARGARET DRYDEN

"A little white house with a little white light is my blue heaven" may remind you of a song but it could also describe a place on our campus. The men's fraternity room which is located in the drive beside the snack bar is the place we're talking about.

A doorway framed with a white trellis is the entrance to the Alpha chapter of the Tau Theta Pi room. On entering, we find a large blue room, which we might mention has recently been repainted. It contains two small sofas, several comfortable chairs in soft shades of blue, rose, and yellow. Two floral prints and a knicknack stand adorn the wall. A bridge lamp and three table lamps are around the room.

At one end of the room a mural is attached. It describes the various phases of activities on campus and was painted by Jean Moore, a former student here.

A fraternity emblem, which was designed by the members on their installation in 1950, is displayed. The local fraternity also possesses a tray which is designed with the Greek letters.

Venetian blinds for the room were recently purchased by the group. It is hoped that the production next month will bring enough funds to buy new furniture. Their present furniture was either donated or bought by the members.

Members of the fraternity may use the room at any time. It is open to guests during intermission at dances.

Herb Goodman is president of the group. Other officers are Harry Lancaster, vice-president; Fred Stables, secretary; Jim Parker, treasurer; and Charles Winfree chaplain.

Longwood Expects Enrollment Increase

The number of students who have applied for admission to Longwood College next year has reached 330, according to Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary. Of this number, 117 have been accepted. The remainder are still to be processed.

According to today's count, Longwood will have out of state students from West Virginia, New York, Vermont, Kentucky, North Carolina, New Jersey, California, and Pennsylvania next year.

From those students now accepted, 118 of Virginia's 325 high schools will be represented in the class of 1959.

Cotillion Dance To Use Theme, 'Deep Purple'

CHARLIE SPIVAK

Dance to Highlight Spivak Orchestra

A sky of lavender blue with clusters of purple and pink wisteria and sparkling pink for a note of sophistication will all add to the attraction of the annual Cotillion Club Dance here Saturday night, beginning at eight o'clock.

According to Carolyn Stanley, Cotillion Dance Chairman, the decorations will all center around the theme "Deep Purple", however the color contrast will include deep purple, lavender and pale pink.

Cotillion Goats have been working for the past two weeks to have everything ready for the dance. They will also be in charge of the undecorating that night. Shirley Hauptman will serve as clean-up chairman.

Charlie Spivak, "The Man Who plays The Sweetest Trumpet In The World," is the musician whose fresh and orginal idiom in trumpet playing is described as "honey in the horn".

Notches in Spivak's musical belt are 20th Century Fox's "Pin-up Girl," starring Betty Grable, and "Follow The Boys" for Universal and a flock of box-office records created at the Paramount in New York, the Hotel Statler in New York, the Palladium in Hollywood, and other top spots.

Spivak's family had chartered out a medical career for him; then one of the country's outstanding bandleaders offered him a job, and he signed and remained with the outfit for five years.

He next joined the Benny Pollack Band, another number one outfit, and his next stop was the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra, where he played alongside such musicians as Glenn Miller, Skeets Herfut and Bob Crosby. When Ray Noble came to America, he asked Glenn to help him organize a band, and the first musician to be signed was Spivak.

When Spivak left to try his musical wings on his own, he became the highest paid free lance trumpeter in radio, playing on the Ford Symphony Hour, Kate Smith and Fred Allen broadcast. When he felt ready to organize his own band, a lot of encouragement came from Glenn Miller who told him he had all the ingredients necessary for a winning combination. Spivak got his first big engagement at the Glen Island Casino, jumping off place for more than a dozen of the nation's top name bandleaders. He was so successful that the Casino, traditionally a summer spot, broke precedent by keeping the doors open for the winter season to accommodate Spivak's drawing power. Spivak came to the Cafe Rouge of the Hotel Statler shortly thereafter and he or Glenn Miller's and Jimmy Dorsey's records, then one or the other, did the same thing at the Commodore.

Charlie Spivak, who lives up to his billing as "The Man Who Plays The Sweetest Trumpet In The World" will bring his fine orchestra to play. With the current swing for sweet music gaining favor each day, Charlie Spivak and his band are more popular than ever. The way he plays his trumpet, soft and smoothly, reflects his sentimental and romantic personality.

The Cotillion Figure will be led this year by Peggy Leslie. Miss Nancy Tanley Masters and the officers of the club and their dates. The girls will carry nosegays of pink roses with lavender background.

Chaperones for the occasion include Dr. and Mrs. Robert T. Brumfield, Dr. and Mrs. Dabney Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Metcalf, Mrs. Louise Dresser, Miss Nancy Chambers, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Miss Katherine Tabb, Dr. C. L. S. Early, Mrs. Kathleen Cover and Miss Virginia Wall.

Men To Give One-Act Play

by HARRY LANCASTER

The casting for "A Good Woman" is expected to be completed by the end of this week according to Fred Stables, who will direct the one-act comedy scheduled for presentation on April 15.

The play is par of this year's production sponsored by the men of Longwood which will also feature an organ recital by Harold Warner of Richmond. In previous years the production has been somewhat on the order of a variety show. This is the first time the men have attempted a dramatic presentation.

"A Good Woman" is a farce by Arnold Bennett, a British playwright. The story concerns three characters: James Brett, a clerk in the War Office, age 33; Gerald O'Mara, a civil engineer, age 24; and Rosamund Fife, spinster and lecturer on cookery, age 28. The time is the late nineteenth century—the Victorian area, and the entire play takes place in Rosamund's flat in the heart of London. The play opens three hours before Rosamund is supposed to marry James at a London registry office. James comes in to see his bride before the wedding much to Rosamund's dismay because she feels that it is unlucky for the bride and groom to see each other before the ceremony. The plot is complicated by the entrance of Gerald, an old beau, to whom she had made certain promises four years earlier. She believes that she is obligated to keep these promises in order to maintain her status as "a good woman." The humor of the play rises from the utter superficiality of the plot and the witty remarks of the characters. Stables said that these would be "overplayed" and carried to the extreme to emphasis the comedy of the play.

Stables, as a distinguished member of the Longwood Players, can bring a great deal of experience to bear on his new task of directing "A Good Woman." Recently he gave a successful characterization of Marvin Hudgens, the villainous strong man, in "Dark of the Moon" and played the leading role of Teleikov's delightful one-act comedy, "The Boor." His other roles include the minister in "The Importance of Being Earnest" and Prince Escalus in "Romeo and Juliet."

The men's production will be presented in Jarman Hall on April 15, at 8 p. m. Charles Wilfred, chairman of the activities committee of Men's Student Government Association and chaplain of Tau Theta Pi fraternity, is in charge of the production. Richard Daiger typed the scripts for the play and will assist with the publicity.

With two feature attractions, the one-act play "A Good Woman" and an organ recital by Harold Warner, the men hope to make the best production ever

Groups Offer World Study, Travel To LC

Opportunities for European study and travel are being offered to college students through touring associations.

Three holiday seminars for college students in England, France and Switzerland have been linked by World Studytours to arrange a tour for American students this summer.

The non-profit agency, which is chartered as is a private college, is for educational purposes only.

Sailing from Quebec July 4, students will have some days in London followed by a weekend with a number of British young people.

In France, American and French students will gather at Royaumont, about 20 miles from Paris, in a thirteenth century abbey now converted to non-profit, non-sectarian cultural activities.

In Switzerland, the Chalet les Bosquets, located in the Les Diablerets Alps near Geneva, has been selected as the center for discussions and recreation.

All expenses, from Quebec, July 4, back to Quebec on August 16, come to $830.

Other Studytours stress politics, music, art or literary landmarks and range from $595 (economy tour) to $2725 (for a trip around the world).

Students interested in joining a chartered college motor tour of Europe this summer will find a few spaces still available with the University Travel Club of New York.

The University Travel Club's tours are for bona fide students only. Groups are limited to 30 students.

April 10 is the deadline for joining a tour.

Remaining tours depart from New York June 29 and 30. All inclusive cost, including trans-Atlantic tourist class steamers,

'55 Summer School To Begin June 20, Watkins Discloses

The Longwood summer session calendar for 1955 has been released by Mrs. Mary W. Watkins, executive secretary. The session begins June 20 and terminates August 13. Classes begin Tuesday, June 21. Students will arrive early Monday, June 20, preferably in the morning, or they may arrive Sunday afternoon. The first meal to be served in the dining hall will be breakfast at 8:00 a. m., Monday, June 20.

Graduate and undergraduate classes are scheduled Monday through Friday of each week.

Opportunities in the 1955 summer session include short courses, academic and professional courses, a program for freshmen, and a three-year degree program. Mrs. Watkins explained that students who attend summer sessions, and as a result graduate in February, have many opportunities for job positions at that time.

Five-week courses for teachers desiring to renew certificates will be offered. A secretarial program and a graduate study are also available.

As compared to this time last year, approximately the same number of summer school applicants are on record.

Association Meeting LC Alumnae to Hold

The Norfolk Longwood Alumnae Association will hold its regular monthly meeting Saturday, April 2, at the Norfolk Yacht and Country Club.

Attending the meeting from Longwood will be President and Mrs. Dabney S. Lancaster and Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, alumnae secretary. The college representatives plan to inform the alumnae of present Longwood news.

Jones Attends Annual U. N. Youth Forum; Voices Surprise At Countries' Prejudices

by MARGARET DRYDEN

"I was surprised to learn that people in other countries have race prejudices just as we do here in the United States" said Pat Jones after attending the annual forum of the United Nations youth held in New York City last week. The convention was sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

Pat was one of six Virginia students to attend. Four Charlottesville high school students also went. "My sister attended a similar forum in Richmond recently and she talked about how interesting it had been so much that I decided to go to the New York meeting," Pat added. Dag Hammerskold, secretary-general of the United Nations, opened the forum and a former presidential candidate, Harold Stassen, present president of the University of Pennsylvania, closed the session.

Thirty-four students from 34 foreign countries, dressed in native costumes for the meeting, led the forum in the form of panel discussions. Each submitted an essay on the topic, "The World We Want" and was chosen to come to this country on the basis of that writing.

Commenting on racial prejudices, one of the delegates from Johannasburg, Africa, a negro, and white delegate from one of the European countries, explained how they had become close friends just as the other delegates had through their association. But the European delegate admitted that the social setup in her country would not allow her to even speak to the Negro delegate there.

"Living and Learning," another discussion topic, concerned the impression that foreign people have of the United States. It was revealed that the general opinion of most of these people is that Americans are superficial, have little, if any, culture and are "always out for the biggest and best." The students said, however, that their opinions had changed considerably since they had been in this country and that they were going to take these new opinions back to their respective countries.

Sponsored in the interest of better world relationships, the forum drew full-house crowds, according to Pat. It was held in the United Nations auditorium.

After leaving the United States, the foreign students will tour England and the Mediterranean area among several other places.

Pat expressed the opinion that more college students should avail themselves to opportunities to become better acquainted with the foreign students. She enjoyed switching earphones to the various languages. The international languages of the U. N. are English and French.

Between the youth meetings, Pat attended a meeting of the U. N. Trusteeship Council. It proved most interesting as the Russian delegate made another bid for recognition of Communist China and when the other nations refused to receive the Red country, a heated argument followed. The free world only recognizes Nationalist China. Another meeting of women delegates turned into a discussion of the importance of women in the national scene. "I didn't have to use earphones for either of these meetings as both of the leaders spoke in Spanish," Pat added. Pat is a Spanish student here.

The Virginia group stayed at the Picadilly Hotel and took advantage of all the conventional tours. They visited Hayden Planetarium, the Empire State Building, St. Patrick's Cathedral, Manhattan Island, the Statue of Liberty, Chinatown, and even found time to shop at Macey's. They were in New York for three days.
